King. Laertes, I muſt commune with your grief,
Or you deny me right: Go but a-part,
Make choice of whom your wiſeſt friends you will,
And they ſhall hear and judge 'twixt you and me;
If by direct or by Collateral hand
They find us touch'd, we will our Kingdom give,
Our Crown, our Life, and all that we call Ours,
To you in ſatisfaction. But if not,
Be you content to lend your patience to us,
And we ſhall joyntly labour with your ſoul,
To give it due content.
Laer. Let this be ſo:
His means of death, his obſcure burial:
No Trophee, Sword, nor Hatchment o'er his bones,
No Noble Rite, nor Formal Oſtentation,
Cry to be heard, as 'twere from Heaven to Earth,
That I muſt call in queſtion.
King. So you ſhall:
And where th'offence is, let the great Axe fall.
I pray you go with me. [Exeunt.

Enter Horatio, with an Attendant.

Hora. What are they that would ſpeak with me?
Ser. Sailors, Sir, they ſay they have letters for you.
Hora. Let them come in,
I do not know from what part of the world
I ſhould be greeted, if not from Lord Hamlet.

Enter Sailor.

Sail. God bleſs you, Sir.
Hora. Let him bleſs thee too.
Sail. He ſhall, Sir, an't pleaſe him. There's a Letter for you, Sir: It comes from th'Ambaſſadour that was bound for England, if your name be Horatio; as I am let to know it is.

Reads the Letter.

HOratio, when thou ſhalt have overlook'd this, give theſe fellows ſome means to the King: They have Letters for him. E're we were two days old at Sea, a Pirate of very Warlike appointment, gave us Chace. Finding our ſelves too ſlow of Sail, we put on a compelled Valour. In the Grapple, I boarded them: On the inſtant they got clear of our Ship, So I alone became their Priſoner. They have dealt with me, like Thieves of Mercy, but they knew what they did. I am to do a good turn for them. Let the King have the Letters I have ſent, and repair thou to me with as much haſte as thou wouldſt flie Death. I have words to ſpeak in your ear, will make thee dumb, yet are they much too light for the bore of the Matter. Theſe good fellows will bring thee where I am. Roſincroſs and Guildenſtare hold their courſe for England. Of them I have as much to tell thee, Farewell.

He that thou knoweſt thine,

Hamlet.

Come, I will give you way for theſe your Letters,
And do't the ſpeedier, that you may direct me
To him, from whom you brought them. [Exit.

Enter King and Laertes.

King. Now muſt your Conſcience my Acquitance ſeal,
And you muſt put me in your heart, for friend,
Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear,
That he which hath your Noble Father ſlain,
Purſued my life.
Laer. It well appears. But tell me,
Why you proceeded not againſt theſe feats,
So Crimeful and ſo Capital in Nature,
As by your Safety, Wiſdom, all things elſe,
You mainly were ſtirr'd up?
King. O for two ſpecial Reaſons,
Which may to you (perhaps) ſeem much unſinewed,
And yet to me they are ſtrong. The Queen, his Mother,
Lives almoſt by his looks: and for my ſelf,
My Virtue or my Plague, be it either which,
She's ſo conjunctive to my Life and Soul;
That as the Star moves not but in his Sphere,
I could not but by her. The other Motive,
Why to a publick count I might not go,
Is the great love the general gender bear him,
Who dipping all his faults in their affection,
Would like the Spring that turneth Wood to Stone,
Convert his Gives to Graces. So that my Arrows
Too ſlightly Timbred for ſo loud a wind,
Would have reverted to my Bow again,
And not where I had aim'd them.
Laer. And ſo have I a Noble Father loſt,
A Siſter driven into deſperate terms,
Who was (if praiſes may go back again)
Stood Challenger on mount of all the Age
For her perfections. But my revenge will come.
King. Break not your ſleeps for that,
You muſt not think
That we are made of ſtuff ſo flat and dull,
That we can let our Beard be ſhook with danger,
And think it paſtime. You ſhortly ſhall hear more,
I lov'd your Father, and we love your ſelf,
And that I hope will teach you to imagine ——

Enter Meſſenger.

How now? What News?
Meſ. Letters, my Lord, from Hamlet. This to your Majeſty: This to the Queen.
King. From Hamlet? Who brought them?
Meſ. Sailors, my Lord, they ſay, I ſaw them not: They were given me by Claudio, he receiv'd them.
King. Laertes, you ſhall read them:
Leave us. [Exit Meſſenger.

High and Mighty, you ſhall know I am ſet naked on your Kingdom. To Morrow ſhall I beg leave to ſee your Kingly Eyes. When I ſhall (firſt asking you Pardon thereunto) recount th' Occaſions of my ſudden, and more ſtrange return.

Hamlet.

What ſhould this mean? Are all the reſt come back?
Or is it ſome abuſe? Or no ſuch thing?
Laer. Know you the hand?
King. 'Tis Hamlet's Character, naked, and in a Poſtſcript here he ſays alone: Can you adviſe me?
Laer. I'm loſt in it, my Lord, but let him come,
It warms the very ſickneſs in my heart,
That I ſhall live and tell him to his teeth:
Thus diddeſt thou.
King. If it be ſo, Laertes, as how ſhould it be ſo?
How otherwiſe? will you be rul'd by me.
Laer. If ſo, you'll not o'er-rule me to a peace.
King. To thine own peace: If he be now return'd,
As checking at his Voyage, and that he means
No more to undertake it; I will work him

To

To an exploit now ripe in my Device,
Under the which he ſhall not chooſe but fall:
And for his death no wind of blame ſhall breathe,
But even his Mother ſhall uncharge the practice,
And call it accident: Some two Months hence
Here was a Gentleman of Normandy.
I've ſeen my ſelf and ſerv'd againſt the French.
And they ran well on horſe back; but this Gallant
Had witchcraft in't; he grew into his Seat,
And to ſuch wondrous doing brought his Horſe,
As had he been encorps't and demy-Natur'd
With the brave Beaſt, ſo far he paſt my thought,
That I in forgery of Shapes and Tricks,
Come ſhort of what he did.

Laer. A Norman was't?

King. A Norman.

Laer. Upon my life, Lamound.

King. The Very ſame.

Laer. I know him well, he is the brooch indeed,
And Gemm of all our Nation.

King. He made confeſſion of you,
And gave you ſuch a maſterly report,
For art and exerciſe in your defence;
An for your Rapier moſt eſpecially,
That he cry'd out, 'twould be a ſight indeed,
If one could match you, Sir. This Report of his
Did Hamlet ſo envenom with his Envy,
That he could nothing do but wiſh and beg,
Your ſudden coming over to play with him;
Now out of this——

Laer. Why out of this, my Lord?

King. Laertes, was your Father dear to you?
Or are you like the painting of a Sorrow,
A face without a heart?

Laer. Why ask you this?

King. Not that I think you did not love your Father,
But that I know Love is begun by Time:
And that I ſee in paſſages of proof,
Time qualifies the ſpark and fire of it:
Hamlet, come back, what would you undertake,
To ſhew your ſelf your Father's Son in deed,
More than in words?

Laer. To cut his Throat i'th' Church.

King. No place indeed ſhould murther ſanctuarize;
Revenge ſhould have no bounds: but, good Laertes,
Will you do this, keep cloſe within your Chamber?
Hamlet return'd, ſhall know you are come home:
We'll put on thoſe ſhall praiſe your excellence,
And ſet a double varniſh on the ſame
The Frenchman gave you, bring you in fine together,
And wager on your heads, he being remiſs,
Moſt generous, and free from all contriving,
Will not peruſe the Foils? So that with eaſe,
Or with a little ſhuffling, you may chooſe
A Sword un-baited, and in a paſs of practice,
Requite him for your Father.

Laer. I will do't,
And for that purpoſe I'll anoint my Sword:
I bought an Unction of a Mountebank,
So mortal, I but dipt a Knife in it,
Where it draws blood, no Cataplaſm ſo rare,
Collected from all Simples that have Virtue
Under the Moon, can ſave the thing from death,
That is but ſcratcht withal: I'll touch my point,
With this contagion, that if I gall him ſlightly,
It may be death.

King. Let's further think of this,
Weigh what convenience both of time and means
May fit us to our ſhape if this ſhould fail;
And that our drift lookt through our bad performance,
'Twere better not aſſay'd; therefore this Project
Should have a back, or ſecond, that might hold,
If this ſhould blaſt in proof: Soft, let me ſee,
We'll make a ſolemn wager on your comings,
I ha't: When in your motion you are hot and dry,
As make your bouts more violent to the end,
And that he calls for drink; I'll have prepar'd him
A Chalice for the nonce; whereon but ſipping,
If he by chance eſcape your venom'd ſtuck,
Our purpoſe may hold there; how now, ſweet Queen.

Enter Queen.

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel,
So faſt they'll follow: Your Siſter's drown'd, Laertes.

Laer. Drown'd! O where?

Queen. There is a Willow grows aſlant a Brook,
That ſhews his hoar leaves in the glaſſie ſtream:
There with fantaſtick Garlands did ſhe come,
Of Crow-flowers, Nettles, Daiſies, and long Purples,
That liberal Shepherds gave a groſſer name;
But our cold Maids do dead men's Fingers call them:
There on the pendant boughs, her Coronet weeds
Clambring to hang; an envious ſliver broke,
When down the weedy Trophies, and her ſelf,
Fell in the weeping Brook, her cloaths ſpread wide,
And Maremaid-like, a while they bear her up,
Which time ſhe chaunted ſnatches of old Tunes,
As one incapable of her own diſtreſs,
Or like a Creature Native, and deduced
Unto that element: But long it could not be,
'Till that her Garments heavy with their drink,
Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious by
To muddy death.

Laer. Alas then, is ſhe drown'd?

Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.

Laer. Too much of water haſt thou, poor Ophelia,
And therefore I forbid my tears: But yet
It is our trick, Nature her cuſtom holds,
Let ſhame ſay what it will; when theſe are gone,
The woman will be out: Adieu, my Lord,
I have a ſpeech of fire that fain would blaze,
But that this folly drowns it. [Exit.

King. Let's follow, Gertrude:
How much I had to do to calm his Rage?
Now fear I this will give it ſtart again,
Therefore let's follow. [Exeunt.

Enter two Clowns.

Clown. Is ſhe to be buried in Chriſtian burial, that wilfully ſeeks her own ſalvation?

Other. I tell thee, ſhe is, and therefore make her Grave ſtraight, the Crowner hath ſate on her, and finds it Chriſtian burial.

Clown. How can that be, unleſs ſhe drowned her ſelf in her own defence?

Other. Why 'tis found ſo.

Clown. It muſt be Se offendendo, it cannot be elſe: For here lies the point: If I drown my ſelf wittingly, it argues an Act: And an Act hath three branches. It is an Act to do, and to perform; argall ſhe drown'd her ſelf wittingly.

Other. Nay, but hear you Goodman Delver.

Clown. Give me leave; here lies the water, good: here ſtands the man, good: If the man go to this Water, and drown himſelf: it is will he, nill he, he goes; mark you that: But if the water come to him, and drown him; he drowns not himſelf. Argall, he that is not guilty of his own death, ſhortens not his own life.

Other. But is this Law?

Clown. I marry is't, Crowner's Queſt Law.

Other. Will you ha' the truth on't: if this had not been a Gentlewoman, ſhe ſhould have been buried out of Chriſtian Burial.

Clown. Why there thou ſay'ſt. And the more pity that great Folk ſhould have countenance in this World to drown or hang themſelves, more than their even Chriſtian.

ſtian. Come, my Spade; there is no ancient Gentlemen but Gardiners, Ditchers and Grave-makers; they hold up Adam's profeſſion.

Other. Was he a Gentleman?

Clo. He was the firſt that ever bore Armes,

Other. Why, he had none.

Clo. What, art a Heathen? how doſt thou underſtand the Scripture? the Scripture ſayes Adam digg'd; could be dig without Armes? I'le put another queſtion to thee; if thou anſwereſt me not to the purpoſe, confeſs thy ſelf——

Other. Go to.

Clo. What is he that builds ſtronger than either the Maſon, the Ship-wright, or the Carpenter?

Other. The Gallows-maker, for that Frame out-lives a thouſand Tenants.

Clo. I like thy wit well in good faith, the Gallows does well; but how does it well? it does well to thoſe that do ill: now thou do'ſt ill to ſay the Gallows is built ſtronger than the Church: Argal, the Gallows may do well to thee. To't again, Come.

Other. Who builds ſtronger than a Maſon, a Ship-wright, or a Carpenter?

Clo. I, tell me that, and unyoke.

Other. Marry, now I can tell.

Clo. To't.

Other. Maſs, I cannot tell.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio afar off.

Clo. Cudgel thy brains no more about it; for your dull Aſs will not mend his pace with beating; and when you are askt this queſtion next, ſay a Grave-maker: the houſes that he makes, laſt till Dooms-day: go, get thee to Yaughan, fetch me a ſtoup of Liquor.

Sings.

In youth when I did love, did love,
me thought it was very ſweet,
To contract O the for a my behove,
O me thought there was nothing meet.

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his buſineſs, that he ſings at Grave-making.

Hor. Cuſtom hath made it in him a property of eaſineſs.

Ham. 'Tis e'en ſo; the hand of little imployment hath the daintier ſenſe.

But Age with his ſtealing ſteps
hath caught me in his clutch:
And hath ſhipped me intill the Land,
as if I never had bin ſuch.

Ham. That Scull had a tongue in it, and could ſing once: how the Knave jowles it to th'ground, as if it were Cain's Jaw-bone, that did the firſt murther: It might be the pate of a Politician which this Aſs o're-offices: one that could circumvent God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my Lord.

Ham. Or of a Courtier, which could ſay, Good Morrow, ſweet Lord: how doſt thou, good Lord? this might be my Lord ſuch a one, that prais'd my Lord ſuch a ones horſe, when he meant to beg it; might it not?

Hor. I, my Lord.

Ham. Why e'en ſo: and now my Lady Worm's, Chapleſs, and knockt about the Mazzard with a Sexton's Spade, here's fine Revolution, if we had the trick to ſee't. Did theſe bones coſt no more the breeding, but to play at Loggers with 'em? mine ake to think on't.

Clown ſings.

A Pick-axe and a Spade, a Spade,
for and a ſhrowding ſheet:
O a Pit of Clay for to be made,
for ſuch a Gueſt is meet.

Ham. There's another: why might not that be the Scull of a Lawyer? where be his Quiddits now? his Quillets? his Caſes? his Tenures, and his Tricks? why does he ſuffer this rude knave now to knock him about the Sconce with a dirty Shovel, and will not tell him of his Action of Battery? hum. This fellow might be in's time a great buyer of Land, with his Statutes, his Recognizances, his Fines, his double Vouchers, his Recoveries: Is this the fine of his Fines, and the recovery of his Recoveries, to have his fine Pate full of fine Dirt? will his Vouchers vouch him no more of his Purchaces, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of Indentures? the very Conveyances of his Lands will hardly lye in this Box; and muſt the Inheritor himſelf have no more? ha?

Hor. Not a jot more, my Lord.

Ham. Is not Parchment made of Sheep skins?

Hor. I my Lord, and of Calve-skins too.

Ham. They are Sheep and Calves that ſeek out aſſurance in that. I will ſpeak to this fellow: whoſe Grave's this, Sir?

Clo. Mine, Sir:

O a pit of Clay for to be made,
for ſuch a Gueſt is meet.

Ham. I think it be thine indeed: for thou lieſt in't.

Clo. You lye out on't, Sir, and therefore it is not yours: for my part I do not lie in't, and yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou doſt lye in't, to be in't, and ſay 'tis thine, 'tis for the dead, not for the quick, therefore thou lyeſt.

Clo. 'Tis a quick lye, Sir, 'twill away again from me to you.

Ham. What man doſt thou dig it for?

Clo. For no man, Sir.

Ham. What woman then?

Clo. For none neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in't?

Clo. One that was a Woman, Sir; but reſt her Soul, ſhe's dead.

Ham. How abſolute the Knave is? we muſt ſpeak by the Card, or equivocation will follow us: by the Lord, Horatio, theſe three years I have taken note of it, the Age is grown ſo picked, and the toe of the Peſant comes ſo near the heel of our Courtier, he galls his Kibe. How long haſt thou been a Grave-maker?

Clo. Of all the dayes i'th'year, I came to't that day that our laſt King Hamlet o'recame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long is that ſince?

Clo. Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that: It was the very day that young Hamlet was born, he that was mad and ſent into England.

Ham. I marry, why was he ſent into England?

Clo. Why, becauſe he was mad; he ſhall recover his wits there; or if he do not, it's no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

Clown. 'Twill not be ſeen in him, there the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad?

Clo. Very ſtrangely they ſay.

Ham. How ſtrangely?

Clo. Faith e'en with loſing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

Clo. Why here in Denmark: I have been Sexton here, Man and Boy thirty years.

Ham. How long will a man lie i'th'earth 'ere he rot?

Clo. Ifaith, if he be rotten before he dye (as we have many pocky Coarſes now adays, that will ſcarce hold the laying in) he will laſt you ſome eight year, or nine year. A Tanner will laſt you nine years.

Ham. Why he, more than another?

Clo. Why Sir, his hide is tann'd with his Trade, that he will keep out water a great while. And your water is a ſore Decayer of your whoreſon dead body, here's a

Scull

Scull now: this Scull has lain in the Earth three and twenty years.

Ham. Whose was it?

Clo. A whoreson mad Fellow's it was; Whose do you think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

Clo. A pestilence on him for a mad Rogue, a pour'd a Flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same Scull, Sir, this same Scull, Sir, was Yorick's Scull, the Kings Jester.

Ham. This?

Clo. E'en that.

Ham. Let me see. Alas poor Yorick, I knew him, Horatio, a fellow of infinite Jest; of most excellent fancy, he hath born me on his back a thousand times: And how abhorred my imagination is, my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips, that I have kist I know not how oft. Where be your Jibes now? Your Gambals? Your Songs? Your flashes of Merriment that were wont to set the Table on a Roar? No one now to mock your own Jeering? Quite chop fall'n? Now get you to my Ladies Chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come. Make her laugh at that: prethee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that, my Lord?

Ham. Do'st thou think Alexander lookt o'this fashion i'th'earth?

Hor. E'en so.

Ham. And smelt so? Puh.

Hor. E'en so, my Lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return, Horatio. Why may not imagination trace the Noble dust of Alexander, 'till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

Hor. 'Twere to consider: too curiously to consider so.

Ham. No faith, not a jot. But to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelyhood to lead it; as thus, Alexander died: Alexander was buried: Alexander returneth into dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make Lome, and why of that Lome (whereto he was converted) might they not stop a Beer-barrel?

Imperial Cæsar, dead and turn'd to clay,
Might stop a hole to keep the wind away.
Oh, that that earth, which kept the world in awe,
Should patch a Wall, t'expell the Winter's flaw.
But soft, but soft, aside: here comes the King.

Enter King, Queen, Laerts, and a Coffin, with Lords attendant.

The Queen, the Courtiers. What is't that they follow,
And with such maimed rights? This doth betoken,
The Coarse they follow, did with desperate hand,
Foredo it's own life; 'twas some Estate.
Couch we a while, and mark.

Laer. What Ceremony else?

Ham. That is Laertes, a very Noble youth: Mark.

Laer. What Ceremony else?

Priest. Her Obsequies have been as far enlarg'd,
As we have warrantie, her death was doubtful,
And but that great command o'reswayes the order,
She should in ground unsanctified have lodg'd,
'Till the last Trumpet. For charitable prayer,
Shards, Flints, and Pebbles, should be thrown on her:
Yet here she is allowed her Virgin Rites,
Her Maiden strewments, and the bringing home
Of Bell and Burial.

Laer. Must there no more be done?

Priest. No more be done!
We should prophane the service of the dead,
To sing sage Requiem, and such rest to her
As to peace-departed Souls.

Laer. Lay her i'th'earth,
And from her fair and unpolluted flesh,
May Violets spring. I tell thee (churlish Priest)
A Ministring Angel shall my Sister be,
When thou liest howling.

Ham. What, the fair Ophelia?

Queen. Sweets, to thee sweet farewell,
I hop'd thou would'st have been my Hamlet's wife:
I thought thy Bride-bed to have deckt (sweet Maid)
And not t'have strew'd thy Grave.

Laer. Oh terrible wooer,
Fall ten times treble on that curs'd head,
Whose wicked deed, thy most ingenious sense
Depriv'd theeof. Hold off the earth a while,
'Till I have caught her once more in mine arms:
[Leaps into the Grave.
Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead,
'Till of this flat a mountain you have made,
To o're-top old Pelion, or the skyish head
Of blue Olympus.

Ham. What is he, whose griefs
Bear such an Emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow
Conjures the wandring Stars, and makes them stand
Like wonder-wounded hearers? This is I,
Hamlet the Dane.

Laer. The Devil take thy Soul.

Ham. Thou pray'st not well,
I prithee take thy fingers from my throat:
Sir, though I am not spleenative and rash,
Yet have I something in me dangerous,
VVhich let thy wiseness fear. Away thy hand.

King. Pluck them asunder.

Queen. Hamlet, Hamlet.

Gen. Good my Lord be quiet.

Ham. VVhy I will fight with him upon this Theme,
Until my eye-lids will no longer wag.

Queen. Oh my Son, what Theme?

Ham. I lov'd Ophelia; forty thousand brothers
Could not (with all their quantity of love)
Make up my summ. VVhat wilt thou do for her?

King. Oh he is mad, Laertes.

Queen. For love of God forbear him.

Ham. Come shew me what thou'lt do.
VVoo't weep? woo't fight? woo't tear thy self?
VVoo't drink up Esile, eat a Crocodile?
I'le do't. Do'st thou come hither to whine;
To out-face me with leaping in to her Grave?
Be buried quick with her, and so will I,
And if thou prate of Mountains; let them throw
Millions of Acres on us, 'till our ground
Sindging his pate against the burning Zone,
Make Ossa like a wart. Nay, and thou'lt mouth,
I'le rant as well as thou.

King. This is mere madness:
And thus a while the fit will work on him:
Anon as patient as the female Dove,
VVhen that her golden Cuplet are disclos'd;
His silence will sit drooping.

Ham. Hear you Sir:
VVhat is the reason that you use me thus?
I lov'd you ever; but it is no matter:
Let Hercules himself do what he may,
The Cat will mew, and Dog will have his day. [Exit.

King. I pray you good Horatio, wait upon him,
Strengthen your patience in our last nights speech,
VVe'll put the matter to the present push.
Good Gertrude set some watch over your Son,
This Grave shall have a living Monument:
An hour of quiet shortly shall we see;
'Till then in patience our proceeding be. [Exeunt.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. So much for this, Sir; now let me see the other,
You do remember all the circumstance.

Hor. Remember it, my Lord.

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting,
That would not let me sleep; me thought I lay

VVorse

Worſe than the mutines in the Bilboes, raſhly,
(And praiſe be raſhneſs for it) let us know
Our indiſcretion ſometimes ſerves us well,
When our dear Plots do pall, and that ſhould teach us,
There's a Divinity that ſhapes our ends,
Rough-hew them how we will.
Hor. That is moſt certain.
Ham. Up from my Cabin.
My Sea-Gown ſcarſt about me in the dark,
Grop'd I to find out them; had my deſire,
Finger'd their Packet, and in fine withdrew
To mine own Room again, making ſo bold,
(My tears forgetting manners) to unſeal
Their grand Commiſſion, where I found, Horatio,
Oh royal knavery: An exact command,
Larded with many ſeveral ſorts of reaſon:
Importing Denmark's health, and England's too,
With hoo, ſuch Buggs and Goblins in my life,
That on the ſupervize no leiſure bated,
No not to ſtay the grinding of the Axe,
My head ſhould be ſtruck off.
Hor. Is't poſſible?
Ham. Here's the Commiſſion, read it at more leiſure:
But wilt thou hear how I did proceed?
Hor. I beſeech you.
Ham. Being thus benetted round with Villains,
E're I could make a Prologue to my Brains
They had begun the Play. I ſate me down,
Devis'd a new Commiſſion, wrote it fair,
I once did hold it as our Statiſts do,
A baſeneſs to write fair; and labour'd much
How to forget that learning: But, Sir, now,
It did me yeoman's ſervice: wilt thou know
The effects of what I wrote?
Hor. I, good my Lord.
Ham. An earneſt Conjuration from the King,
As England was his faithful Tributary,
As love between them, as the Palm ſhould flouriſh,
As Peace ſhould ſtill her wheaten Garland wear,
And ſtand a Comma 'tween their amities,
And many ſuch like Aſſis of great charge,
That on the view and know of theſe contents,
VVithout debatement further, more or leſs,
He ſhould the bearers put to ſudden death,
No ſhriving time allowed.
Hor. How was this ſeal'd?
Ham. Why even in that was heaven ordinate;
I had my Father's Signet in my Purſe,
Which was the model of that Daniſh Seal:
Folded the Writ up in form of the other,
Subſcrib'd it, gav'th'Impreſſion, plac'd it ſafely,
The Changling never known: Now, the next day
Was our Sea-fight, and what to this was ſement,
Thou know'ſt already.
Hor. So, Guildenſtare and Roſincroſs, go to't.
Ham. Why man, they did make love to this imployment,
They are not near my conſcience; their debate
Doth by their own inſinuation grow:
'Tis dangerous when baſer nature comes
Between the paſs, and fell incenſed points
Of mighty oppoſites.
Hor. Why, what a King is this?
Ham. Does it not, think'ſt thee, ſtand me now upon,
He that hath kill'd my King, and whor'd my Mother,
Popt in between th'election and my hopes,
Thrown out his Angle for my proper life,
And with ſuch cozenage; is't not perfect conſcience,
To quit him with his arm? And is't not to be damn'd
To let this Canker of our Nature come
In further evil.
Hor. It muſt be ſhortly known to him from England,
What is the iſſue of the buſineſs there.
Ham. It will be ſhort.
The Interim's mine, and a man's life's no more
Than to ſay one: But I am very ſorry, good Horatio,
That to Laertes I forgot my ſelf;
For by the Image of my cauſe I ſee
The Pourtraiture of his; I'll count his favours:
But ſure the bravery of his grief did put me
Into a Towring paſſion.
Hor. Peace, who comes here?

Enter Oſrick.

Oſr. Your Lordſhip is right welcome back to Denmark.
Ham. I humbly thank you, Sir; doſt know this water-fly?
Hor. No, my good Lord.
Ham. Thy ſtate is the more gracious; for 'tis a Vice to know him: he hath much Land, and fertile; let a Beaſt be Lord of Beaſts, and his Crib ſhall ſtand at the King's Meſſe; 'tis a Chough; but as I ſay, ſpacious in the poſſeſſion of dirt.
Oſr. Sweet Lord, if your friendſhip were at leiſure, I ſhould impart a thing to you from his Majeſty.
Ham. I will receive it with all diligence of ſpirit; put your Bonnet to his right uſe, 'tis for the head.
Oſr. I thank your Lordſhip, 'tis very hot.
Ham. No, believe me, 'tis very cold, the wind is Northerly.
Oſr. It is indifferent cold, my Lord, indeed.
Ham. Methinks it is very ſoultry, and hot for my Complexion.
Oſr. Exceedingly, my Lord, it is very ſoultry, as 'twere I cannot tell how: but, my Lord, his Majeſty bid me ſignifie to you, that he has laid a great wager on your head: Sir, this is the matter.
Ham. I beſeech you remember.
Oſr. Nay in good faith, for mine eaſe in good faith: Sir, you are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is at his weapon.
Ham. What's his weapon?
Oſr. Rapier and Dagger.
Ham. That's two of his weapons; but well.
Oſr. The King, Sir, has wag'd with him ſix Barbary Horſes, againſt the which he impon'd, as I take it, ſix French Rapiers and Poinards, with their aſſigns, as Girdle Hangers, or ſo: Three of the carriages in faith are very dear to fancie, very reſponſive to the hilts, moſt delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.
Ham. What call you the carriages?
Oſr. The carriages, Sir, are the Hangers.
Ham. The Phraſe would be more germane to the matter: If we could carry Cannon by our ſides; I would it might be Hangers 'till then; but on, ſix Barbary Horſes, againſt ſix French Swords: their Aſſigns and three liberal conceited carriages, that's the French, but againſt the Daniſh; why, is this impon'd as you call it?
Oſr. The King, Sir, hath laid that in a dozen paſſes between you and him, he ſhall not exceed you three hits; He hath one twelve for mine, and that would come to immediate tryal, if your Lordſhip would vouchſafe the Anſwer.
Ham. How if I anſwer no?
Oſr. I mean, my Lord, the oppoſition of your perſon in tryal.
Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the Hall; if it pleaſe his Majeſty, 'tis the breathing time of day with me; let the Foyles be brought, the Gentleman willing, and the King hold his purpoſe; I will win for him if I can: if not, I'll gain nothing but my ſhame, and the odd hits.
Oſr. Shall I redeliver you e'en ſo?
Ham. To this effect, Sir, after what flouriſh your nature will.
Oſr. I commend my duty to your Lordſhip. [Exit.
Ham. Yours, yours; he does well to commend it himſelf, there are no tongues elſe for's tongue.
Hor. This Lapwing runs away with the ſhell on his head.

Ham.

Ham. He did comply with his Dug before he ſuck't it: thus had he and nine more of the ſame Beavy that I know the droſſie Age doats on; only got the tune of the time, and outward habit of encounter, a kind of yeſty Collection, which carries them through and through the moſt fond and winnowed opinions; and do but blow them to their Tryals, the Bubbles are out.

Hor. You will loſe this Wager, my Lord.

Ham. I do not think ſo, ſince he went into France, I have been in continual practice; I ſhall win at the odds; but thou wouldeſt not think how all here about my heart: but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my Lord.

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is ſuch a kind of gain-giving as would perhaps trouble a Woman.

Hor. If your mind diſlike any thing, obey. I will foreſtal their repair hither, and ſay you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defie Augury; there's a ſpecial Providence in the fall of a Sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come: if it be not come, it will be now: if it be not now; yet it will come; the readineſs is all, ſince no man has ought of what he leaves. What is't to leave betimes?

Enter King, Queen, Laertes and Lords, with other Attendants with Foyles, and Gantlets, a Table and Flaggons of Wine on it.

Kin. Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

Ham. Give me your pardon, Sir, I've done you wrong,
But pardon't as you are a Gentleman.
This preſence knows,
And you muſt needs have heard how I am puniſh'd
With ſore diſtraction? What have I done
That might your natures honour, and exception
Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madneſs:
Was't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Never Hamlet:
If Hamlet from himſelf be tane away:
And when he's not himſelf, do's wrong Laertes,
Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it:
Who does it then? His madneſs? If't be ſo,
Hamlet is of the Faction that is wrong'd,
His Madneſs is poor Hamlet's Enemy.
Sir, in this Audience,
Let my diſclaiming from a purpos'd evil,
Free me ſo far in your moſt generous thoughts,
That I have ſhot mine Arrow o're the Houſe,
And hurt my Mother.

Laer. I am ſatisfied in Nature,
Whoſe Motive in this caſe ſhould ſtir me moſt
To my Revenge. But in my terms of honour
I ſtand aloof, and will no reconcilement,
'Till by ſome elder Maſters of known honour,
I have a voice, and preſident of peace
To keep my name ungorg'd. But 'till that time,
I do receive your offer'd love like love,
And will not wrong it.

Ham. I do embrace it freely,
And will this Brother's Wager frankly play.
Gives us the Foyles: Come on.

Laer. Come on for me.

Ham. I'll be your Foyle, Laertes, in mine ignorance,
Your skill ſhall like a Star i' th' brighteſt night,
Stick fiery off indeed.

Laer. You mock me, Sir.

Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give the Foyles young Oſrick,
Couſin Hamlet, you know the Wager.

Ham. Very well, my Lord,
Your Grace hath laid the odds o' th' weaker ſide.

King. I do not fear it,
I have ſeen you both:
But ſince he is better'd, we have therefore odds.

Laer. This is too heavy,
Let me ſee another.

Ham. This likes me well,
Theſe Foyles have all a length. [Prepare to Play.

Oſr. I, my good Lord.

King. Set me the Stopes of Wine upon that Table:
If Hamlet give the firſt, or ſecond hit,
Or quit in anſwer of a third exchange,
Let all the Battlements their Ordnance fire,
The King ſhall drink to Hamlet's better breath,
And in the Cup an Union ſhall he throw
Richer than that, which four ſucceſſive Kings
In Denmark's Crown have worn.
Give me the Cups,
And let the Kettle to the Trumpets ſpeak,
The Trumpets to the Canoneer without,
The Canons to the Heavens, the Heaven to Earth,
Now the King drinks to Hamlet. Come, begin,
And you the Judges bear a wary Eye.

Ham. Come on, Sir.

Laer. Come on, Sir. [They play.

Ham. One.

Laer. No.

Ham. Judgment.

Oſr. A hit, a very palpable hit.

Laer. Well: again.

King. Stay, give me drink.
Hamlet, this Pearl is thine,
Here's to thy health. Give him the Cup.
[Trumpet ſound, ſhot goes off.

Ham. I'll play this bout firſt, ſet by a while.
Come: another hit; what ſay you?

Laer. A touch, a touch, I do confeſs.

King. Our Son ſhall win.

Qu. He's fat, and ſcant of breath.
Heres a Napkin, rub thy brows,
The Queen carouſes to thy fortune, Hamlet.

Ham. Good Madam.

King. Gertrude, do not drink.

Qu. I will, my Lord;
I pray you pardon me.

King. It is the poiſon'd Cup, it is too late.

Ham. I dare not drink yet, Madam,
By and by.

Qu. Come, let me wipe thy face.

Laer. My Lord, I'll hit him now.

King. I do not think't.

Laer. And yet 'tis almoſt 'gainſt my Conſcience.

Ham. Come, for the third.
Laertes, you but dally,
I pray you paſs with your beſt violence,
I am afeard you make a wanton of me.

Laer. Say you ſo? Come on. [Play.

Oſr. Nothing neither way.

Laer. Have at you now.
[In ſcuffling they change Rapiers.

King. Part them, they are incen'sd.

Ham. Nay, come again.

Oſr. Look to the Queen there, ho.

Hor. They bleed on both ſides. How is't, my Lord?

Oſr. How is't, Laertes?

Laer. Why as a Woodcock
To my Sprindge, Oſrick,
I am juſtly kill'd with mine own treachery.

Ham. How does the Queen?

King. She ſwounds to ſee them bleed.

Qu. No, no, the drink, the drink,
Oh my dear Hamlet, the drink, the drink,
I am poiſon'd.

Ham. Oh Villany! How? Let the door be lock'd:
Treachery, ſeek it out.

Laer. It is here, Hamlet.
Hamlet, thou art ſlain,
No Medicine in the World can do thee good.
In thee there is not half an hour of life;

The treacherous Inſtrument is in thy hand,
Unbated and envenom'd: the foul practice
Hath turn'd it ſelf on me. Lo, here I lye,
Never to riſe again: thy Mother's poiſon'd:
I can no more, the King, the King's to blame.
Ham. The point envenom'd too,
Then venom to thy work. [Hurts the King.
All. Treaſon, Treaſon.
King. O yet defend me Friends, I am but hurt.
Ham. Here thou inceſtuous, murd'rous
Damned Dane,
Drink off this Potion: Is thy Union here?
Follow my Mother. [King dies.
Laer. He is juſtly ſerv'd.
It is a poiſon temp'red by himſelf:
Exchange forgiveneſs with me, Noble Hamlet;
Mine and my Father's Death come not upon thee,
Nor thine on me. [Dies.
Ham. Heaven make thee free of it, I follow thee.
I am dead, Horatio, wretched Queen, adieu,
You that look pale and tremble at this chance,
That are but Mutes or audience at this act:
Had I but time (as this fell Serjeant Death
Is ſtrict in this Arreſt) oh I could tell you,
But let it be: Horatio, I am dead,
Thou liv'ſt, report me and my cauſes right
To be unſatisfied.
Hor. Never believe it.
I am more an Antick Roman than a Dane:
Ham. As th'art a man, give me the Cup,
Let go, by Heaven I'll hav't.
Oh, good Horatio, what a wounded name,
(Things ſtanding thus unknown) ſhall live behind me.
If thou did'ſt ever hold me in thy heart,
Abſent thee from felicity a while,
And in this harſh World draw thy breath in pain,
To tell my Story.
[March a far off, and ſhout within.
What Warlike noiſe is this?

Enter Oſrick.

Oſr. Young Fortinbras, with conqueſt come from Poland,
To th' Ambaſſadors of England gives this Warlike Volley.
Ham. O, I die, Horatio:
The potent poiſon quite o're-crows my ſpirit,
I cannot live to hear the News from England.
But I do propheſie th' election lights
On Fortinbras, he has my dying Voice,
So tell him with the occurrents more or leſs,
Which have ſolicited. The reſt is ſilence, O, o, o. [Dies.
Hora. Now cracks a Noble heart:
Goodnight, ſweet Prince,
And flights of Angels ſing thee to thy reſt,
Why do's the Drum come hither?

Enter Fortinbras and Engliſh Ambaſſador, with Drum, Colours, and Attendants.

Fort. Where is the ſight?
Hor. What is it you would ſee;
If ought of woe or wonder, ceaſe your ſearch.
Fort. His quarry cryes on Havock. Oh proud death,
What Feaſt is toward in thine eternal Cell,
That thou ſo many Princes at a ſhoot,
So bloudily haſt ſtrook.
Amb. The ſight is diſmal,
And our affairs from England come too late,
The Ears are ſenſeleſs that ſhould give us hearing.
To tell him his Command'ment is fulfill'd,
That Roſincroſs and Guildenſtare are dead:
Where ſhould we have our thanks?
Hor. Not from his mouth,
Had it th' ability of life to thank you:
He never gave Command'ment for their Death.
But ſince ſo jump upon this bloudy queſtion,
You from the Polack Wars, and you from England
Are here arrived: Give order that theſe bodies
High on a Stage be placed to the view,
And let me ſpeak to th' yet unknowing World,
How theſe things came about. So ſhall you hear
Of carnal, bloudy, and unnatural acts,
Of accidental judgments, caſual ſlaughters,
Of Deaths put on by cunning, and forc'd cauſe,
And in this upſhot, purpoſes miſtook,
Fal'n on the Inventor's heads. All this can I
Truly deliver.
Fort. Let us haſte to hear it,
And call the Nobleſt to the Audience.
For me, with ſorrow, I embrace my Fortune,
I have ſome Rites of memory in this Kingdom,
Which are to claim, my vantage doth
Invite me.
Hor. Of that I ſhall always cauſe to ſpeak,
And from his mouth
Whoſe Voice will draw on more:
But let this ſame be preſently perform'd,
Even whiles men's minds are wild,
Leſt more miſchance
On plots, and errours happen.
Fort. Let four Captains
Bear Hamlet like a Souldier off the Stage,
For he was likely, had he been put on
To have prov'd moſt royally:
And for his paſſage,
The Souldiers Muſick, and the rites of War
Speak loudly for him.
Take up the Body; Such a ſight as this,
Becomes the Field, but here ſhews much amiſs.
Go, bid the Souldiers ſhoot.

THE

THE TRAGEDY OF KING LEAR.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Kent, Gloſter, and Edmund.

Kent. I Thought the King had more affected the Duke of Albany, than Cornwall.

Glo. It did always ſeem to us: But now in the diviſion of the Kingdom, it appears not which of the Dukes he values moſt, for qualities are ſo weigh'd, that curioſity in neither, can make choice of eithers moiety.

Kent. Is not this your Son, my Lord?

Glo. His breeding, Sir, hath been at my charge. I have ſo often bluſh'd to acknowledge him, that now I am braz'd to't.

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glo. Sir, this young Fellows Mother could; whereupon ſhe grew round womb'd, and had indeed (Sir) a Son for her Cradle, e're ſhe had a Husband for her Bed. Do you ſmell a fault?

Kent. I cannot wiſh the fault undone, the iſſue of it being ſo proper.

Glo. But I have a Son, Sir, by order of Law, ſome Year elder than this; who, yet is no dearer in my account, though this Knave came ſomewhat ſawcily to the World before he was ſent for: yet was his Mother fair, there was good ſport at his making, and the whorſon muſt be acknowledged. Do you know this Nobleman, Edmond?

Edm. No, my Lord.

Glo. My Lord of Kent:
Remember him hereafter, as my honourable Friend.

Edm. My ſervices to your Lordſhip.

Kent. I muſt love you, and ſue to know you better.

Edm. Sir, I ſhall ſtudy deſerving.

Glo. He hath been out nine years, and away he ſhall again. The King is coming.

Sennet. Enter King Lear, Cornwall, Albany, Gonerill, Regan, Cordelia, and Attendants.

Lear. Attend the Lords of France and Burgundy, Gloſter.

Glo. I ſhall, my Lord. [Exit.

Lear. Mean time we ſhall expreſs our darker purpoſe.
Give me the Map here. Know, that we have divided
Into three, our Kingdom: and 'tis our faſt intent,
To ſhake all cares and buſineſs from our Age,
Conferring them on younger ſtrengths, while we Unburthen'd crawl toward Death. Our Son of Cornwall,
And you our no leſs loving Son of Albany,
We have this hour a conſtant will to publiſh
Our Daughter's ſeveral Dowers, that future ſtrife
May be prevented now. The Prince, France and Burgundy,
Great Rivals in our younger Daughter's Love,
Long in our Court, have made their amorous ſojourn,
And here are to be anſwer'd. Tell my Daughters
(Since now we will diveſt us both of Rule,
Intereſt of Terrority, Cares of State)
Which of you ſhall we ſay doth love us moſt,
That we, our largeſt bounty may extend
Where nature doth with merit challenge. Gonerill,
Our eldeſt born, ſpeak firſt.

Gon. Sir, I love you more than word can wield the matter,
Dearer than Eye-ſight, ſpace, and liberty,
Beyond what can be valued, rich or rare,
No leſs than life, with grace, health, beauty, honour:
As much as Child e're lov'd, or Father found.
A love that makes breath poor, and ſpeech unable,
Beyond all manner of ſo much I love you.

Cor. What ſhall Cordelia ſpeak? Love, and be ſilent.

Lear. Of all theſe bounds, even from this Line, to this,
With ſhadowy Foreſts, and with Champions rich'd
With plenteous Rivers, and wide-skirted Meads
We make thee Lady. To thine and Albany's Iſſues
Be this perpetual. What ſayes our ſecond Daughter,
Our deareſt Regan, Wife of Cornwall?

Reg. I am made of that ſelf-metal as my Siſter,
And prize me at her worth. In my true heart,
I find ſhe names my very deed of love:
Only ſhe comes too ſhort, that I profeſs
My ſelf an Enemy to all other joyes,
Which the moſt precious ſquare of ſenſe profeſſes,
And find I am alone felicitate
In your dear Highneſs love.

Cor. Then, poor Cordelia,
And yet not ſo, ſince I am ſure my love's
More ponderous than my tongue.

Lear. To thee, and thine hereditary ever:
Remain this ample third of our fair Kingdom,
No leſs in ſpace, validity, and pleaſure
Than that confer'd on Gonerill. Now our Joy,
Although our laſt and leaſt; to whoſe young love,
The Vines of France, and Milk of Burgundy,
Strive to be intereſt. What can you ſay, to draw
A third, more opulent than your Siſters? ſpeak.

Cor. Nothing, my Lord.

Lear. Nothing?

Cor. Nothing.

Lear. Nothing will come of nothing, ſpeak again.

Cord. Unhappy that I am, I cannot have
My heart into my mouth: I love your Majeſty
According to my bond, no more nor leſs.

Lear. How, how, Cordelia? Mend your ſpeech a little,

Leſt you may marr your fortunes.
Cor. Good, my Lord,
You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me.
I return thoſe duties back as are right fit,
Obey you, love you, and moſt honour you.
Why have my Siſters husbands, if they ſay
They love you all? Happily when I ſhall wed,
That Lord, whoſe hand muſt take my plight, ſhall carry
Half my Love with him, half my Care, and Duty,
Sure I ſhall never marry like my Siſters.
Lear. But goes thy heart with this?
Cor. I my good Lord.
Lear. So young, and ſo untender?
Cor. So young, my Lord, and true?
Lear. Let it be ſo, the truth then be thy dowre:
For by the ſacred radiance of the Sun,
The myſteries of Hecate, and the night:
By all the operations of the Orbs,
From whom we do exiſt, and ceaſe to be,
Here I diſclaim all my Paternal care,
Propinquity and property of blood,
And as a ſtranger to my heart and me,
Hold thee from this for ever. The Barbarous Scythian,
Or he that makes his Generation Meſſes
To gorge his appetite, ſhall to my boſom
Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and reliev'd,
As thou my ſometime Daughter.
Kent. Good my Liege. Lear. Peace, Kent;
Come not between the Dragon and his wrath,
I lov'd her moſt, and thought to ſet my reſt
On her kind nurſery. Hence, and avoid my ſight;
So be my grave my peace, as here I give
Her Father's heart from her; call France, who ſtirs?
Call Burgundy, Cornwall, and Albany,
With my two Daughters Dowres, digeſt the third,
Let pride, which ſhe calls plainneſs, marry her:
I do inveſt you joyntly with my power,
Preheminence, and all the large effects
That troop with Majeſty. Our ſelf by monthly courſe
With reſervation of an hundred Knights,
By you to be ſuſtain'd, ſhall our abode
Make with you by due turn, only we ſhall retain
The name, and all th'addition to a King: the Sway,
Revenue, Execution of the reſt,
Beloved Sons be yours, which to confirm,
This Coronet part between you.
Kent. Royal Lear,
Whom I have ever honour'd as a King,
Lov'd as my Father, as my Maſter follow'd,
As my Patron, thought on in my Prayers.
Lear. The bow is bent and drawn, make from the ſhaft.
Kent. Let it fall rather, though the fork invade
The region of my heart, be Kent unmannerly,
When Lear is mad, what wouldſt thou do, old man?
Think'ſt thou that Duty ſhall have dread to ſpeak,
When Power to Flattery bows?
To plainneſs honour's bound,
When Majeſty falls to folly, reſerve thy ſtate,
And thy beſt conſideration, check
This hideous raſhneſs, anſwer my life, my judgment:
Thy youngeſt Daughter do's not love thee leaſt,
Nor are thoſe empty hearted, whoſe low ſounds
Reverb no hollowneſs.
Lear. Kent, on my life no more.
Kent. My life I never held but as a pawn
To wage againſt thine enemies, ne'er fear to loſe it,
Thy ſafety being motive. Lear. Out of my ſight.
Kent. See better, Lear, and let me ſtill remain
The true blank of thine eye. Lear. Now by Apollo.
Kent. Now by Apollo, King,
Thou ſwear'ſt thy gods in vain.
Lear. O Vaſſal! Miſcreant.
Alb. Corn. Dear Sir, forbear.
Kent. Kill thy Phyſician, and thy Fee beſtow
Upon the foul diſeaſe, revoke the gift,
Or whil'ſt I can vent clamour from my throat,
I'll tell thee thou do'ſt evil.
Lear. Hear me Recreant, on thine allegiance hear me;
That thou haſt ſought to make us break our vows,
Which we durſt never yet; and with ſtrain'd pride,
To come betwixt our ſentence and our power.
Which, nor our nature, nor our place can bear;
Our Potency made good, take thy reward.
Five days we do allot thee for proviſion,
To ſhield thee from diſaſters of the world,
And on the ſixth to turn thy hated back
Upon our Kingdom; if the tenth day following,
Thy baniſht Trunk be found in our Dominions,
The moment is thy death, away. By Jupiter,
This ſhall not be revok'd.
Kent. Fare thee well, King, ſith thus thou wilt appear,
Freedom lives hence, and baniſhment is here;
The gods to their dear ſhelter take thee, Maid,
That juſtly thinks, and haſt moſt rightly ſaid:
And your large ſpeeches may your deeds approve,
That good effects may ſpring from words of love:
Thus Kent, O Princes, bids you all adieu,
He'll ſhape his old courſe in a Countrey new. [Exit.
Enter Gloſter, with France and Burgundy Attendants.
Cor. Here's France and Burgundy, my Noble Lord.
Lear. My Lord of Burgundy,
We firſt addreſs toward you, who, with this King,
Hath rivall'd for our Daughter; what in the leaſt
Will you require in preſent Dowre with her,
Or ceaſe your Queſt of Love?
Bur. Moſt Royal Majeſty,
I crave no more than what your Highneſs offer'd,
Nor will you tender leſs.
Lear. Right Noble Burgundy,
When ſhe was dear to us we held her ſo,
But now her price is fall'n: Sir, there ſhe ſtands,
If ought within that little ſeeming ſubſtance,
Or all of it with our diſpleaſure piec'd,
And nothing more may fitly like your Grace,
She's there, and ſhe is yours.
Bur. I know no anſwer.
Lear. Will you with thoſe infirmities ſhe owes,
Unfriended, new adopted to our hate,
Dowr'd with our curſe, and ſtranger'd with our oath,
Take leave, or leave her.
Bur. Pardon me, Royal Sir,
Election makes not up in ſuch conditions.
Lear. Then leave her, Sir, for by the power that made me,
I tell you all her wealth. For you, great King,
I would not from your love make ſuch a ſtray,
To match you where I hate, therefore beſeech you
T'avert your liking a more worthier way,
Than on a wretch whom nature is aſham'd
Almoſt t'acknowledge hers.
Fra. This is moſt ſtrange,
That ſhe, who even but now, was your beſt object,
The argument of your praiſe, balm of your age,
The beſt, the deareſt, ſhould in this trice of time
Commit a thing ſo monſtrous, to diſmantle
So many folds of favour: ſure her offence
Muſt be of ſuch unnatural degree,
That monſters it: Or your fore-voucht affection
Fall into Taint; which to believe of her
Muſt be a faith, that reaſon without miracle
Should never plant in me.
Cor. I yet beſeech your Majeſty,
If for I want that glib and oylie Art,
To ſpeak and purpoſe not, ſince what I will intend,
I'll do't before I ſpeak, that you make known
It is no vicious blot, murther, or foulneſs,
No unchaſte action, or diſhonoured ſtep,
That hath depriv'd me of your Grace and Favour,
But even for want of that, for which I am richer,

A ſtill

A ſtill ſoliciting eye, and ſuch a tongue,
That I am glad I have not, though not to have it,
Hath loſt me in your liking.
Lear. Better thou had'ſt
Not been born, than not t'have pleas'd me better.
Fra. Is it but this? A tardineſs in nature,
Which often leaves the Hiſtory unſpoke
That it intends to do; my Lord of Burgundy,
What ſay you to the Lady? Love's not love
When it is mingled with regards, that ſtands
Aloof from th'intire point, will you have her?
She is her ſelf a Dowry.
Bur. Royal King,
Give but that portion which your ſelf propos'd,
And here I take Cordelia by the hand,
Dutcheſs of Burgundy.
Lear. Nothing, I have ſworn, I am firm.
Bur. I am ſorry then you have ſo loſt a Father,
That you muſt loſe a Husband.
Cor. Peace be with Burgundy,
Since that reſpect and fortunes are his love,
I ſhall not be his wife.
Fra. Faireſt Cordelia, that art moſt rich being poor,
Moſt choice forſaken, and moſt lov'd deſpis'd,
Thee and thy Virtues here I ſeize upon,
Be it lawful I take up what's caſt away,
Gods, gods! 'Tis ſtrange, that from their cold'ſt neglect
My love ſhould kindle to enflam'd reſpect.
Thy dowreleſs Daughter, King, thrown to my chance,
Is Queen of us, of ours, and our fair France:
Not all the Dukes of watriſh Burgundy,
Can buy this unpriz'd precious Maid of me.
Bid them farewel, Cordelia, though unkind,
Thou loſeſt here a better where to find.
Lear. Thou haſt her France, let her be thine, for we
Have no ſuch Daughter, nor ſhall ever ſee
That face of her's again, therefore be gone,
Without our Grace, our Love, our Benizon:
Come Noble Burgundy. Flouriſh. [Exeunt.
Fra. Bid farewel to your Siſters.
Cor. The Jewels of our Father, with waſh'd eyes
Cordelia leaves you, I know you what you are,
And like a Siſter am moſt loth to call
Your faults as they are named. Love well our Father:
To your profeſſed boſoms I commit him,
But yet alas, ſtood I within his Grace,
I would prefer him to a better place,
So farewel to you both.
Reg. Preſcribe not us our duty.
Gon. Let your ſtudy
Be to content your Lord, who hath receiv'd you,
At fortunes alms, you have obedience ſcanted,
And well are worth the want that you have wanted.
Cor. Time ſhall unfold what plighted cunning hides,
Who covers faults, at laſt with ſhame derides.
Well may you proſper.
Fra. Come, my fair Cordelia. [Exeunt France and Cor.
Gon. Siſter, it is not little I have to ſay,
Of what moſt nearly appertains to us both,
I think our Father will hence to night. (with us.
Reg. That's moſt certain, and with you: next month
Gon. You ſee how full of changes his age is, the obſervation we have made of it hath been little: he always lov'd our Siſter moſt, and with what poor judgement he hath now caſt her off, appears too too groſſely.
Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his Age, yet he hath ever but ſlenderly known himſelf.
Gon. The beſt and ſoundeſt of his time hath been but raſh, then muſt we look from his Age, to receive not alone the imperfections of long engraffed condition, but therewithal the unruly waywardneſs, that infirm and cholerick years bring with them.
Reg. Such unconſtant ſtarts are we like to have from him, as this of Kent's baniſhment.
Gon. There is further complement of leave taking, between France and him, pray you let us ſit together, if our Father carry Authority with ſuch diſpoſition as he bears, this laſt ſurrender of his will but offend us.
Reg. We ſhall further think of it.
Gon. We muſt do ſomething, and i'th'heat. [Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Baſtard.

Baſt. Thou Nature art my Goddeſs, to thy Law
My ſervices are bound, wherefore ſhould I
Stand in the plague of cuſtom, and permit
The curioſity of Nations to deprive me?
For that I am ſome twelve, or fourteen Moonſhines
Lag of a Brother? Why Baſtard? wherefore baſe?
When my Dimenſions are as well compact,
My mind as generous, and my ſhape as true
As honeſt Madam's iſſue? why brand they us
With Baſe? with baſeneſs Baſtardy? Baſe, Baſe?
Who in the luſty ſtealth of nature, take
More compoſition, and fierce quality,
Than doth within a dull ſtale tyred bed
Go the creating a whole Tribe of Fops
Got 'tween a ſleep, and wake? Well then,
Legitimate Edgar, I muſt have your land,
Our Father's love is to the Baſtard Edmund,
As to th'legitimate: fine word: legitimate.
Well, my Legitimate, if this Letter ſpeed,
And my invention thrive, Edmund the baſe
Shall to th'Legitimate: I grow, I proſper:
Now gods, ſtand up for Baſtards,

Enter Glouceſter.

Glo. Kent baniſh'd thus? and France in choler parted?
And the King gone to night? Preſcrib'd his power,
Confin'd to exhibition? All this gone
Upon the gad? Edmund, how now? what news?
Baſt. So pleaſe your Lordſhip, none.
Glo. Why ſo earneſtly ſeek you to put up that letter?
Baſt. I know no news, my Lord.
Glo. What Paper were you reading?
Baſt. Nothing my Lord.
Glo. No? what needed then that terrible diſpatch of it into your Pocket? the quality of nothing, hath not ſuch need to hide it ſelf. Let's ſee: come, if it be nothing, I ſhall not need Spectacles.
Baſt. I beſeech you, Sir, pardon me; it is a letter from my Brother, that I have not all o're-read; and for ſo much as I have perus'd, I find it not fit for your o're-looking.
Glo. Give me the Letter, Sir.
Baſt. I ſhall offend, either to detain, or give it:
The Contents, as in part I underſtand them,
Are to blame.
Glo. Let's ſee, let's ſee.
Baſt. I hope for my brother's juſtification, he wrote this but as an eſſay, or taſte of my Virtue.
Glou. reads. This policy, and reverence of Age, makes the World bitter to beſt of our times keeps our Fortunes from us, 'till our oldneſs cannot reliſh them. I begin to find an idle and fond bondage, in the oppreſſion of aged tyranny, who ſwayes not as it hath power, but as it is ſuffer'd. Come to me, that of this I may ſpeak more. If our Father would ſleep till I wak'd him, you ſhould enjoy half his Revenue for ever, and live the beloved of your Brother. Edgar. Hum? Conſpiracy? Sleep 'till I wake him, you ſhould enjoy half his Revenue: my Son Edgar, had he a hand to write this? A heart and brain to breed it in? When came this to you? who brought it?
Baſt. It was not brought me, my Lord; there's the cunning of it. I found it thrown in at the Caſement of my Cloſſet.

Glo. You know the character to be your Brother's?

Baſt. If the matter were good, my Lord, I durſt ſwear it were his: but in reſpect of that, I would fain think it were not.

Glo. It is his.

Baſt. It is his hand, my Lord: I hope his heart is not in the Contents.

Glo. Has he never before ſounded you in this buſineſs?

Baſt. Never, my Lord. But I have heard him oft maintain it to be fit, that Sons at perfect age, and Fathers declin'd, the Father ſhould be as Ward to the Son, and the Son manage his Revenue.

Glo. O Villain, villain: his very opinion in the Letter. Abhorred Villain, unnatural, deteſted, bruitiſh Villain; worſe than bruitiſh: Go, ſirrah, ſeek him: I'le apprehend him. Abominable Villain, where is he?

Baſt. I do not well know, my Lord; if it ſhall pleaſe you to ſuſpend your indignation againſt my Brother, 'till you can derive from him better Teſtimony of his intent, you ſhould run a certain courſe: where, if you violently proceed againſt him, miſtaking his purpoſe, it would make a great gap in your honour, and ſhake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn down my life for him, that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no other pretence of danger.

Glo. Think you ſo?

Baſt. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you ſhall hear us confer this, and by an Auricular aſſurance have your ſatisfaction, and that without any further delay, than this very Evening.

Glo. He cannot be ſuch a Monſter. Edmund, ſeek him out: wind me into him, I pray you: frame the Buſineſs after your own wiſdom. I would unſtate my ſelf, to be in a due reſolution.

Baſt. I will ſeek him, Sir, preſently: convey the buſineſs as I ſhall find means, and acquaint you withal.

Glo. Theſe late Eclipſes in the Sun and Moon portend no good to us: though the wiſdom of Nature can reaſon it thus, and thus, yet Nature finds it ſelf ſcourg'd by the ſequent effects. Love cools, Friendſhip falls off, Brothers divide. In Cities, mutinies; in Countries, diſcord; in Palaces, Treaſon; and the Bond crack'd, 'twixt Son and Father. This Villain of mine comes under the prediction: there's Son againſt Father, the King falls from biaſs of nature, there's Father againſt Child. We have ſeen the beſt of our time. Machinations, hollowneſs, treachery, and all ruinous diſorders follow us diſquietly to our Graves. Find out this Villain, Edmund, it ſhall loſe thee nothing, do it carefully: and the Noble and true-hearted Kent baniſh'd; his offence, honeſty. 'Tis ſtrange. [Exit.

Baſt. This is the excellent foppery of the world, that when we are ſick in fortune, often the ſurfeits of our own behaviour, we make guilty of our diſaſters, the Sun, the Moon, and Stars, as if we were Villains on neceſſity, Fools by heavenly compulſion, Knaves, Thieves, and Treachers by Spherical predominance, Drunkards, Lyars, and Adulterers by an inforc'd obedience of Planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thruſting on. An admirable evaſion of Whore-maſter-man, to lay his Goatiſh diſpoſition on the charge of a Star: My Father compounded with my Mother under the Dragon's tail, and my Nativity was under Urſa major, ſo that it follows, I am rough and Lecherous. I ſhould have been that I am, had the Maidenlieſt Star in the Firmament twinkled on my Baſtardizing.

Enter Edgar.

Pat: he comes like the Cataſtrophe of the old Comedy: my Cue is villanous Melancholy, with a ſigh like Tom o' Bedlam —— O theſe Eclipſes do portend theſe diviſions: Fa, Sol, La, Me.

Edg. How now, Brother Edmund, what ſerious contemplation are you in?

Baſt. I am thinking, Brother, of a Prediction I read this other day, what ſhould follow theſe Eclipſes.

Edg. Do you buſie your ſelf with that?

Baſt. I promiſe, the effects he writes of, ſucceed unhappily.
When ſaw you my Father laſt?

Edg. The night gone by.

Baſt. Spake you with him?

Edg. I, two hours together.

Baſt. Parted you in good terms? Found you no diſpleaſure in him, by word, nor countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Baſt. Bethink your ſelf wherein you have offended him: and at my entreaty forbear his preſence, until ſome little time hath qualified the heat of his diſpleaſure, which at this inſtant ſo rageth in him, that with the miſchief of your perſon, it would ſcarcely allay.

Edg. Some Villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That's my fear, I pray you have a continent forbearance till the ſpeed of his rage goes ſlower: and as I ſay, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my Lord ſpeak: pray ye go, there's my key: if you do ſtir abroad, go arm'd.

Edg. Arm'd, Brother?

Edm. Brother, I adviſe you to the beſt, I am no honeſt man, if there be any good meaning toward you: I have told you what I have ſeen, and heard: But faintly. Nothing like the image, and horrour of it, pray you away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon? [Exit.

Edm. I do ſerve you in this buſineſs:
A Credulous Father, and a Brother Noble,
Whoſe nature is ſo far from doing harms,
That he ſuſpects none: on whoſe fooliſh honeſty
My practices ride eaſie: I ſee the buſineſs.
Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit,
All with me's meet, that I can faſhion fit. [Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Goneril, and Steward.

Gon. Did my Father ſtrike my Gentleman for chiding of his fool?

Stew. I, Madam.

Gon. By day and night, he wrongs me; every hour.
He flaſhes into one groſs crime, or other,
That ſets us all at odds: I'le not endure it;
His Knights grow riotous, and himſelf upbraids us
On every trifle. When he returns from hunting,
I will not ſpeak with him, ſay I am ſick,
If you come ſlack of former ſervices,
You ſhall do well, the fault of it I'le anſwer.

Stew. He's coming, Madam, I hear him.

Gon. Put on what weary negligence you pleaſe.
You and your Fellows: I'd have it come to queſtion;
If he diſtaſte it, let him to my Siſter,
Whoſe mind and mine I know in that are one,
Remember what I have ſaid.

Stew. Well, Madam.

Gon. And let his Knights have colder looks among you: what grows of it no matter, adviſe your fellows ſo, I'le write ſtraight to my Siſter to hold my courſe: prepare for dinner. [Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Kent.

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow,
That can my ſpeech diffuſe, my good intent
May carry through it ſelf to that full iſſue
For which I rais'd my likeneſs. Now, baniſht Kent,

If

If thou canſt ſerve where thou doſt ſtand condemn'd,
So may it come, thy Maſter whom thou lov'ſt,
Shall find thee full of labours.

Horns within. Enter Lear and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not ſtay a jot for dinner, go get it ready: how now, what art thou?

Kent. A man, Sir.

Lear. What doſt thou profeſs? what would'ſt thou with us?

Kent. I do profeſs to be no leſs than I ſeem; to ſerve him truly that will put me in truſt, to love him that is honeſt, to converſe with him that is wiſe, and ſays little, to fear judgment, to fight when I cannot chuſe, and to eat no fiſh.

Lear. What art thou?

Kent. A very honeſt hearted Fellow, and as poor as the King.

Lear. If thou be'ſt as poor for a Subject, as he's for a King, thou art poor enough. What would'ſt thou?

Kent. Service.

Lear. Whom would'ſt thou ſerve?

Kent. You.

Lear. Do'ſt thou know me, fellow?

Kent. No, Sir, but you have that in your countenance, which I would fain call Maſter.

Lear. What's that?

Kent. Authority.

Lear. What ſervices canſt thou do?

Kent. I can keep honeſt counſels, ride, run, marr a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain meſſage bluntly: that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in, and the beſt of me, is diligence.

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not ſo young, Sir, to love a woman for ſinging, nor ſo old to doat on her for any thing. I have years on my back forty eight.

Lear. Follow me, thou ſhalt ſerve me, if I like thee no worſe after Dinner, I will not part from thee yet. Dinner ho, Dinner, where's my Knave? my Fool? go you and call my Fool hither. You, you, Sirrah, where's my Daughter?

Enter Steward.

Stew. So pleaſe you—— [Exit.

Lear. What ſays the fellow there? Call the Clotpole back: where's my Fool? Ho, I think the World's aſleep, how now? where's that Mungrel?

Knight. He ſays, my Lord, your Daughter is not well.

Lear. Why came not the ſlave back to me when I call'd him?

Knight. Sir, he anſwered in the roundeſt manner, he would not.

Lear. He would not?

Knight. My Lord, I know not what the matter is, but to my judgment, your Highneſs is not entertain'd with that Ceremonious Affection as you were wont, there's a great abatement of kindneſs appears as well in the general dependents, as in the Duke himſelf alſo, and your Daughter.

Lear. Ha! ſay'ſt thou ſo?

Knight. I beſeech you, pardon me, my Lord, if I be miſtaken, for my duty cannot be ſilent, when I think your Highneſs is wrong'd.

Lear. Thou but remembreſt me of my own Conception, I have perceiv'd a moſt faint neglect of late, which I have rather blamed as my own jealous curioſity, than as a very pretence and purpoſe of unkindneſs; I will look further into't: but where's my Fool? I have not ſeen him this two days.

Knight. Since my young Ladies going into France, Sir, the Fool hath much pined away.

Lear. No more of that, I have noted it well; go you and tell my Daughter, I would ſpeak with her. Go you call hither my Fool; O you Sir, come you hither, Sir, who am I Sir?

Enter Steward.

Stew. My Ladies Father.

Lear. My Ladies Father? my Lords Knave, you whorſon Dog, you Slave, you Cur.

Stew. I am none of theſe, my Lord;
I beſeech your pardon.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you Raſcal?

Stew. I'll not be ſtrucken, my Lord.

Kent. Nor tript neither, you baſe Foot-ball Player.

Lear. I thank thee, fellow.
Thou ſerv'ſt me, and I'll love thee.

Kent. Come, Sir, ariſe, away, I'll teach you differences: away, away, if you will meaſure your lubbers length again, tarry, but away, go to, have you wiſdom, ſo.

Lear. Now my friendly Knave I thank thee, there's earneſt of thy ſervice.

Enter Fool.

Fool. Let me hire him too, here's my Coxcomb.

Lear. How now my pretty Knave? how doſt thou?

Fool. Sirrah, you were beſt take my Coxcomb.

Kent. Why, my Boy?

Fool. Why? for taking one's part that is out of favour; nay, and thou can'ſt not ſmile as the wind ſits, thou'lt catch cold ſhortly, there take my Coxcomb; why this fellow has baniſh'd two on's Daughters, and did the third a bleſſing againſt his will; if thou follow him, thou muſt needs wear my Coxcomb. How now Nunkle? would I had two Coxcombs, and two Daughters.

Lear. Why, my Boy?

Fool. If I give them all my living, I'ld keep my Coxcomb my ſelf, there's mine, beg another of thy Daughters.

Lear. Take heed, Sirrah, the whip.

Fool. Truth's a Dog muſt to kennel, he muſt be whip'd out, when the Lady Brach may ſtand by th'fire and ſtink.

Lear. A peſtilent gall to me.

Fool. Sirrah, I'll teach thee a ſpeech.

Lear. Do.

Fool. Mark it Nunkle;
Have more than thou ſhoweſt,
Speak leſs than thou knoweſt,
Lend leſs than thou oweſt,
Ride more than thou goeſt,
Learn more than thou troweſt,
Set leſs than thou throweſt:
Leave thy Drink and thy Whore,
And keep in Door,
And thou ſhalt have more,
Than two tens to a ſcore.

Kent. This is nothing, Fool.

Fool. Then it is like the breath of an unfee'd Lawyer, you give me nothing for't, can you make no uſe of nothing, Nunkle?

Lear. Why no, Boy,
Nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool. Prithee tell him, ſo much the rent of his Land comes to, he will not believe a Fool.

Lear. A bitter Fool.

Fool. Do'ſt thou know the difference, my Boy, between a bitter Fool, and a ſweet one?

Lear. No Lad; teach me.

Fool. Nunkle, give me an egg, and I'll give thee two Crowns.

Lear. What two Crowns ſhall they be?

Fool. Why? after I have cut the egg i'th' middle, and eat up the meat, the two Crowns of the egg: when thou cloveſt cloveſt thy Crown i'th'middle, and gav'ſt away both parts, thou bor'ſt thine Aſs on thy back o're the dirt, thou had'ſt little wit in thy bald crown, when thou gav'ſt thy golden one away: if I ſpeak like my ſelf in this, let him be whipt that firſt finds it ſo.

Fools had ne're leſs grace in a year,
For wiſemen are grown foppiſh,
And know not how their wits to wear,
Their manners are ſo apiſh.

Lear. When were you wont to be ſo full of Songs, Sirrah?

Fool. I have uſed it Nuncle, e're ſince thou mad'ſt thy Daughters thy Mothers, for when thou gav'ſt them the rod, and put'ſt down thine own breeches, then they

For ſudden joy did weep,
And I for ſorrow ſung,
That ſuch a King ſhould play bo peep,
And go the Fools among.

Prythee Nuncle keep a School-Maſter that can teach thy Fool to lye, I would fain learn to lye.

Lear. And you lye, Sirrah, we'll have you whipt.

Fool. I marvel what kin thou and thy Daughters are: they'll have me whipt for ſpeaking true: thou'lt have me whipt for lying, and ſometimes I am whipt, for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind o'thing than a fool, and yet I would not be thee, Nuncle; thou haſt pared thy wit o'both ſides, and left nothing i'th'middle; here comes one o'the parings.

Enter Goneril.

Lear. How now, Daughter? what makes that Frontlet on? You are too much of late i'th' frown.

Fool. Thou waſt a pretty fellow when thou had'ſt no need to care for her frowning; now thou art an O without a figure, I am better than thou art now, I am a fool, thou art nothing. Yes forſooth I will hold my tongue, ſo your face bids me, though you ſay nothing.
Mum, Mum, he that keeps nor cruſt, nor crum,
Weary of all, ſhall want ſome. That's a ſheal'd Peſcod.

Gon. Not only, Sir, this, your all licenc'd Fool,
But other of your inſolent retinue
Do hourly Carp and Quarrel, breaking forth
In rank, (and not to be endured) riots, Sir.
I had thought by making this well know unto you,
To have found a ſafe redreſs, but now grow fearful
By what your ſelf too late have ſpoke and done,
That you protect this courſe, and put it on
By your allowance, which if you ſhould, the fault
Would not ſcape cenſure, nor the redreſſes ſleep,
Which in the tender of a wholeſome weal,
Might in their working do you that offence,
Which elſe were ſhame, that then neceſſity
Will call diſcreet proceeding.

Fool. For you know, Nuncle, the Hedge-ſparrow fed the Cuckooe ſo long, that it had it's head bit off by it's young, ſo out went the Candle, and we were left darkling.

Lear. Are you our Daughter?

Gon. I would you would make uſe of your good wiſdom, (Whereof I know you are fraught) and put away
Theſe diſpoſitions, which of late tranſport you
From what you rightly are.

Fool. May not an Aſs know, when the Cart draws the Horſe?
Whoop Jug I love thee.

Lear. Do's any here know me?
This is not Lear:
Do's Lear walk thus? Speak thus? Where are his eyes?
Either his Notion weakens, his Diſcernings
Are Lethargied. Ha? Waking? 'Tis not ſo;
Who is it that can tell me who I am?

Fool. Lear's ſhadow.

Lear. Your name, fair Gentlewoman?

Gon. This admiration, Sir, is much o'th'ſavour
Of other your new pranks. I do beſeech you
To underſtand my purpoſes aright:
As you are Old, and Reverend, ſhould be Wiſe.
Here do you keep a hundred Knights and Squires,
Men ſo diſorder'd, ſo deboſh'd, and bold,
That this our Court infected, with their manners,
Shews like a riotous Inn; Epicuriſm and Luſt
Makes it more like a Tavern, or a Brothell,
Than a grac'd Palace. The ſhame it ſelf doth ſpeak
For inſtant remedy. Be then deſir'd,
By her that elſe will take the thing ſhe begs,
A little to diſquantity your Train,
And the remainders that ſhall ſtill depend,
To be ſuch men as may beſort your Age,
Which know themſelves, and you.

Lear. Darkneſs, and Devils,
Saddle my Horſes: call my Train together.
Degenerate Baſtard, I'le not trouble thee;
Yet have I left a Daughter.

Gon. You ſtrike my people, and your diſorder'd rabble make Servants of their Betters.

Enter Albany.

Lear. Woe, that too late repents:
Is it your will, ſpeak, Sir? Prepare my Horſes.
Ingratitude! thou Marble-hearted Fiend,
More hideous when thou ſhew'ſt thee in a Child,
Than the Sea-monſter.

Alb. Pray, Sir, be patient.

Lear. Deteſted Kite, thou lyeſt.
My Train are men of choice, and rareſt parts,
That all particulars of duty know,
And in the moſt exact regard, ſupport
Their worſhips of their name. O moſt ſmall fault,
How ugly did'ſt thou in Cordelia ſhew?
Which like an Engine, wrencht my frame of Nature
From the fixt place: drew from my heart all love,
And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear!
Beat at this gate that let thy Folly in,
And thy dear Judgement out. Go, go, my people.

Alb. My Lord, I am guiltleſs, as I am ignorant
Of what hath moved you.

Lear. It may be ſo, my Lord,
Hear Nature, hear, dear Goddeſs, hear:
Suſpend thy purpoſe, if thou did'ſt intend
To make this Creature fruitful:
Into her Womb convey ſterility,
Dry up in her the Organs of increaſe,
And from her derogate body, never ſpring
A Babe to honour her. If ſhe muſt teem,
Create her Child of Spleen, that it may live
And be a thwart, diſnatur'd torment to her.
Let it ſtamp wrinkles in her brow of youth,
With cadent Tears fret Chanels in her Cheeks,
Turn all her Mother's pains, and benefits
To laughter, and contempt: That ſhe may feel,
How ſharper than a Serpent's tooth it is,
To have a thankleſs Child. Away, away. [Exit.

Alb. Now gods that we adore.
Whereof comes this?

Gon. Never afflict your ſelf to know of it:
But let his diſpoſition have that ſcope
As dotage gives it.

Enter Lear.

Lear. What fifty of my followers at a clap?
Within a fortnight?

Alb. What's the matter, Sir?

Lear.

Lear. I'll tell thee:
Life and Death, I am asham'd
That thou hast power to shake my manhood thus,
That these hot tears, which break from me perforce,
Should make thee worth them,
Blasts and Fogs upon thee:
Th' untented woundings of a Father's Curse
Pierce every sense about thee. Old fond Eyes,
Beweep thee once again, I'll pluck ye out,
And cast you with the Waters that you lose
To temper Clay. Ha? Let it be so.
I have another Daughter,
Who I am sure is kind and comfortable:
When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails
Shee'll flea thy Wolvish visage. Thou shalt find,
That I'll resume the shape which thou dost think
I have cast off for ever.
Gon. Do you mark that?
Alb. I cannot be so partial, Gonerill,
To the great love I bear you.
Gon. Pray you content. What, Oswald, ho?
You, Sir, more Knave than Fool, after your Master.
Fool. Nuncle Lear, Nuncle Lear,
Tarry, take the Fool with thee:
A Fox, when one has caught her,
And such a Daughter,
Should sure to the slaughter,
If my Cap would buy a Halter,
So the Fool follows after. [Exit.
Gon. This man hath had good counsel,
A hundred Knights?
'Tis politick, and safe to let him keep
At point a hundred Knights: yes, that on every Dream,
Each buz, each fancy, each complaint, dislike,
He may enguard his dotage with their powers,
And hold our lives in mercy. Oswald, I say.
Alb. Well, you may fear too far;
Gon. Safer than trust too far;
Let me still take away the harms I fear,
Not fear still to be taken. I know his heart,
What he hath utter'd, I have writ my Sister:
If she'll sustain him, and his hundred Knights
When I have shew'd th' unfitness.

Enter Steward.

How now, Oswald?
What have you writ that Letter to my Sister?
Stew. I, Madam.
Gon. Take you some Company, and away to Horse,
Inform her full of my particular fear,
And thereto add such reasons of your own,
As may compact it more. Get you gone,
And hasten your return; no, no, my Lord,
This milky gentleness, and course of yours
Though I condemn not, yet under pardon
You are much more at task for want of wisdom,
Than prais'd for harmful mildness.
Alb. How far your Eyes may pierce I cannot tell;
Striving to better, oft we mar what's well.
Gon. Nay then ——
Alb. Well, well, the 'vent. [Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Lear, Kent, Gentleman, and Fool.

Lear. Go you before to Gloster with these Letters; acquaint my Daughter no further with any thing you know, than comes from her demand out of the Letter, if your diligence be not speedy, I shall be there afore you.
Kent. I will not sleep, my Lord, till I have delivered your Letter. [Exit.

Fool. If a man's brains were in his heels, wert not in danger of kibes?
Lear. I, Boy.
Fool. Then I prythee be merry, thy Wit shall not go slip-shod.
Lear. Ha, ha, ha.
Fool. Shalt see thy other Daughter will use thee kindly, for though she's as like this, as a Crab's like an Apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.
Lear. What canst tell, Boy?
Fool. She will taste as like this, as a Crab do's to a Crab: canst thou tell why ones Nose stands i' th' middle on's face?
Lear. No.
Fool. Why to keep ones Eyes of either side's nose, that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.
Lear. I did her wrong.
Fool. Canst tell how an Oyster makes his shell?
Lear. No.
Fool. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a Snail has a House.
Lear. Why?
Fool. Why to put's head in, not to give it away to his Daughters, and leave his Horns without a Cuse.
Lear. I will forget my Nature, so kind a Father? Be my Horses ready?
Fool. Thy Asses are gone about 'em; the reason why the seven Stars are no more than seven, is a pretty reason.
Lear. Because they are not eight.
Fool. Yes indeed, thou would'st make a good Fool.
Lear. To tak't again perforce? Monster ingratitude!
Fool. If you were my Fool, Nuncle, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy time.
Lear. How's that?
Fool. Thou should'st not have bin old, till thou had'st bin wise.
Lear. O let me not be mad, not mad, sweet Heaven: keep me in temper, I would not be mad. How now, are the Horses ready?
Gent. Ready, my Lord.
Lear. Come, Boy.
Fool. She that's a Maid now, and laughs at my departure, Shall not be a Maid long, unless things be cut shorter.
[Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Bastard, and Curan, severally.

Bast SAve thee, Curan.
Cur. And you, Sir, I have bin
With your Father, and given him notice
That the Duke of Cornwal, and Regan his Dutchess
Will be here with him this night.
Bast. How comes that?
Cur. Nay I know not, you have heard of the news abroad, I mean the whisper'd ones, for they are yet but Ear-kissing Arguments.
Bast. Not I: pray you what are they?
Cur. Have you heard of no likely Wars toward,
'Twixt the Dukes of Cornwall and Albany?
Bast. Not a word.
Cur. You may do then in time,
Fare you well, Sir. [Exit.
Bast. The Duke be here to night? the better best,
This weaves it self perforce into my business,
My Father hath set guard to take my Brother,
And I have one thing of a queazy question
Which I must act, briefness, and fortune work.

Enter

Enter Edgar.

Brother, a word, deſcend, brother I ſay,
My Father watches; O Sir, fly this place,
Intelligence is given where you are hid;
You have now the good advantage of the night,
Have you not ſpoken 'gainſt the Duke of Cornwall?
He's coming hither, now i'th' night, i'th'haſte,
And Regan with him, have you nothing ſaid
Upon his party 'gainſt the Duke of Albany?
Adviſe your ſelf.
Edg. I am ſure on't, not a word.
Baſt. I hear my Father coming, pardon me:
In cunning, I muſt draw my Sword upon you:
Draw, ſeem to defend your ſelf,
Now quit you well.
Yield, come before my father, light hoa, here,
Fly, Brother, Torches, ſo farewel, [Exit Edgar.
Some bloud drawn on me would beget opinion
Of my more fierce endeavour. I have ſeen drunkards
Do more than this in ſport; Father, father,
Stop, ſtop, no help?

Enter Gloſter, and Servants with Torches.

Glo. Now, Edmund, where's the villain?
Baſt. Here ſtood he in the dark, his ſharp Sword out,
Mumbling of wicked Charms, conjuring the Moon
To ſtand his auſpicious Miſtreſs.
Glo. But where is he?
Baſt. Look, Sir, I bleed.
Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund?
Baſt. Fled this way, Sir, when by no means he could——
Glo. Purſue him, ho: go after. By no means, what?
Baſt. Perſwade me to murther of your Lordſhip,
But that I told him the revenging gods,
'Gainſt Parricides did all the thunder bend,
Spoke with how manifold, and ſtrong a Bond
The Child was bound to th' Father. Sir, in fine,
Seeing how lothly oppoſite I ſtood
To his unnatural purpoſe, in fell motion
With his prepared Sword, he charges home
My unprovided body, latch'd mine Arm:
And when he ſaw my beſt alarm'd Spirits
Bold in the quarrels right, rouz'd to th'encounter,
Or whether gaſted by the noiſe I made,
Full ſuddenly he fled.
Glo. Let him flye far:
Not in this land ſhall he remain uncaught
And found; diſpatch, the Noble Duke my Maſter,
My worth Arch and Patron comes to night,
By his Authority I will proclaim it,
That he which finds him ſhall deſerve our thanks,
Bringing the murderous Coward to the ſtake:
He that conceals him, death.
Baſt. When I diſſwaded him from his intent,
And found him pight to do it, with curſt ſpeech
I threatned to diſcover him; he replied,
Thou unpoſſeſſing Baſtard, doſt thou think,
If I would ſtand againſt thee, would the repoſal
Of any truſt, virtue, or worth in thee
Make thy words faith'd? No, what ſhould I deny,
(As this I would, though thou did'ſt produce
My very Character) I'll turn it all
To thy ſuggeſtion, plot, and damned practice:
And thou muſt make a dullard of the world,
If they not thought the profits of my death
Were very pregnant and potential Spirits
To make thee ſeek it. [Tucket within.
Glo. O ſtrange and faſtned Villain!
Would he deny his Letter, ſaid he?
Heark, the Duke's trumpets, I know not where he comes,
All Ports I'le bar, the villain ſhall not ſcape,
The Duke muſt grant me that: beſides, his picture
I will ſend far and near, that all the Kingdom
My have due note of him, and of my land,
(Loyal and natural Boy) I'le work the means
To make thee capable.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, and Attendants.

Corn. How now, my noble friend, ſince I came hither
(Which I can call but now) I have heard ſtrangeneſs.
Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too ſhort
Which can purſue th'offender: how does my Lord?
Glo. O Madam, my old heart is crack'd, it's crack'd.
Reg. What, did my Father's Godſon ſeek your life?
He whom my father nam'd, your Edgar:
Glo. O Lady, Lady, ſhame would have it hid.
Reg. Was he not compainon with the riotous Knights
That tended upon my father?
Glo. I know not, Madam, 'tis too bad, too bad.
Baſt. Yes, Madam, he was of that conſort.
Reg. No marvel then, though he were ill-affected,
'Tis they have put him on the old man's death,
To have th'expence and waſt of Revenues;
I have this preſent evening from my Siſter
Been well inform'd of them, and with ſuch cautions,
That if they come to ſojourn at my Houſe,
I'le not be there.
Cor. Nor I, aſſure thee, Regan;
Edmund, I hear that you have ſhewn your Father
A Child-like Office.
Baſt. It is my duty, Sir.
Glo. He did bewray his practice, and receiv'd
This hurt you ſee, ſtriving to apprehend him.
Cor. Is he purſued?
Glo. I, my good Lord.
Cor. If he be taken, he ſhall never more
Be fear'd of doing harm, make your own purpoſe,
How in my ſtrength you pleaſe: as for you, Edmund,
Whoſe virtue and obedience doth this inſtant
So much commend it ſelf, you ſhall be ours,
Natures of ſuch deep truſt, we ſhall much need:
You we firſt ſeize on.
Baſt. I ſhall ſerve you, Sir, truly, how ever elſe.
Glo. For him I thank your Grace.
Cor. You know not why we came to viſit you.
Reg. Thus out of ſeaſon, thredding dark-ey'd night,
Occaſions Noble Gloſter of ſome prize.
Wherein we muſt have uſe of your advice.
Our Father he hath writ, ſo hath our Siſter,
Of differences, which I beſt thought it fit
To anſwer from our home: the ſeveral Meſſengers
From hence attend diſpatch, our good old friend
Lay comforts to your boſome, and beſtow
Your needful counſel to our buſineſſes,
Which craves the inſtant uſe.
Glo. I ſerve you, Madam,
Your Graces are right welcom. [Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Kent, and Steward, ſeverally.

Stew. Good dawning to thee, friend, art of this houſe?
Kent. I.
Stew. Where may we ſet our horſes?
Kent. I th'mire.
Stew. Prythee if thou lov'ſt me, tell me.
Kent. I love thee not.
Stew. Why then I care not for thee.
Kent. If I had thee in Lipsbury Pinfold, I would make thee care for me.
Stew. Why doſt thou uſe me thus? I know thee not.
Kent. Fellow, I know thee.

Stew.

Stew. What doſt thou know me for?

Kent. A Knave, a Raſcal, and eater of broken meats, a baſe, proud, ſhallow, beggarly, three-ſuited, hundred pound, filthy wooſted ſtocking Knave, a Lilly-livered, Action-taking, whorſon glaſs gazing, ſuper-ſerviceable finical Rogue, one-Trunk-inheriting ſlave, one that would'ſt be a Bawd in way of good ſervice, and art nothing but the compoſition of a Knave, Beggar, Coward, Pander, and the Son and Heir of a Mungril Bitch, one whom I will beat into clamorous whining, if thou deny'ſt the leaſt ſyllable of thy addition.

Stew. Why, what a monſtrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one, that is neither known of thee, nor knows thee?

Kent. What a brazen fac'd Varlet art thou, to deny thou knoweſt me? Is it two days ſince I tript up thy heels, and beat thee before the King? Draw you Rogue, for though it be night, yet the Moon ſhines, I'le make a ſop o'th'Moonſhine of you, you whorſon Culleinly Barbar-monger, draw.

Stew. Away, I have nothing to do with thee.

Kent. Draw, you Raſcal, you come with letters againſt the King, and take Vanity the puppet's part, againſt the Royalty of her father: draw, you rogue, or I'le ſo carbonado your ſhanks, draw you Raſcal, come your ways.

Stew. Help, ho, murther, help.

Kent. Strike you ſlave: ſtand, Rogue, ſtand you neat ſlave, ſtrike.

Stew. Help ho, murther, murther.

Enter Baſtard, Cornwal, Regan, Gloſter, Servant.

Baſt. How now, what's the matter? Part.

Kent. With you, goodman boy, if you pleaſe, come, I'le fleſh ye, come on young Maſter.

Glo. Weapons? Arms? what's the matter here?

Cor. Keep peace upon your lives, he dyes that ſtrikes again, what is the matter?

Reg. The Meſſengers from our Siſter, and the King?

Cor. What is your difference, ſpeak?

Stew. I am ſcarce in breath, my Lord.

Kent. No marvel, you have ſo beſtir'd your Valour, you cowardly Raſcal, nature diſclaims in thee: a Taylor made thee.

Corn. Thou art a ſtrange fellow, a Taylor make a man?

Kent. A Taylor, Sir; a Stone-cutter, or a Painter, could not have made him ſo ill, though they had been but two years o'th'trade.

Cor. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?

Stew. The ancient Ruffian, Sir, whoſe life I have ſpar'd at ſute of his gray beard.

Kent. Thou whoreſon Zed, thou unneceſſary letter, my Lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unboulted villain into mortar, and daub the wall of a Jakes with him, Spare my gray-beard, you wag-tail?

Cor. Peace, Sirrah,
You beaſtly knave, know you no reverence?

Kent. Yes, Sir, but anger hath a priviledge.

Cor. Why art thou angry?

Kent. That ſuch a ſlave as this ſhould wear a Sword,
Who wears no honeſty: ſuch ſmiling rogues as theſe,
Like Rats oft bite the holy cords a-twain,
Which art t'intrince, t'unlooſe: ſmooth every paſſion
That in the natures of their Lords rebel,
Being oil to fire, ſnow to the colder moods,
Renege, affirm, and turn their Halcyon beaks,
With every gale, and vary of their Maſters,
Knowing nought (like dogs) but following:
A plague upon your Epileptick viſage,
Smile you my ſpeeches, as I were a fool?
Gooſe, if I had you upon Sarum plain
I'le drive ye cackling home to Camelot.

Corn. What art thou mad, old fellow?

Gloſt. How fell you out, ſay that?

Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy,
Than I, and ſuch a Knave.

Corn. Why doſt thou call him Knave?
What is his fault?

Kent. His countenance likes me not.

Cor. No more perchance do's mine, nor his, nor hers.

Kent. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain,
I have ſeen better faces in my time,
Than ſtands on any ſhoulder that I ſee
Before me, at this inſtant.

Corn. This is ſome fellow,
Who having been prais'd for bluntneſs, doth affect
A ſawcy roughneſs, and conſtrains the garb
Quite from his Nature. He cannot flatter, he,
An honeſt mind and plain, he muſt ſpeak truth,
And they will take it ſo, if not, he's plain.
Theſe kind of Knaves I know, which in this plainneſs.
Harbour more craft, and more corrupter ends,
Then twenty ſilly-ducking obſervants,
That ſtretch their duties nicely.

Kent. Sir, in good faith, in ſincere verity,
Under th'allowance of your great aſpect,
Whoſe influence like the wreath of radiant fire
On flicking Phœbus front.

Corn. What mean'ſt by this?

Kent. To go out of my dialect: which you diſcommend ſo much; I know, Sir, I am no flatterer, he that beguil'd you in a plain accent, was a plain Knave, which for my part I will not be, though I ſhould win your diſpleaſure to intreat me to't.

Corn. What was th'offence you gave him?

Stew. I never gave him any:
It pleas'd the King his Maſter very late
To ſtrike at me upon his miſconſtruction,
When he compact, and flattering his diſpleaſure
Tript me behind: being down, inſulted, rail'd,
And put upon him ſuch a deal of Man,
That worthied him, got praiſes of the King,
For him attempting, who was ſelf-ſubdued,
And in the fleſhment of this dead exploit,
Drew on me here again.

Kent. None of theſe Rogues, and Cowards,
But Ajax is their fool.

Corn. Fetch forth the Stocks?
You ſtubborn ancient Knave, you reverent Braggart,
We'll teach you.

Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn:
Call not your Stocks for me, I ſerve the King;
On whoſe imployment I was ſent to you,
You ſhall do ſmall reſpects, ſhew too bold malice
Againſt the Grace, and Perſon of my Maſter,
Stocking his Meſſenger.

Corn. Fetch forth the Stocks;
As I have life and honour, there ſhall he ſit 'till Noon.

Reg. 'Till noon? 'till night my Lord, and all night too.

Kent. Why Madam, if I were your Father's dog,
You ſhould not uſe me ſo.

Reg. Sir, being his Knave, I will. [Stocks brought out.

Corn. This is a fellow of the ſelf-ſame colour,
Our Siſter ſpeaks of. Come, bring away the Stocks.

Glo. Let me beſeech your Grace, not to do ſo,
The King his Maſter needs muſt take it ill
That he's ſo ſlightly valued in his Meſſenger,
Should have him this reſtrained.

Corn. I'le anſwer that.

Reg. My Siſter may receive it much more worſe,
To have her Gentleman abus'd, aſſaulted.

Corn. Come, my Lord, away. [Exit.

Glo. I am ſorry for thee, friend, 'tis the Dukes pleaſure,
Whoſe diſpoſition all the world well knows
Will not be rubb'd nor ſtopt, I'le intreat for thee.

Ken. Pray do not, ſir, I have watch'd and travel'd hard,
Some time I ſhall ſleep out, the reſt I'le whiſtle:
A good man's fortune may grow out at heels:

Give

Give you Good morrow.
Glo. The Duke's to blame in this,
'Twill be ill taken. [Exit.
Kent. Good King, that muſt approve the common ſaw,
Thou out of Heaven's benediction com'ſt
To the warm Sun.
Approach thou Beacon to this under Globe,
That by thy comfortable Beams I may
Peruſe this Letter. Nothing almoſt ſees miracles
But miſery. I know 'tis from Cordelia,
Who hath moſt fortunately been inform'd
Of my obſcured courſe. And ſhall find time
From this enormous State, ſeeking to give
Loſſes their remedies. All weary and o're-watch'd,
Take vantage heavy eyes, not to behold
This ſhameful lodging. Fortune, good night,
Smile once more, turn thy wheel.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. I have heard my ſelf proclaim'd,
And by the happy hollow of a Tree,
Eſcap'd the hunt. No Port is free, no place
That guard, and moſt unuſual vigilance
Do's not attend my taking. Whiles I may ſcape
I will preſerve my ſelf: and am bethought
To take the baſeſt and moſt pooreſt ſhape
That ever penury in contempt of man,
Brought near to Beaſt: My face I'll grime with filth,
Blanket my loins, put all my hair in knots,
And with preſented nakedneſs out-face
The winds, and perſecutions of the Sky:
The Country gives me proof and preſident
Of Bedlam beggars, who with roaring voices
Strike in their numm'd and mortifi'd Arms,
Pins, Wooden pricks, Nails, Sprigs of Roſemary:
And with this horrible object, from low Farms,
Poor pelting Villages, Sheeps-Coats, and Mills,
Sometimes with Lunatick Bans, ſometimes with Prayers,
Inforce their charity: poor Turlygod, poor Tom.
That's ſomething yet: Edgar I nothing am. [Exit.

Enter Lear, Fool, and Gentleman.

Lear. 'Tis ſtrange that they ſhould ſo depart from home,
And not ſend back my Meſſenger.
Gent. As I learn'd,
The night before, there was no purpoſe in them
Of this remove.
Kent. Hail to thee, Noble Maſter.
Lear. Ha, mak'ſt thou this ſhame thy paſtime?
Kent. No, my Lord.
Fool. Ha, ha, he wears Crewel Garters; Horſes are ty'd by the heads, Dogs and Bears by th' neck, Monkies by th' loins, and men by th' legs; when a man is overluſty at legs, then he wears wooden nether ſtocks.
Lear. What's he,
That hath ſo much thy place miſtook
To ſet thee here?
Kent. It is both he and ſhe,
Your Son and Daughter.
Lear. No.
Kent. Yes.
Lear. No, I ſay.
Kent. I ſay, yea.
Lear. By Jupiter, I ſwear no.
Kent. By Juno, I ſwear I.
Lear. They durſt not do't:
They could not, would not do't: 'tis worſe than murther
To do upon reſpect ſuch violent outrage:
Reſolve me with all modeſt haſt, which way
Thou might'ſt deſerve, or they impoſe this uſage,
Coming from us.
Kent. My Lord, when at their home
I did commend your Highneſs Letters to them,
E're I was riſen from the place, that ſhewed
My duty kneeling, came there a reeking Poſt,
Stew'd in his haſt, half breathleſs, panting forth
From Gonerill his Miſtreſs, ſalutation;
Deliver'd Letters ſpight of intermiſſion,
Which preſently they read; on thoſe contents
They ſummon'd up their meiny, ſtraight took horſe,
Commanded me to follow and attend
The leiſure of their anſwer, gave me cold looks,
And meeting here the other Meſſenger,
Whoſe welcome I perceiv'd had poyſon'd mine,
Being the very fellow which of late
Diſplay'd ſo ſawcily againſt your Highneſs,
Having more man than wit about me, drew;
He rais'd the houſe, with loud and coward cries,
Your Son and Daughter found this treſpaſs worth
The ſhame which here it ſuffers. (way,
Fool. Winter's not gone yet, if the wild Geeſe fly that Fathers that wear Rags do make their Children blind.
But Fathers that bear Bags, ſhall ſee their Children kind.
Fortune, that arrant whore, ne'er turns the key to th'poor.
But for all this thou ſhalt have as many dolours for thy dear
Daughters, as thou canſt tell in a year.
Lear. Oh how this Mother ſwells up toward my heart!
Hyſterica paſſio, down thou climing ſorrow,
Thy Element's below; where is this Daughter?
Kent. With the Earl, Sir, here within.
Lear. Follow me not, ſtay here. [Exit.
Gen. Made you more offence,
But what you ſpeak of.
Kent. None;
How chance the King comes with ſo ſmall a number?
Fool. And thou hadſt been ſet i'th' Stocks for that queſtion, thoud'ſt well deſerv'd it.
Kent. Why, Fool?
Fool. We'll ſet thee to ſchool to an Ant, to teach thee there's no labouring i'th' winter. All that follow their noſes, are led by their eyes, but blind men; and there's not a noſe among twenty, but can ſmell him that's ſtinking! let go thy hold, when a great wheel runs down a hill, leſt it break thy neck with following. But the great one that goes upward, let him draw thee after: When a wiſe man gives thee better counſel, give me mine again, I would have none but Knaves follow it, ſince a fool gives it.
That, Sir, which ſerves and ſeeks for gain,
And follows but for form;
Will pack when it begins to rain,
And leave thee in a ſtorm,
And I will tarry, the fool will ſtay,
And let the wiſe man fly:
The Knave turns fool that runs away,
The fool no Knave perdy.

Enter Lear, and Gloſter.

Kent. Where learn'd you this, fool?
Fool. Not i'th' Stocks, fool.
Lear. Deny to ſpeak with me?
They are ſick, they are weary,
They have travell'd all the night? meer fetches,
The Images of revolt and flying off.
Fet me a better anſwer.
Glo. My dear Lord,
You know the fiery quality of the Duke,
How unremoveable and fixt he is
In his own courſe.
Lear. Vengeance, Plague, Death, Confuſion:
Fiery? What quality? Why, Gloſter, Gloſter,
I'ld ſpeak with the Duke of Cornwall, and his wife.
Glo. Well, my good Lord, I have inform'd them ſo.
Le. Inform'd them? Doſt thou underſtand me, man?
Glo. I, my good Lord.
Lear. The King would ſpeak with Cornwall,

The dear Father
Would with his Daughter ſpeak, commands, tends, ſervice,
Are they inform'd of this? My breath and blood:
Fiery? The fiery Duke, tell the hot Duke that——
No, but not yet, may be he is not well,
Infirmity doth ſtill neglect all office,
Whereto our health is bound, we are not our ſelves,
When Nature being oppreſt, commands the mind
To ſuffer with the body; I'll forbear,
And am fall'n out with my more headier will,
To take the indiſpos'd and ſickly fit,
For the ſound man. Death on my ſtate: wherefore
Should he ſit here? This act perſwades me,
That this remotion of the Duke and her
Is practice only, give me my ſervant forth;
Go, tell the Duke and's Wife, I'ld ſpeak with them:
Now preſently: Bid them come forth and hear me,
Or at their Chamber door I'll beat the Drum,
'Till it cry ſleep to death.

Glo. I would have all well betwixt you. [Exit.

Lear. Oh me, my heart! My riſing heart! But down.

Fool. Cry to it, Nuncle, as the Cockney did to the Eels, when he put them i'th' Paſte alive, ſhe knapt'em o'th' Coxcombs with a ſtick, and cryed down wantons, down; 'twas his Brother, that in pure kindneſs to his Horſe buttered his Hay.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Gloſter, Servants.

Lear. Good morrow to you both,

Corn. Hail to your Grace. [Kent here ſet at liberty.

Reg. I am glad to ſee your Highneſs.

Lear. Regan, I think you are, I know what reaſon,
I have to think ſo, if thou ſhould'ſt not be glad,
I would divorce me from thy Mother's Tomb,
Sepulchring an Adultereſs. O, are you free?
Some other time for that. Beloved Regan,
Thy Siſter's naught: Oh Regan, ſhe hath tyed
Sharp-tooth'd unkindneſs, like a Vulture here,
I can ſcarce ſpeak to thee, thou'lt not believe
With how deprav'd a quality. Oh Regan.

Reg. I pray you, Sir, take patience, I have hope
You leſs know how to value her deſert,
Than ſhe to ſcant her duty.

Lear. Say? How is that?

Reg. I cannot think my Siſter in the leaſt
Would fail her Obligation. If, Sir, perchance
She have reſtrain'd the Riots of your Followers,
'Tis on ſuch ground, and to ſuch wholeſome end,
As clears her from all blame.

Lear. My curſes on her.

Reg. O Sir, you are old,
Nature in you ſtands on the very Verge
Of her confine: You ſhould be rul'd and led
By ſome diſcretion, that diſcerns your ſtate
Better than you your ſelf: Therefore I pray you,
That to our Siſter you do make return,
Say you have wrong'd her.

Lear. Ask her forgiveneſs?
Do you but mark how this becomes the houſe?
Dear Daughter, I confeſs that I am old;
Age is unneceſſary: On my my knees I beg,
That you'll vouchſafe me Rayment, Bed, and Food.

Reg. Good Sir, no more: theſe are unſightly tricks:
Return you to my Siſter.

Lear. Never, Regan:
She hath abated me of half my Train:
Look'd black upon me, ſtrook me with her Tongue
Moſt Serpent-like, upon the very heart.
All the ſtor'd vengeances of heaven fall
On her ingrateful top: Strike her young bones,
You taking Airs, with Lameneſs.

Corn. Fie, Sir, fie.

Lear. You nimble Lightnings, dart your blinding flames
Into her ſcornful eyes: Infect her Beauty,
You Fen-ſuck'd Fogs, drawn by the powerful Sun
To fall, and bliſter.

Reg. O the bleſt gods!
So will you wiſh on me, when the raſh mood is on.

Lear. No, Regan, thou ſhalt never have my curſe:
Thy tender hefted nature ſhall not give
Thee o'er to harſhneſs: Her eyes are fierce, but thine
Do comfort, and not burn. 'Tis not in thee
To grudge my pleaſures, to cut off my Train,
To bandy haſty words, to ſcant my ſizes,
And in concluſion, to oppoſe the bolt
Againſt my coming in. Thou better know'ſt
The Offices of Nature, Bond of Child-hood,
Effects of Courteſie, Dues of Gratitude:
Thy half o'th' Kingdom haſt thou not forgot,
Wherein I thee endow'd.

Reg. Good Sir, to th'purpoſe. [Tucket within.

Lear. Who put my man i'th' Stocks?

Enter Steward.

Corn. What Trumpet's that?

Reg. I know't, my Siſter's: This approves her Letter,
That ſhe would ſoon be here. Is your Lady come?

Lear. This is a Slave, whoſe eaſie borrowed pride
Dwells in the ſickly grace of her he follows.
Out Varlet, from my ſight.

Corn. What means your Grace?

Enter Gonerill.

Lear. Who ſtockt my Servant? Regan, I have good hope
Thou didſt not know on't,
Who comes here? O Heavens!
If you do love old men; if your ſweet ſway
Allow Obedience; if you your ſelves are old,
Make it your cauſe: Send down and take my part.
Art not aſham'd to look upon this Beard?
O Regan, will you take her by the hand?

Gon. Why not by th' hand, Sir? How have I offended?
All's not offence that indiſcretion finds
And dotage terms ſo.

Lear. O ſides, you are too tough!
Will you yet hold?
How came my man i'th' Stocks?

Corn. I ſet him there, Sir: But his own Diſorders
Deſerv'd much leſs advancement.

Lear. You? Did you?

Reg. I pray you, Father, being weak, ſeem ſo.
If, 'till the expiration of your Month,
You will return and ſojourn with my Siſter,
Diſmiſſing half your train, come then to me,
I am now from home, and out of that proviſion,
Which ſhall be needful for your entertainment.

Lear. Return to her? and fifty men diſmiſs'd?
No, rather I abjure all roofs, and chuſe
To wage againſt the enmity o'th'air,
To be a Comerade with the Wolf and Owl,
Neceſſities ſharp pinch. Return with her?
Why? The hot bloodied France, that Dowerleſs took
Our youngeſt born, I could as well be brought
To knee his Throne, and Squire-like penſion beg,
To keep baſe life a-foot; return with her?
Perſwade me rather to be ſlave and ſumpter
To this deteſted Groom.

Gon. At your choice, Sir.

Lear. I prithee, Daughter, do not make me mad,
I will not trouble thee, my Child: Farewell:
We'll no more meet, no more ſee one another,
But yet thou art my fleſh, my blood, my daughter,
Or rather a diſeaſe that's in my fleſh,
Which I muſt needs call mine. Thou art a Bile,
A plague-ſore, or imboſſed Carbuncle

In my corrupted blood. But I'll not chide thee.
Let ſhame come when it will, I do not call it,
I do not bid the Thunder-Bearer ſhoot,
Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove,
Mend when thou canſt, be better at thy leiſure,
I can be patient, I can ſtay with Regan,
I and my hundred Knights.
Reg. Not altogether ſo,
I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided
For your fit welcome, give ear, Sir, to my Siſter,
For thoſe that mingle reaſon with your paſſion,
Muſt be content to think you old, and ſo,
But ſhe knows what ſhe does.
Lear. Is this well ſpoken?
Reg. I dare avouch it, Sir, what fifty followers?
Is it not well? What ſhould you need of more?
Yea, or ſo many? Sith that both charge and danger,
Speak 'gainſt ſo great a number: How in one houſe
Should many people, under two commands
Hold amity? 'Tis hard, almoſt impoſſible.
Gon. Why might not you, my Lord, receive attendance
From thoſe that ſhe calls ſervants, or from mine?
Reg. Why not, my Lord?
If then they chanc'd to ſlack ye,
We could controll them; if you will come to me,
(For now I ſpy a danger) I intreat you
To bring five and twenty, to no more
Will I give place or notice.
Lear. I gave you all.
Reg. And in good time you gave it.
Lear. Made you my Guardians my Depoſitaries,
But keep a reſervation to be followed
With ſuch a number? What muſt I come to you
With five and twenty? Regan, ſaid you ſo?
Reg. And ſpeak't again, my Lord, no more with me.
Lear. Thoſe wicked Creatures yet do look well favor'd
When others are more wicked, not being the worſt
Stands in ſome rank of praiſe; I'll go with thee,
Thy fifty yet doth double five and twenty.
And thou art twice her Love.
Gon. Hear me, my Lord;
What need you five and twenty? Ten? Or five?
To follow in a houſe, where twice ſo many.
Have a command to tend you?
Reg. What need one?
Lear. O reaſon not the need: Our baſeſt Beggars
Are in the pooreſt thing ſuperfluous,
Allow not Nature, more than nature needs:
Man's life is cheap as Beaſts. Thou art a Lady;
If only to go warm were gorgeous:
Why Nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'ſt,
Which ſcarcely keeps thee warm, but for true need,
You Heavens, give me that patience, patience I need,
You ſee me here (you gods) a poor old man,
As full of grief as age, wretched in both,
If it be you that ſtirs theſe Daughters hearts
Againſt their Father, fool me not ſo much:
To bear it tamely: Touch me with Noble anger,
And let not Women's weapons, water drops,
Stain my man's cheeks. No, you unnatural Hags,
I will have ſuch revenges on you both,
That all the world ſhall —— I will do ſuch things,
What they are yet, I know not, but they ſhall be
The terrors of the Earth, you think I'll weep,
No, I'll not weep, I have full cauſe of weeping.
[Storm and Tempeſt.
But this heart ſhall break into a hundred thouſand flaws,
Or e'er I weep. O fool, I ſhall go mad. [Exeunt.
Corn. Let us withdraw, 'twill be a ſtorm.
Reg. This houſe is little, the old man and's people
Cannot be well beſtow'd.
Gon. 'Tis his own blame hath put himſelf from reſt,
And muſt needs taſte his folly.
Reg. For his particular I'll receive him gladly,
But not one follower.
Gon. So am I purpos'd,
Where is my Lord of Gloſter?

Enter Gloſter.

Corn. Followed the old man forth, he is return'd.
Glo. The King is in high rage.
Corn. Whither is he going?
Glo. He calls to horſe, but will I know not whither.
Corn. 'Tis beſt to give him way, he leads himſelf.
Gon. My Lord, intreat him by no means to ſtay.
Glo. Alack the night comes on: and the high winds
Do ſorely ruffle, for many Miles about
There's ſcarce a Buſh.
Reg. O Sir, to wilful men,
The injuries that themſelves procure,
Muſt be their School-Maſters: Shut up your doors,
He is attended with a deſperate train,
And what they may incenſe him to, being apt,
To have his ear abus'd, wiſdom bids fear.
Corn. Shut up your doors, my Lord, 'tis a wild night,
My Regan Counſels well: Come out o'th' ſtorm.
[Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Storm ſtill. Enter Kent, and a Gentleman, ſeverally.

Kent. WHo's there beſides foul weather? (ly.
Gent. One minded like the weather, moſt unquiet-
Kent. I know you: Where's the King?
Gent. Contending with the fretful Elements.
Bids the wind blow the earth into the Sea,
Or ſwell the curled Waters 'bove the Main,
That things might change, or ceaſe.
Kent. But who is with him?
Gent. None but the Fool, who labours to out-jeſt
His heart-ſtrook injuries.
Kent. Sir, I do know you,
And dare upon the warrant of my note
Commend a dear thing to you. There is diviſion
(Although as yet the face of it is cover'd
With mutual cunning) 'twixt Albany and Cornwall:
Who have, as who have not, that their great Stars
Thron'd and ſet high; Servants who ſeem no leſs,
Which are to France the Spies and Speculations
Intelligent of our State. What hath bin ſeen,
Either in ſnuffs and packings of the Dukes,
Or the hard Rein which both of them have born
Againſt the old kind King; or ſomething deeper,
Whereof (perchance) theſe are but furniſhings.
Gent. I will talk further with you.
Kent. No, do not:
For confirmation that I am much more
Than my out-wall; open this purſe and take
What it contains. If you ſhall ſee Cordelia,
(As fear not but you ſhall) ſhew her this Ring,
And ſhe will tell you who that fellow is,
That yet you do not know. Fie on this ſtorm,
I will go ſeek the King.
Gent. Give me your hand,
Have you no more to ſay?
Kent. Few words, but to effect more than all yet;
That when we have found the King, in which your pain
That way, I'll this: He that firſt lights on him,
Hollow the other.
[Exeunt.

Scena

Scena Secunda.

Storm ſtill. Enter Lear, and Fool.

Lear. Blow winds, and crack your cheeks; Rage, blow
You Cataracts, and Hurricano's ſpout,
'Till you have drench'd our Steeples, drown the Cocks.
You Sulph'rous and thought-excuting fires,
Vaunt-curriors of Oak-cleaving Thunder-bolts,
Sindge my white head. And thou all-ſhaking Thunder,
Strike flat the thick Rotundity o'th'world,
Crack nature's moulds, all germanes ſpill at once
That makes ingrateful Man.

Fool. O Nuncle, Court holy-water in a dry Houſe, is better than the Rain-water out o'door. Good Nunkle, in, ask thy Daughters bleſſing, here's a night pities neither wiſe-men, nor Fools.

Lear. Rumble thy belly full: ſpit Fire, ſpout Rain;
Nor Rain, Wind, Thunder, Fire are my Daughters,
I tax not you, you Elements with unkindneſs.
I never gave you Kingdom, call'd you Children:
You owe me no ſubſcription. Then let fall
Your horrible pleaſure. Here I ſtand your Slave,
A poor, infirm, weak, and deſpis'd old man:
But yet I call you ſervile Miniſters,
That will with two pernicious Daughters join
Your high-engender'd Battles, 'gainſt a head
So old and white as this. O, ho! 'tis foul.

Fool. He that has a Houſe to put's head in, has a good Head-piece:
The Codpiece that will houſe, before the head has any:
The head, and he ſhall Lowſe: ſo beggars marry many.
That man that makes his toe, what he his heart ſhould make,
Shall of a Corn cry woe, and turn his ſleep to wake.
For there was never yet fair woman, but ſhe made mouths in a glaſs. Enter Kent.

Lear. No, I will be the patience of all patience.
I will ſay nothing.

Kent. Who's there?

Fool. Marry here's Grace, and a Codpiece, that's a Wiſe-man, and a Fool.

Kent. Alas Sir, are you here? things that love night,
Love not ſuch nights as theſe: the wrathful Skies
Gallow the very wanderers of the dark,
And makes them keep their Caves: Since I was man,
Such ſheets of fire, ſuch burſts of horrid thunder,
Such groans of roaring Wind, and Rain, I never Remember to have heard. Man's nature cannot carry
Th'affliction, nor the fear.

Lear. Let the great gods
That keep this dreadful pudder o're our heads,
Find out their enemies now. Tremble thou Wretch,
That haſt within thee undivulged Crimes
Unwhipt of Juſtice. Hide thee, thou bloudy hand;
Thou Perjur'd, and thou Simular of Virtue
That art inceſtuous. Caitiff, to pieces ſhake
That under covert and convenient ſeeming
Has practis'd on man's life. Cloſe pent up guilts,
Rive your concealing Continents, and cry
Theſe dreadful Summoners grace. I am a man,
More ſinn'd againſt, than ſinning.

Kent. Alack, bare-headed?
Gracious my Lord, hard by here is a Hovel,
Some friendſhip will it lend you 'gainſt the tempeſt:
Repoſe you there, while I to this hard houſe
(More harder than the Stones whereof 'tis rais'd,
Which even but now, demanding after you,
Deny'd me to come in) return, and force
Their ſcanted courteſie.

Lear. My wits begin to turn.
Come on my boy. How doſt my boy? Art cold?
I am cold my ſelf. Where is this ſtraw, my fellow?
The art of our Neceſſities is ſtrange,
And can make vild things precious. Come, your hovel;
Poor Fool, and Knave, I have one part in my heart
That's ſorry yet for thee.

Fool. He that has and a little-tyne wit,
With height-ho, the Wind and the Rain,
Muſt make content with his fortunes fit,
Though the Rain it raineth every day.

Lear. True boy: come bring us to this Hovel. [Exit.

Fool. This is a brave night to cool a Curtizan:
I'le ſpeak a prophecy e're I go:
When Prieſts are more in words, than matter:
When Brewers marre their Malt with water;
When Nobles are their taylor's tutors,
No Hereticks burn'd but wenches Suitors,
When every Caſe in Law is right:
No Squire in debt, nor no poor Knight:
When Slanders do not live in tongues;
Nor Cut-purſes come not to throngs;
When Uſurers tell their Gold ith' field,
And Bawds and Whores, do Churches build.
Then ſhall the Realm of Albion come to great confuſion,
Then comes the time, who lives to ſee't,
That going ſhall be us'd with feet.
This propheſy Merlin ſhall make,
For I do live before his time. [Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Gloſter and Edmund.

Glo. Alack, alack, Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing; when I deſired their leave that I might pitty him, they took from me the uſe of mine own houſe, charg'd me on pain of perpetual diſpleaſure, neither to ſpeak of him, entreat for him, or any way ſuſtain him.

Baſt. Moſt ſavage and unnatural.

Glo. Go too; ſay you nothing. There is diviſion between the Dukes, and a worſe matter than that: I have received a Letter this night, 'tis dangerous to be ſpoken I have lock'd the Letter in my Cloſſet, theſe injuries the King now bears, will be revenged home; there is part of a Power already footed, we muſt incline to the King, I will look him, and privily relieve him; go you and maintain talk with the Duke, that my charity be not of him perceived; if he ask for me, I am ill, and gone to bed, if I die for it, (as no leſs is threatned me) the King my old Maſter muſt he relieved. There is ſtrange things toward, Edmund, pray you be careful. [Exit.

Baſt. This Courteſie forbid thee, ſhall the Duke
Inſtantly know, and of that Letter too;
This ſeems a fair deſerving, and muſt draw me
That which my Father loſes: no leſs than all,
The younger riſes, when the old doth fall. [Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Kent. Here is the place, my Lord, good my Lord, enter,
The tyranny of the open night's too rough
For Nature to endure. [Storm ſtill.

Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my Lord, enter here.

Lear. Wilt break my heart?

Kent. I had rather break mine own,
Good my Lord enter.

Lear. Thou think'ſt 'tis much that this contentious (ſtorm
Invades us to the skin ſo: 'tis to thee,
But where the greater malady is fixt,
The leſſer is ſcarce felt. Thou'dſt ſhun a Bear;

But if thy flight light toward the roaring Sea,
Thou'dſt meet the Bear ith'mouth, when the mind's free,
The bodies delicate, the tempeſt in my mind,
Doth from my ſenſes take all feeling elſe,
Save what beats there. Filial ingratitude,
Is it not as this mouth ſhould tear his hand
For lifting food to't: But I will puniſh home;
No, I will weep no more. In ſuch a night,
To ſhut me out? Pour on, I will endure:
In ſuch a night as this? O Regan, Gonerill,
Your old kind Father, whoſe frank heart gave all,
O that way madneſs lies, let me ſhun that:
No more of that.

Kent. Good my Lord, enter here.

Lear. Prithee go in thy ſelf, ſeek thine own eaſe,
This tempeſt will not give me leave to ponder
On things would hurt me more, but I'le go in,
In boy, go firſt. You houſeleſs poverty, [Exit.
Nay, get thee in; I'le pray, and then I'le ſleep.
Poor naked wretches, where ſo ere you are
That bide the pelting of this pittileſs ſtorm,
How ſhall your houſeleſs heads, and unfed ſides,
Your lop'd, and window'd raggedneſs defend you
From ſeaſons ſuch as theſe? O I have tane
Too little care of this: take Phyſick, Pomp,
Expoſe thy ſelf to feel, what wretches feel,
That thou may'ſt ſhake the ſuperflux to them,
And ſhew the heavens more juſt.

Enter Edgar, and Fool.

Edg. Fathom and half, Fathom and half? poor Tom.

Fool. Come not in here Nuncle, heres a Spirit, help me, help me.

Kent. Give me thy hand, who's there?

Fool. A Spirit, a Spirit, he ſays his name's poor Tom.

Ken. What art thou that do'ſt grumble there i'th'ſtraw? Come forth.

Edg. Away, the foul Fiend follows me, through the ſharp Hawthorn blow the winds. Humh, go to thy bed and warm thee.

Lear. Didſt thou give all to thy Daugthers? And art thou come to this?

Edg. Who gives any thing to poor Tom? whom the foul Fiend hath led through Fire, and through Flame, through Sword, and whirlepool, ore Bog, and Quagmire, that hath laid Knives under his Pillow, and Halters in his Pue, ſet Rats bane by his Porredge: made him Proud of heart, to ride on a Bay trotting Horſe, over four arch'd Bridges, to courſe his own ſhadow for a traitor, Bliſs thy five VVits, Tom's a cold. O do, de, do, de, do, de, bliſs thee from Whirle-winds, Star-blaſting, and taking, do poor Tom ſome charity, whom the foul fiend vexes. There could I have him now, and there, and here again, and there.

Lear. Have his Daughters brought him to this aſſe? Could'ſt thou ſave nothing? would'ſt thou give'em all?

Fool. Nay, he reſerv'd a Blanket, elſe we had been all ſham'd,

Lear. Now all the plagues that in the pendulous air
Hang fated o're mens faults, light on thy daughters.

Kent. He hath no Daughters, Sir,

Lear. Death, traitor, nothing could have ſubdu'd nature
To ſuch a lowneſs, but his unkind daughters.
Is it the faſhion, that diſcarded Fathers,
Should have thus little mercy on their fleſh:
Judicious puniſhment, 'twas this fleſh begot
Thoſe Pelican Daughters.

Edg. Pillicock ſat on Pillicock hill, alow: alow, loo, loo.

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools, and Madmen.

Edgar. Take heed oth' foul fiend, obey thy Parents, keep thy word, juſtice, ſwear not, commit not, with mans ſworn Spouſe; ſet on thy Sweet-heart on proud array. Tom's a cold.

Lear. What haſt thou been?

Edg. A ſervingman. Proud in heart, and mind: that curl'd my hair; wore Gloves in my cap; ſerv'd the Luſt of my Miſtris heart, and did the act of darkneſs with her. Swore as many Oaths, as I ſpake words, and broke them in the ſweet face of Heaven. One, that ſlept in the contriving of Luſt, and wak'd to do it. VVine lov'd I dearly; Dice dearly; and in woman, out-Paramour'd the Turk. Falſe of heart, light of ear, bloudy handed. Hog in ſloth, Fox in ſtealth, VVolf in greedineſs, Dog in madneſs, Lion in prey. Let not the creaking of ſhooes, Nor the ruſtling of Silks, betray thy poor heart to woman. Keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of Plackets, thy Pen from Lenders Books, and defie the foul fiend. Still through thy Hawthorn blows the cold wind: Says ſuum, mun, nonny, Dolphin my Boy, Boy Seſſey: let him trot my.

Lear. Thou wert better in a Grave, than to anſwer with thy uncover'd body, this extremity of the Skies. Is man no more than this? Conſider him well. Thou ow'ſt the VVorm no Silk: the Beaſt, no Hide: the Sheep, no VVool: the Cat no perfume. Ha? Here's three on's are ſophiſticated. Thou art the thing it ſelf, unaccommodated man, is no more but ſuch a poor, bare, forked Animal as thou art. Off, off you Lendings: Come, unbutton here.

Enter Glouceſter with a Torch.

Fool. Prethee Nuncle be contented, 'tis a naughty night to ſwim in. Now a little fire in a wild field, were like an old Letchers heart, a ſmall ſpark, all the reſt on's body, cold: look, here comes a walking fire.

Edgar. This is the foul Flibbertigibbet; he begins at Curfew, and walks at firſt Cock; He gives the VVeb And the Pin, ſquints the eye, and makes the Hair-lip; Mildews the white VVheat, and hurts the poor Creature of the Earth.

Swithold footed thrice the old.
He met the Night-Mare, and her ninefold,
Bid her a-light, and her troth-plight,
And aroynt the VVitch, aroynt thee.

Kent. How fares your grace?

Lear. VVhat's he?

Kent. VVho's there? what is't you ſeek?

Glou. VVhat are you there? Your Names?

Edgar. Poor Tom, that Eats the ſwimming Frog, the Toad, the Tod-pool, the wall-Neut, and the water: that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiends rages, Eats Cow-dung for Sallets; ſwallows the old Rat, and the ditch-Dog: drinks the green Mantle of the ſtanding Pool: who is whipt from Tything to Tything, and ſtockt, puniſh'd, and impriſon'd: who hath three Suits to his back, ſix ſhirts to his Body:

Horſe to ride, and weapon to wear:
But Mice, and Rats, and ſuch ſmall Dear,
Have been Tom's food for ſeven long year;

Beware my follower. Peace Smulkin, peace thou fiend.

Glou. VVhat, hath your Grace no better company?

Edg. The Prince of Darkneſs is a Gentleman. Modo he's call'd, and Mahu.

Glou. Our fleſh and bloud, my Lord, is grown ſo vile, that it doth hate what it gets.

Edg. Poor Tom's a cold.

Glou. Go in with me; my duty cannot ſuffer
T'obey in all your daughters hard commands:
Though all their injunction be to bar my doors,
And let this tyrannous night take hold upon you,
Yet have I ventured to come to ſeek you out,
And bring you where both fire and food is ready.

Lear. Firſt let me talk with this Philoſopher,
VVhat is the cauſe of Thunder?

Kent.

Kent. Good, my Lord, take his offer,
Go into th' houſe.
Lear. I'll take a word with this ſame learned Theban:
What is your ſtudy?
Edg. How to prevent the Fiend and to kill Vermin.
Lear. Let us ask you one word in private.
Kent. Importune him once more to go, my Lord,
His wits begin t'unſettle.
Glou. Canſt thou blame him? [Storm ſtill.
His Daughters ſeek his death: Ah, that good Kent,
He ſaid it would be thus: Poor baniſh'd man:
Thou ſayeſt the King grows mad, I'll tell thee, friend,
I am almoſt mad my ſelf, I had a Son,
Now out law'd from my blood: He fought my life
But lately: Very late: I lov'd him (friend)
No Father his Son dearer: True to tell thee,
The grief hath craz'd my wits. What a night's this?
I do beſeech your grace.
Lear. O cry you mercy, Sir:
Noble Philoſopher, your company.
Edg. Tom's a cold.
Glou. In, fellow, there, into th' Hovel; keep thee warm.
Lear. Come, let's in all.
Kent. This way, my Lord.
Lear. With him;
I will keep ſtill with my Philoſopher.
Kent Good, my Lord, ſooth him:
Let him take the fellow.
Glou. Take him you on.
Kent. Sirrah, come on: Go along with us.
Lear. Come, good Athenian.
Glou. No words, no words, huſh.
Edg. Child Rowland to the dark Tower came,
His word was ſtill, fie, foh, and fum,
I ſmell the blood of a Britiſh man. [Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Cornwall and Edmund.

Corn. I will have revenge, e're I depart his houſe
Baſt. How, my Lord, I may be cenſured, that Nature thus gives way to Loyalty, ſomething fears me to think of.
Corn. I now perceive, it was not altogether your Brothers evil diſpoſition made him ſeek his death: But a provoking merit ſet a work by a reprovable badneſs in himſelf.
Baſt. How malicious is my fortune, that I muſt repent to be juſt? This is the Letter which he ſpoke of; which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O Heavens! That this Treaſon were not; or not I the Detector.
Corn. Go with me to the Dutcheſs.
Baſt. If the matter of this Paper be certain, you have mighty buſineſs in hand.
Corn. True or falſe, it hath made thee Earl of Glouceſter: Seek out where thy Father is, that he may be ready for our apprehenſion.
Baſt. If I find him comforting the King, it will ſtuff his ſuſpition more fully. I will perſevere in my courſe of Loyalty, though the conflict be ſore between that and my blood.
Corn. I will lay truſt upon thee; and thou ſhalt find a dear father in my Love. [Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Kent and Glouceſter.

Glou. Here is better than the open air, take it thankfully: I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can: I will not be long from you. [Exit.
Kent. All the power of his wits, have given way to his impatience: The gods reward your kindneſs.

Enter Lear, Edgar, and Fool.

Edg. Fraterreto calls me, and tells me Nero is an Angler in the Lake of Darkneſs: Pray innocent, and beware the foul fiend.
Fool. Prithe, Nuncle, tell me, whether a madman be a Gentleman, or a Yeoman.
Lear. A King, a King.
Fool. No, he's a Yeoman, that has a Gentleman to his Son: For he's a Yeoman that ſees his Son a Gentleman before him.
Lear. To have a thouſand with red burning ſpits
Come hizzing in upon 'em.
Edg. Bleſs thy five wits.
Kent. O pity: Sir, where is the patience now,
That you ſo oft have boaſted to remain?
Edg. My tears begin to take his part ſo much,
They marr my counterfeiting.
Lear. The little dogs and all;
Tray, Blanch, and Sweet-heart: See, they bark at me,
Edg. Tom will throw his head at them: Avaunt, you Currs, be thy mouth or black or white:
Tooth that poiſons if it bite:
Maſtiff, Grey-hound, Mungril, Grim,
Hound or Spaniel, Brache, or Hym:
Or Bobtail tike, or Troudle tail,
Tom will make him weep and wail,
For with throwing thus my head;
Dogs leapt the hatch, and all are fled.
Do, de, de, de: Seſe; Come, march to Wakes and Fairs,
And Market Towns: poor Tom, thy horn is dry. [Exit.
Lear. Then let them Anatomize Regan: See what breeds about her heart. Is there any cauſe in Nature that make theſe hard hearts. You, Sir, I entertain for one of my hundred; only, I do not like the faſhion of your garments. You will ſay they are Perſian; but let them be chang'd.

Enter Gloſter.

Kent. Now, good my Lord, lie here, and reſt a while.
Lear. Make no noiſe, make no noiſe, draw the Curtains: So, ſo, we'll go to ſupper i'th' Morning.
Fool. And I'll go to bed at noon.
Glou. Come hither, friend;
Where is the King, my Maſter?
Kent. Here, Sir, but trouble him not, his wits are gone.
Glou. Good friend, I prithee take him in thy arms;
I have o'reheard a plot of death upon him:
There is a Litter ready, lay him in't,
And drive toward Dover, friend, where thou ſhalt meet
Both welcome aud protection. Take up thy Maſter,
If thou ſhould'ſt dally half an hour, his life
With thine, and all that offer to defend him,
Stand in aſſured loſs. Take up, take up,
And follow me, that will to ſome proviſion
Give thee quick conduct. Come, come, away. [Exeunt.

Scena Septima.

Enter Cornwall, Gonerill, Baſtard, and Servants.

Corn. Poſt ſpeedily to my Lord your Husband, ſhew him this Letter, the Army of France is landed: ſeek out the Traytor Gloſter.

Reg. Hang him inſtantly.

Gon. Pluck out his Eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my diſpleaſure. Edmund, keep you our Siſter Company: the revenges we are bound to take upon your traiterous Father, are not fit for your beholding. Adviſe the Duke where you are going, to a moſt feſtinate preparation: we are bound to the like. Our Poſts ſhall be ſwift, and intelligent betwixt us. Farewel dear Siſter, farewel my Lord of Gloſter.

Enter Steward.

How now? Where's the King?

Stew. My Lord of Gloſter had convey'd him hence.
Some five or ſix and thirty of his Knights
Hot Queſtriſts after him, met him at gate,
Who, with ſome other of the Lords dependants,
Are gone with him toward Dover; where they boaſt
To have well armed Friends.

Corn. Get Horſes for your Miſtreſs.

Gon. Farewel, ſweet Lord, and Siſter. [Exit.

Corn. Edmund farewel: go ſeek the Traitor Gloſter,
Pinnion him like a Thief, bring him before us:
Though well we may not paſs upon his life
Without the form of Juſtice: yet our power
Shall do a curt'ſie to our wrath, which men
May blame, but not controul.

Enter Gloſter, and Servants.

Who's there? the Traitor?

Reg. Ingrateful Fox, 'tis he.

Corn. Bind faſt his Corky Arms.

Glo. What mean your Graces?
Good my Friends conſider you are my Gueſts:
Do me no foul play, Friends,

Corn. Bind him I ſay.

Reg. Hard, hard: O filthy Traitor.

Glo. Unmerciful Lady, as you are, I'm none.

Corn. To this Chair bind him,
Villain, thou ſhalt find.

Glo. By the kind gods, 'tis moſt ignobly done
To pluck me by the Beard.

Reg. So white, and ſuch a Traytor?

Glo. Naughty Lady,
Theſe hairs which thou do'ſt raviſh from my Chin
Will quicken and accuſe thee. I am your Hoſt,
With Robbers hands, my hoſpitable favours
You ſhould not ruffle thus. What will you do?

Corn. Come, Sir.
What Letters had you late from France?

Reg. Be ſimple anſwer'd, for we know the truth.

Corn. And what Confederacy have you with the Traytors, late footed in the Kingdom?

Reg. To whoſe hands
You have ſent the Lunatick King: ſpeak.

Glo. I have a Letter gueſſingly ſet down
Which came from one that's of a neutral heart,
And not from one oppos'd.

Corn. Cunning.

Reg. And falſe.

Cor. Where haſt thou ſent the King?

Glo. To Dover.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover?
Was't thou not charg'd at peril?

Corn. Wherefore to Dover? Let him anſwer that.

Glo. I am tyed to th' Stake,
And I muſt ſtand the Courſe.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover?

Glo. Becauſe I would not ſee thy cruel Nails
Pluck out his poor old Eyes: nor thy fierce Siſter,
In his Anointed fleſh, ſtick boariſh phangs.
The Sea, with ſuch a ſtorm as his bare head,
In Hell-black-night indur'd, would have buoy'd up
And quench'd the Steeled fires:
Yet poor old heart, he holp the Heavens to rain.
If Wolves had at thy Gate howl'd that ſtern time,
Thou ſhould'ſt have ſaid, good Porter turn the Key:
All Cruels elſe ſubſcribe: but I ſhall ſee
The winged Vengeance overtake ſuch Children.

Corn. See't ſhalt thou never. Fellows hold the Chair.
Upon theſe Eyes of thine, I'll ſet my foot.

Glo. He that will think to live, till he be old,
Give me ſome help, — O cruel! O you gods.

Reg. One ſide will mock another: th' other too.

Corn. If you ſee vengeance.

Serv. Hold your hand, my Lord?
I have ſerv'd you ever ſince I was a Child:
But better ſervice have I never done you,
Than now to bid you hold.

Reg. How now, you Dog?

Ser. If you did wear a Beard upon your Chin,
I'd ſhake it on this quarrel. What do you mean?

Corn. My Villain?

Ser. Nay then come on, and take the chance of anger.

Reg. Give me thy Sword. A pezant ſtand up thus? [Kills him.

Ser. Oh, I am ſlain: my Lord, you have one Eye left
To ſee ſome miſchief on him. Oh.

Corn. Leſt it ſee more, prevent it; Out vild gelly:
Where is thy luſter now?

Glo. All dark and comfortleſs?
Where's my Son Edmund?
Edmund, enkindle all the ſparks of Nature
To quit this horrid act.

Reg. Out treacherous Villain,
Thou call'ſt on him, that hates thee, It was he
That made the overture of thy Treaſons to us:
Who is too good to pitty thee.

Glo. O my follies! then Edgar was abus'd.
Kind gods, forgive me that, and proſper him.

Reg. Go thruſt him out at Gates, and let him ſmell
His way to Dover. [Exit with Gloſter.
How is't, my Lord? How look you?

Corn. I have receiv'd a hurt: follow me Lady:
Turn out that Eyeleſs Villain: throw this Slave
Upon the Dunghill: Regan, I bleed apace,
Untimely comes this hurt. Give me your arm. [Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. YET better thus, and known to be contemn'd,
Than ſtill contemn'd and flatter'd, to be worſt:
The loweſt, and moſt deject thing of Fortune,
Stands ſtill in eſperance, lives not in fear.
The lamentable change is from the beſt,
The worſt returns to laughter. Welcome then,
Thou unſubſtantial air that I embrace:
The wretch that thou haſt blown unto the worſt,
Owes nothing to thy blaſts.

Enter

Enter Gloſter led by an old man.

But who comes here? My Father poorly led?
World, World, O World!
But that thy ſtrange mutations make us hate thee,
Life would not yield to age.
Old Man. O my good Lord, I have been your Tenant,
And your Fathers Tenant, theſe fourſcore years.
Glo. Away, get thee away: good Friend be gone,
Thy comforts can do me no good at all,
Thee they may hurt.
Old Man. You cannot ſee your way.
Glo. I have no way, and therefore want no Eyes:
I ſtumbled when I ſaw. Full oft 'tis ſeen,
Our means ſecure us, and our meer defects
Prove our Commodities. Oh dear Son Edgar,
The food of thy abuſed Fathers wrath:
Might I but live to ſee thee in my touch,
I'd ſay I had Eyes again.
Old Man. How now? who's there?
Edg. O gods! Who is't can ſay I am at the worſt?
I am worſe than ere I was.
Old Man. 'Tis poor mad Tom.
Edg. And worſe I may be yet: the worſt is not,
So long as we can ſay this is the worſt.
Old Man. Fellow, where goeſt?
Glo. Is it a Beggar-man?
Old Man. Madman, and Beggar too.
Glo. He has ſome reaſon, elſe he could not beg.
I'th' laſt nights ſtorm, I ſuch a Fellow ſaw;
Which made me think a Man, a Worm. My Son
Came then into my mind, and yet my mind
Was then ſcarce Friends with him.
I have heard more ſince:
As Flies to th' wanton Boyes, are we to th' gods,
They kill us for their ſport.
Edg. How ſhould this be?
Bad is the Trade that muſt play the Fool to ſorrow,
Ang'ring it ſelf, and others. Bleſs the Maſter.
Glo. Is that the naked Fellow?
Old Man. I, my Lord.
Glo. Get thee away: if for my ſake
Thou wilt o're-take us hence a mile or twain
I'th' way toward Dover, do it for ancient love,
And bring ſome covering for this naked Soul,
Which I'll intreat to lead me.
Old Man. Alack Sir, he is mad.
Glo. 'Tis the times plague,
When Madmen lead the blind:
Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleaſure:
Above the reſt, be gone.
Old Man. I'll bring him the beſt Parrel that I have,
Come on't, what will. [Exit.
Glo. Sirrah, naked Fellow.
Edg. Poor Tom's a cold. I cannot daub it further.
Glo. Come hither Fellow.
Edg. And yet I muſt:
Bleſs thy ſweet Eyes, they bleed.
Glo. Know'ſt thou the way to Dover?
Edg. Both Stile, and Gate, Horſe way, and foot path:
poor Tom hath been ſcar'd out of his good wits. Bleſs thee good mans Son, from the foul Fiend. (plagues
Glo. Here take this Purſe, thou whom the Heav'ns
Have humbled to all ſtrokes: that I am wretched
Makes thee the happier: Heavens deal ſo ſtill:
Let the ſuperfluous, and Luſt-dieted man,
That ſlaves your Ordinance, that will not ſee
Becauſe he do's not feel, feel your power quickly:
So diſtribution ſhould undo exceſs,
And each man have enough. Do'ſt thou know Dover?
Edg. I Maſter.
Glo. There is a Cliff, whoſe high and bending head
Looks fearfully in the confined Deep:
Bring me but to the very brim of it,
And I'll repair the miſery thou do'ſt bear
With ſomething rich about me: from that place,
I ſhall no lending need.
Edg. Give me thy arm;
Poor Tom ſhall lead thee. [Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Gonerill, Baſtard, and Steward.

Gon. VVelcome my Lord, I marvel our mild Husband
Not met us on the way. Now, where's your Maſter?
Stew. Madam within, but never man ſo chang'd:
I told him of the Army that was Landed:
He ſmil'd at it. I told him you were coming,
His anſwer was the worſe. Of Gloſters Treachery,
And of the loyal ſervice of his Son
VVhen I inform'd him, then he call'd me Sot,
And told me I had turn'd the wrong ſide out:
What moſt he ſhould diſlike, ſeems pleaſant to him;
What like, offenſive.
Gon. Then ſhall you go no further.
It is the Cowiſh terror of his ſpirit
That dares not undertake: he'll not feel wrongs
Which tye him to an anſwer; our wiſhes on the way
May prove effects. Back Edmund to my Brother,
Haſten his Muſters, and conduct his powers.
I muſt change names at home, and give the Diſtaff
Into my Husbands hands. This truſty Servant
Shall paſs between us: ere long you are like to hear
(If you dare venture in your own behalf)
A Miſtreſſes command. Wear this; ſpare ſpeech,
Decline your head. This kiſs, if it durſt ſpeak,
Would ſtretch thy Spirits up into the air:
Conceive, and fare the well.
Baſt. Yours in the ranks of Death.
Gon. My moſt dear Gloſter.
Oh, the difference of man, and man,
To thee a Womans ſervices are due,
My Fool uſurps my Body.
Stew. Madam, here comes my Lord.

Enter Albany.

Gon. I have been worth the whiſtle.
Alb. Oh Gonerill,
You are not worth the duſt which the rude wind
Blows in your Face.
Gon. Milk-liver'd man,
That bear'ſt a cheek for blows, a head of wrongs,
Who haſt not in thy brows an Eye-diſcerning
Thine honour, from thy ſuffering.
Alb. See thy ſelf Devil:
Proper deformity ſeems not in the fiend
So horrid as in Woman.
Gon. Oh vain Fool.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſ. Oh my good Lord, the Duke of Cornwalls dead,
Slain by his Servant, going to put out
The other Eye of Gloſter.
Alba. Gloſters Eyes?
Meſ. A Servant that he bred, thrill'd with remorſe,
Oppos'd againſt the act: bending his Sword
To his great Maſter, who, thereat enrag'd
Flew on him, and amongſt them fell'd him dead,
But not without that harmful ſtroke, which ſince
Hath pluck'd him after.
Alba. This ſhews you are above
You Juſtices, that theſe our nether crimes
So ſpeedily can venge. But (O poor Gloſter)

Loſt

Loſt he his other Eye?
Meſ. Both, both, my Lord.
This Letter Madam, craves a ſpeedy Anſwer:
'Tis from your Siſter.
Gon. One way I like this well,
But being Widow, and my Gloſter with her,
May all the building in my fancy pluck
Upon my hateful life. Another way
The News is not ſo tart. I'll read, and anſwer.
Alba. Where was his Son,
When they did take his Eyes?
Meſ. Come with my Lady hither.
Alba. He is not here.
Meſ. No, my good Lord, I met him back again.
Alba. Knows he the wickedneſs?
Meſ. I, my good Lord: 'twas he inform'd againſt him,
And quit the Houſe of purpoſe, that their puniſhment
Might have the freer courſe.
Alb. Gloſter, I live
To thank thee for the love thou ſhewd'ſt the King,
And to revenge thine Eyes. Come hither Friend,
Tell me what more thou know'ſt. [Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Cordelia, Gentlemen, and Souldiers.

Cor. Alack, 'tis he: why he was met even now
As made the vext Sea, ſinging aloud,
Crown'd with rank Fenitar, and furrow weeds,
With Hardocks, Hemlock, Nettles, Cuckow Flowers,
Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow
In our ſuſtaining Corn. A Century ſend forth;
Search every Acre in the high-grown Field,
And bring him to our Eye. What can mans wiſdom
In the reſtoring his bereaved Senſe: he that helps him,
Take all my outward worth.
Gent. There is means, Madam:
Our foſter Nurſe of Nature, is repoſe,
The which he lacks: that to provoke in him,
Are many Simples operative, whoſe power
Will cloſe the Eye of Anguiſh.
Cord All bleſt Secrets,
All you unpubliſh'd Vertues of the Earth
Spring with my tears; be aidant, and remediate
In the good mans deſire: ſeek, ſeek for him,
Leſt his ungovern'd rage, diſſolve the life
That wants the means to lead it.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſ. News, Madam,
The Brittiſh Powers are marching hitherward.
Cord. 'Tis known before. Our preparation ſtands
In expectation of them. O dear Father,
It is thy buſineſs that I go about: therefore great France
My mourning, and importun'd tears hath pittied:
Now blown Ambition doth our Arms incite,
But love, dear love, and our ag'd Fathers Right:
Soon may I hear, and ſee him. [Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Regan, and Steward.

Reg. But are my Brothers Powers ſet forth?
Stew. I, Madam.
Reg. Himſelf in perſon there?
Stew. Madam, with much adoe
Your Siſter is the better Souldier.
Reg. Lord Edmund ſpake not with your Lord at home;
Stew. No, Madam.
Reg. What might import my Siſters Letter to him?
Stew. I know not, Lady.
Reg. Faith he is poſted hence on ſerious matter:
It was great ignorance. Gloſters Eyes being out
To let him live. Where he arrives, he moves
All hearts againſt us: Edmund, I think, is gone
In pitty of his miſery, to diſpatch
His nighted life: Moreover to deſcry
The ſtrength oth' Enemy.
Stew. I muſt needs after him, Madam, with my Letter.
Reg. Our Troops ſet forth to morrow, ſtay with us:
The wayes are dangerous.
Stew. I may not, Madam:
My Lady charg'd my duty in his buſineſs.
Reg. VVhy ſhould ſhe write to Edmund?
Might not you tranſport her purpoſes by word? Belike,
Some things, I know not what. I'll love the much
Let me unſeal the Letter.
Stew. Madam, I had rather——
Reg. I know your Lady do's not love her Husband,
I am ſure of that: and at her late being here,
She gave ſtrange Iliads, and moſt ſpeaking looks
To Noble Edmund. I know you are of her boſome.
Stew. I, Madam?
Reg. I ſpeak in underſtanding: Y'are: I know't,
Therefore I do adviſe you take this note:
My Lord is dead: Edmund, and I have talk'd,
And more convenient is he for my hand
Than for your Ladies: You may gather more:
If you do find him, pray you give him this;
And when your Miſtriſs hears thus much from you,
I pray deſire her call her wiſdom to her.
So fare you well:
If you do chance to hear of that blind Traytor,
Preferment falls on him, that cuts him off.
Stew. VVould I could meet him, Madam, I ſhould ſhew
VVhat party I do follow.
Reg. Fare thee well. [Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Gloſter, and Edgar.

Glo. VVhen ſhall I come to th' top of that ſame Hill?
Edg. You do climb up it now. Look how we labour.
Glo. Me thinks the ground is even.
Edg. Horrible ſteep.
Hark, do you hear the Sea?
Glo. No truly.
Edg. VVhy then your other Senſes grow imperfect
By your Eyes anguiſh,
Glo. So may it be indeed.
Me thinks thy Voice is alter'd, and thou ſpeak'ſt
In better phraſe, and matter than thou didſt.
Edg. Y'are much deceiv'd: in nothing am I chang'd
But in my Garments.
Glo. Me thinks y'are better ſpoken.
Edg. Come on Sir,
Heres the place: ſtand ſtill: how fearful
And dizzy 'tis, to caſt ones Eyes ſo low,
The Crows and Choughs, that wing the midway air
Shew ſcarce ſo groſs as Beetles. Half way down
Hangs one that gathers Sampire: dreadful trade:
Me thinks he ſeems no bigger than his head.
The Fiſhermen that walk'd upon the beach
Appear like Mice: and yond tall Anchoring Bark,
Diminiſh'd to her Cock: her Cock, a Buoy
Almoſt too ſmall for ſight. The murmuring Surge,
That on th' unnumbred idle Pebble chafes
Cannot be heard ſo high. I'll look no more,
Leſt my brain turn, and the deficient ſight
Topple down headlong.

Glo.

Glou. Set me where you ſtand.
Edg. Give me your hand:
You are now within a foot of th'extream Verge:
For all beneath the Moon would I not leap upright.
Glou. Let go my hand:
Here friends, another purſe, in it, a Jewell
Well worth a poor mans taking. Fairies, and gods
Proſper it with thee. Go thou further off,
Bid me farewel, and let me hear thee going.
Edg. Now fare ye well, good Sir.
Glou. With all my heart.
Edg. Why do I trifle thus with his deſpair,
'Tis done to cure it.
Glou. O you mighty gods!
This world I do renounce, and in your ſights
Shake patiently my great affliction off:
If I could bear it longer, and not fall
To quarrel with your great oppoſeleſs wills,
My ſnuff, and loathed part of nature ſhould
Burn it ſelf out. If Edgar live, O bleſs him.
Now fellow, fare the well.
Edg. Good Sir, Farewel.
And yet I know not how conciet may rob
The Treaſure of life, when life it ſelf
Yields to the Theft. Had he been where he thought,
By this had thought been paſt. Alive, or dead?
Hoa, you Sir: friend, here you Sir, ſpeak:
Thus might he paſs indeed: yet he revives.
What are you Sir?
Glou. Away, and let me die.
Edg. Had'ſt thou been ought
But Gozemore, Feathers and air,
(So many fathom down precipitating)
Thoud'ſt ſhiver'd like an Egg: but thou do'ſt breath:
Haſt heavy ſubſtance, bleed'ſt not, ſpeak, art ſound?
Ten Maſts at each, make not the altitude
Which thou haſt perpendicularly fell,
The life's a miracle. Speak yet again.
Glou. But have I faln, or no?
Edg. From the dread Summet of this Chalky Bourn
Look up a height, the ſhrill gor'd Lark ſo far
Cannot be ſeen or heard: Do but look up.
Glou. Alack, I have no eyes:
Is wretchedneſs depriv'd that benefit
To end it ſelf by death? 'Twas yet ſome comfort,
When miſery could beguile the tyrants rage,
And fruſtrate his proud will.
Edg. Give me your arm.
Up, ſo: How is't? Feel you your Legs? You ſtand.
Glou. Too well, too well.
Edg. This is above all ſtrangeneſs,
Upon the Crown oth'Cliffe. What thing was that
Which parted from you?
Glou. A poor unfortunate Beggar.
Edg. As I ſtood here below, me thought his eyes
Were two full Moons: he had a thouſand Noſes,
Horns walk'd, and wav'd like the enraged Sea:
It was ſome fiend: therefore thou happy Father,
Think that the cleareſt gods, who make them honors
Of mens impoſſibilities, have preſerved thee.
Glou. I do remember now: henceforth I'le bear
Affliction, till it do cry out it ſelf
Enough, enough, and die. That thing you ſpeak of,
I took it for a man: often 'twould ſay
The fiend, the fiend, he led me to that place.
Edg. Bear free and patient thoughts.

Enter Lear.

But who comes here?
The ſafer ſenſe will ne're accomodate
His Maſter thus.
Lear. No, they cannot touch me for crying. I am the King himſelf.
Edgar. O thou ſide-piercing ſight!
Lear. Natures above Art, in that reſpect. There's your Preſs-mony. That fellow handles his Bow like a Crow-keeper: draw me a Cloathiers yard. Look, look, a Mouſe. Peace, Peace, this piece of toaſted Cheeſe will doo't, There's my Gauntlet, I'le prove it on a Gyant. Bring up the brown Bills. O well flown Bird: ith'clout, ith'clout: Hewgh. Give the word.
Edg. Sweet Marjoram.
Lear. Paſs.
Glou. I know that voice.
Lear. Ha! Gonerill with a white beard? They flatter'd me like a Dog, and told me I had the white hairs in my Beard, ere the black ones were there. To ſay I, and no, to every thing that I ſaid: I, and no too, was no good Divinity. When the rain came to wet me once, and wind to make me chatter: when the Thunder would not peace at my bidding, there I found 'em, there I ſmelt'em out. Go to, they are not men o'their words; they told me, I was every thing: 'Tis a Lie, I am not Ague proof.
Glou. The trick of that voice, I do well remember: Is't not the King?
Lear. I, every inch a king.
When I do ſtare, ſee how the ſubject quakes.
I pardon that mans life. What was thy cauſe?
Adultery? thou ſhalt not die: die for Adultery?
No, the wren goes too't, and the ſmall gilded Flie
Do's letcher in my ſight. Let Copulation thrive:
For Gloſters Baſtard Son was kinder to his Father,
Than my Daughters got 'tween the lawful ſheets.
Too't Luxury pell-mell, for I lack Souldiers.
Behold you ſimpring Dame, whoſe face between her Forks preſages Snow; that minces Vertue, and do's ſhake the head to hear of pleaſures name. The Fitchew, nor the ſoyled Horſe goes too't with a more riotous appetite: down from the waſte they are Centaures, though women all above: but to the Girdle do the gods inherit, beneath is all the fiends. There's hell, there's darkneſs, there is the ſulphurous pit, burning, ſcalding, ſtench, conſumption: Fie, fie, fie; pah, pah: Give me an Ounce Of Civet; good Apothecary ſweeten my imagination: There's money for thee.
Glou. O let me kiſs that hand.
Lear. Let me wipe it firſt,
It ſmells of Mortality.
Glou. O ruin'd piece of nature, this great world
Shall ſo wear out to naught.
Do'ſt thou know me?
Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough: do'ſt thou ſquiny at me? No, do thy worſt blind Cupid, I'le not love. Read thou this challenge, mark but the penning of it.
Glou. Were all thy Letters Suns, I could not ſee one.
Edg. I would not take this from report,
It is, and my heart breaks at it.
Lear. Read.
Glou. What with the Caſe of eyes?
Lear. Oh ho, are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purſe? Your eyes are in heavy caſe, your purſe in a light, yet you ſee how this world goes.
Glou. I ſee it feelingly.
Lear. What, art mad? A man may ſee how this world goes, with no eyes. Look with thine ears: See how yond Juſtice rails upon yond ſimple thief. Heark in thine ear: Change places, and handy-dandy, which is the Juſtice, which is the thief: Thou haſt ſeen a Farmers dog bark at a Beggar?
Glou. Sir.
Lear. And the Creature run from the Cur: there thou might'ſt behold the great image of Authority, a Dog's obey'd in Office. Thou, Raſcal Beadle, hold thy bloudy hand: why do'ſt thou laſh that VVhore? Strip thy own back, thou hotly luſts to uſe her in that kind, for which thou whip'ſt her. The Uſurer hangs the Cozener. Thorough rough and tatter'd cloaths, great Vices do appear: Robes, and furr'd gowns hide all. Place ſins with gold, and the ſtronge Lance of juſtice, hurtleſs breaks: Arme it in rags, a Pigmy's ſtraw doth pierce it. None does offend, none, I ſay none, I'le able 'em; take that of me my friend, who have the power to ſeal th'accuſers lips. Get thee glaſs eyes, and like a ſcurvy Politician, ſeem to ſee the things thou do'ſt not. Now, now, now, now. Pull off my Boots: harder, harder, ſo.

Edg. O matter, and impertinency mixt,
Reaſon in Madneſs.

Lear. If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take my eyes.
I know thee well enough, thy name is Gloſter:
Thou muſt be patient; we came crying hither:
Thou know'ſt, the firſt time that we ſmell the air
We wawle, and cry. I will preach to thee: Mark.

Glou. Alack, alack, the day.

Lear. When we are born, we cry that we are come
To this great ſtage of fools. This a good block:
It were a delicate ſtratagem to ſhooe
A Troop of Horſe with felt: I'le put't in proof,
And when I have ſtoln upon theſe Sons-in-Laws:
Then kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gent. O here he is: lay hand upon him, Sir.
Your moſt dear Daughter ——

Lear. No reſcue? what, a Priſoner? I am even
The Natural Fool of fortune. Uſe me well,
You ſhall have ranſom. Let me have Surgeons,
I am cut to th'Brains.

Gent. You ſhall have any thing.

Lear. No Seconds? All my ſelf?
Why, this would make a man, a man of Salt;
To uſe his eyes for Garden water-pots. I will die bravely,
Like a ſmug Bridegroom. What? I will be Jovial:
Come, come, I am a King. Maſters, know you that?

Gent. You are a Royal one, and we obey you.

Lear. Then there's life in't. Come, and you get it,
You ſhall get it by running: Sa, ſa, ſa, ſa. [Exit.

Gent. A ſight moſt pittiful in the meaneſt wretch,
Paſt ſpeaking of in a King. Thou haſt a Daughter
Who redeems nature from the general curſe
Which twain have brought her to.

Edg. Hail, gentle Sir.

Gent. Sir, ſpeed you: what's your will?

Edg. Do you hear ought (Sir) of a Battel toward.

Gent. Moſt ſure, and vulgar:
Every one hears that, which can diſtinguiſh ſound.

Edg. But by your favour:
How near's the other Army?

Gent. Near, and on ſpeedy foot: the main diſcry
Stands on the hourly thought.

Edg. I thank you, Sir, that's all.

Gent. Though that the Queen on ſpecial cauſe is here,
Her Army is mov'd on. [Exit.

Edg. I thank you, Sir.

Glou. You ever gentle gods, take my breath from me,
Let not my worſer Spirit tempt me again
To die before you pleaſe,

Edg. Well, pray you Father.

Glou. Now good Sir, what are you?

Edg. A moſt poor man, made tame to fortunes blows
Who, by the Art of known, and feeling ſorrows,
Am pregnant to good pitty. Give me your hand,
I'le lead you to ſome biding.

Glou. Hearty thanks:
The bounty, and the benizon of Heaven
To boot, and boot.

Enter Steward.

Stew. A proclaim'd prize: moſt happy:
That eyeleſs head of thine, was firſt fram'd fleſh
To raiſe my fortunes. Thou old, unhappy traitor,
Briefly thy ſelf remember: the Sword is out
That muſt deſtroy thee.

Glou. Now let thy friendly hand
Put ſtrength enough to't.

Stew. Wherefore, bold Peazant,
Darſt thou ſupport a publiſh'd traitor? hence,
Leſt that th'infection of his fortune take
Like hold on thee. Let go his Arm.

Edg. Chill not let go Zir,
Without vurther caſion.

Stew. Let go, Slave, or thou dy'ſt.

Edg. Good Gentleman go your gate, and let poor volk paſs: and'chud ha'been zwagged out of my life, 'twould ha'been zo long as 'tis, by a vortnight. Nay, come not near th'old man: keep out che vor'ye, or ice try whither your Coſtard, or my Ballow be the harder; chill be plain with you.

Stew. Out Dunghil.

Edg. Child pick your teeth Zir: come, no matter vor your foyns.

Stew. Slave thou haſt ſlain me: villain, take my purſe;
If ever thou wilt thrive, bury my body,
And give the Letters which thou find'ſt about me,
To Edmud Earl of Gloſter: ſeek him out
Upon the Engliſh party. Oh untimely death, death.

Edg. I know thee well. A ſerviceable Villain,
As duteous to the vices of thy Miſtris,
As badneſs would deſire.

Glou. What, is he dead?

Edg. Sit you down Father: reſt you.
Let's ſee theſe Pockets; the Letters that he ſpeaks of
May be my friends: he's dead; I am only ſorry
He had no other Deathſman. Let us ſee:
Leave gentle wax, and manners: blame us not
To know our enemies minds, we rip their hearts,
Their Papers are more lawful.

Reads the Letter.

Let our reciprocal vows be remembred. You have many opportunities to cut him off: if your will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offer'd. There is nothing done. If he return the Conqueror, then am I the Priſoner, and his bed, my Gaol, from the loathed warmth whereof, deliver me, and ſupply the place of our Labour.

Your (Wife, ſo I would ſay) affectionate Servant, Goneril.

Of indiſtinguiſh'd ſpace of Womans will,
A plot upon her vertuous Husbands life,
And the exchange my brother: here, in the ſands
Thee I'le rake up, the poſt unſanctified
Of murtherous Letchers: and in the mature time,
With this ungracious paper ſtrike the ſight
Of the death-practis'd Duke: for him 'tis well,
That of thy death, and buſineſs, I can tell.

Glou. The King is mad:
How ſtiffe is my vile ſenſe
That I ſtand up, and have ingenious feeling
Of my huge ſorrows? Better I were diſtract,
So ſhould my thoughts be ſever'd from my griefs,
[Drum afar off.
And woes, by wrong imaginations loſe
The knowledg of themſelves.

Edg. Give me your hand:
Far off methinks I hear the beaten Drum.
Come, Father, I'le beſtow you with a friend. [Exeunt.

Scene

Scena Septima.

Enter Cordelia, Kent and Gentleman.

Cor. O thou good Kent,
How ſhall I live and work
To match thy goodneſs?
My life will be too ſhort,
And every meaſure fail me.
Kent. To be acknowledg'd Madam is o're-paid,
All my reports go with the modeſt truth,
Nor more, nor clipt, but ſo.
Cor. Be better ſuited,
Theſe weeds are memories of thoſe worſer hours:
I prethee put them off.
Kent. Pardon, dear Madam,
Yet to be known ſhortens my made intent,
My boon I make it, that you know me not,
Till time, and I think meet.
Cor. Then be't ſo my good Lord:
How do's the King?
Gent. Madam, ſleeps ſtill.
Cor. O you kind gods!
Cure this great breach in his abuſed Nature,
Th'untun'd and jarring ſenſes, O wind up,
Of this child changed Father,
Gent. So pleaſe your Majeſty.
That we may wake the King, he hath ſlept long?
Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and proceed
I'th' ſway of your own will: is he array'd?

Enter Lear in a Chair, carried by Servants.

Gent. I Madam: in the heavineſs of ſleep,
We put freſh garments on him.
Be by, good Madam, when we do awake him,
I doubt not of his Temperance.
Cor. O my dear Father, reſtauration hang
Thy medicine on my lips, and let this kiſs
Repair thoſe violent harms, that my two Siſters
Have in thy Reverence made.
Kent. Kind and dear Princeſs.
Cor. Had you not been their Father, theſe white flakes
Did challenge pity of them. Was this face
To be oppos'd againſt the jarring winds?
Mine Enemies dog, though he had bit me,
Should have ſtood that night againſt my fire,
And was't thou fain (poor Father)
To hovell thee with Swine and Rogues forlorn,
In ſhort, and muſty ſtraw? alack, alack,
'Tis wonder that my life and wits, at once
Had not concluded all. He wakes, ſpeak to him.
Gent. Madam, do you, 'tis fitteſt.
Cor. How does my Royal Lord?
How fares your Majeſty?
Lear. You do me wrong to take me out oth'grave;
Thou art a Soul in bliſs, but I am bound
Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
Do ſcald, like molten Lead.
Cor. Sir, do you know me?
Lear. You are a Spirit I know, when did you die?
Cor. Still, ſtill, far wide.
Gent. He's ſcarce awake,
Let him alone a while.
Lear. Where have I been?
Where am I? fair day light?
I am mightily abus'd; I ſhould even die with pity
To ſee another thus. I know not what to ſay:
I will not ſwear theſe are my hands: let's ſee,
I feel this pin prick, would I were aſſur'd
Of my condition,
Cor. O look upon me, Sir,
And hold your hand in benediction o're me,
You muſt not kneel.
Lear. Pray do not mock me;
I am a very fooliſh fond old man,
Fourſcore and upward,
Not an hour more, nor leſs:
And to deal plainly,
I fear I am not in my perfect mind.
Methinks I ſhould know you, and know this man,
Yet I am doubtfull: for I am mainly ignorant
What place this is, and all the skill I have Remembers not theſe garments: nor I know not
Where I did lodge laſt night. Do not laugh at me,
For (as I am a man) I think this Lady
To be my child Cordelia.
Cor. And ſo I am: I am,
Lear. Be your tears wet?
Yes faith: I pray weep not.
If you have poiſon for me, I will drink it:
I know you do not love me, for your Siſters
Have (as I do remember) done me wrong.
You have ſome cauſe, they have not.
Cor. No cauſe, no cauſe.
Lear. Am I in France?
Kent. In your own Kingdom, Sir,
Lear. Do not abuſe me.
Gent. Be comforted, good Madam, the great rage
You ſee is kill'd in him: deſire him to go in,
Trouble him no more till further ſetling.
Cor. Wilt pleaſe your highneſs walk?
Lear. You muſt bear with me:
Pray you now forget, and forgive,
I am old and fooliſh. [Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Edmund, Regan, Gentlemen, and Souldiers.

Baſt. KNow of the Duke if his laſt purpoſe hold,
Or whether ſince he is adviſ'd by ought
To change the courſe, he's full of alteration,
And ſelf reproving, bring his conſtant pleaſure.
Reg. Our Siſters man is certainly miſcarried.
Baſt. 'Tis to be doubted, Madam.
Reg. Now ſweet Lord,
You know the goodneſs I intend upon you:
Tell me but truly, but then ſpeak the truth,
Do you not love my Siſter?
Baſt. In honour'd Love.
Reg. But have you never found my Brothers way,
To the fore-fended place?
Baſt. No by mine honour, Madam.
Reg. I never ſhall endure her, dear my Lord,
Be not familiar with her.
Baſt. Fear not, ſhe and the Duke her husband.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Albany, Goneril, Souldiers.

Alba. Our very loving Siſter, well be met:
Sir, this I heard, the King is come to his Daughter
With others, whom the rigour of our State
Forc'd to cry out.
Reg. Why is this reaſon'd?
Gon. Combine together 'gainſt the Enemy:
For theſe domeſtick, and particular broils,
Are not the queſtion here.
Alb. Let's then determine with th'ancient of war
On our proceeding.
Reg. Siſter, you'll go with us? Gon. No.
Reg. 'Tis moſt convenient, pray go with us.

Gon.

Gon. Oh, ho, I know the Riddle, I will go.
[Exeunt both the Armies.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. If ere your Grace had ſpeech with man ſo poor,
Hear me one word.
Alb. I'le overtake you, ſpeak.
Edg. Before you fight the Battel, ope this Letter:
If you have victory, let the Trumpet ſound
For him that brought it: wretch though I ſeem,
I can produce a Champion, that will prove
What is avouched there. If you miſcarry,
Your buſineſs of the world hath ſo an end,
And machination ceaſes. Fortune loves you.
Alb. Stay till I have read the Letter.
Edg. I was forbid it.
When time ſhall ſerve, let but the Herald cry,
And I'le appear again. [Exit.
Alb. Why fare thee well, I will o're-look thy paper.

Enter Edmund.

Baſt. The Enemy's in view, draw up your powers,
Here is the gueſs of their true ſtrength and forces,
By diligent diſcovery, but your haſt
Is now urg'd on you.
Alb. We will greet the time. [Exit.
Baſt. To both theſe Siſters have I ſworn my love:
Each jealous of the other, as the ſtung
Are of the Adder. Which of them ſhall I take?
Both? One? Or neither? Neither can be enjoy'd,
If both remain alive: To take the Widow,
Exaſperates, makes mad her Siſter Gonerill,
And hardly ſhall I carry out my ſide,
Her Husband being alive. Now then, we'll uſe
His countenance for the Battel, which being done,
Let her who would be rid of him, deviſe
His ſpeedy taking off. As for the mercy
Which he intends to Lear, and to Cordelia,
The Battel done, and they within our power;
Shall never ſee his pardon: for my ſtate,
Stands on me to defend, not to debate. [Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Alarum within. Enter with Drum and Colours, Lear Cordelia, and Souldiers, over the Stage, & Exeunt.

Enter Edgar, and Glouceſter.

Edg. Here Father, take the ſhadow of this tree
For your good hoaſt: pray that the right may thrive:
If ever I return to you again,
I'le bring you comfort.
Glo. Grace be with you Sir. [Exit.
[Alarum and Retreat within.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. Away old man, give me thy hand, away:
King Lear hath loſt, he and his Daughter tane,
Give me thy hand. Come on.
Glo. No further Sir, a man may rot even here.
Edg. What in ill thoughts again?
Men muſt endure
Their going hence, even as their coming hither,
Ripeneſs is all, come on.
Glo. And that's true too. [Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter in conqueſt with Drum and Colours, Edmund, Lear, and Cordelia, as priſoners, Souldiers, Captain.

Baſt. Some Officers take them away: good guard,
Until their greater pleaſures firſt be known
That are to cenſure them.
Cor. We are not the firſt,
Who with beſt meaning have incurr'd the worſt:
For thee, oppreſſed King, I am caſt down.
My ſelf could elſe out-frown falſe fortunes frown.
Shall we not ſee theſe Daughters, and theſe Siſters?
Lear. No, no, no, no: come lets away to priſon:
We two alone will Sing like Birds i'th'Cage:
When thou do'ſt ask me bleſſing, I'le kneel down
And ask of thee forgiveneſs: So we'll live,
And pray and Sing, and tell old tales, and laugh
At gilded Butterflies: and hear poor Rogues
Talk of Court news, and we'll talk with them too,
Who loſes, and who wins; who's in, who's out:
And take upon's the myſtery of things,
As if we were Gods ſpies: And we'll wear out
In a wall'd priſon, packs and ſects of great ones
That ebbe and flow by th'Moon.
Baſt. Take them away.
Lear. Upon ſuch ſacrifices, my Cordelia,
The gods themſelves throw incenſe.
Have I caught thee?
He that parts us, ſhall bring a Brand from heaven,
And fire us hence, like Foxes: wipe thine eye,
The good years ſhall devour them, fleſh and fell,
E're they ſhall make us weep?
We'll ſee'em ſtarv'd firſt: come. [Exit.
Baſt. Come hither Captain, hark.
Take thou this note, go follow them to priſon,
One ſtep I have advanc'd thee, if thou doſt
As this inſtructs thee, thou doſt make thy way
To Noble Fortunes: know thou this, that men
Are as the time is; to be tender minded
Do's not become a Sword, thy great imployment
Will not bear queſtion: either ſay thou'lt do't,
Or thrive by other means,
Capt. I'le do't my Lord.
Baſt. About it, and write happy, when th'aſt done,
Mark I ſay inſtantly, and carry it ſo
As I have ſet it down. [Exit Captain.

Enter Albany, Gonerill, Regan, Souldiers.

Alba. Sir, you have ſhew'd to day your valiant ſtrain
And fortune led you well: you have the Captives
Who were the oppoſites of this day's ſtrife:
I do require them of you ſo to uſe them,
As we ſhall find their merits, and our ſafety
May equally determine.
Baſt. Sir, I thought it fit,
To ſend the old and miſerable King to ſome retention,
Whoſe Age had Charms in it, whoſe Title more,
To pluck the common boſom on this ſide,
And turn our impreſt Launces in our eyes
Which do command them. With him I ſent the Queen
My reaſon all the ſame, and they are ready
To morrow, or at further ſpace, t'appear
Where you ſhall hold your Seſſion.
Alba. Sir, by your patience.
I hold you but a ſubject of this VVar,
Not as a Brother.
Reg. That's as we liſt to grace him.
Me thinks our pleaſure might have been demanded
Ere you had ſpoke ſo far. He led our Powers,
Bore the Commiſſion of my place and perſon,

The

The which immediacy may well ſtand up,
And call it ſelf your Brother.
Gon. Not ſo hot:
In his own grace he doth exalt himſelf,
More than in your addition.
Reg. In my rights,
By me inveſted, he compeers the beſt.
Alb. That were the moſt, if he ſhould Husband you.
Reg. Jeſters do oft prove Prophets.
Gon. Holla, holla,
That Eye that told you ſo, look'd but a ſquint.
Reg. Lady I am not well, elſe I ſhould anſwer
From a full flowing ſtomach. General,
Take thou my Souldiers, Priſoners, Patrimony,
Diſpoſe of them, of me, the Walls are thine:
Witneſs the World, that I create thee here,
My Lord, and Maſter.
Gon. Mean you to enjoy him?
Alb. The lett alone lies not in your good will.
Baſt. Nor in thine, Lord.
Alb. Half-blouded Fellow, yes.
Reg. Let the Drum ſtrike, and prove my title thine.
Alb. Stay yet, hear reaſon: Edmund, I arreſt thee
On capital Treaſon; and in thy arreſt,
This gilded Serpent: for your claim fair Siſters,
I bare it in the intereſt of my Wife,
'Tis ſhe is ſub-contracted to this Lord,
And I her Husband contradict your Banes.
If you will marry, make your loves to me,
My Lady is beſpoke.
Gon. An enterlude.
Alb. Thou art armed, Gloſter,
Let the Trumpet ſound:
If none appear to prove upon thy perſon,
Thy heinous, manifeſt, and many Treaſons,
There is my pledge: I'll make it on thy heart
Ere I taſte Bread, thou art in nothing leſs
Than I have here proclaim'd thee.
Reg. Sick, O ſick.
Gon. If not, I'll ne're truſt Medicine.
Baſt. There's my exchange, what in the World he is
That names me Traytor, Villain-like he lies,
Call by the Trumpet: he that dares approach;
On him, on you, who not, I will maintain
My truth and honour firmly.

Enter a Herald.

Alb. A Herald, ho.
Truſt to thy ſingle vertues, for thy Souldiers
All levied in my name, have in my name
Took their diſcharge.
Reg. My ſickneſs grows upon me.
Alb. She is not well, convey her to my Tent,
Come hither, Herald, let the Trumpet ſound,
And read out this. [A Trumpet ſounds.

Herald reads.

IF any man of quality or degree within the liſts of the Army, will maintain upon Edmund ſuppoſed Earl of Gloſter, that he is a manifold Traytor, let him appear by the third ſound of the Trumpet: he is bold in his defence. 1 Trumpet.
Her. Again. 2 Trumpet.
Her. Again. 3 Trumpet.
[Trumpet anſwers him within.

Enter Edgar armed.

Alb. Ask him his purpoſes, why he appears
Upon this Call o' th' Trumpet.
Her. What are you?
Your name, your quality, and why you anſwer
This preſent Summons?
Edg. Know my name is loſt
By Treaſons Tooth: bare-gnawn, and Canker-bit,
Yet am I Noble as the Adverſary
I come to cope.
Alb. Which is that Adverſary?
Edg. What's he that ſpeaks for Edmund Earl of Gloſter?
Baſt. Himſelf, what ſaiſt thou to him?
Edg. Draw thy Sword.
That if my Speech offend a Noble heart,
Thy arm may do thee Juſtice, here is mine:
Behold it is my priviledge,
The priviledge of mine honours,
My Oath, and my profeſſion. I proteſt,
Maugre thy ſtrength, place, youth, and eminence,
Deſpiſe thy Victor-Sword, and fire new fortune,
Thy valour, and thy heart, thou art a Traytor:
Falſe to thy gods, thy Brother, and thy Father,
Conſpirant 'gainſt this high illuſtrious Prince,
And from th' extreameſt upward of thy head,
To the deſcent and duſt below thy foot,
A moſt Toad ſpotted Traytor. Say thou no,
This Sword, this arm, and my beſt ſpirits are bent
To prove upon thy heart, whereto I ſpeak,
Thou lyeſt.
Baſt. In wiſdom I ſhould ask thy name,
But ſince thy out-ſide looks ſo fair and Warlike,
And that thy tongue (ſome ſay) of breeding breaths,
What ſafe, and nicely I might well delay,
By rule of Knight-hood, I diſdain and ſpurn:
Back do I toſs theſe Treaſons to thy head,
With the Hell-hated Lie, orewhelm thy heart,
Which for they yet glance by, and ſcarcely bruiſe,
This Sword of mine ſhall give them inſtant way,
Where they ſhall reſt for ever. Trumpets ſpeak.
Alb. Save him, ſave him. [Alarums. Fights.
Gon. This is practice, Gloſter,
By th' law of War, thou waſt not bound to anſwer
An unknown oppoſite: thou art not vanquiſh'd.
But cozen'd, and beguil'd.
Alb. Shut your mouth, Dame,
Or with this paper ſhall I ſtop it: hold, Sir,
Thou worſe than any name, read thine own evil:
No tearing Lady, I perceive you know it.
Gon. Say if I do, the Laws are mine not thine,
Who can arraign me for't? [Exit.
Alb. Moſt monſtrous! O, know'ſt thou this Paper?
Baſt. Ask me not what I know.
Alb. Go after her, ſhe's deſperate, govern her.
Baſt. What you have charg'd me with,
That have I done,
And more, much more, the time will bring it out.
'Tis paſt, and ſo am I: But what art thou
That haſt this fortune on me? If thou'rt Noble,
I do forgive thee.
Edg. Let's exchange charity:
I am no leſs in bloud than thou art, Edmund.
If more, the more th' haſt wrong'd me.
My name is Edgar, and thy Fathers Son,
The gods are juſt, and of our pleaſant Vices
Make inſtruments to plague us:
The dark and vitious place, where thee he got,
Coſt him his Eyes.
Baſt. Th' haſt ſpoken right, 'tis true,
The Wheel is come full Circle, I am here.
Alb. Me thought thy very gate did propheſie
A Royal Nobleneſs: I muſt embrace thee,
Let ſorrow ſplit my heart, if ever I
Did hate thee, or thy Father.
Edg. Worthy Prince, I know't.
Alb. Where have you hid your ſelf?
How have you known the miſeries of your Father?
Edg. By nurſing them, my Lord. Liſt a brief tale,
And when 'tis told, O that my heart would burſt.
The bloody proclamation to eſcape

That follow'd me ſo near, (O our lives ſweetneſs!
That we the pain of Death would hourly die,
Rather than die at once) taught me to ſhift
Into a Mad-mans rags, t' aſſume a ſemblance
That very Dogs diſdain'd: and in this habit
Met I my Father with his bleeding Rings,
Their precious Stones new loſt: became his guide,
Led him, beg'd for him, ſav'd him from deſpair,
Never (O fault) reveal'd my ſelf unto him,
Until ſome half hour paſt, when I was arm'd,
Not ſure, though hoping of this good ſucceſs,
I ask'd his bleſſing, and from firſt to laſt
Told him our Pilgrimage. But this flaw'd heart
(Alack too weak the conflict to ſupport)
'Twixt two extreams of paſſion, joy and grief,
Burſt ſmilingly.

Baſt. This Speech of yours hath mov'd me,
And ſhall perchance do good, but ſpeak you on,
You look as you had ſomething more to ſay.

Alb. If there be more, more woful, hold it in,
For I am almoſt ready to diſſolve,
Hearing of this.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gent. Help, Help; O help.

Edg. What kind of help?

Alb. Speak man.

Edg. What means this bloudy Knife?

Gent. 'Tis hot, it ſmoaks, came even from the heart of — O ſhe's dead.

Alb. Who's dead? Speak man.

Gent. Your Lady Sir, your Lady; and her Siſter
By her is poyſon'd: ſhe confeſſes it.

Baſt. I was contracted to them both, all three
Now marry in an inſtant.

Edg. Here comes Kent.

Enter Kent.

Alb. Produce the Bodies, be they live or dead.
[Gonerill and Regans Bodies brought out.
This judgment of the Heavens that makes us tremble.
Touches us not with pitty. O! is this ſhe?
The time will not allow the complement
Which very manners urge.

Kent. I am come
To bid my King and Maſter aye good night,
Is he not here?

Alb. Great thing of us forgot,
Speak Edmund, where's the King? and where's Cordelia?
Seeſt thou this object, Kent.

Kent. Alack, why thus?

Baſt. Yet Edmund was belov'd:
The one the other poiſon'd for my ſake,
And after, ſlew her ſelf.

Alb. Even ſo: cover their Faces.

Baſt. I pant for life: ſome good I mean to do
Deſpight of mine own Nature. Quickly ſend,
(Be brief in it) to th' Caſtle for my Writ
Is on the life of Lear, and Cordelia:
Nay, ſend in time.

Alb. Run, run, O run.

Edg. To whom my Lord? Who has the Office?
Send thy token of reprieve.

Baſt. Well thought on, take my Sword,
Give it the Captain.

Edg. Haſte thee for thy life.

Baſt. He hath Commiſſion from thy Wife and me,
To hang Cordelia in the Priſon, and
To lay the blame upon her own deſpair,
That ſhe fore-did her ſelf.

Alb. The gods defend her, bear him hence a while.

Enter Lear with Cordelia in his arms.

Lear. Howl, howl, howl: O you are men of ſtones,
Had I your Tongues and Eyes, I'ld uſe them ſo,
That Heavens Vault ſhould crack: ſhe's gone for ever.
I know when one is dead, and when one lives,
She's dead as Earth: Lend me a Looking-Glaſs,
If that her breath will miſt or ſtain the ſtone,
Why then ſhe lives.

Kent. Is this the promis'd end?

Edg. Or image of that horror.

Alb. Fall and ceaſe.

Lear. This Feather ſtirs, ſhe lives: if it be ſo,
It is a chance which do's redeem all ſorrows
That ever I have felt.

Kent. Oh my good Maſter.

Lear. Prethee away.

Edg. 'Tis noble Kent your Friend.

Lear. A plague upon you Murtherers, Traitors all,
I might have ſav'd her, now ſhe's gone for ever:
Cordelia, Cordelia, ſtay a little. Ha.
What is't thou ſaiſt? her Voice was ever ſoft,
Gentle, and low, an excellent thing in Woman.
I kill'd the ſlave that was a hanging thee.

Gent. 'Tis true (my Lords) he did.

Lear. Did I not, Fellow?
I have ſeen the day, with my good biting Faulchion
I would have made him skip: I am old now,
And theſe ſame croſſes ſpoil me. Who are you?
Mine Eyes are o' th' beſt, I'll tell you ſtraight.

Kent. If Fortune brag of two, ſhe lov'd and hated,
One of them we behold.

Lear. This is a dull ſight, are you not Kent?

Kent. The ſame: your Servant Kent,
Where is your Servant Caius?

Lear. He's a good Fellow, I can tell you that,
He'll ſtrike, and quickly too, he's dead and rotten.

Kent. No, my good Lord, I am the very man.

Lear. I'll ſee that ſtraight.

Kent. That from your firſt of difference and decay,
Have follow'd your ſad ſteps.

Lear. You are welcom hither.

Kent. Nor no man elſe:
Alls cheerleſs, dark, and deadly:
Your eldeſt Daughters have fore-done themſelves,
And deſperately are dead.

Lear. I, ſo I think.

Alb. He knows not what he ſayes, and vain is it
That we preſent us to him.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Edg. Very bootleſs.

Meſ. Edmund is dead, my Lord.

Alb. That's but a triſle here:
You Lords and noble Friends know our intent,
What comfort to this great decay may come,
Shall be appli'd. For us we will reſign,
During the life of this old Majeſty,
To him our abſolute power, you to your rights,
With boot, and ſuch addition as your Honours
Have more than merited. All Friends ſhall
Taſte the wages of their virtue, and all Foes
The Cup of their deſervings: O ſee, ſee.

Lear. And my poor Fool is hang'd: No, no, no life?
Why ſhould a Dog, a Horſe, a Rat have life,
And thou no breath at all? Thou'lt come no more,
Never, never, never, never, never.
Pray you undo this Button. Thank you, Sir,
Do you ſee this? look on her, look on her Lips,
Look there, look there. [He dies.

Edg. He faints, my Lord.

Kent. Break heart, I prethee break.

Edg.

Edg. Look to my Lord.
Kent. Vex not his Ghoſt, O let him paſs, he hates him,
That would upon the rack of this tough World
Stretch him out longer.
Edg. He is gone indeed.
Kent. The wonder is, he hath endur'd ſo long,
He but uſurpt his life.
Alb. Bear them from hence, our preſent buſineſs
Is general woe: Friends of my Soul, you 'twain,
Rule in this Realm, and the gor'd ſtate ſuſtain.
Kent. I have a Journey, Sir, ſhortly to go,
My Maſter calls me, I muſt not ſay no. [Dies.
Edg. The weight of this ſad time we muſt obey,
Speak what we feel, not what we ought to ſay:
The oldeſt hath born moſt, we that are young,
Shall never ſee ſo much, nor live ſo long.

[Exeunt with a dead march.

THE TRAGEDY OF OTHELLO, THE MOORE of VENICE.

The Actors Names.

OThello, the Moore.
Brabantio, Father to Deſdemona.
Caſſio, an honourable Lieutenant.
Jago, a Villain.
Rodorigo, a gull'd Gentleman.
Duke of Venice.
Senators.
Montano, Governour of Cyprus.
Gentlemen of Cyprus.
Lodovico, and Gratiano, two Noble Venetians.
Saylors.
Clown.

Deſdemona, Wife to Othello.
Æmilia, Wife to Jago.
Bianca, a Curtezan.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Rodorigo, and Jago.

Rodo. NEver tell me, I take it very unkindly
That thou (Jago) who haſt had my Purſe,
As if the ſtrings were thine,
Should'ſt know of this.
Jago. But you'll not hear me.
If ever I did Dream
Of ſuch a matter, abhor me.
Rodo. Thou told'ſt me,
Thou didſt hold him in thy hate.
Jago. Deſpiſe me
If I do not. Three great ones of the City,
(In perſonal ſuit to make me his Lieutenant)
Off-capt to him: and by the faith of man
I know my price, I am worth no worſe a place.
But he (as loving his own pride and purpoſes)
Evades them, with a Bumbaſt Circumſtance,
Horribly ſtuft with Epithets of War,
Non-ſuits my Mediators. For certes, ſayes he,
I have already choſe my Officer. And what was he?
Forſooth, a great Arithmetician,
One Michael Caſſio, a Florentine,
(A Fellow almoſt damn'd in a fair Wife)
That never ſet a Squadron in the Field,

Nor the diviſion of a Battel knows
More than a Spinſter: Unleſs the Bookiſh Theorick:
Wherein the Tongued Conſuls can propoſe
As Maſterly as he, meer prattle (without practice)
In all his Souldierſhip. But he (Sir) had th'election
And I (of whom his eyes had ſeen the proof
At Rhodes, at Cyprus, and on others grounds
Chriſtian, and Heathen) muſt be be-lee'd, and calm'd
By Debitor, and Creditor. This Counter-Caſter,
He (in good time) muſt his Lieutenant be,
And I (bleſs the mark) his Moor-ſhip's Ancient.
Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his hang-man.
Jago. Why there's no remedy,
'Tis the curſe of Service;
Preferment goes by Letter, and affection,
And not by old gradation, where each ſecond
Stood Heir to th' firſt. Now, Sir, be Judge your ſelf,
Whether I in any juſt term am Affin'd
To love the Moore?
Rod. I would not follow him then.
Jago. O, Sir, content you.
I follow him to ſerve my turn upon him.
We cannot all be Maſters, nor all Maſters
Cannot be truly follow'd. You ſhall mark
Many a dutious and knee-crooking Knave,
That (doting on his own obſequious bondage)
Wears out his time, much like his Maſters Aſs,
For nought but Provender, and when he's old Caſheer'd.
Whip me ſuch honeſt Knaves. Others there are
Who trimm'd in Forms, and Viſages of duty,
Keep yet their hearts attending on themſelves.
And throwing but ſhows of ſervice on their Lords,
Do well thrive by them.
And when they have lin'd in their Coats
Do themſelves Homage.
Theſe Fellows have ſome Soul,
And ſuch a one do I profeſs my ſelf. For (Sir)
It is as ſure as you are Rodorigo,
Were I the Moor, I would not be Jago:
In following him, I follow but my ſelf.
Heaven is my Judge, not I, for love and duty,
But ſeeming ſo, for my peculiar end:
For when my outward action doth demonſtrate
The native act, and figure of my heart
In complement extern, 'tis not long after
But I will wear my heart upon my ſleeve
For Dawes to peck at; I am not what I am.
Rod. What a fall Fortune do's the thick-lips owe
If he can carry't thus?
Jago. Call up her Father:
Rowſe him, make after him, poyſon his delight,
Proclaim him in the ſtreets, Incenſe her Kinſmen,
And though he in a fertile Climate dwell,
Plague him with Flyes: though that his joy be joy,
Yet throw ſuch chances of vexation on't,
As it may looſe ſome colour.
Rodo. Here is her Fathers Houſe, I'll call aloud.
Jago. Do, with like timorous accent, and dire yell,
As when (by night and negligence) the fire
Is ſpied in populous Cities.
Rodo. What ho: Brabantio, Signior Brabantio, ho.
Jago. Awake, what ho, Brabantio: Thieves, Thieves.
Look to your Houſe, your Daughter, and your Bags,
Thieves, Thieves.
Bra. Above. What is the reaſon of this terrible
Summons? what is the matter there?
Rodo. Signior, is all your Family within?
Jago. Are your Doors lock'd?
Bra. Why? wherefore ask you this?
Jago. Sir, y' are robb'd, for ſhame put on your Gown,
Your heart is burſt, you have loſt half your Soul
Even now, very now, an old black Ram
Is Tupping your white Ewe. Ariſe, ariſe,
Awake the ſnorting Citizens with the Bell,
Or elſe the Devil will make a Grand-ſire of you.
Ariſe I ſay.
Bra. What, have you loſt your Wits?
Rod. Moſt Reverend Signior, do you know my Voice?
Bra. Not I: what are you?
Rod. My name is Rodorigo.
Bra. The worſer welcome:
I have charg'd thee not to haunt about my Doors:
In honeſt plainneſs thou haſt heard me ſay,
My Daughter is not for thee. And now in madneſs
(Being full of Supper, and diſtempering draughts)
Upon malicious Knavery, doſt thou come
To ſtart my quiet.
Rod. Sir, Sir, Sir.
Bra. But thou muſt needs be ſure,
My Spirits and my place have in their power
To make this bitter to thee.
Rod. Patience, good Sir.
Bra. What tell'ſt thou me of Robbing?
This is Venice: my Houſe is not a Grange.
Rod. Moſt grave Brabantio,
In ſimple and pure Soul, I come to you.
Jag. Sir, you are one of thoſe that will not ſerve God,
if the Devil bid you. Becauſe we come to do you ſervice, and you think we are Ruffians, you'll have your Daughter cover'd with a Barbary Horſe, you'll have your Nephews neigh to you, you'll have Courſers for Couſins, and Gennets for Germans.
Bra. What profane wretch art thou?
Jag. I am one, Sir, that comes to tell you, your Daughter and the Moore, are making the Beaſt with two backs.
Bra. Thou art a Villain.
Jago. You are a Senator.
Bra. This thou ſhalt anſwer. I know thee, Rodorigo.
Rod. Sir, I will anſwer any thing. But I beſeech you,
If't be your pleaſure, and moſt wiſe conſent,
(As partly I find it is) that your fair Daughter,
At this odd Even and dull Watch oth' Night
Tranſported with no worſe or better guard,
But with a Knave of common hire, a Gundelier,
To the groſs claſps of a Laſcivious Moore:
If this be known to you, and your Allowance,
We then have done you bold and ſawcy wrongs.
But if you know not this, my manners tell me,
We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe
That from the ſenſe of all Civility,
I thus would play and trifle with your Reverence.
Your Daughter (if you have not given her leave)
I ſay again, hath made a groſs revolt,
Tying her Duty, Beauty, Wit, and Fortunes
In an extravagant, and wheeling Stranger,
Of here, and every where: ſtraight ſatisfie your ſelf.
If ſhe be in your Chamber, or your Houſe,
Let looſe on me the Juſtice of the ſtate
For thus deluding you.
Bra. Strike on the Tinder, ho:
Give me a Taper: call up all my people,
This Accident is not unlike my Dream,
Belief of it oppreſſes me already.
Light, I ſay, light.
Jago. Farewel: for I muſt leave you.
It ſeems not meet, nor wholſome to my place
To be producted, as if I ſtay, I ſhall,
Againſt the Moor. For I do know the ſtate,
(However this may gall him with ſome check)
Cannot with ſafety caſt him. For he's embark'd
With ſuch loud reaſon to the Cyprus Wars,
(Which even now ſtands in Act) that for their Souls
Another of his fadom, they have none,
To lead their buſineſs. In which regard,
Though I do hate him as I do Hell,
Yet, for neceſſity of preſent life,
I muſt ſhew out a Flag, and ſign of Love,
(Which is indeed but ſign) that you ſhall ſurely find him

Lead

Lead to the Sagittary the raiſed Search:
And there will I be with him. So farewel. [Exit.

Enter Brabantio, with Servants and Torches.

Bra. It is too true an evil. Gone ſhe is,
And whar's to come of my deſpiſed time,
Is naught but bitterneſs. Now, Rodorigo,
Where didſt thou ſee her? (Oh unhappy Girle)
With the Moore ſaiſt thou? (Who would be a Father?)
How didſt thou know 'twas ſhe? (Oh ſhe deceives me
Paſt thonght:) what ſaid ſhe to you? Get moe Tapers:
Raiſe all my Kindred. Are they married, think you?
Rod. Truly I think they are.
Bra. Oh heaven: how got ſhe out?
Oh treaſon of my blood.
Fathers, from hence truſt not your Daughters minds
By what you ſee them Act. Are there not charms,
By which the property of Youth and Maidhood
May be abus'd? Have you not read, Rodorigo,
Of ſome ſuch thing?
Rod. Yes, Sir: I have indeed.
Bra. Call up my brothers: oh would you had had her.
Some one way, ſome another. Do you know
Where we may apprehend her, and the Moore?
Rod. I think I can diſcover him, if you pleaſe
To get good Guard, and go along with me.
Bra. Pray you lead on. At every Houſe I'll call,
(I may command at moſt) get Weapons (hoa)
And raiſe ſome ſpecial Officers of might:
On, good Rodorigo, I will deſerve your pains. [Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, Jago, Attendants, with Torches.

Jago. Though in the trade of war I have ſlain men,
Yet do I hold it very ſtuff oth' Conſcience
To do no contriv'd murder: I take iniquity
Sometime to do me ſervice. Nine or ten times
I had thought to have yerk'd him here under the Rib.
Othel. 'Tis better as it is.
Jago. Nay, but he prated,
And ſpoke ſuch ſcurvy, and provoking terms
Againſt your honour, that with the little godlineſs I have,
I did full hard forbear him. But I pray you, Sir,
Are you faſt married? Be aſſur'd of this,
That the Magnifico is much belov'd,
And hath in his effect a voyce potential
As double as the Dukes: He will divorce you.
Or put upon you, what reſtraint or grievance,
The Law (with all his might, to enforce it on)
Will give him Cable.
Othe. Let him do his ſpight:
My ſervices, which I have done the Signory
Shall out-tongue his complaints. 'Tis yet to know,
Which when I know, that boaſting is an honour,
I ſhall promulgate. I fetch my life and being,
From men of Royal Siege. And my demerits
May ſpeak (unbonnetted) to as a proud a Fortune
As this that I have reach'd. For know, Jago,
But that I love the gentle Deſdemona,
I would not my unhouſed free condition
Put into Circumſcription, and Confine,
For the Seas worth. But look, what lights come yond?

Enter Caſſio with Torches.

Jago. Thoſe are the raiſed Father, and his friends:
You were beſt go in.
Othel. Not I: I muſt be found.
My parts, my title, and my perfect Soul
Shall manifeſt me rightly. Is it they?
Jago. By Janus, I think no.
Othel. The Servants of the Dukes?
And my Lieutenant?
The goodneſs of the night upon you (friends)
What is the News?
Caſſio. The Duke does greet you (General)
And he requires your haſte, Poſt-haſte appearance,
Even on the inſtant.
Othel. What is the matter think you?
Caſſio. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine:
It is a buſineſs of ſome heat. The Gallies
Have ſent a dozen ſequent meſſengers
This very night, at one anothers heels:
And many of the Conſuls (rais'd and met,)
Are at the Dukes already. You have been hotly call'd for,
When being not at your lodging to be found,
The Senate hath ſent about three ſeveral Queſts,
To ſearch you out.
Othel. 'Tis well I am found by you:
I will ſpend but a word here in the Houſe,
And go with you.
Caſſio. Ancient, what makes he here?
Jago. Faith, he to night hath boorded a Land Carrac,
If it prove lawful prize, he's made for ever.
Caſſio. I do not underſtand.
Jago. He's married.
Caſſio. To whom?
Jago. Marry to——Come, Captain, will you go?
Othel. Have with you.
Caſſio. Here comes another Troop to ſeek for you,

Enter Brabantio, Rodorigo, with Officers and Torches.

Jago. It is Brabantio: General be advis'd,
He comes to bad intent.
Othel. Holla, ſtand there.
Rod. Signior, it is the Moor.
Bra. Down with him, Thief.
Jago. You Rodorigo? Come, Sir, I am for you.
Othel. Keep up your bright Swords, for the dew will ruſt them. Good Signior, you ſhall more command with years, than with your Weapons.
Bra. Oh thou foul Thief,
Where haſt thou ſtow'd my Daughter?
Damn'd as thou art, thou haſt enchanted her,
For I'le refer me to all things of ſenſe,
(If ſhe in chains of Magick were not bound)
Whether a Maid, ſo tender, fair, and happy,
So oppoſite to Marriage, that ſhe ſhunn'd
The wealthy curled Darling of our Nation,
Would ever have (t'incurr a general mock)
Run from her Guardage to the ſooty boſom,
Of ſuch a thing as thou: to fear, not to delight?
Judge me the world, if 'tis not groſs in ſenſe,
That thou haſt practis'd on her with foul Charms,
Abus'd her delicate youth, with Drugs or Minerals,
That weakens motion. I'le hav't diſputed on,
'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking;
I therefore apprehend and do attach thee,
For an abuſer of the world, a practicer
Of Arts inhibited, and out of warrant;
Lay hold upon him, if he do reſiſt
Subdue him at his peril.
Othel. Hold your hand.
Both you of my inclining, and the reſt.
Were it my Cue to fight, I ſhould have known it
Without a Prompter. Whither will you that I go
To anſwer this your charge?
Bra. To priſon, till fit time
Of Law, and courſe of direct Seſſion
Call thee to anſwer.
Othel. What if I do obey?
How may the Duke be therewith ſatisfied,
Whoſe Meſſengers are here about my ſide,

Upon ſome preſent buſineſs of the State,
To bring me to him.
Officer. 'Tis true, moſt worthy Signior,
The Duke's in Council, and your Noble ſelf,
I am ſure is ſent for.
Bra. How? The Duke in Council?
In this time of the night? bring him away:
Mine's not an idle cauſe. The Duke himſelf,
Or any of my Brothers of the State,
Cannot but feel this wrong, as 'twere their own:
For if ſuch Actions may have paſſage free,
Bond ſlaves and Pagans ſhall our Stateſmen be.
[Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Duke, Senators, and Officers.

Duke. There is no compoſition in this news,
That gives them credit.
1. Sen. Indeed, they are diſproportioned;
My Leters ſay, a hundred and ſeven Gallies.
Duke. And mine a hundred and forty.
2. Sen. And mine two hundred:
But though they jump not on a juſt account,
(As in theſe Caſes where the ayme reports,
'Tis oft with difference) yet do they all confirm
A Turkiſh Fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.
Duke. Nay, it is poſſible enough to judgment:
I do not ſo ſecure me in the errour,
But the main Article I do approve
In fearfull ſenſe.
Saylor within. What hoa, what hoa, what hoa.

Enter Saylor.

Officer. A Meſſenger from the Gallies.
Duke. Now? What's the buſineſs?
Saylor. The Turkiſh preparation makes for Rhodes,
So was I bid report here to the State,
By Signior Angelo.
Duke. How ſay you by this change?
1. Sen. This cannot be
By no aſſay of Reaſon. 'Tis a Pageant
To keep us in falſe gaze, when we conſider
Th'importancy of Cyprus to the Turk:
And let our ſelves again but underſtand,
That as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes,
So may he with more facile queſtion bear it,
For that it ſtands not in ſuch warlike brace,
But altogether lacks th'abilities
That Rhodes is dreſs'd in. If we make thought of this,
We muſt not think the Turk is ſo unskilfull,
To leave that lateſt, which concerns him firſt,
Neglecting an attempt of eaſe and gain,
To wake and wage a danger profitleſs.
Duke. Nay, in all confidence he's not for Rhodes.
Officer. Here is more News.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſſen. The Ottamittes, reverend, and gracious,
Steering with due courſe toward the Iſle of Rhodes,
Have there injoynted them with an after Fleet.
1. Sen. I, ſo I thought: how many, as you gueſs?
Meſſ. Of thirty Sail: and now they do re-ſtem
This backward courſe, bearing with frank appearance
Their purpoſes toward Cyprus. Signior Montano,
Your truſty and moſt valiant Servitor,
With his free duty, recommends you thus,
And prays you to believe him.
Duke. 'Tis certain then for Cyprus:
Marcus Luccicos, is he not in Town?
1. Sen. He's now in Florence.
Duke. VVrite from us,
To him, Poſt, Poſt-haſte, diſpatch.
1. Sen. Here comes Brabantio, and the Moor.

Enter Brabantio, Othello, Caſſio, Jago, Rodorigo, and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we muſt ſtraight employ you,
Againſt the general Enemy Ottoman.
I did not ſee you: welcom, gentle Signior,
VVe lack't your Counſel, and your help to night.
Bra. So did I yours: Good your Grace pardon me.
Neither my place, for ought I heard of buſineſs,
Hath rais'd me from my Bed; nor doth the general care
Take hold on me. For my particular grief
Is of ſo flood-gate, and o're-bearing Nature,
That it ingluts, and ſwallows other ſorrows,
And it is ſtill it ſelf.
Duke. VVhy? what's the matter?
Bra. My Daughter: oh my Daughter!
Sen. Dead!
Bra. I, to me.
She is abus'd, ſtolen from me, and corrupted
By Spells and Medicines, bought of Mountebanks;
For Nature ſo prepoſterouſly to erre,
(Being not deficient, blind, or lame of ſenſe,)
Sans witch-craft could not.
Duke. VVho e're he be, that in this foul proceeding
Hath thus beguil'd your Daughter of her ſelf,
And you of her; the bloody Book of Law,
You ſhall your ſelf read in the bitter Letter,
After your own ſenſe: yea, though our proper Son
Stood in your Action.
Bra. Humbly I thank your Grace,
Here is the man; this Moore, whom now it ſeems
Your ſpecial Mandate, for the State Affairs,
Hath hither brought.
All. VVe are very ſorry for't.
Duke. VVhat in your own part can you ſay to this?
Bra. Nothing, but this is ſo.
Othel. Moſt Potent, Grave, and Reverend Signiors,
My very Noble, and approv'd good Maſters;
That I have tane away this old mans Daughter,
It is moſt true: true I have married her:
The very head, and front of my offending,
Hath this extent; no more. Rude am I in my ſpeech,
And little bleſs'd with the ſoft phraſe of Peace;
For ſince theſe Arms of mine had ſeven years pith,
Till now, ſome nine Moons waſted, they have us'd
Their dearſt Action, in the tented field:
And little of this great world can I ſpeak,
More than pertains to Feats of Broyls, and Battel,
And therefore little ſhall I grace my cauſe,
In ſpeaking for my ſelf. Yet, (by your gracious patience)
I will a round un-varniſh'd tale deliver,
Of my whole courſe of love.
VVhat Drugs? what Charms?
VVhat Conjuration? and what mighty Magick,
(For ſuch proceeding I am charg'd withal)
I won his Daughter with.
Bra. A Maiden, never bold:
Of Spirit ſo ſtill and quiet, that her Motion
Bluſh'd at her ſelf, and ſhe in ſpight of Nature,
Of Years, of Country, Credit, every thing,
To fall in Love with what ſhe fear'd to look on;
It is a judgment maim'd, and moſt imperfect.
That will confeſs Perfection ſo could erre
Againſt all Rules of Nature, and muſt be driven
To find out practices of cunning hell
VVhy this ſhould be. I therefore vouch again,
That with ſome mixtures powerful o're the blood,
Or with ſome Dram (conjur'd to this effect) he wrought upon her.
Duke. To vouch this, is no proof, VVithout

Without more wider, and more over-Teſt
Than theſe thin habits, and poor likelyhoods
Of modern ſeeming, do prefer againſt him.
Sen. But, Othello, ſpeak,
Did you, by indirect and forced courſes
Subdue, and poyſon this young Maids affections?
Or came it by requeſt, and ſuch fair queſtion,
As ſoul to ſoul affordeth?
Othel. I do beſeech you,
Send for the Lady to the Sagittary,
And let her ſpeak of me before her Father;
If you do find me foul in her report,
The truſt, the office, I do hold of you,
Not only take away, but let your ſentence
Even fall upon my life.
Duke. Fetch Deſdemona hither.
Othello. Ancient, conduct them:
You beſt know the place.
And 'till ſhe come as truly as to heaven,
I do confeſs the vices of my blood,
So juſtly to your Grave ears, I'll preſent
How I did thrive in this fair Ladies Love,
And ſhe in mine.
Duke. Say it, Othello.
Othello. Her Father lov'd me, oft invited me:
Still queſtion'd me the Story of my life,
From year to year: The Battells, Sieges, Fortune,
That I have paſt.
I ran it through, even from my Boyiſh days,
To th' very moment that he bad me tell it.
Wherein I ſpoke of moſt diſaſtrous Chances:
Of moving Accidents by Flood and Field,
Of hair-breadth ſcapes i'th'imminent deadly Breach;
Of being taken by the inſolent foe,
And ſold to ſlavery. Of my redemption thence,
And portance in my Traveller's hiſtory.
Wherein of Antars vaſt, and deſarts wild,
Rough Quarries, Rocks and Hills, whoſe heads touch heaven,
It was my hint to ſpeak. Such was my Proceſs,
And of the Canibals that each other eat,
The Anthropophagi, and men whoſe heads
Grew beneath their Shoulders. Theſe things to hear,
Would Deſdemona ſeriouſly incline:
But ſtill the houſe affairs would draw her hence;
Which ever as ſhe could with haſte diſpatch,
She'ld come again, and with a greedy ear
Devour up my Diſcourſe, which I obſerving,
Took once a pliant hour, and found good means
To draw from her a prayer of earneſt heart,
That I would all my pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcels ſhe had ſomething heard,
But not diſtinctively: I did conſent,
And often did beguile her of her tears,
When I did ſpeak of ſome diſtreſsful ſtroke,
That my youth ſuffer'd: My ſtory being done,
She gave me for my pains a world of kiſſes:
She ſwore in faith, 'twas ſtrange, 'twas paſſing ſtrange.
'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful.
She wiſh'd ſhe had not heard it, yet ſhe wiſh'd
That heaven had made her ſuch a man. She thank'd me,
And bad me, if I had a friend that lov'd her,
I ſhould but teach him how to tell my ſtory,
And that would woo her. Upon this hint I ſpake,
She lov'd me for the dangers I have paſt,
And I lov'd her, that ſhe did pity them.
This only is the witch-craft I have us'd.
Here comes the Lady, let her witneſs it.

Enter Deſdemona, Jago, Attendants.

Duke. I think this tale would win my Daughter too,
Good Brabantio, take up this mangled matter at the beſt:
Men do their broken weapons rather uſe,
Than their bare hands.

Bra. I pray you hear her ſpeak:
If ſhe confeſs that ſhe was half the wooer,
Deſtruction on my head, if my bad blame
Light on the man. Come hither, gentle Miſtreſs,
Do you perceive, in all this Noble Company,
Where moſt you owe obedience?
Deſ. My Noble Father;
I do perceive here a divided duty,
To you I am bound for life, and education:
My life and education both do learn me,
How to reſpect you. You are the Lord of duty,
I am hitherto your Daughter. But here's my husband;
And ſo much duty, as my Mother ſhew'd
To you, preferring you before her Father:
So much I challenge, that I may profeſs
Due to the Moore, my Lord.
Bra. God be with you: I have done.
Pleaſe it your Grace, on to the State affairs;
I had rather to adopt a child than get it.
Come hither, Moore,
I here do give thee that with all my heart,
Which, but thou haſt already, with all my heart,
I would keep from thee. For your ſake (Jewell)
I am glad at ſoul, I have no other child;
For thy eſcape would teach me tyranny
To hang clogs on them. I have done, my Lord.
Duke. Let me ſpeak like your ſelf:
And lay a Sentence,
Which, like a griſe, or ſtep, may help theſe Lovers.
When remedies are paſt, the griefs are ended
By ſeeing worſt, which late on hopes depended.
To mourn a miſchief that is paſt and gone,
Is the next way to draw new miſchief on.
What cannot be preſerv'd when Fortune takes:
Patience her injury a mockery makes.
The robb'd that ſmiles, ſteals ſomething from the Thief,
He robs himſelf that ſpends a bootleſs grief.
Bra. So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile,
We loſe it not ſo long as we can ſmile:
He bears the ſentence well, that nothing bears,
But the free comfort which from thence he hears.
But he hears both the ſentence, and the ſorrow,
That to pay grief, muſt of poor patience borrow.
Theſe Sentences to Sugar, or to Gall,
Being ſtrong on both ſides are equivocall.
But words are words: I never yet did hear,
That the bruiz'd heart was pierced through the ear.
Humbly beſeech you to proceed to th'affairs of State.
Duke. The Turk, with a moſt mighty preparation, makes for Cyprus: Othello, the Fortitude of the place is beſt known to you. And though we have there a Subſtitute of moſt allowed ſufficiency; yet opinion, a more Sovereign Miſtreſs of Effects, throws a more ſafe voice on you: you muſt therefore be content to ſlubber the groſs of your new fortunes, with this more ſtubborn, and boyſterous expedition.
Othel. The Tyrant Cuſtome, moſt Grave Senators,
Hath made the flinty and Steel Coach of War
My thrice-driven bed of Down. I do agnize
A natural and prompt Alacrity,
I find in hardneſs: and do undertake
This preſent war againſt the Ottomittes.
Moſt humbly therefore bending to your State,
I crave fit diſpoſition for my Wife,
Due reverence of Place, and Exhibition,
With ſuch accommodation and beſort,
As levels with her breeding.
Duke. Why, at her Fathers.
Bra. I will not have it ſo.
Othel. Nor I.
Deſ. Nor would I there reſide,
To put my Father in impatient thoughts
By being in his Eye. Moſt gracious Duke,
To my unfolding, lend your proſperous Ear,

And

And let me find a Character in your voice
T'aſſiſt my ſimpleneſs.
Duke. What would you, Deſdemona?
Deſd. That I love the Moor, to live with him,
My down-right violence, and ſtorm of Fortunes,
May trumpet to the world. My heart's ſubdu'd
Even to the very quality of my Lord;
I ſaw Othello's viſage in his mind,
And to his honours and his valiant parts,
Did I my ſoul and fortunes conſecrate.
So that (dear Lords) if I be left behind
A Moth of Peace, and he go to the War,
The Rites for why I love him, are bereft me:
And I a heavy interim ſhall ſupport
By his dear abſence. Let me go with him.
Othel. Let her have your voice.
Vouch with me heaven, I therefore beg it not
To pleaſe the palate of my Appetite:
Nor to comply with heat the young effects
In my defunct, and proper ſatisfaction.
But to be free, and bounteous to her mind:
And heaven defend your good ſouls, that you think
I will your ſerious and great buſineſs ſcant
When ſhe is with me. No, when light wing'd Toyes
Of feather'd Cupid, ſeel with wanton dulneſs
My ſpeculative and offic'd Inſtrument:
That my Diſports corrupt and taint my buſineſs:
Let Houſewives make a Skillet of my Helm,
And all indign and baſe adverſities,
Make head againſt my Eſtimation.
Duke. Be it as you ſhall privately determine,
Either for her ſtay or going: th'Affair cries haſte:
And ſpeed muſt anſwer it.
Sen. You muſt away to night.
Othel. With all my heart.
Duke. At nine ith' morning here we'll meet again.
Othello, leave ſome Officer behind,
And he ſhall our Commiſſion bring to you:
And ſuch things elſe of quality and reſpect
As doth import to you.
Othel. So pleaſe your Grace, my Ancient,
A man he is of honeſty and truſt:
To his conveyance I aſſign my wife.
With what elſe needful, your good Grace ſhall think
To be ſent after me.
Duke. Let it be ſo:
Good night to every one. And Noble Signior,
If Vertue no delighted beauty lack,
Your Son-in-law is far more fair than black.
Sen. Adieu, brave Moor, uſe Deſdemona well.
Bra. Look to her (Moor) if thou haſt eyes to ſee:
She has deceiv'd her Father, and may thee. [Exit.
Othel. My life upon her faith. Honeſt Jago,
My Deſdemona muſt I leave to thee:
I prethee let thy wife attend on her,
And bring them after in their beſt advantage.
Come, Deſdemona, I have but an hour
Of Love, of wordly matter, and direction
To ſpeak with thee. We muſt obey the time. [Exit.
Rod. Jago.
Jago. What ſayeſt thou, noble heart?
Rod. What will I do, thinkeſt thou?
Jago. Why, go to bed and ſleep.
Rod. I will incontinently drown my ſelf.
Jago. If thou doſt, I ſhall never love thee after. Why, thou ſilly Gentleman?
Rod. It is ſillineſs to live, when to live is torment: and then have we a preſcription to dye, when death is our Phyſician.
Jago. Oh villanous: I have look'd upon the world for four times ſeven years, and ſince I could diſtinguiſh betwixt a Benefit and an Injury, I never found man that knew how to love himſelf. Ere I would ſay, I would drown my ſelf for the love of a Guinney-Hen, I would change my humanity with a Baboon.
Rod. What ſhould I do, I confeſs it is my ſhame to be ſo fond, but it is not in my virtue to amend it.
Jago. Virtue? a Fig, 'tis in our ſelves that we are thus or thus. Our Bodies are our Gardens, to the which our Wills are Gardiners. So that if we will plant Nettles, or ſow Lettice: Set Hyſſop, and weed up Time: Supply it with one gender of Herbs, or diſtract it with many: either have it ſteril with idleneſs, or manured with induſtry, why the power and corrigible Authority of this lies in our wills. If the brain of our lives had not one ſcale of Reaſon to poiſe another of Senſuality, the blood and baſeneſs of our Natures would conduct us to moſt prepoſterous Concluſions. But we have reaſon to cool our raging Motions, or carnal Stings, or unbitted Luſts: whereof I take this, that you call Love, to be a Sect, or Seyen.
Rod. It cannot be.
Jago. It is meerly a Luſt of the Blood, and a permiſſion of the will. Come, be a man: drown thy ſelf? Drown Cats and blind Puppies. I have profeſt me thy Friend, and I confeſs me knit to thy deſerving, with Cables of perdurable toughneſs. I could never better ſteed thee than now. Put money in thy purſe: follow thou the Wars, defeat thy favour, with an uſurped Beard. I ſay, put money in thy purſe. It cannot be long that Deſdemona ſhould continue her love to the Moor. Put money in thy purſe: nor he his to her. It was a violent Commencement in her, and thou ſhalt ſee an anſwerable Sequeſtration, but put money in thy purſe. Theſe Moors are changeable in their wills: fill thy purſe with money. The food that to him now is as luſcious as Locuſts, ſhall to him ſhortly be as bitter as Coloquintida. She muſt change for youth: when ſhe is ſated with his body, ſhe will find the errours of her choice. Therefore put money in thy purſe. If thou wilt needs damn thy ſelf, do it a more delicate way than drowning. Make all the money thou canſt: If Sanctimony and a frail Vow betwixt an erring Barbarian and ſuper-ſubtle Venetian be not too hard for my wits, and all the tribe of hell, thou ſhalt enjoy her: therefore make money: a pox of drowning thy ſelf, it is clean out of the way. Seek thou rather to be hang'd in compaſſing thy joy, than to be drown'd, and go without her.
Rod. Wilt thou he faſt to my hopes, if I depend on the iſſue?
Jago. Thou art ſure of me: Go make money: I have told thee often, and I re-tell thee again and again, I hate the Moor. My cauſe is hearted; thine hath no leſs reaſon. Let us be conjunctive in our revenge againſt him. If thou canſt cuckold him, thou doſt thy ſelf a pleaſure, me a ſport. There are many Events in the womb of Time, which will be delivered. Traverſe, go, provide thy money. We will have more of this to morrow. Adieu.
Rod. Where ſhall we meet ith' morning?
Jago. At my Lodging.
Rod. I'll be with thee betimes.
Jago. Go to, farewel. Do you hear, Rodorigo?
Rod. I'll ſell all my Land. [Exit.
Jago. Thus do I ever make my Fool my purſe:
For I mine own gain'd knowledge ſhould profane,
If I would time expend with ſuch a Swain,
But for my ſport and profit: I hate the Moor,
And it is thought abroad, that 'twixt my ſheets
He has done my office. I know not if't be true,
But I, for meer ſuſpicion in that kind,
Will do, as if for Surety. He holds me well,
The better ſhall my purpoſe work on him:
Caſſio's a proper man: Let me ſee now,
To get this place, and plume up my will
In double Knavery. How? how? Let's ſee.
After ſome time, to abuſe Othello's ears,
That he is too familiar with his wife:
He hath a perſon, and a ſmooth diſpoſe
To be ſuſpected: fram'd to make women falſe.
The Moor is of a free and open Nature,
That thinks men honeſt, that but ſeem to be ſo,

And will as tenderly be led by th' Noſe
As Aſſes are:
I have't: it is engendred: Hell and Night
Muſt bring this monſtrous Birth to the worlds light.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Montano, and Gentlemen.

Mont. WHat from the Cape, can you diſcern at Sea?
1. Gent. Nothing at all, it is a high-wrought Flood:
I cannot 'twixt the Heaven and the Main,
Deſcry a Sail.
Mont. Methinks the wind hath ſpoke aloud at Land,
A fuller blaſt ne're ſhook our Battlements:
If it hath ruffiand ſo upon the Sea,
What ribs of Oak, when Mountains melt on them,
Can hold the Morties. What ſhall we hear of this?
2. A Segregation of the Turkiſh Fleet:
For do but ſtand upon the foaming ſhore,
The chidden Billow ſeems to pelt the clouds,
The wind-ſhak'd Surge, with high and monſtrous Main,
Seems to caſt water on the burning Bear,
And quench the Guards of th'ever fixed Pole:
I never like moleſtation view
On the enchafed Flood.
Mont. If that be the Turkiſh Fleet,
Be not inſhelter'd and embay'd, they are drown'd,
It is impoſſible to bear it out.

Enter a Gentleman.

3. News, Lads: our Wars are done:
The deſperate Tempeſt hath ſo bang'd the Turks,
That their deſignment halts. A noble Ship of Venice
Hath ſeen a grievous wrack and ſufferance
On moſt part of their Fleet.
Mont. How? Is this true?
3. The Ship is put in: A Veroneſſo, Michael Caſſio
Lieutenant of the warlike Moor, Othello,
Is come on ſhore: the Moor himſelf at Sea,
And is in full Commiſſion here for Cyprus.
Mont. I am glad on't:
'Tis a worthy Governour.
3. But this ſame Caſſio, though he ſpeak of comfort,
Touching the Turkiſh loſs, yet he looks ſadly,
And prays the Moor be ſafe; for they were parted
With foul and violent Tempeſt.
Mont. Pray heavens he be:
For I have ſerv'd him, and the man commands
Like a full Souldier. Let's to the Sea-ſide (hoa)
As well to ſee the Veſſel that comes in,
As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello,
Even till we make the Main and th' Erial blue,
And indiſtinct regard.
Gent. Come, let's do ſo;
For every minute is expectancy
Of our Arrivancy.

Enter Caſſio.

Caſ. Thanks you, the valiant of the warlike Iſle,
That ſo approve the Moor: Oh let the Heavens
Give him defence from the Elements,
For I have loſt him on a dangerous Sea.
Mont. Is he well ſhipp'd?
Caſ. His Bark is ſtoutly timber'd, and his Pilot
Of very expert and approv'd Allowance;
Therefore my hopes (not ſurfeited to death)
Stand in bold Cure.
Within. A Sail, a Sail, a Sail.
Caſ. What noiſe?
Gent. The Town is empty; on the brow oth' Sea
Stand ranks of People, and they cry, a Sail.
Caſ. My hopes do ſhape him for the Governour.
Gent. They do diſcharge their ſhot of courteſie,
Our friends at leaſt.
Caſ. I pray you, Sir, go forth,
And give us truth who 'tis that is arrived.
Gent. I ſhall. [Exit.
Mont. But, good Lieutenant, is your General wiv'd?
Caſ. Moſt fortunately, he hath atchiev'd a Maid
That Paragons deſcription, and wild Fame:
One that excels the quirks of blazoning Pens,
And in th' eſſential Veſture of Creation,
Do's tire the Ingeniver.

Enter Gentleman.

How now? who has put in?
Gent. 'Tis one Jago, Ancient to the General.
Caſ. Ha's had moſt favourable and happy ſpeed:
Tempeſts themſelves, high Seas, and howling winds,
The gutter'd Rocks and congregated Sands,
Traitors enſteep'd, to enclog the guiltleſs Keel,
As having ſenſe of Beauty do omit
Their mortal Natures, letting go ſafely by
The divine Deſdemona.
Mont. What is ſhe?
Caſ. She that I ſpake of:
Our great Captain's Captain,
Left in the Conduct of the bold Jago,
Whoſe footing here anticipates our thoughts,
A Sennights ſpeed. Great Jove, Othello guard,
And ſwell his Sail with thine own powerful breath,
That he may bleſs this Bay with his tall Ship,
Make loves quick pants in Deſdemona's arms,
Give renew'd fire to our extincteſt Spirits.

Enter Deſdemona, Jago, Roderigo, and Æmilia.

Oh behold,
The riches of the Ship is come on ſhore:
You men of Cyprus, let her have your knees.
Hail to thee, Lady: and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee, and on every hand
Enwheel thee round.
Def. I thank you, valiant Caſſio,
What tidings can you tell me of my Lord?
Caſ. He is not arriv'd, nor know I ought
But that he's well, and will be ſhortly here.
Def. Oh but I fear:
How loſt you company?
Caſ. The great contention of the Sea and Skies
Parted our Fellowſhip. But hark, a Sail.
Within. A Sail, a Sail.
Gent. They give this greeting to the Cittadel:
This likewiſe is a friend.
Caſ. See for the News:
Good Ancient, you are welcome. Welcome, Miſtreſs.
Let it not gall your patience (good Jago)
That I extend my Manners. 'Tis my breeding
That gives me this bold ſhew of Courteſie.
Jago. Sir, would ſhe give you ſo much of her lips,
As of her tongue ſhe oft beſtows of me,
You would have enough.
Def. Alas: ſhe has no ſpeech.
Jago. In faith, too much:
I find it ſtill, when I have leave to ſleep,
Marry before your Ladiſhip, I grant,
She puts her tongue a little in her heart,
And chides with thinking.
Æmil. You have little cauſe to ſay ſo.
Jago. Come on, come on: you are Pictures out of doors:
Bells in your Parlors: Wild-Cats in your Kitchens:
Saints in your injuries: Devils being offended:

Players

Players in your Huſwifery, and Huſwives in your Beds.

Deſ. Oh, fie upon thee, ſlanderer.

Iago. Nay, it is true: or elſe I am a Turk,
You riſe to play, and go to bed to work.

Æmil. You ſhall not write my praiſe.

Iago. No, let me not.

Deſ. What would'ſt write of me, if thou ſhould'ſt praiſe me?

Iago. Oh gentle Lady, do not put me to't,
For I am nothing, if not Critical.

Deſ. Come on, aſſay.
There's one gone to the Harbour.

Iago. I, Madam.

Deſ. I am not merry: but I do beguile
The thing I am, by ſeeming otherwiſe,
Come, how would'ſt thou praiſe me?

Iago. I am about it, but indeed my invention comes from my Pate, as Birdlime does from Freeze, it plucks out Brains and all. But my Muſe labours, and thus ſhe is delivered.

If ſhe be fair and wiſe: fairneſs and wit,
The one's for uſe, the other uſeth it.

Deſ. Well prais'd:
How if ſhe be black and witty?

Iago. If ſhe be black, and thereto have a wit,
She'll find a white that ſhall her blackneſs fit.

Deſ. Worſe and worſe.

Æmil. How if fair and fooliſh?

Iago. She never yet was fooliſh that was fair,
For even her folly helpt her to an heir.

Deſ. Theſe are old fond Paradoxes, to make Fools laugh ith' Alehouſe. What miſerable praiſe haſt thou for her that's foul and fooliſh?

Iago. There's none ſo foul and fooliſh thereunto,
But does foul pranks, which fair and wiſe ones do.

Deſ. Oh heavy ignorance: thou praiſeſt the worſt beſt. But what praiſe could'ſt thou beſtow on a deſerving woman indeed? One, that in the authority of her merit, did juſtly put on the vouch of very malice it ſelf.

Iago. She that was ever fair, and never proud,
Had tongue at will, and yet was never loud:
Never lackt gold, and yet went never gay,
Fled from her wiſh, and yet ſaid now I may.
She that being anger'd, her revenge being nigh,
Bad her wrong ſtay, and her diſpleaſure fly.
She that in wiſdom never was ſo frail
To change the Cod's Head for the Salmon's Tail:
She that could think, and ne're diſcloſe her mind,
See Suitors following, and not look behind:
She was a Wight, (if ever ſuch Wights were.)

Deſ. To do what?

Iago. To ſuckle Fools, and chronicle ſmall Beer.

Deſ. Oh moſt lame and impotent concluſion. Do not learn of him, Æmilia, though he be thy Husband. How ſay you (Caſſio) is he not a moſt profane and liberal Counſellor?

Caſ. He ſpeaks home (Madam) you may reliſh him more in the Souldier, than in the Scholar.

Iago. He takes her by the palm: I, well ſaid, whiſper. With as little a web as this, will I enſnare as great a Fly as Caſſio. I, ſmile upon her, do: I will give thee in thine own Courtſhip. You ſay true, 'tis ſo indeed. If ſuch tricks as theſe ſtrip you out of your Lieutenantry, it had been better you had not kiſs'd your three fingers ſo oft, which now again you are moſt apt to play the Sir in. Very good: well kiſs'd, and excellent Curteſie: 'tis ſo indeed. Yet again, your fingers to your lips? Would they were Clyſter-pipes for your ſake.
The Moore, I know his Trumpet.

Caſ. 'Tis truly ſo.

Deſ. Let's meet him, and receive him.

Caſ. Lo, where he come.

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Othel. O my fair Warriour.

Deſ. My dear Othello.

Othel. It gives me wonder, great as my content
To ſee you here before me.
Oh my ſouls joy:
If after every Tempeſt come ſuch calms,
May the winds blow, till they have waken'd death:
And let the labouring Bark climb hills of Seas
Olympus high: and duck again as low
As hell's from heaven. If it were now to dye,
'Twere now to be moſt happy. For I fear
My ſoul hath her content ſo abſolute,
That not another comfort like to this
Succeeds in unknown Fate.

Deſ. The heavens forbid
But that our Loves
And Comforts ſhould increaſe
Even as our days do grow.

Othel. Amen to that (ſweet Powers)
I cannot ſpeak enough of this content,
It ſtops me here: it is too much of joy,
And this and this the greateſt diſcords be
That e're our hearts ſhall make.

Iago. Oh you are well tun'd now: But I'll ſet down the Pegs that make this Muſick, as honeſt as I am.

Othel. Come, let us to the Caſtle.
News, (Friends) our wars are done:
The Turks are drown'd.
How do's my old acquaintance of this Iſle?
(Honey) you ſhall be well deſir'd in Cyprus,
I have found great love amongſt them. O my Sweet,
I prattle out of faſhion, and I dote
In mine own comforts. I prethee, good Iago,
Go to the Bay, and diſembark thy Coffers:
Bring thou the Maſter to the Cittadel,
He is a good one, and his worthineſs
Do's challenge much reſpect. Come, Deſdemona,
Once more well met at Cyprus.

[Exeunt Othello and Deſdemona.

Iago. Do you meet me preſently at the harbour. Come thither, if thou be'ſt valiant, (as they ſay, baſe men being in love, have then a Nobility in their Natures, more than is native to them) liſt me; the Lieutenant to night watches on the Court of Guard. Firſt, I muſt tell thee this: Deſdemona is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him? why, 'tis not poſſible.

Iago. Lay thy fingers thus: and let thy ſoul be inſtructed. Mark me with what violence ſhe lov'd the Moore, but for bragging, and telling her fantaſtical lies. To love him ſtill for prating, let not thy diſcreet heart think it. Her eye muſt be fed. And what delight ſhall ſhe have to look on the Devil? When the blood is made dull with the Act of Sport, there ſhould be a game to inflame it, and to give ſatiety a freſh appetite. Lovelineſs in favour, Sympathy in years, Manners, and Beauties: all which the Moore is defective in. Now for want of theſe requir'd Conveniences, her delicate tenderneſs will find it ſelf abus'd, begin to heave the gorge, diſreliſh and abhor the Moore, very Nature will inſtruct her in it, and compel her to ſome ſecond choice. Now, Sir, this granted (as it is a moſt pregnant and unforc'd poſition) who ſtands ſo eminent in the degree of this Fortune, as Caſſio do's: a Knave very voluble: no further conſcionable, than in putting on the meer form of Civil and humane ſeeming, for the better compaſs of his Salt, and moſt hidden looſe affection? Why none, why none? A ſlippery and ſubtle Knave, a finder of occaſion: that has an eye can ſtamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never preſent it ſelf. A Deviliſh Knave: beſides, the Knave is handſom, young: and hath all thoſe requiſites in him, that folly and green minds look after. A peſtilent compleat pleat Knave, and the woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her, ſhe's full of moſt bleſs'd condition.

Iago. Bleſs'd Figgs end. The Wine ſhe drinks is made of Grapes. If ſhe had been bleſs'd, ſhe would never have lov'd the Moore: Bleſs'd pudding. Didſt thou not ſee her paddle with the palm of his hand? Didſt not mark that?

Rod. Yes, that I did: But that was but courteſie.

Iago. Leachery by this hand: An Index, and obſcure Prologue to the Hiſtory of Luſt, and foul Thoughts. They met ſo near with their Lips, that their breaths embrac'd together. Villanous Thoughts, Rodorigo, when theſe mutabilities ſo marſhal the way, hard at hand comes the Maſter, and main exerciſe, th'incorporate concluſion: Piſh. But, Sir, be you rul'd by me. I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to night: For the command, I'll lay't upon you. Caſſio knows you not: I'll not be far from you. Do you find ſome occaſion to anger Caſſio, either by ſpeaking too loud, or tainting his diſcipline, or from what other courſe you pleaſe, which the time ſhall more favourably miniſter.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he's raſh, and very ſudden in Choler: and happily may ſtrike at you, provoke him that he may: For even out of that will I cauſe theſe of Cyprus to mutiny. Whoſe qualification ſhall come into no true taſte again, but by diſplanting of Caſſio. So ſhall you have a ſhorter journey to your deſires, by the means I ſhall then have to prefer them. And the impediment moſt profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our proſperity.

Rod. I will do this, if you can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the Cittadel. I muſt fetch his neceſſaries aſhore. Farewel.

Rod. Adieu. [Exit.

Iago. That Caſſio loves her, I do well believe't:
That ſhe loves him, 'tis apt, and of great credit.
The Moore (howbeit that I endure him not)
Is of a conſtant, loving, noble Nature,
And I dare think, he'll prove to Deſdemona,
A moſt dear Husband. Now I do love her too,
Not out of abſolute Luſt, (though peradventure
I ſtand accountant for as great a ſin)
But partly led to diet my Revenge,
For that I do ſuſpect the luſty Moor
Hath leapt into my ſeat. The thoughts whereof,
Doth (like a poyſonous Mineral) gnaw my Inwards:
And nothing can, or ſhall content my Soul
Till I am even'd with him, wife for wife:
Or failing ſo, yet that I put the Moor,
At leaſt into a Jealouſie ſo ſtrong,
That Judgment cannot cure. Which thing to doe,
If this poor Traſh of Venice, whom I trace
For his quick hunting, ſtand the putting on,
I'll have our Michael Caſſio on the hip,
Abuſe him to the Moor in the right garb
(For I fear Caſſio with my Night-Cap too)
Make the Moor thank me, love me and reward me,
For making him egregiouſly an Aſs,
And practiſing upon his peace and quiet,
Even to madneſs. 'Tis here: but yet confus'd,
Knaveries plain face, is never ſeen, 'till us'd. [Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello's Herald, with a Proclamation.

Herald. It is Othello's pleaſure, our Noble and Valiant General; That upon certain Tidings now arriv'd, importing the meer perdition of the Turkiſh Fleet, every man put himſelf into triumph. Some to dance, ſome to make Bone-fires, each man to what Sport and Revels his addition leads him. For Beſides theſe beneficial News, it is the celebration of his Nuptial. So much was his pleaſure ſhould be proclaimed. All Offices are open, and there is full liberty of Feaſting, from this preſent hour of five, 'till the Bell have toll'd eleven.
Bleſs the Iſle of Cyprus, and our Noble General Othello. [Exit.

Enter Othello, Deſdemona, Caſſio, and Attendants.

Othel. Good Michael, look you to the Guard to night.
Let's teach our ſelves that honourable ſtop,
Not to out-ſport diſcretion.

Caſ. Iago hath direction what to do.
But notwithſtaning with my perſonal eye,
Will I look to't.

Othel. Iago is moſt honeſt:
Michael, good night. To morrow with your earlieſt,
Let me have ſpeech with you. Come, my dear Love,
The purchace made, the fruits are to enſue,
That profit's yet to come 'tween me and you.
Good night. [Exit.

Enter Jago.

Caſ. Welcome, Iago; we muſt to the Watch.

Iago. Not this hour, Lieutenant: 'tis not yet ten o'th' Clock. Our General caſt us thus early for the love of his Deſdemona: Whom let us not therefore blame; he hath not yet made wanton the night with her: and ſhe is ſport for Jove.

Caſ. She's a moſt exquiſite Lady.

Iago. And I'll warrant her full of Game.

Caſ. Indeed ſhe's a moſt freſh and delicate creature.

Iago. What an eye ſhe has?
Methinks it ſounds a parley to provocation.

Caſ. An inviting eye:
And yet methinks right modeſt.

Iago. And when ſhe ſpeaks,
Is it not an Alarum to Love?

Caſ. She is indeed perfection.

Iago. Well: Happineſs to their ſheets: Come, Lieutenant, I have a ſtope of wine, and here without are a brace of Cyprus Gallants, that would fain have a meaſure to the health of black Othello.

Caſ. Not to night, good Iago: I have very poor, and unhappy Brains for drinking. I could well wiſh courteſie would invent ſome other cuſtom of entertainment.

Iago. Oh, they are our Friends: But one Cup I'll drink for you.

Caſſio. I have drunk but one Cup to night, and that was craftily qualified too: and behold what innovation it makes here. I am infortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakneſs with any more.

Iago. What, man? 'tis a night of Revels, the Gallants deſire it.

Caſ. Where are they?

Iago. Here, at the door: I pray you, call them in.

Caſ. I'll do't, but it diſlikes me.

Iago. If I can faſten but one Cup upon him,
With that which he hath drunk to night already,
He'll be as full of Quarrel, and Offence,
As my young Miſtriſs's Dog,
Now, my ſick Fool, Rodorigo,
Whom Love hath turn'd almoſt the wrong ſide out;
To Deſdemona hath to night Carouz'd,
Potations, pottle-deep; and he's to watch.
Three elſe of Cyprus, Noble ſwelling Spirits;
(That hold their honours in a wary diſtance,
The very Elements of this warlike Iſle)
Have I to night fluſter'd with flowing Cups,
And they watch too.
Now 'mongſt this flock of Drunkards,

And

And I to put our Caſſio in ſome Action
That may offend the Iſle. But here they come.

Enter Caſſio, Montano, and Gentlemen.

If conſequence do but approve my Dream,
My Boat ſails freely, both with wind and ſtream.
Caſ. 'Fore Heaven, they have given me a rowſe already.
Mon. Good Faith a little one: not paſt a Pint, as I am a Souldier.
Iago. Some Wine ho,

And let me the Cannakin clink, clink;
And let me the Cannakin clink,
A Souldier's a man: Oh, mans life's but a ſpan,
Why then let a Souldier drink.

Some Wine Boyes.
Caſ. 'Fore Heaven, an excellent Song.
Iago. I learn'd it in England: where indeed they are moſt potent in Potting. Your Dane, your German, and your ſwag-belly'd Hollander, (drink ho) are nothing to your Engliſh.
Caſſio. Is your Engliſh man ſo exquiſite in his drinking?
Iago. Why, he drinks you with facility, your Dane dead Drunk. He ſwears not to overthrow your Almain. He gives your Hollander a vomit, ere the next Pottle can be fill'd.
Caſ. To the health of our General.
Mon. I am for it, Lieutenant: and I'll do you Juſtice.
Iago. Oh ſweet England.

King Stephen was and-a worthy Peer,
His Breeches coſt him but a Crown,
He held them ſix pence all too dear,
With that he call'd the Taylor Lown.
He was a Wight of high Renown,
And thou art but of low degree:
'Tis pride that pulls the Country down,
And take thy awl'd Cloak about thee.

Some Wine ho.
Caſſio. Why this is a more exquiſite Song than the other.
Iago. Will you hear't again?
Caſ. No: for I hold him to be unworthy of his place, that do's thoſe things. Well: Heaven's above all: and there be Souls muſt be ſaved, and there be Souls muſt not be ſaved.
Iago. It's true, good Lieutenant.
Caſ. For mine own part, no offence to the General, nor any man of quality: I hope to be ſaved.
Iago. And ſo do I too, Lieutenant.
Caſſio. I: (but by your leave) not before me. The Lieutenant is to be ſaved before the Ancient. Lets have no more of this: lets to our affairs. Forgive our ſins: Gentlemen, lets look to our buſineſs. Do not think, Gentlemen, I am Drunk: this is my Ancient, this is my right hand, and this is my left. I am not drunk now: I can ſtand well enough, and I ſpeak well enough.
Gent. Excellent well.
Caſ. Why very well then: you muſt not think then, that I am drunk.
Montan. To th' Platform (Maſters) come, lets ſet the Watch.
Iago. You ſee this Fellow that is gone before,
He is a Souldier, fit to ſtand by Ceſar,
And give direction. And do but ſee his Vice,
'Tis to his Virtues a juſt Equinox,
The one as long as th' other. 'Tis pity of him;
I fear the truſt Othello puts him in,
On ſome odd time of his infirmity
Will ſhake this Iſland.
Mont. But is he often thus.
Iago. 'Tis evermore his prologue to his ſleep,
He'll watch the Horologue a double Set,
If drink rock not his Cradle.
Mont. It were well
The General were put in mind of it:
Perhaps he ſees it not, or his good nature
Prizes the Virtue that appears in Caſſio,
And looks not on his evils: is not this true?

Enter Rodorigo.

Iago. How now, Rodorigo?
I pray you after the Lieutenant, go.
Mont. And 'tis great pity that the Noble Moore
Sould hazard ſuch a place, as his own Second,
With one ingraft Infirmity,
It were an honeſt Action, to ſay ſo
To the Moore.
Iago. Not I, for this fair Iſland,
I do love Caſſio well: and would do much
To cure him of this evil. But hark, what noiſe?

Enter Caſſio purſuing Rodorigo.

Caſ. You Rogue: you Raſcal.
Mon. What's the matter, Lieutenant?
Caſ. A Knave teach me my duty? I'll beat the Knave into a Twiggen Bottle.
Rod. Beat me.
Caſ. Doſt thou prate, Rogue?
Mon. Nay, good Lieutenant:
I pray you, Sir, hold your hand.
Caſ. Let me go (Sir)
Or I'll know you o're the Mazzard.
Mon. Come, come, you're Drunk.
Caſſio. Drunk?
Iago. Away I ſay: go out and cry a Mutiny,
Nay, good Lieutenant. Alas, Gentlemen:
Help ho, Lieutenant. Sir Montano:
Help Maſters. Here's a goodly Watch indeed.
VVho's that which rings the Bell: Diablo, ho.
The Town will riſe. Fie, fie, Lieutenant,
You'll be aſham'd for ever.

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth. VVhat is the matter here?
Mon. I bleed ſtill, I am hurt, but not to th' Death.
Oth. Hold for your lives.
Iago. Hold ho: Lieutenant, Sir Montano, Gentlemen:
Have you forgot all place of ſenſe and duty?
Hold. The General ſpeaks to you: hold for ſhame.
Oth. VVhy how now ho? From whence ariſeth this?
Are we turn'd Turks? and to our ſelves do that VVhich Heaven hath forbid the Ottamites.
For Chriſtian ſhame, put by this barbarous brawl:
He that ſtirs next to carve for his own rage,
Holds his Soul light: He dies upon his Motion.
Silence that dreadful Bell, it frights the Iſle
From her propriety. VVhat is the matter, Maſters.
Honeſt Iago, that looks dead with grieving,
Speak: who began this? On thy love I charge thee?
Iago. I do not know: Friends all, but now, even now
In Quarter, and in terms like Bride and Groom
Deveſting them for Bed: and then, but now:
(As if ſome Planet had unwitted men)
Sword out, and tilting one at others Breaſts,
In oppoſition bloody. I cannot ſpeak
Any beginning to this peeviſh odds.
And would in Action glorious, I had loſt
Thoſe legs that brought me to a part of it.
Oth. How comes it (Michael) you are thus forgot?
Caſ. I pray you pardon me, I cannot ſpeak.

Othel. Worthy Montano, you were wont to be civil:
The gravity and ſtilneſs of your youth,
The world hath noted. And your name is great
In mouths of wiſeſt cenſure. What's the matter,
That you unlace your reputation thus,
And ſpend your rich opinion, for the name
Of a Night-brawler? give me anſwer to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger,
Your Officer, Iago, can inform you,
While I ſpare ſpeech, which ſomething now offends me.
Of all that I do know, nor know I ought
By me; that's ſaid or done amiſs this night,
Unleſs Self-charity be ſometimes a vice,
And to defend our ſelves it be a ſin,
When violence aſſails us.

Othel. Now, by Heaven,
My blood begins my ſafer Guides to rule,
And paſſion (having my beſt judgment collied)
Aſſays to lead the way. If I once ſtir,
Or do but lift this Arm, the beſt of you
Shall ſink in my Rebuke. Give me to know
How this foul Rout began: Who ſet it on,
And he that is approv'd in this offence,
Though he had twinn'd with me, both at a birth,
Shall looſe me. What in a Town of War,
Yet wild, the peoples hearts brim-full of fear,
To manage private, and domeſtick Quarrel?
In night, and on the Court and Guard of ſafety?
'Tis monſtrous: Iago, who began't?

Mon. If partially affin'd, or league in office,
Thou doſt deliver more, or leſs than truth,
Thou art no Souldier.

Iago. Touch me not ſo near,
I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth,
Than it ſhould do offence to Michael Caſſio.
Yet I perſwade my ſelf, to ſpeak ſo the truth
Shall nothing wrong him. This it is, General:
Montano and my ſelf being in ſpeech,
There comes a Fellow, crying out for help,
And Caſſio following him with determin'd Sword,
To execute upon him. Sir, This Gentleman
Steps into Caſſio, and intreats his pauſe:
My ſelf the crying fellow did purſue,
Leſt by his clamour (as it ſo fell out)
The Town might fall in fright. He, (ſwift of foot)
Out-ran my purpoſe: and I return'd the rather
For that I heard the clink, and fall of Swords,
And Caſſio, high in oath: Which till to night
I ne'er might ſay before. When I came back
(For this was brief) I found them cloſe together
At blow, and thruſt, even as again they were
When you your ſelf did part them:
More of this matter cannot I report,
But men are men: The beſt ſometimes forget,
Though Caſſio did ſome little wrong to him,
As men in rage, ſtrike thoſe that wiſh them beſt,
Yet ſurely Caſſio, I believe, receiv'd
From him that fled, ſome ſtrange indignity,
Which Patience could not paſs.

Othel. I know, Iago,
Thy honeſty and love doth mince this matter,
Making it light to Caſſio: Caſſio, I love thee,
But never more be Officer of mine.

Enter Deſdemona attended.

Look if my gentle love be not rais'd up:
I'll make thee an example.

Deſ. What's the matter (Dear?)

Othel. All's well, Sweeting:
Come, away to bed. Sir, for your hurts,
My Self will be your Surgeon. Lead him off:
Iago, look with care about the Town,
And ſilence thoſe whom this vile brawl diſtracted.
Come, Deſdemona, 'tis the Souldiers life,
To have their Balmy ſlumbers wak'd with ſtrife. [Exit.

Iago. What, are you hurt, Lieutenant?

Caſ. I, paſt all Surgery.

Iago. Marry, Heaven forbid.

Caſ. Reputation, Reputation, Reputation: Oh I have loſt my Reputation! I have loſt the immortal part of my ſelf, and what remains is beſtial. My Reputation, Iago, my Reputation.

Iago. As I am an honeſt man, I had thought you had received ſome bodily wound; there is more ſence in that than in Reputation. Reputation is an idle, and moſt falſe impoſition; oft got without merit, and loſt without deſerving. You have loſt no Reputation at all, unleſs you repute your ſelf ſuch a looſer. What man--there are more ways to recover the General again. You are but now caſt in his mood, (a puniſhment more in policy, than in malice) even ſo as one would beat his offenceleſs dog to affright an imperious Lyon. Sue to him again, and he's yours.

Caſ. I will rather ſue to be deſpis'd, than to deceive ſo good a Commander, with ſo ſlight, ſo drunken, and ſo indiſcreet an Officer. Drunk? and ſpeak, Parrot? And ſquabble? Swagger? Swear? And diſcourſe Fuſtian with ones own ſhadow? O thou inviſible Spirit of Wine! if thou haſt no name to be known by, let us call thee Devil.

Iago. What was he that you follow'd with your Sword? what had he done to you?

Caſ. I know not.

Iago. Is't poſſible?

Caſ. I remember a Maſs of things, but nothing diſtinctly: A Quarrel, but nothing wherefore. Oh, that men ſhould put an Enemy in their mouths, to ſteal away their Brains? That we ſhould with Joy pleaſance, revel and applauſe, transform our ſelves into Beaſts.

Iago. Why, But you are now well enough: How came you thus recovered?

Caſ. It hath pleas'd the Devil, Drunkenneſs, to give place to the Devil, Wrath; one unperfectneſs ſhews me another, to make me frankly deſpiſe my ſelf.

Iago. Come, you are too ſevere a Moraller. As the Time, the Place, and the condition of this Countrey ſtands, I could heartily wiſh this had not befaln: But ſince it is, as it is, mend it for your own good.

Caſ. I will ask him for my place again, he ſhall tell me, I am a Drunkard: Had I as many mouths as Hydra, ſuch an anſwer would ſtop them all. To be now a ſenſible man, by and by a Fool, and preſently a Beaſt. Oh ſtrange! Every inordinate Cup is unbleſs'd, and the Ingredient is a Devil.

Iago. Come, come, good Wine is a good familiar Creature, if it be well us'd: Exclaim no more againſt it. And, good Lieutenant, I think, you think I love you.

Caſ. I have well approv'd it, Sir, I drunk?

Iago. You, or any man living, may be drunk at a time, man. I tell you what you ſhall do: Our General's Wife is now the General. I may ſay ſo, in this reſpect, for that he hath devoted, and given up himſelf to the contemplation, mark: and Devotement of her Parts and Graces. Confeſs your ſelf freely to her: Importue her help, to put you in your place again. She is of ſo free, ſo kind, ſo apt, ſo bleſſed a diſpoſition, ſhe holds it a vice in her goodneſs, not to do more than ſhe is requeſted. This broken joint between you and her Husband, intreat her to ſplinter. And my Fortunes againſt any lay worth naming, this crack of your Love, ſhall grow ſtronger than it was before.

Caſ. You adviſe me well.

Iago. I proteſt in the ſincerity of Love, and honeſt kindneſs.

Caſsio. I think it freely: and betimes in the morning, I will beſeech the virtuous Deſdemona to undertake for me.

me: I am desperate of my Fortunes if they check me.

Iago. You are in the right: Good night, Lieutenant, I must to the Watch.

Cas. Good night, honest Iago. [Exit Cassio.

Iago. And what's he then,
That says I play the Villain?
When this advice is free I give, and honest,
Probal to thinking, and indeed the course
To win the Moor again.
For 'tis most easie,
Th'inclining Desdemona to subdue
In any honest Suit. She's fram'd as fruitful
As the free Elements. And then for her
To win the Moor, were to renounce his Baptism,
All seals and Symbols of redeemed sin:
His Soul is so enfetter'd to her Love,
That she may make, unmake, do what she list:
Even as her appetite shall play the god
With his weak Function. How I am then a Villain,
To counsel Cassio to this parallel course.
Directly to his good? Divinity of Hell,
When Devils will their blackest sins put on,
They do suggest at first with heavenly shews,
As I do now. For while this honest Fool
Plies Desdemona, to repair his Fortune,
And she for him, pleads strongly to the Moor,
I'll pour this Pestilence into his ear:
That she repeals him, for her bodies Lust,
And by how much she strives to do him good,
She shall undoe her Credit with the Moor.
So will I turn her virtue into pitch,
And out of her own goodness make the Net,
That shall enmash them all.
How now, Rodorigo?

Enter Rodorigo.

Rodorigo. I do follow here in the Chace, not like a Hound that hunts, but one that fills up the Cry. My money is almost spent; I have been to night exceedingly well cudgell'd: and I think the issue will be, I shall have so much experience for my pains; and so with no money at all, and a little more wit, return again to Venice.

Iago. How poor are they that have not Patience?
What wound did ever heal but by degrees?
Thou know'st we work by wit, and not by witchcraft;
And wit depends on dilatory time:
Dost not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee,
And thou by that small hurt hast cashier'd Cassio:
Though other things grow fair against the Sun,
Yet fruits that blossome first, will first be ripe:
Content thy self a while. In troth 'tis Morning;
Pleasure and action make the hours seem short.
Retire thee: Go where thou art Billeted:
Away, I say, thou shalt know more hereafter:
Nay, get thee gone. [Exit. Rodorigo.
Two things are to be done:
My Wife must move for Cassio to her Mistress:
I'll set her on my self a while, to draw the Moor apart,
And bring him jump, when he may Cassio find
Soliciting his Wife: I, t hat's the way:
Dull not Device, by coldness and delay. [Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Cassio, Musicians, and Clown.

Cas. Masters, play here, I will content your pains,
Something that's brief: and bid good morrow, General.

Clo. Why, Masters, have your Instruments been in Naples, that they speak i'th' nose thus?

Mus. How, Sir, how?

Clown. Are these, I pray you, wind Instruments?

Mus. I, marry are they, Sir.

Clown. Oh, thereby hangs a Tale.

Mus. Whereby hangs a Tale, Sir?

Clown. Marry, Sir, by many a wind Instrument that I know. But, Masters, here's money for you: And the General so likes your Musick, that he desires you for loves sake to make no noise with it.

Mus. Well, Sir, we will not.

Clown. If you have any Musick that may not be heard, too't again. But (as they say) to hear Musick, the General does not greatly care.

Mus. VVe have none such, Sir.

Clown. Then put up your Pipes in your Bag, for I'll away. Go, vanish into air, away. [Exit Mus.

Cas. Dost thou hear me, mine honest Friend?

Clown. No, I hear not your honest Friend: I hear you.

Cas. Prethee, keep up thy Quillets, there's a poor piece of Gold for thee: If the Gentlewoman that attends the General be stirring, tell her, there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech. Wilt thou do this?

Clown. She is stirring, Sir, if she will stir hither, I shall seem to notifie unto her. [Exit Clown.

Enter Iago.

In happy time, Iago.

Iago. You have not been a bed then?

Cas. Why, no: The day had broke before we parted. I have made bold (Iago) to send in to your wife: My suit to her is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona Procure me some access.

Iago. I'll send her to you presently:
And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor
Out of the way, that your converse and business
May be more free. [Exit.

Cas. I humbly thank you for't. I never knew
A Florentine more kind and honest.

Enter Æmilia.

Æmil. Good morrow (good Lieutenant) I am sorry
For your displeasure; but all will sure be well.
The General and his Wife are talking of it.
And she speaks for you stoutly. The Moor replies,
That he you hurt is of great fame in Cyprus,
And great Affinity: and that in wholsom wisdom
He might not but refuse you. But he protests he loves you,
And needs no other Suitor but his likings,
To bring you in again.

Cas. Yet, I beseech you,
If you think fit, or that it may be done,
Give me advantage of some brief Discourse
With Desdemon alone.

Æmil. Pray, come in:
I will bestow you where you shall have time
To speak your bosom freely.

Cas. I am much bound to you. [Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Gentlemen.

Othel. These Letters give (Iago) to the Pilot,
And by him do my Duties to the Senate:
That done, I will be walking on the Works,
Repair there to me.

Iago. Well, my good Lord, I'll do't.

Othel. This Fortification (Gentlemen) shall we see't?

Gent. We'll wait upon your Lordship. [Exeunt.

Scena

Scena Tertia.

Enter Deſdemona, Caſſio, and Æmilia.

Deſ. Be thou aſſur'd (good Caſſio) I will do
All my abilities in thy behalf.
Æmil. Good Madam, do:
I warrant it grieves my Husband,
As if the cauſe were his.
Deſ. Oh that's an honeſt Fellow: do not doubt, Caſſio,
But I will have my Lord and you again
As friendly as you were.
Caſſio. Bounteous Madam,
Whatever ſhall become of Michael Caſſio,
He's never any thing but your true Servant.
Deſ. I know't: I thank you: you do love my Lord:
You have known him long, and be you well aſſur'd,
He ſhall in ſtrangeneſs ſtand no farther off,
Than in a politick diſtance.
Caſſio. I, but Lady,
That policy may either laſt ſo long,
Or feed upon ſuch nice and waterish diet,
Or breed it ſelf ſo out of Circumſtances,
That I being abſent, and my place ſupply'd,
My General will forget my Love and Service.
Deſ. Do not doubt that: before Æmilia here,
I give thee warrant of thy place. Aſſure thee,
If I do vow a friendſhip, I'll perform it
To the laſt Article. My Lord ſhall never reſt,
I'll watch him tame, and talk him out of patience;
His Bed ſhall ſeem a School, his Boord a Shrift,
I'll intermingle every thing he do's
With Caſſio's ſuit: Therefore be merry, Caſſio,
For thy Sollicitor ſhall rather die,
Than give thy Cauſe away.

Enter Othello and Jago.

Æmil. Madam, here comes my Lord.
Caſſio. Madam, I'll take my leave.
Deſ. Why ſtay, and hear me ſpeak.
Caſ. Madam, not now: I am very ill at eaſe.
Unfit for mine own purpoſes.
Deſ. Well, do your diſcretion. [Exit Caſſio.
Jago. Hah? I like not that.
Othel. What doſt thou ſay?
Jago. Nothing, my Lord; or if——I know not what.
Othel. Was not that Caſſio parted from my wife?
Jago. Caſſio, my Lord? No ſure, I cannot think it,
That he would ſteal away ſo guilty-like,
Seeing you coming.
Othel. I do believe 'twas he.
Deſ. How now, my Lord?
I have been talking with a Suitor here,
A man that languiſhes in your diſpleaſure.
Othel. Who is't you mean?
Deſ. Why your Lieutenant Caſſio. Good my Lord,
If I have any grace, or power to move you,
His preſent reconciliation take.
For if he be not one that truly loves you,
That errs in ignorance, and not in cunning,
I have no judgment in an honeſt face.
I prethee call him back.
Othel. Went he hence now?
Deſ. I, Sooth; ſo humbled,
That he hath left part of his grief with me
To ſuffer with him. Good Love, call him back.
Othel. Not now (ſweet Deſdemona) ſome other time.
Deſ. But ſhal't be ſhortly?
Othel. The ſooner (ſweet) for you.
Deſ. Shal't be to night, at Supper?
Othel. No, not to night.
Deſ. To morrow Dinner then?
Othel. I ſhall not dine at home:
I meet the Captains at the Cittadel.
Deſ. Why then to morrow night, on Tueſday morn,
On Tueſday noon, or night; on Wedneſday morn.
I prethee name the time, but let it not Exceed three days. In faith he's penitent:
And yet his Treſpaſs, in our common reaſon
(Save that they ſay the wars muſt make example)
Out of her beſt, is not almoſt a fault
T'incur a private check. When ſhall he come?
Tell me, Othello. I wonder in my Soul
What you would ask me, that I would deny,
Or ſtand ſo mam'ring on? What? Michael Caſſio,
That came a wooing with you? and ſo many a time
(When I have ſpoke of you diſpraiſingly)
Hath tane your part, to have ſo much to do
To bring him in? Truſt me, I could do much.
Othel. Prethee no more: Let him come when he will:
I will deny thee nothing.
Deſ. Why, this is not a Boon:
'Tis as I ſhould entreat you wear your Gloves,
Or feed on nouriſhing Diſhes, or keep you warm,
Or ſue to you, to do a peculiar profit
To your perſon. Nay, when I have ſuit,
Wherein I mean to touch your Love indeed,
It ſhall be full of poize, and difficult weight,
And fearful to be granted.
Othel. I will deny thee nothing.
Whereon, I do beſeech thee, grant me this,
To leave me but a little to my ſelf.
Deſ. Shall I deny you? no: Farewel, my Lord.
Oth. Farewel, my Deſdemona, I'll come to thee ſtraight.
Deſ. Æmilia, come; be as your Fancies teach you:
Whate're you be, I am obedient. [Exit.
Othel. Excellent wretch: Perdition catch my Soul,
But I do love thee: and when I love thee not,
Chaos is come again.
Jago. My Noble Lord.
Othel. What doſt thou ſay, Jago?
Jago. Did Michael Caſsio
When you woo'd my Lady, know of your love?
Othel. He did, from firſt to laſt:
Why doſt thou ask?
Jago. But for a ſatisfaction of my Thought,
No further harm.
Othel. Why of thy thought, Jago?
Jago. I did not think he had been acquainted with it.
Othel. O yes, and went between us very oft.
Jago. Indeed?
Othel. Indeed? I indeed. Diſcern'ſt thou ought in that?
Is he not honeſt?
Jago. Honeſt, my Lord?
Othel. Honeſt? I, honeſt.
Jago. My Lord, for ought I know.
Othel. What doſt thou think?
Jago. Think, my Lord?
Othel. Think, my Lord? Alas, thou eccho'ſt me;
As if there ſome Monſter in thy thought
Too hideous to be ſhewn. Thou doſt mean ſomething:
I heard thee ſay even now, thou lik'ſt not that,
When Caſsio left my wife. What did'ſt not like?
And when I told thee, he was of my Counſel,
Of my whole courſe of wooing; thou cried'ſt, Indeed?
And did'ſt contract and purſe thy brow together,
As if thou then hadſt ſhut up in thy brain
Some horrible conceit, if thou doſt love me
Shew me thy thought.
Jago. My Lord, you know I love you.
Othel. I think thou doſt:
For I know thour't full of Love and Honeſty,
And weigh'ſt thy words before thou giv'ſt them breath,
Therefore theſe ſtops of thine fright me the more:
For ſuch things in a falſe diſloyal Knave

Are tricks of Cuſtom: but in a man that's juſt,
They're cold dilations working from the heart,
That paſſion cannot rule.
Iago. For Michael Caſſio,
I dare be ſworn, I think that he is honeſt.
Othel. I think ſo too.
Iago. Men ſhould be what they ſeem,
Or thoſe that be not, would they might ſeem none.
Othel. Certain, men ſhould be what they ſeem.
Iago. Why, then I think Caſſio's an honeſt man.
Othel. Nay, yet there's more in this?
I pray thee ſpeak to me as to thy thinkings,
As thou doſt ruminate, and give thy worſt of thoughts,
The worſt of words.
Iago. Good, my Lord, pardon me.
Though I am bound to every Act of duty,
I am not bound to that: All Slaves are free:
Utter my thoughts? Why ſay they are vild and falſe?
As, where's that Palace, whereinto foul things
Sometimes intrude not? Who has that breaſt ſo pure,
Wherein uncleanly apprehenſions
Keep Leets, and Law-days, and in Seſſions ſit
With meditations lawful?
Othel. Thou doſt conſpire againſt thy friend (Iago)
If thou but think'ſt him wrong'd, and mak'ſt his ear
A Stranger to thy thoughts.
Iago. I do beſeech you,
Though I perchance am vicious in my gueſs
(As I confeſs it is my natures plague
To ſpie into abuſes, and of my Jealouſie
Shapes faults that are not) that your wiſdom
From one, that ſo imperfectly conceits,
Would take no notice, nor build your ſelf a trouble
Out of his ſcattering, and unſure obſervance:
It were not for your quiet, nor your good,
Nor for my manhood, honeſty and wiſdom,
To let you know my thoughts.
Othel. What doſt thou mean?
Iago. Good name in man and woman (dear my Lord)
Is the immediate Jewel of their Souls;
Who ſteals my purſe ſteals traſh:
'Tis ſomething, nothing;
'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been ſlave to thouſands:
But he that filches from me my good name,
Robs me of that, which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.
Othel. I'll know thy thoughts.
Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand,
Nor ſhall not, whil'ſt 'tis in my cuſtody.
Othel. Ha!
Iago. Oh, beware, my Lord, of Jealouſie,
It is the green-ey'd Monſter, which doth mock
The meat it feeds on. That Cuckold lives in bliſs,
Who, certain of his Fate, loves not his wronger:
But Oh, what damned minutes tells he o're,
Who dotes, yet doubts: ſuſpects, yet ſoundly loves?
Othel. O miſery!
Iago. Poor, and content, is rich, and rich enough,
But riches fineleſs, is as poor as VVinter,
To him that ever fears he ſhall be poor:
Good Heaven, the Souls of all my Tribe defend
From Jealouſie.
Othel. Why? VVhy is this?
Think'ſt thou I'ld make a Life of Jealouſie?
To follow ſtill the changes of the Moon,
With freſh ſuſpicions? No: To be once in doubt,
Is to be reſolv'd: Exchange me for a Goat,
When I ſhall turn the buſineſs of my Soul
To ſuch exufflicated, and blowed Surmiſes,
Matching the inference. 'Tis not to make me Jealous,
To ſay my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of ſpeech, Sings, Plays, and Dances:
Where Virtue is, theſe are moſt virtuous.
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The ſmalleſt fear, or doubt of her revolt,
For ſhe had eyes, and choſe me. No, Iago,
I'll ſee before I doubt; when I doubt, prove;
And on the proof there is no more but this,
Away at once with Love, or Jealouſie.
Iago. I am glad of this: for now I ſhall have reaſon
To ſhew the Love and Duty that I bear you
With franker Spirit. Therefore (as I am bound)
Receive it from me. I ſpeak not yet of proof:
Look to your Wife, obſerve her well with Caſſio,
Wear your eyes, thus: Not Jealous, nor Secure:
I would not have your free, and Noble Nature,
Out of Self-bounty be abus'd, look to't:
I know our Country diſpoſition well:
In Venice, they do let Heaven ſee the pranks
They dare not ſhew their Husbands.
Their beſt Conſcience
Is not to leave't undone, but kept unknown.
Othel. Doſt thou ſay ſo?
Iago. She did deceive her Father, marrying you,
And when ſhe ſeem'd to ſhake, and fear your looks,
She lov'd them moſt.
Othel. And ſo ſhe did.
Iago. Why, go to then:
She that ſo young could give out ſuch a Seeming
To ſeal her Father's Eyes up, cloſe as Oak,
He thought 'twas Witchcraft.
But I am much to blame:
I humbly do beſeech you of your pardon
For too much loving you.
Othel. I am bound to thee for ever.
Iago. I ſee this hath a little daſh'd your Spirits:
Othel. Not a Jot, not a Jot.
Iago. Truſt me, I fear it has:
I hope you will conſider, what is ſpoke,
Comes from my Love.
But I do ſee y'are mov'd:
I am to pray you, not to ſtrain my ſpeech
To groſſer iſſues, nor to larger reach,
Than to Suſpicion.
Othel. I will not.
Iago. Should you do ſo (my Lord)
My ſpeech ſhould fall into ſuch vild ſucceſs,
Which my thoughts aim'd not.
Caſſio's my worthy friend:
My Lord, I ſee y'are mov'd:
Othel. No, not much mov'd:
I do not think but Deſdemona's honeſt.
Iago. Long live ſhe ſo;
And long live you to think ſo.
Othel. And yet how Nature erring from it ſelf——
Iago. I, there's the point:
As (to be bold with you)
Not to affect many propoſed Matches
Of her own Clime, Complexion, and Degree,
Whereto we ſee in all things, Nature tends:
Foh, one may ſmell in ſuch, a will moſt rank,
Foul diſproportions, thoughts unnatural.
But (pardon me) I do not in poſition
Diſtinctly ſpeak of her, though I may fear
Her will, recoyling to her better Judgment,
May fall to match you with her Country Forms,
And happily repent.
Othel. Farewel, farewel:
If more thou doſt perceive, let me know more:
Set on thy wife to obſerve.
Leave me, Iago.
Iago. My Lord, I take my leave.
Othel. Why did I marry?
This honeſt Creature (doubtleſs)
Sees, and knows more, much more than he unfolds.
Iago. My Lord, I would I might intreat your Honour
To ſcan this thing no farther: Leave it to time,
Although 'tis fit that Caſſio have his place;

For ſure he fil's it up with great ability;
Yet if you pleaſe to put him off a while,
You ſhall by that perceive him, and his means:
Note, if your Lady ſtrain his Entertainment
With any ſtrong, or vehement importunity,
Much will be ſeen in that: In the mean time,
Let me be thought too buſie in my fears,
(As worthy cauſe I have to fear I am)
And hold her free, I do beſeech your Honour:
Othel. Fear not my Government.
Jago. I once more take my leave.
Othel. This Fellow's of exceeding honeſty,
And knows all Quantities with a learn'd Spirit
Of humane dealings. If I do prove her Haggard,
Though that her Jeſſes were my dear heart-ſtrings,
I'ld whiſtle her off, and let her down the wind
To prey at Fortune. Haply, for I am black,
And have not thoſe ſoft parts of Converſation,
That Chamberers have: Or for I am declin'd
Into the vale of years (yet that's not much)
She's gone. I am abus'd, and my relief
Muſt be to loath her. Oh Curſe of Marriage!
That we can call theſe delicate Creatures ours,
And not their Appetites? I had rather be a Toad,
And live upon the Vapour of a Dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love,
For others uſes. Yet 'tis the plague to Great-ones,
Prerogativ'd are they leſs than the Baſe;
'Tis deſtiny unſhunnable like death:
Even then, this forked plague is fated to us,
When we do quicken. Look where ſhe comes:

Enter Deſdemona and Æmilia.

If ſhe be falſe, Heav'n mock'd it ſelf:
I'll not believ't.
Deſ. How now, my dear Othello?
Your Dinner, and the generous Iſlanders,
By you invited, do attend your preſence.
Othel. I am to blame.
Deſ. Why do you ſpeak ſo faintly?
Are you not well?
Othel. I have a pain upon my Forehead here.
Deſ. Why that's with watching, 'twill away again.
Let me but bind it hard, within this hour
It will be well.
Othel. Your Napkin is too little:
Let it alone: Come, I'll go in with you. [Exeunt.
Deſ. I am very ſorry that you are not well.
Æmil. I am glad I have found this Napkin:
This was her firſt remembrance from the Moor,
My wayward Husband hath a hundred times
Woo'd me to ſteal it. But ſhe ſo loves the Token,
(For he conjur'd her, ſhe ſhould ever keep it)
That ſhe reſerves it ever more about her,
To kiſs and talk to. I'll have the work tane out,
And giv't Jago: what he will do with it,
Heaven knows, not I:
I nothing, but to pleaſe his Fantaſie.

Enter Jago.

Jago. How now? What do you here alone?
Æmil. Do not you chide: I have a thing for you.
Jago. You have a thing for me?
It is a common thing——
Æmil. Hah?
Jago. To have a fooliſh wife.
Æmil. Oh, is that all? what will you give me now
For that ſame Handkerchief?
Jago. What Handkerchief?
Æmil. What Handkerchief?
Why, that the Moor firſt gave to Deſdemona,
That which ſo often you did bid me ſteal.
Jago. Haſt ſtollen it from her?
Æmil. No: But ſhe let it drop by negligence,
And to th' advantage, I being here, took't up:
Look, here 'tis
Jago. A good wench, give it me.
Æmil. What will you do with't, you have been ſo earneſt to have me filch it?
Jago. Why, what is that to you?
Æmil. If it be not for ſome purpoſe of import,
Giv't me again. Poor Lady, ſhe'll run mad,
When ſhe ſhall lack it.
Jago. Be not acknown on't:
I have uſe for it. Go, leave me, [Exit Æmil.
I will in Caſſio's Lodging looſe this Napkin,
And let him find it. Trifles light as air
Are to the jealous, confirmations ſtrong,
As proofs of holy Writ. This may do ſomething.
The Moor already changes with my poyſons:
Dangerous conceits are in their natures poyſons,
Which at the firſt are ſcarce found to diſtaſte:
But with a little act upon the blood,
Burn like the Mines of Sulphur. I did ſay ſo.

Enter Othello.

Look, where he comes: Not Poppy, Mandragora,
Nor all the drowſie Syrups of the world,
Shall ever medicine thee to that ſweet ſleep,
Which thou ow'd'ſt yeſterday.
Othel. Ha, ha, falſe to me?
Jago. Why, how now, General? no more of that.
Othel. Avant, be gone: Thou haſt ſet me on the Rack:
I ſwear 'tis better to be much abus'd,
Than but to know a little.
Jago. How now, my Lord?
Othel. What ſcent had I, in her ſtoln hours of Luſt?
I ſaw it not, thought it not: it harm'd not me:
I ſlept the next night well, fed well, was free, and merry.
I found not Caſſio's kiſſes on her lips:
He that is robb'd, not wanting what is ſtoln,
Let him not know't, and he's not robb'd at all.
Jago. I am ſorry to hear this.
Othel. I had been happy if the general Camp,
Pioneers and all, had taſted her ſweet Body,
So I had nothing known. Oh now, for ever
Farewel the tranquill mind; Farewel, Content;
Farewel the plumed Troops, and the big Wars,
That make Ambition virtue! Oh farewel,
Farewel the neighing Steed, and the ſhrill Trump,
The Spirit-ſtirring Drum, th'Ear-piercing Fife,
The Royal Banner, and all Quality,
Pride, Pomp, and Circumſtance of glorious War:
And O you mortal Engines, whoſe rude throats
Th'immortal Jove's dread Clamours counterfeit,
Farewel: Othello's Occupation's gone.
Jago. Is't poſſible, my Lord?
Othel. Villain, be ſure thou prove my Love a Whore;
Be ſure of it: Give me the Ocular Proof,
Or by the worth of mine eternal Soul,
Thou hadſt been better have been born a Dog,
Than anſwer my wak'd wrath.
Jago. Is't come to this?
Othel. Make me to ſee't, or (at the leaſt) ſo prove it,
That the probation bear no Hindge, nor Loop,
To hang a doubt on: Or woe upon thy Life.
Jago. My Noble Lord.
Othel. If thou doſt ſlander her, and torture me,
Never pray more: Abandon all remorſe
On horrors head, horrors accumulate,
Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth amaz'd;
For nothing canſt thou to damnation add,
Greater than that.
Jago. O Grace! O Heaven forgive me!
Are you a man? Have you a Soul? Or Senſe?

God b'w' you: take mine Office. Oh wretched Fool,
That lov'ſt to make thine honeſty a Vice!
Oh monſtrous World! Take note, take note (O World)
To be direct and honeſt, is not ſafe.
I thank you for this profit, and from hence
I'll love no Friend, ſith love breeds ſuch offence.
Oth. Nay ſtay: thou ſhouldſt be honeſt.
Iago. I ſhould be wiſe, for honeſty's a Fool,
And loſes that it works for.
Oth. By the World,
I think my Wife is honeſt, and think ſhe is not:
I think that thou art juſt, and think thou art not:
I'll have ſome proof. My name that was as freſh
As Dians Viſage, is now begrim'd and black
As mine own Face. If there be Cords or Knives,
Poyſon, or Fire, or ſuffocating ſtreams,
I'll not endure it. Would I were ſatisfied.
Iago. I ſee you are eaten up with paſſion:
I do repent me that I put it to you,
You would be ſatisfied?
Oth. Would, Nay, and I will.
Iago. And may: but now? how ſatisfied, my Lord?
Would you the ſuper-viſion groſly gape on?
Behold her topp'd?
Oth. Death, and Damnation. Oh!
Iago. It were a tedious difficulty I think,
To bring to that proſpect: Damn them then,
If ever mortal Eyes do ſee them boulſter
More than their own. What then? how then?
What ſhall I ſay? Where's Satisfaction?
It is impoſſible you ſhould ſee this,
Were they as prime as Goats, as hot as Monkies,
As ſalt as Wolves in pride, and Fools as groſs
As Ignorance, made drunk. But yet, I ſay,
If imputation and ſtrong circumſtances,
Which lead directly to the door of truth,
VVill give you ſatisfaction, you might hav't.
Oth. Give me a living reaſon ſhe's diſloyal.
Iago. I do not like the Office;
But ſith I am entred in this cauſe ſo far
(Prick'd to't by fooliſh Honeſty and Love)
I will go on. I lay with Caſſio lately,
And being troubled with a raging Tooth,
I could not ſleep. There are a kind of men,
So looſe of Soul, that in their ſleeps will mutter
Their Affairs: one of this kind is Caſſio:
In ſleep I heard him ſay, ſweet Deſdemona,
Let us be wary, let us hide our Loves,
And then (Sir) would he gripe, and wring my hand:
Cry, oh ſweet Creature: then kiſs me hard,
As if he pluckt up kiſſes by the roots,
That grew upon my Lips, laid his Leg o're my Thigh,
And ſigh and kiſs, and then cry curſed Fate,
That gave thee to the Moore.
Oth. O monſtrous! monſtrous!
Iago. Nay this was but his Dream.
Oth. But this denoted a fore-gone concluſion,
'Tis a ſhrewd doubt, though it be but a Dream.
Iago. And this may help to thicken other proofs,
That do demonſtrate thinly.
Oth. I'll tear her all to pieces.
Iago. Nay yet be wiſe; yet we ſee nothing done,
She may be honeſt yet: Tell me but this,
Have you not ſometimes ſeen a Handkerchief
Spotted with Straw-berries, in your VVives hand?
Oth. I gave her ſuch a one: 'twas my firſt gift.
Iago. I know not that: but ſuch a Handkerchief
(I am ſure it was your VVives) did I to day
See Caſſio wipe his Beard with.
Oth. If it be that.
Iago. If it be that, or any, if 'twas hers,
It ſpeaks againſt her with the other proofs.
Oth. O that the ſlave had forty thouſand lives:
One is too poor, too weak for my revenge.
Now do I ſee 'tis true. Look here, Iago,
All my fond love thus do I blow to Heaven. 'Tis gone,
Ariſe black vengeance from the hollow Hell,
Yield up (O Love) thy Crown and hearted Throne
To tyrannous hate. Swell boſom with thy fraught,
For 'tis of Aſpicks tongues.
Iago. Yet be content.
Oth. Oh blood, blood, blood.
Iago. Patience I ſay: your mind may change.
Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontick Sea,
VVhoſe Icy Current, and compulſive courſe,
Ne're keeps retiring ebbe, but keeps due on
To the Propontick, and the Helleſpont:
Even ſo my bloody thoughts, with violent pace
Shall ne're look back, ne're ebbe to humble Love,
Till that a capable, and wide Revenge
Swallow them up. Now by yond Marble Heaven,
In the due reverence of a Sacred Vow,
I here engage my words ——
Iago. Do not riſe yet:
VVitneſs your ever-burning Lights above,
You Elements, that clip us round about.
VVitneſs that here Iago doth give up
The Execution of his wit, hands, heart,
To wrong'd Othello's Service. Let him command,
And to obey ſhall be in me remorſe,
What bloody buſineſs ever.
Oth. I greet thy love,
Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance bounteous,
And will upon the inſtant put thee to't:
Within theſe three dayes let me hear thee ſay,
That Caſſio's not alive.
Iago. My Friend is dead:
'Tis done at your requeſt.
But let her live.
Oth. Damn her lewd Minx:
O damn her, damn her.
Come go with me apart, I will withdraw
To furniſh me with ſome ſwift means of Death
For the fair Devil.
Now art thou my Lieutenant.
Iago. I am your own for ever. [Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Deſdemona, Æmilia, and Clown.

Deſ. Do you know, Sirrah, where Lieutenant Caſſio lyes?
Clown. I dare not ſay he lies any where.
Deſ. Why man?
Clown. He's a Souldier, and for me to ſay a Souldier lyes, 'tis ſtabbing.
Deſ. Go to: where lodges he?
Clown. To tell you where he lodges, is to tell you where I lye.
Deſ. Can any thing be made of this?
Clown. I know not where he lodges, and for me to deviſe a lodging, and ſay he lies here, or he lies there, were to lye in mine own throat.
Deſ. Can you enquire him out? and be edified by report?
Clown. I will Catechize the World for him, that is, make Queſtions, and by them Anſwer.
Deſ. Seek him, bid him come hither: tell him, I have mov'd my Lord on his behalf, and hope all will be well.
Clown. To do this, is within the compaſs of mans Wit, and therefore I will attempt the doing it. [Exit Clown.
Deſ. Where ſhould I looſe the Handkerchief, Æmilia?
Æmil. I know not, Madam.
Deſ. Believe me, I had rather have loſt my purſe
Full of Cruzadoes. And but my Noble Moore

Is

Is true of mind, and made of no ſuch baſeneſs,
As jealous Creatures are, it were enough
To put him to ill thinking.
Æmil. Is he not jealous?
Deſ. Who he? I think the Sun where he was born,
Drew all ſuch humours from him.
Æmilia. Look where he comes.
Deſ. I will not leave him now, till Caſſio be Call'd to him. How is't with you, my Lord?

Enter Othello.

Oth. Well, my good Lady. Oh hardneſs to diſſemble!
How do you, Deſdemona?
Deſ. VVell, my good Lord.
Oth. Give me your hand,
This hand is moiſt, my Lady.
Deſ. It hath felt no age, nor known no ſorrow.
Oth. This argues fruitfulneſs, and liberal heart:
Hot, hot, and moiſt. This hand of yours requires
A ſequeſter from Liberty: Faſting, and Prayer,
Much Caſtigation, Exerciſe devout,
For here's a young and ſweating Devil here,
That commonly rebels: 'Tis a good hand.
A frank one.
Deſ. You may (indeed) ſay ſo:
For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart.
Oth. A liberal hand. The hearts of old, gave hands:
But our new Heraldry is hands, not hearts.
Deſ. I cannot ſpeak of this:
Come, now your promiſe.
Oth. VVhat promiſe, Chuck?
Deſ. I have ſent to bid Caſſio come ſpeak with you.
Oth. I have a ſalt and ſorry Rheum offends me;
Lend me thy Handkerchief.
Deſ. Here, my Lord.
Oth. That which I gave you
Deſ. I have it not about me.
Oth. Not?
Deſ. No indeed, my Lord.
Oth. That's a fault: That Handkerchief
Did an Ægyptian to my Mother give:
She was a Charmer, and could almoſt read
The thoughts of people: She told her, while ſhe kept it,
'Twould make her amiable, ſubdue my Father
Intirely to her love: but if ſhe loſt it,
Or made a Gift of it, My Fathers Eye
Should hold her loathed, and his Spirits ſhould hunt
After new Fancies. She dying gave it me,
And bid me (when my fate would have me VViv'd)
To give it her. I did ſo, and take heed on't,
Make it a Darling, like your precious Eye:
To loos't, or give away, were ſuch perdition,
As nothing elſe could match.
Deſ. Is't poſſible?
Oth. 'Tis true: there's Magick in the VVeb of it:
A Sybill that had numbred in the VVorld
The Sun to courſe two hundred compaſſes,
In her prophetick fury ſow'd the work:
The VVorms were hallowed, that did breed the Silk,
And it was dy'd in Mummey, which the skilful
Conſerv'd of Maidens hearts.
Deſ. Indeed? is't true?
Oth. Moſt veritable, therefore look to't well.
Deſ. Then would the Heaven, that I had never ſeen't.
Oth. Ha? wherefore?
Deſ. VVhy do you ſpeak ſo ſtaringly, and raſh?
Oth. Is't loſt? is't gone? Speak, is't out o'th' way?
Deſ. Bleſs us.
Oth. Say you?
Deſ. It is not loſt: but what and if it were?
Oth. How?
Deſ. I ſay it is not loſt.
Oth. Fetch't, let me ſee't.
Deſ. VVhy ſo I can: but I will not now:
This is a trick to put me from my ſuit,
Pray you let Caſſio be receiv'd again.
Oth. Fetch me the Handkerchief,
My mind miſ-gives.
Deſ. Come, come: you'll never meet a more ſufficient man.
Oth. The Handkerchief.
Deſ. A man that all his time
Hath founded his good Fortunes on your love;
Shar'd dangers with you.
Oth. The Handkerchief.
Deſ. Inſooth, you are to blame,
Oth. Away. [Exit Othello.
Æmil. Is not this man jealous?
Deſ. I never ſaw this before.
Sure there's ſome wonder in this Handkerchief,
I am moſt unhappy in the loſs of it.
Æmil. 'Tis not a year or two ſhews us a man:
They are all but ſtomachs, and we all but Food,
They eat us hungerly, and when they are full
They belch us.

Enter Jago, and Caſſio.

Look you, Caſſio, and my Husband.
Jago. There is no other way: 'tis ſhe muſt do't:
And lo the happineſs: go and importune her.
Deſ. How now, (good Caſſio) what's the news with you?
Caſſio. Madam, my former ſuit. I do beſeech you,
That by your virtuous means, I may again
Exiſt, and be a member of his love,
Whom I, with all the Office of my heart
Intirely honour, I would not be delay'd.
If my offence be of ſuch mortal kind,
That not my Service paſt, nor preſent Sorrows,
Nor purpos'd merit in futurity,
Can ranſome me into his love again,
But to know ſo, muſt be my benefit:
So ſhall I cloath me in a forc'd content,
And ſhut my ſelf up in ſome other courſe
To Fortunes Almes.
Deſ. Alas (thrice-gentle Caſſio)
My Advocation is not now in tune;
My Lord, is not my Lord; nor ſhould I know him,
Were he in favour, as in humour alter'd.
So help me every ſpirit ſanctified,
As I have ſpoken for you all my beſt,
And ſtood within the blank of his diſpleaſure
For my free ſpeech. You muſt a while be patient:
VVhat I can do, I will: and more I will
Than for my ſelf I dare. Let that ſuffice you.
Jago. Is my Lord angry?
Æmil. He went hence but now:
And certainly in ſtrange unquietneſs.
Jago. Can he be angry? I have ſeen the Cannon,
VVhen it hath blown his Ranks into the air,
And like the Devil from his very Arm
Puſt his own Brother: And is he angry?
Something of moment then; I will go meet him,
There's matter in't indeed, if he be angry, [Exit.
Deſ. I prethee do ſo. Something ſure of State,
Either from Venice, or ſome unhatch'd practice,
Made demonſtrable here in Cyprus, to him,
Hath pudled his clear Spirit: and in ſuch caſes,
Mens Natures wrangle with inferiour things,
Though great ones are their object. 'Tis even ſo.
For let our Finger ake, and it endues
Our other healthful members, even to a ſenſe
Of pain. Nay, we muſt think men are not Gods;
Nor of them look for ſuch obſervance
As fits the Bridal. Beſhrew me much, Æmilia,
I was (unhandſome VVarriour as I am)

Arraigning

Arraigning his unkindneſs with my ſoul:
But now I find, I had ſuborn'd the Witneſs,
And he's indited falſely.
Æmil. Pray heaven it be
State-matters, as you think, and no Conception,
Nor no jealous toy concerning you.
Def. Alas-the-day, I never gave him cauſe.
Æmil. But jealous Souls will not be anſwer'd ſo;
They are not ever jealous for the cauſe,
But jealous, for they're jealous. It is a Monſter
Begot upon it ſelf, born on it ſelf.
Def. Heaven keep the Monſter from Othello's mind.
Æmil. Lady, Amen.
Def. I will go ſeek him. Caſſio, walk hereabout:
If I do find him fit, I'll move your ſuit,
And ſeek to effect it to my uttermoſt. [Exit.
Caſ. I humbly thank your Ladiſhip.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. 'Save you (Friend Caſſio.)
Caſſio. What makes you from home?
How is't with you, my moſt fair Bianca?
Indeed (ſweet Love) I was coming to your houſe.
Bian. And I was going to your Lodging, Caſſio.
What? keep a week away? Seven days and nights?
Eight ſcore eight hours? And Loves abſent hours
More tedious than the Dial, eight ſcore times?
Oh weary reck'ning.
Caſſio. Pardon me, Bianca:
I have this while with leaden thoughts been preſt,
But I ſhall in a more continuate time
Strike off this ſcore of abſence. Sweet Bianca,
Take me this work out.
Bian. Oh Caſſio, whence came this?
This is ſome token from a newer Friend,
To the felt-abſence: now I feel a Cauſe:
Is't come to this? Well, well.
Caſſio. Go to, woman:
Throw your vild gueſſes in the Devils teeth,
From whence you have them. You are jealous now
That this is from ſome Miſtreſs, ſome remembrance;
No, in good troth, Bianca.
Bian. Why, whoſe is it?
Caſſio. I know not neither:
I found it in my Chamber,
I like the work well: E're it be demanded
(As like enough it will) I would have it copied:
Take it, and do't, and leave me for this time.
Bian. Leave you? wherefore?
Caſſio. I do attend here on the General,
And think it no addition, nor my wiſh
To have him ſee me woman'd.
Bian. Why, I pray you?
Caſſio. Not that I love you not.
Bian. But that you do not love me,
I pray you bring me on the way a little,
And ſay, if I ſhall ſee you ſoon at night?
Caſſio. 'Tis but a little way that I can bring you,
For I attend here. But I'll ſee you ſoon.
Bian. 'Tis very good: I muſt be circumſtanc'd.
[Exeunt omnes.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Othello and Jago.

Jago. Will you think ſo?
Othel. Think ſo, Jago?
Jago. What, to kiſs in private?
Othel. An unauthorized kiſs?
Jago. Or to be naked with her Friends in bed,
An hour or more, not meaning any harm?
Othel. Naked in bed (Jago) and not mean harm?
It is hypocriſie againſt the Devil:
They that mean vertuouſly, and yet do ſo,
The Devil their vertue tempts, and they tempt Heaven.
Jago. If they do nothing, 'tis a Venial ſlip:
But I give my wife a Handkerchief.
Othel. What then?
Jago. Why then 'tis hers (my Lord) and being hers,
She may (I think) beſtow't on any man,
Othel. She is Protectreſs of her Honour too:
May ſhe give that?
Jago. Her Honour is an Eſſence that's not ſeen,
They have it very oft that have it not.
But for the Handkerchief.
Othel. By heaven I would moſt gladly have forgot it:
Thou ſaidſt (Oh, it comes o're my memory,
As doth the Raven o're the infectious houſe:
Boading to all) he had my Handkerchief.
Jago. I: what of that?
Othel. That's not ſo good now.
Jago. What if I had ſaid, I had ſeen him do you wrong?
Or hear him ſay, as Knaves be ſuch abroad;
Who having by their own importunate ſuit,
Or voluntary dotage of ſome Miſtreſs,
Convinced or ſuppli'd them, cannot chuſe
But they muſt blab.
Othel. Hath he ſaid any thing?
Jago. He hath (my Lord) but be you well aſſur'd,
No more than he'll unſwear.
Othel. What hath he ſaid?
Jago. Why, that he did: I know not what he did.
Othel. What? what?
Jago. Lye.
Othel. With her?
Jago. With her? on her: what you will.
Othel. Lye with her? lye on her? we ſay, lye on her, when they be-lye her. Lye with her? that's fulſom: Handkerchief; Confeſſions: Handkerchief. To confeſs, and be hang'd for his labour. Firſt, to be hang'd, and then to confeſs: I tremble at it. Nature would not inveſt her ſelf in ſuch ſhadowing paſſion, without ſome inſtruction. It is not words that ſhakes me thus, (piſh) Noſes, Ears and Lips: is't poſſible. Confeſs? Handkerchief? O Devil. [Falls in a Trance.
Jago. Work on,
My Medicine works. Thus credulous Fools are caught,
And many worthy, and chaſt Dames even thus
(All guiltleſs) meet reproach: what hoa? My Lord?
My Lord, I ſay, Othello.

Enter Caſſio.

How now, Caſſio?
Caſ. What's the matter?
Jago. My Lord is faln into an Epilepſie.
This is the ſecond Fit: he had one yeſterday.
Caſ. Rub him about the Temples.
Jago. The Lethargy muſt have his quiet courſe:
If not, he foams at mouth: and by and by
Breaks out to ſavage madneſs: look, he ſtirs:
Do you withdraw your ſelf a little while,
He will recover ſtraight: when he is gone,
I would on great occaſion, ſpeak with you.
How is it, General? Have you not hurt your head;
Othel. Doſt thou mock me?
Jago. I mock you not, by Heaven:
Would you would bear your Fortune like a Man.
Othel. A Horned man's a Monſter and a Beaſt.
Jago. There's many a Beaſt then in a populous City,
And many a civil Monſter.
Othel. Did he confeſs it?
Jago. Good Sir, be a man:

Think every bearded fellow that's but yoak'd
May draw with you. There's millions now alive,
That nightly lye in thoſe unproper beds,
Which they dare ſwear peculiar. Your cauſe is better.
Oh, 'tis the ſpight of Hell, the Fiends Arch-mock,
To lip a wanton in a ſecure Cowch;
And to ſuppoſe her chaſt. No, let me know,
And knowing what I am, I know what ſhe ſhall be.
Oth. Oh, thou art wiſe: 'tis certain.
Iago. Stand you a while apart,
Confine your ſelf but in a patient Liſt,
Whil'ſt you were here, o're whelmed with your grief
(A paſſion moſt reſulting ſuch a man)
Caſſio came hither. I ſhifted him away,
And laid good ſcuſes on your Ecſtaſie,
Bad him anon return, and here ſpeak with me,
The which he promis'd. Do but encave your ſelf,
And mark the Fleers, the Gybes and notable ſcorns,
That dwell in every Region of his face.
For I will make him tell the tale anew;
Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when
He hath, and is again to cope your wife.
I ſay, but mark his geſture, marry Patience,
Or I ſhall ſay y'are all in all in Spleen,
And nothing of a man.
Oth. Doſt thou hear, Iago,
I will be found moſt cunning in my patience:
But (doſt thou hear) moſt bloody.
Iago. That's not amiſs.
But yet keep time in all: will you withdraw?
Now will I queſtion Caſſio of Bianca,
A Huſwife, that by ſelling her deſires,
Buys her ſelf Bread and Cloth. It is a Creature
That dotes on Caſſio, (as 'tis the Strumpets plague
To beguile many, and be beguil'd by one)
He, when he hears of her, cannot reſtrain
From the exceſs of Laughter. Here he comes.

Enter Caſſio.

As he ſhall ſmile, Othello ſhall go mad:
And his unbookiſh Jealouſie muſt conſerve,
Poor Caſſio ſmiles, geſtures and light behaviours
Quite in the wrong. How do you, Lieutenant?
Caſ. The worſer, that you gave me the addition,
Whoſe want even kills me.
Iago. Ply Deſdemona well, and you are ſure on't:
Now, if this Sute lay in Bianca's dowre,
How quickly ſhould you ſpeed?
Caſ. Alas, poor Caitiffe.
Oth. Look how he laughs already.
Iago. I never knew woman love man ſo.
Caſ. Alas, poor Rogue, I think indeed ſhe loves me.
Oth. Now he denies it faintly: and laughs it out.
Iago. Do you hear, Caſſio?
Oth. Now he importunes him
To tell it o're: go to, well ſaid, well ſaid.
Iago. She gives it out, that you ſhall marry her.
Do you intend it?
Caſ. Ha, ha, ha.
Oth. Do ye triumph, Roman? do you triumph?
Caſ. I marry. What? a cuſtomer; prithee bear
Some Charity to my wit, do not think it
So unwholſome. Ha, ha, ha.
Oth. So, ſo: they laugh that win.
Iago. Why, the cry goes, that you ſhall marry her.
Caſ. Prithee ſay true.
Iago. I am a very Villain elſe.
Oth. Have you ſcoar'd me; well.
Caſ. This is the Monkies own giving out:
She is perſwaded I will marry her
Out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promiſe.
Oth. Iago beckons me: now he begins the ſtory.
Caſ. She was here even now: ſhe haunts me in every place. I was the other day talking on the Sea bank with certain Venetians, and thither comes the Bauble, and falls me thus about my neck.
Othel. Crying, oh dear Caſſio, as it were: his geſture imports it.
Caſ. So hangs, and lolls, and weeps upon me:
So ſhakes, and pulls me. Ha, ha, ha.
Othel. Now he tells how ſhe pluckt him to my Chamber: Oh, I ſee that Noſe of yours, but now that Dog, I ſhall throw it to.
Caſ. Well, I muſt leave her company.
Iago. Before me: Look where ſhe comes.

Enter Bianca.

Caſ. 'Tis ſuch another Fitchew: marry, a perfum'd one: What do yon mean by this haunting of me?
Bian. Let the Devil and his Damm haunt you: What did you mean by that ſame Handkerchief you gave me even now? I was a fine fool to take it: I muſt take out the work? A likely piece of work, that you ſhould find it in your Chamber, and know not who left it there. This is ſome Minxes token, and I muſt take out the work? There, give it your Hobbey-Horſe: Whereſoever you had it, I'll take out no work on't.
Caſ. How now, my ſweet Bianca?
How now? How now?
Othel. By Heaven, that ſhould be my Handkerchief.
Bian. If you'll come to ſupper to night, you may; if you will not, come when you are next prepar'd for. [Exit.
Iago. After her, after her.
Caſ. I muſt, ſhe'll rail in the ſtreets elſe.
Iago. Will you ſup there?
Caſ. Yes, I intend ſo.
Iago. Well, I may chance to ſee you: For I would very fain ſpeak with you.
Caſ. Prithee, come, will you?
Iago. Go to: Say no more. [Exit.
Othel. How ſhall I murther him, Iago?
Iago. Did you perceive how he laugh'd at his vice?
Othel. Oh, Iago.
Iago. And did you ſee the Handkerchief?
Othel. Was that mine?
Iago. Yours by this hand: and to ſee how he prizes the fooliſh woman your wife: She gave it him, and he hath given it his Whore.
Othel. I would have him nine years a killing:
A fine woman, a fair woman, a ſweet woman?
Iago. Nay, you muſt forget that.
Othel. I, let her rot and periſh, and be damn'd to night, for ſhe ſhall not live. No, my heart is turn'd to ſtone: I ſtrike it, and it hurts my hand. Oh, the world hath not a ſweeter Creature: She might lie by an Emperor's ſide, and command him Taſks.
Iago. Nay, that's not your way.
Othel. Hang her, I do but ſay what ſhe is: ſo delicate with her Needle: An admirable Muſician. Oh, ſhe will ſing the Savageneſs out of a Bear: Of ſo high a plenteous wit, and invention?
Iago. She's the worſe for all this.
Othel. Oh, a thouſand, a thouſand times:
And then of ſo gentle a condition?
Iago. I, too gentle.
Othel. Nay that's certain.
But yet the pity of it, Iago: Oh, Iago, the pity of it, Iago.
Iago. If you are ſo fond over her iniquity: Give her patent to offend, for if it touch not you, it comes near no body.
Othel. I will chop her into Meſſes: Cuckold me!
Iago. Oh, 'tis foul in her.
Othel. With mine Officer!
Iago. That's fouler.
Othel Get me ſome poyſon, Iago, this night. I'll not expoſtulate with her: Leſt her body and her beauty unprovide provide my mind again: this night, Iago.

Iago. Do it not with poyſon, ſtrangle her in her bed, even the bed ſhe hath contaminated.
Othel. Good, good:
The juſtice of it pleaſes: very good.
Iago. And for Caſſio, let me be his undertaker:
You ſhall hear more by midnight.

Enter Lodovico, Deſdemona, and Attendants.

Othel. Excellent good: what Trumpet is that ſame?
Iago. I warrant ſomething from Venice,
'Tis Lodovico, this comes from the Duke.
See, your wife's with him.
Lodo. Save you, worthy General.
Othel. With all my heart, Sir.
Lod. The Duke, and the Senators of Venice greet you.
Othel. I kiſs the Inſtrument of their pleaſures.
Deſ. And what's the News, good Couſin Lodovico?
Iago. I am very glad to ſee you, Signior.
Welcome to Cyprus.
Lod. I thank you: how do's Lieutenant Caſſio?
Iago. Lives, Sir.
Deſ. Couſin, there's faln between him and my Lord
An unkind breach: but you ſhall make all well.
Othel. Are you ſure of that?
Deſ. My Lord?
Othel. This fail you not to do, as you will——
Lod. He did not call: he's buſie in the paper,
Is there diviſion 'twixt my Lord and Caſſio?
Deſ. A moſt unhappy one: I would do much
T'atone them for the love I bear to Caſſio.
Othel. Fire and Brimſtone.
Deſ. My Lord.
Othel. Are you wife?
Deſ. What, is he angry?
Lod. May be the Letter mov'd him.
For as I think they do command him home,
Deputing Caſſio in his Government.
Deſ. Truſt me, I am glad on't.
Othel. Indeed?
Deſ. My Lord?
Othel. I am glad to ſee you mad.
Deſ. Why, ſweet Othello?
Othel. Devil.
Deſ. I have not deſerv'd this.
Lod. My Lord, this would not be believ'd in Venice,
Though I ſhould ſwear I ſaw't. 'Tis very much,
Make her amends: ſhe weeps.
Othel. Oh Devil, Devil:
If that the Earth could teem with womans tears,
Each drop ſhe falls would prove a Crocodile:
Out of my ſight.
Deſ. I will not ſtay to offend you:
Lod. Truly obedient Lady:
I do beſeech your Lordſhip call her back.
Othel. Miſtreſs.
Deſ. My Lord.
Othel. What would you with her, Sir?
Lod. Who I, my Lord?
Othel. I, you did wiſh that I would make her turn:
Sir, ſhe can turn and turn: and yet go on
And turn again. And ſhe can weep, Sir, weep.
And ſhe's obedient: as you ſay obedient.
Very obedient: proceed you in your tears.
Concerning this, Sir, (Oh well painted paſſion)
I am commanded home: get you away:
I'll ſend for you anon. Sir, I obey the Mandate.
And will return to Venice. Hence, avant:
Caſſio ſhall have my place. And, Sir, to night
I do entreat, that we may ſup together.
You are welcome, Sir, to Cyprus.
Goats and Monkies. [Exit.
Lod. Is this the Noble Moore, whom our full Senate
Call all in all ſufficient? Is this the Nature
Whom Paſſion could not ſhake? whoſe ſolid vertue
The ſhot of Accident, nor dart of Chance
Could neither graze, nor pierce?
Iago. He is much chang'd.
Lod. Are his wits ſafe? Is he not of light Brain?
Iago. He's that he is: I may not breathe my cenſure.
What he might be: if what he might, he is not,
I would to heaven he were.
Lod. What, ſtrike his wife?
Iago. 'Faith that was not ſo well; yet would I knew
That ſtroke would prove the worſt.
Lod. Is it his uſe?
Or did the Letters work upon his blood,
And new create his fault?
Iago. Alas, alas:
It is not honeſty in me to ſpeak
What I have ſeen and known. You ſhall obſerve him,
And his own courſes will denote him ſo,
That I may ſave my ſpeech: do but go after,
And mark how he continues.
Lod. I am ſorry that I am deceiv'd in him. [Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello and Æmilia.

Othel. You have ſeen nothing then?
Æmil. Nor ever heard: nor ever did ſuſpect.
Othel. Yes, you have ſeen Caſſio and ſhe together.
Æmil. But then I ſaw no harm: and then I heard
Each ſyllable that breath made up between them.
Othel. What? Did they never whiſper?
Æmil. Never, my Lord.
Othel. Nor ſend you out oth' way?
Æmil. Never.
Oth. To fetch her Fan, her Gloves, her Mask, nor nothing?
Æmil. Never, my Lord.
Othel. That's ſtrange.
Æmil. I durſt (my Lord) to wager ſhe is honeſt,
Lay down my Soul at ſtake: If you think other,
Remove your thought. It doth abuſe your boſom,
If any wretch hath put this in your head,
Let heaven requite it with the Serpents curſe,
For if ſhe be not honeſt, chaſt, and true,
There's no man happy, the pureſt of their Wives
Is foul as Slander.
Othel. Bid her come hither: go, [Exit Æmilia.
She ſays enough: yet ſhe's a ſimple Bawd
That cannot ſay as much. This is a ſubtle Whore:
A Cloſſet-Lock and Key of villanous Secrets,
And yet ſhe'll kneel, and pray: I have ſeen her do't.

Enter Deſdemona and Æmilia.

Deſ. My Lord, what is your will?
Othel. Pray you, Chuck, come hither.
Deſ. What is your pleaſure?
Othel. Let me ſee your eyes: look in my face.
Deſ. What horrible Fancy's this?
Othel. Some of your Function, Miſtreſs,
Leave Procreants alone, and ſhut the door:
Cough, or cry hem, if any body come:
Your Myſtery, your Myſtery; nay diſpatch. [Exit Æmil.
Deſ. Upon my knee, what doth your ſpeech import?
I underſtand a Fury in your words.
Othel. Why? What art thou?
Deſ. Your wife, my Lord: your true and loyal wife.
Othel. Come ſwear it: damn thy ſelf, being like one of Heaven, the Devils themſelves ſhould fear to ſeize thee.
Therefore be double damn'd: ſwear thou art honeſt.
Deſ. Heaven doth truly know it.
Othel. Heaven truly knows, that thou art falſe as Hell.

Deſ.

Def. To whom, my Lord?
With whom? How am I false?
Othel. Ah, Desdemon, away, away, away.
Def. Alas the heavy day: Why do you weep?
Am I the motive of these tears, my Lord?
If happily you my Father do suspect,
An Instrument of this your calling back,
Lay not your blame on me: if you have lost him,
I have lost him too.
Othel. Had it pleas'd Heaven,
To try me with Affliction, had they rain'd
All kind of sores, and shames on my bare head:
Steep'd me in poverty to the very lips.
Given to Captivity me and my utmost hopes.
I should have found in some place of my soul
A drop of patience. But alas, to make me
The fixed figure for the time of Scorn,
To point his slow and moving finger at.
Yet could I bear that too, well, very well:
But there where I have garner'd up my heart,
Where either I must live, or bear no life,
The fountain from the which my current runs,
Or else dries up: To be discarded thence,
Or keep it as a Cistern, for foul Toads
To knot and gender in. Turn thy complexion there:
Patience, thou young and rose lipp'd Cherubin,
I here look grim as hell.
Def. I hope my Lord esteems me honest.
Othel. O I, as Summer-flies are in the Shambles,
That quicken even with blowing. Oh thou weed:
Who art so lovely, fair, and smell'st so sweet,
That the Sence asks at thee,
Would thou'dst never been born.
Def. Alas, what ignorant sin have I committed?
Othel. Was this fair Paper? This most goodly Book
Made to write Whore upon? What committed,
Committed? Oh, thou publick Commoner,
I should make very Forges of my Cheeks,
That would to Cynders burn up Modesty,
Did but I speak thy deeds. What, committed?
Heaven stops the Nose at it, and the Moon winks:
The bawdy wind that kisses all it meets,
Is hush'd within the hollow Mine of Earth
And will not hear't. What, committed?
Def. By Heaven, you do me wrong.
Othel. Are not you a Strumpet?
Def. No, as I am a Christian.
If to preserve this Vessel for my Lord,
From any other foul unlawful touch,
Be not to be a Strumpet, I am none.
Othel. What, not a Whore?
Def. No, as I shall be sav'd.
Othel. Is't possible?
Def. Oh Heaven forgive us.
Othel. I cry you mercy, then.
I took you for that cunning Whore of Venice,
That married with Othello. You, Mistress,

Enter Æmilia.

That have the Office opposite to Saint Peter,
And keeps the gate of Hell. You, you: I, you.
We have done our course: there's money for your pains:
I pray you, turn the Key, and keep our counsel. [Exit.
Æmil. Alas, what does this Gentleman conceive?
How do you, Madam? How do you, my good Lady?
Def. Faith, half asleep.
Æmil. Good Madam,
What's the matter with my Lord?
Def. With whom?
Æmil. Why, with my Lord, Madam?
Def. Who is thy Lord?
Æmil. He that is yours, sweet Lady.
Def. I have none, do not talk to me, Æmilia,
I cannot weep: nor answers have I none,
But what should go by Water. Prethee to night,
Lay on my Bed my Wedding Sheets, remember,
And call thy Husband hither.
Æmil. Here's a change indeed. [Exit.
Def. 'Tis meet I should be us'd so: very meet.
How have I been behav'd, that he might stick
The smallest opinion on my least misuse?

Enter Iago, and Æmilia.

Iago. What is your pleasure, Madam?
How is't with you?
Def. I cannot tell: Those that do teach your Babes,
Do it with gentle means, and easie tasks.
He might have chid me so: For in good faith,
I am a Child to chiding.
Iago. What's the matter, Lady?
Æmil. Alas (Iago) my Lord hath so bewhor'd her,
Thrown such despight, and heavy terms upon her,
That true hearts cannot bear it.
Def. Am I that name, Iago?
Iago. What name (fair Lady?)
Def. Such as she said my Lord did say I was.
Æmil. He call'd her whore: A Beggar, in his drink,
Could not have laid such terms upon his Callet.
Iago. Why did he so?
Def. I do not know: I am sure I am none such.
Iago. Do not weep: Do not weep: Alas-the-day.
Æmil. Hath she forsook so many Noble Matches?
Her Father? And her Countrey? And her Friends?
To be call'd Whore? Would it not make one weep?
Def. It is my wretched Fortune.
Iago. Beshrew him for't:
How comes this trick upon him?
Def. Nay, Heaven doth know.
Æmil. I will be hang'd if some eternal Villain,
Some busie and insinuating Rogue,
Some cogging, cozening slave, to get some Office,
Has not devis'd this slander: I will be hang'd else.
Iago. Fie, there is no such man: It is impossible.
Def. If any such there be, Heaven pardon him.
Æmil. A Halter pardon him:
And Hell gnaw his bones.
Why should he call her Whore?
Who keeps her company?
What Place? What Time?
What Form? What Likelyhood?
The Moor's abus'd by some most villainous Knave,
Some base notorious Knave, some scurvy Fellow.
Oh Heavens, that such companions thoud'st unfold,
And put in every honest hand a whip,
To lash the Rascal naked through the World,
Even from the East to th' West.
Iago. Speak within Door.
Æmil. Oh fie upon them: Some such 'Squire he was,
That turn'd your Wit, the seamy side without,
And made you to suspect me with the Moore.
Iago. You are a Fool: Go to.
Def. Alas, Iago,
What shall I do to win my Lord again?
Good Friend, go to him: For by this light of Heaven,
I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel:
If e're my will did trespass 'gainst his Love,
Either in discourse of thought, or actual deed,
Or that mine Eyes, mine Ears, or any Sence
Delighted them: Or any other Form:
Or that I do not yet, and ever did,
And ever will (though he do shake me off
To beggarly Divorcement) love him dearly,
Comfort forswear me. Unkindness may do much,
And his Unkindness may defeat my Life,
But never taint my Love. I cannot say Whore,
It do's abhor me now I speak the word,

To

To do the Act, that might the addition earn,
Not the worlds Maſſe of vanity could make me.
Jago. I pray you be content: 'tis but his humour:
The buſineſs of the State do's him offence.
Deſ. If 'twere no other.
Jago. It is but ſo, I warrant:
Heark how theſe Inſtruments ſummon to ſupper:
The Meſſenger of Venice ſtayes the Meat;
Go in, and weep not: all things ſhall be well.
[Exeunt Deſdemona and Æmilia.

Enter Rodorigo.

How now, Rodorigo?
Rod. I do not find
That thou deal'ſt juſtly with me.
Jago. What in the contrary?
Rodo. Every day thou doſts me with ſome device, Jago, and rather as it ſeems to me now, keep'ſt from me all conveniency, thou ſupplieſt me with the leaſt advantage of hope: I will indeed no longer endure it. Nor am I yet perſwaded to put up in peace, what already I have foolifhly ſuffer'd.
Jago. Will you hear me, Rodorigo?
Rodo. I have heard too much: and your words and performances are no kin together.
Jago. You charge me moſt unjuſtly.
Rodo. With naught but truth: I have waſted my ſelf out of my means. The Jewels you have had from me to deliver Deſdemona, would half have corrupted a Votariſt. You have told me ſhe hath receiv'd them, and return'd me expectations and comforts of ſudden reſpect, and acquaintance, but I find none.
Jago. Well, go to: very well.
Rodo. Very well, go to: I cannot go to, (man) nor 'tis not very well: nay, I think it is ſcurvy: and begin to find my ſelf fopt in it.
Jago. Very well.
Rodo, I tell you, 'tis not very well: I will make my ſelf known to Deſdemona. If ſhe will return me my Jewels, I will give over my Suit, and repent my unlawful ſolicitation. If not, aſſure your ſelf, I will ſeek ſatisfaction of you.
Jago. You have ſaid now.
Rodo. I, and ſaid nothing but what I proteſt intendment of doing.
Jago. Why, now I ſee there's mettle in thee: and even from this inſtant do build on thee a better opinion than ever before: give me thy hand, Rodorigo. Thou haſt taken againſt me a moſt juſt exception: but yet I proteſt I have dealt moſt directly in thy Affair.
Rodo. It hath not appear'd.
Jago. I grant indeed it hath not appear'd: and your ſuſpition is not without wit and judgement. But, Rodorigo, if thou haſt that in thee indeed, which I have greater reaſon to believe now than ever (I mean, purpoſe, Courage, and Valour) this night ſhew it. If thou the next night following enjoy not Deſdemona, take me from this world with Treachery, and deviſe Engines for my life.
Rodo. Well: what is it? Is it within reaſon and compaſs?
Jago. Sir, there is eſpecial Commiſſion come from Venice to depute Caſſio in Othello's place.
Rodo. Is that true? Why then Othello and Deſdemona return again to Venice.
Jago. Oh no: he goes into Mauritania, and taketh away with him the fair Deſdemona, unleſs his abode be lingred here by ſome accident. Wherein none can be ſo determinate, as the removing of Caſſio.
Rodo. How do you mean removing him?
Jago. Why, by making him uncapable of Othello's place: knocking out his brains.
Rodo. And that you would have me to do.
Jago. I: if you dare do your ſelf a profit, and a right. He ſups to night with a Harlotry: and thither will I go to him. He knows not yet of his honourable fortune, if you will watch his going thence (which I will faſhion to fall out between twelve and one) you may take him at your pleaſure. I will be near to ſecond your Attempt, and he ſhall fall between us. Come, ſtand not amaz'd at it, but go along with me: I will ſhew you ſuch a neceſſity in his death, that you ſhall think your ſelf bound to put it on him. It is now high ſupper time: and the night grows to waſt. About it.
Rodo. I will hear further reaſon for this.
Jago. And you ſhall be ſatisfied. [Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Othello, Lodovico, Deſdemona, Æmilia and Attendants.

Lod. I do beſeech you, Sir, trouble your ſelf no further.
Othe. Oh pardon: 'twill do me good to walk.
Lod. Madam, good night: I humbly thank your Ladiſhip,
Deſ. Your honour is moſt welcom.
Othe. Will you walk, Sir? Oh Deſdemona.
Deſ. My Lord.
Othe. Get you to bed on th'inſtant, I will be return'd forthwith: diſmiſs your Attendant there: look't be done. [Exit.
Deſ. I will, my Lord.
Æmi. How goes it now? he looks gentler than he did,
Deſ. He ſayes he will return incontinent,
And hath commanded me to go to bed,
And bid me to diſmiſs you.
Æmi. Diſmiſs me?
Deſ. It was his bidding: therefore good Æmilia,
Give me my nightly wearing, and adieu.
We muſt not now diſpleaſe him.
Æmi. I would you had never ſeen him.
Deſ. So would not I: my love doth ſo approve him,
That even his ſtubbornneſs, his checks, his frowns,
(Prithee un-pin me) have grace and favour.
Æmi. I have laid thoſe ſheets you bad me on the bed.
Deſ. All's one: good Father, how fooliſh are our minds?
If I do die before thee, prithee ſhrowd me
In one of theſe ſame ſheets.
Æmi. Come, come: you talk.
Deſ. My Mother had a Maid call'd Barbara,
She was in love: and he ſhe lov'd prov'd mad.
And did forſake her. She had a Song of Willow,
An old thing 'twas: but it expreſs'd her Fortune.
And ſhe dy'd ſinging it. That Song to night,
Will not go from my mind: I have much to do,
But to go hang my head all at one ſide
And ſing it like poor Barbara: prithee diſpatch.
Æmi. Shall I go fetch your Night-gown?
Deſ. No, un-pin me here,
This Lodovico is a proper man.
Æmil. A very handſom man.
Deſ. He ſpeaks well.
Æmil. I know a Lady in Venice would have walk'd bare-foot to Paleſtine for a touch of his nether lip.
Deſ. The poor Soul ſat ſinging, by a Sycamore tree;
Sing all a green Willow:
Her hand on her boſome, her head on her knee,
Sing Willow, Willow, Willow.
The freſh ſtreams ran by her, and murmur'd her moans;
Sing Willow, &c.
Her ſalt tears fell from her, and ſoftned the ſtones;
Sing Willow, &c. (Lady by theſe)
Willow, Willow. (Prithee high thee, he'll come anon)
Sing all a green Willow muſt be my Garland.
Let no body blame him, his ſcorn I approve.
(Nay that's not next. Hark who is't that knocks?

Æmil.

Æmi. It's the wind.
Des. I call'd my Love falſe Love: but what ſaid he then? Sing Willough, &c.
If I court no women, you'll couch with mo men.
So get thee gone, good night: mine eyes do itch:
Doth that boad weeping?
Æmil. 'Tis neither here, nor there,
Des. I have heard it ſaid ſo, O theſe men, theſe men!
Doſt thou in conſcience think (tell me Æmilia)
That there be women do abuſe their husbands
In ſuch groſs kind?
Æmil. There be ſome ſuch, no queſtion.
Des. Would'ſt thou do ſuch a deed for all the world:
Æmil. Why, would not you?
Des. No, by this heavenly light.
Æmil. Nor I neither, by this heavenly light.
I might do't as well ith'dark.
Des. Would'ſt thou do ſuch a deed for all the world?
Æmil. The world's a huge thing:
It is a great price, for a ſmall vice.
Des. In troth I think thou would'ſt not.
Æmil. In troth I think I ſhould, and undo't when I had done. Marry, I would not do ſuch a thing for a joynt Ring, nor for meaſures of Lawn, nor for Gowns, Petticoats, nor Caps, nor any petty exhibition. But for all the whole world: why, who would not make her husband a Cuckold, to make him a Monarch? I ſhould venture Purgatory for't.
Des. Beſhrew me, if I would do ſuch a wrong
For the whole world.
Æmil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i'th'world; and having the world for your labour, 'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right.
Des. I do not think there is any ſuch woman.
Æmil. Yes, a dozen: and as many to th'vantage, as would ſtore the world they plaid for.
But I do think it is their husbands faults
If Wives do fall: (Say, that they ſlack their duties,
And pour our treaſures into foreign laps:
Or elſe break out in peeviſh Jealouſies,
Throwing reſtraint upon us: Or ſay they ſtrike us,
Or ſcant our former having in deſpight)
Why we have galls: and though we have ſome Grace,
Yet have we ſome Revenge. Let husbands know,
Their wives have ſenſe like them: they ſee and ſmell,
And have their Palats both for ſweet and ſowr,
As husbands have. What is it that they do
When they change us for others? Is it ſport?
I think it is: and doth affection breed it?
I think it doth: Is't frailty that thus erres?
It is ſo too. And have not we affections?
Deſires for ſport? and frailty as men have?
Then let them uſe us well: elſe let them know,
The ills we do, their ills inſtruct us to.
Des. Good night, good night:
Heaven me ſuch uſes ſend,
Not to pick bad, from bad; but by bad, mend. [Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Jago, and Rodorigo.

Jago. HEre, ſtand behind this Bark,
Straight will he come:
Wear thy good Rapier bare, and put it home:
Quick, quick, fear nothing; I'le be at thy Elbow,
It makes us, or it marrs us, think on that,
And fix moſt firm thy Reſolution;
Rod. Be near at hand, I may miſcarry in't.
Jago. Here, at thy hand: Behold, and take thy ſtand.
Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed,
And yet he hath given me ſatisfying Reaſons:
'Tis but a man gone. Forth my Sword: he dies.
Jago. I have rub'd this young Quat almoſt to the ſenſe,
And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill Caſſio,
Or Caſſio him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my gain. Live Rodorigo,
He calls me to a reſtitution large
Of Gold, and Jewels, that I bob'd from him,
As gifts to Deſdemona.
It muſt not be: if Caſſio do remain,
He hath a daily beauty in his life,
That makes me ugly: and beſides, the Moor
May unfold me to him: there ſtand I in much peril:
No, he muſt die. But ſo, I hear him coming.

Enter Caſſio.

Rod. I know his gate, 'tis he: Villain thou dyeſt.
Caſ. That thruſt had been mine enemy indeed,
But that my Coat is better than thou know'ſt:
I will make proof of thine.
Rod. Oh, I am ſlain.
Caſ. I am maim'd for ever:
Help hoa: Murther, murther.

Enter Othello.

Othe. The voice of Caſſio, Jago keeps his word
Rod. O Villain that I am.
Oth. It is even ſo.
Caſ. Oh help hoa: Light, a Surgeon.
Oth. 'Tis he: O brave Jago, honeſt and juſt,
That haſt ſuch Noble ſenſe of thy friends wrong,
Thou teacheſt me. Minion, your dear lies dead,
And your unbleſt Fate highes: Strumpet I come:
For off my heart, thoſe Charms thine Eyes, are blotted.
Thy Bed-leſt-ſtain'd, ſhall with Luſts bloud be ſpotted.
[Exit. Othello.

Enter Lodovico, and Gratiano.

Caſ. What hoa? no watch? no paſſage?
Murther, Murther.
Gra. 'Tis ſome miſchance, the voice is very direful.
Caſ. Oh help. Lodo. Hark.
Rod. Oh wretched Villain.
Lod. Two or three groan. 'Tis heavy night;
Theſe may be counterfeits: Let's think't unſafe
To come into the cry, without more help.
Rod. No body come: then ſhall I bleed to death.

Enter Jago.

Lod. Hark.
Gra. Here's one comes in his ſhirt, with Light, and Weapons.
Jago. Who's there?
Whoſe noiſe is this that cryes out murther?
Lodo. We do not know.
Jago. Do not you hear a cry?
Caſ. Here, here: for heaven ſake help me.
Jago. What's the matter?
Gra. This is Othello's Ancient as I take it.
Lodo. The ſame indeed, a very valiant Fellow.
Jago. What are you here, that cry ſo grievouſly?
Caſ. Jago? Oh I am ſpoyl'd, undone by Villains:
Give me ſome help.
Jago. O me, Lieutenant!
What Villains have done this?
Caſ. I think that one of them is hereabout,
And cannot make away.
Jago. Oh treacherous Villains:
What are you there? Come in, and give ſome help.
Rod. O help me there.
Caſ. That's one of them.

Iago. Oh murd'rous Slave! O Villain!
Rod. O damn'd Iago! O inhumane Dog!
Iago. Kill men i'th'dark?
Where be theſe bloudy Thieves?
How ſilent is this Town? Ho, murther, murther.
What may you be? Are you of good or evil?
Lod. As you ſhall prove us, praiſe us.
Iago. Signior Lodovico.
Lod. He, Sir.
Iago. I cry you mercy: here's Caſſio hurt by Villains.
Gra. Caſſio.
Iago. How is't, Brother?
Caſ. My Leg is cut in two.
Iago. Marry heaven forbid:
Light Gentlemen, I'le bind it with my ſhirt.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. What is the matter hoa? who is't that cry'd?
Iago. Who is't that cry'd?
Bian. Oh my dear Caſſio,
My ſweet Caſſio: Oh Caſſio, Caſſio, Caſſio.
Iago. O notable Strumpet. Caſſio, may you ſuſpect
Who they ſhould be, that have thus mangled you?
Caſ. No.
Gra. I am ſorry to find you thus:
I have been to ſeek you.
Iago. Lend me a Garter. So: —— Oh for a Chair
To bear him eaſily hence.
Bian. Alas he faints. Oh Caſſio, Caſsio, Caſsio.
Iago. Gentlemen all, I do ſuſpect this Traſh
To be a party in this injury.
Patience a while, good Caſsio. Come, come;
Lend me a Light: know we this face, or no?
Alas my friend, and my dear Country-man
Rodorigo? No: Yes ſure: Yea, 'tis Rodorigo.
Gra. What, of Venice?
Iago. Even he, Sir: did you know him?
Gra. Know him? I.
Iago. Signior Gratiano? I cry your gentlep ardon:
Theſe bloudy accidents muſt excuſe my manners,
That ſo neglected you.
Gra. I am glad to ſee you.
Iago. How do you, Caſsio? Oh a Chair, a Chair.
Gra. Rodorigo?
Iago. He, he, 'tis he:
Oh that's well ſaid, the Chair.
Some good man bear him carefully from hence,
I'le fetch the General Surgeon. For you, Miſtris,
Save you your labour. He that lies ſlain here (Caſsio)
Was my dear friend. What malice was between you?
Caſ. None in the world: nor do I know the man:
Iago. What look you pale? Oh bear him out oth' Air.
Stay you good Gentlemen. Look you pale Miſtris?
Do you perceive the gaſtneſs of her eye?
Nay, if you ſtare, we ſhall hear more anon.
Behold her well: I pray you look upon her:
Do you ſee, Gentlemen? Nay, guiltineſs will ſpeak
Though tongues were out of uſe.
Æmil. Alas, what is the matter?
What is the matter, husband.
Iago. Caſſio hath here been ſet on in the dark
By Rodorigo, and Fellows that are ſcap'd:
He's almoſt ſlain, and Rodorigo quite dead.
Iago. That is the fruits of whoring, Prithee Æmilia,
Go know of Caſsio where he ſupt to night.
What do you ſhake at that?
Bian. He ſupt at my houſe, but I therefore ſhake not.
Iago. O did he ſo? I charge you go with me.
Æmil. Oh fie upon thee, Strumpet.
Bian. I am no Strumpet, but of life as honeſt,
As you that thus abuſe me.
Æmil. As I? Fie upon thee.
Iago. Kind Gentlemen:
Let's go ſee poor Caſſio dreſt.
Come Miſtris, you muſt tell's another Tale.
Æmilia, run you to the Cittadel,
And tell my Lord and Lady, what hath hap'd:
Will you go on afore? This is the night
That either makes me, or foredoes me quite. [Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, and Deſdemona in her bed.

Othel. It is the Cauſe, it is the Cauſe (my Soul)
Let me not name it to you, you chaſte Stars,
It is the Cauſe. Yet I'le not ſhed her bloud,
Nor ſcar that whiter skin of hers than Snow,
And ſmooth as Monumental Alabaſter:
Yet ſhe muſt die, elſe ſhe'll betray more men:
Put out the Light, and then put out the Light:
If I queuch thee, thou flaming Miniſter,
I can again thy former light reſtore,
Should I repent me. But once put out thy light,
Thou cunning'ſt Pattern of excelling Nature,
I know not where is that Promethean heat
That can thy Light re-lume.
When I have pluck'd thy Roſe,
I cannot give it vital growth again,
It needs muſt wither. I'le ſmell thee on the tree:
Oh Balmy breath, that do'ſt almoſt perſwade
Juſtice to break her Sword. One more, one more;
Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee,
And love thee after. One more, and that's the laſt.
So ſweet, was ne're ſo fatal. I muſt weep,
But they are cruel tears: this ſorrow's heavenly,
It ſtrikes, where it doth love. She wakes.
Deſ. Who's there? Othello?
Othel. I, Deſdemona.
Deſ. Will you come to bed, my Lord?
Othel. Have you pray'd to night, Deſdemona,
Deſ. I, my Lord.
Othel. If you bethink your ſelf of any Crime
Unreconcil'd as yet to heaven, and Grace,
Solicit for it ſtraight.
Deſ. Alack, my Lord,
What may you mean by that?
Othel. Well, do it, and be brief, I will walk by?
I would not kill thy unprepared Spirit,
No, (Heavens fore-fend) I would not kill thy Soul.
Deſ. Talk you of killing?
Othel. I, I do.
Deſ. Then heaven have mercy on me.
Othel. Amen, with all my heart.
Deſ. If you ſay ſo, I hope you will not kill me.
Othe. Humh.
Deſ. And yet I fear you: for you're fatal then.
When your eyes rowl ſo.
Why I ſhould fear I know not,
Since guiltineſs I know not: But yet I feel I fear
Othel. Think on thy ſins.
Deſ. They are love I bear to you.
Othel. I, and for that thou dy'ſt.
Deſ. That death's unnatural, that kills for loving.
Alas, why gnaw you ſo your nether-lip?
Some bloudy paſſion ſhakes your very frame:
Theſe are portents: but yet I hope, I hope,
They do not point on me.
Othel. Peace, and be ſtill.
Deſ. I will ſo: what's the matter?
Othel. That Handkerchief
Which I ſo lov'd, and gave thee, thou gav'ſt Caſſio.
Deſ. No by my life, and Soul: ſend for the man,
And ask him.
Othel. Sweet Soul, take heed, take heed of Perjury,

Thou

Thou art on thy death-bed.
Def. I, but not yet to die.
Othe. Presently.
Therefore confess thee freely of thy sin:
For to deny each Article with Oath,
Cannot remove, nor choak the strong Conception
That I do groan withal. Thou art to die.
Def. Oh heaven have mercy on me.
Othe. I say, Amen.
Def. And have you mercy too, I never did
Offend you in my life: never lov'd Cassio,
But with such general warranty of heaven,
As I might love. I never gave him Token.
Oth. By heaven I saw my Handkerchief in's hand.
O perjur'd woman, thou do'st stone my heart,
And makest me call, what I intend to do,
A Murther, which I thought a Sacrifice.
I saw the Handkerchief.
Def. He found it then:
I never gave it him: Send for him hither:
Let him confess a truth.
Othe. He hath confest.
Def. What, my Lord?
Oth. That he hath us'd thee.
Def. How? unlawfully?
Oth. I.
Def. He will not say so.
Oth. No: his mouth is stopp'd:
Honest Iago hath tane order for't.
Def. Oh, my fear interprets. What is he dead?
Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great Revenge
Had Stomach for them all.
Def. Alas, he is betray'd, and I undone.
Oth. Out Strumpet: weep'st thou for him to my face?
Def. O banish me, my Lord, but kill me not.
Oth. Down, Strumpet.
Def. Kill me to morrow, let me live to night.
Oth. Nay, if you strive.
Def. But half an hour.
Oth. Being done, there is no pause.
Def. But while I say one prayer.
Oth. It is too late. [Smothers her.

Æmilia at the door.

Æmil. My Lord, my Lord? What hoa?
My Lord, my Lord.
Oth. What noise is this? not dead? not yet quite dead,
I that am cruel, am yet merciful,
I would not have thee linger in thy pain?
So, so.
Æmil. within. What hoa? my Lord, my Lord?
Oth. Who's there?
Æmil. Oh, my good Lord, I would speak a word with you.
Oth. Yes: 'tis Æmilia: by and by. She's dead.
'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's death:
The noise was high. Hah, no more moving?
Still as the Grave. Shall she come in? wer't good?
I think she stirs again: No, what's best to do?
If she come in, she'll sure speak to my wife:
My wife, my wife, what wife? I have no wife.
Oh insupportable! O heavy hour!
Methinks, it should be now a huge Eclipse
Of Sun and Moon: and that th'affrighted Globe
Did yawn at Alteration.
Æmil. I do beseech you
That I may speak with you. Oh, good my Lord.
Oth. I had forgot thee: Oh come in, Æmilia.
Soft, by and by, let me the Curtains draw,
Where art thou? what's the matter with thee now?

Enter Æmilia.

Æmil, Oh, my good Lord, yonders foul Murthers done.
Othe. What? now?
Æmil. But now, my Lord,
Othe. It is the very error of the Moon,
She comes more nearer Earth than she was wont,
And makes men mad.
Æmil. Cassio, my Lord, hath kill'd
A young Venetian, call'd Rodorigo.
Oth. Rodorigo kill'd? and Cassio kill'd?
Æmil. No, Cassio is not kill'd.
Oth. Not Cassio kill'd? Then Murther's out of tune,
And sweet Revenge grows harsh,
Def. O falsely, falsely murder'd!
Æmil. Alas! what cry is that?
Othe. That? what?
Æmil. Out, and alas, that was my Ladies voice,
Help, help hoa, help, Oh Lady speak again,
Sweet Desdemona, oh sweet Mistris, speak.
Def. A guiltless death I die.
Æmil. Oh who hath done this deed?
Def. No body: I my self, farewel:
Commend me to my kind Lord: oh farewel.
Oth. Why, how should she be murd'red?
Æmil. Alas: who knows?
Oth. You hear her say her self, it was not I.
Æmil. She said so: I must needs report the truth.
Oth. She's like a Lier gone to burning hell,
'Twas I that kill'd her.
Æmil. Oh the more Angel she, and you the blacker Devil.
Oth. She turn'd to folly: and she was a whore.
Æmil. Thou do'st bely her, and thou art a devil.
Oth. She was false as water.
Æmil. Thou art rash as fire, to say
That she was false. Oh she was heavenly true.
Oth. Cassio did top her: ask thy husband else.
O, I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell:
But that I did proceed upon just grounds
To this extremity. Thy husband knew it all.
Æmil. My Husband?
Oth. Thy Husband.
Æmil. That she was false to Wedlock?
Oth. I, with Cassio: had she been true,
If Heaven would make me such another world,
Of one entire and perfect Chrysolite,
I'd not have sold her for it.
Æmil. My Husband?
Oth. I, 'twas he that told me on her first,
An honest man he is, and hates the slime
That sticks on filthy deeds.
Æmil. My Husband?
Oth. What needs this iterance, woman?
I say thy Husband.
Æmil. Oh Mistris,
Villany had made mocks with love:
My Husband say she was false?
Othe. He, woman;
I say thy husband: do'st understand the word?
My friend, thy husband; honest, honest Iago.
Æmil. If he say so, may his pernicious Soul
Rot half a grain a day: he lies to'th'heart,
She was too fond of her most filthy Bargain.
Oth. Hah?
Æmil. Do thy worst:
This deed of thine is no more worthy Heaven,
Than thou wast worthy her.
Oth. Peace, you were best.
Æmil. Thou hast not half that power to do me harm
As I have to be hurt. Oh gull, oh dolt,
As ignorant as durt: thou hast done a deed

(I care not for thy word) I'll make thee known,
Though I loſt twenty lives, Help, help, hoa, help:
The Moor hath kill'd my Miſtreſs. Murther, murther.

Enter Montano, Gratiano, and Jago.

Mon. What is the matter? How now, General?
Æmil. Oh, are you come, Jago: You have done well,
That men muſt lay their Murthers on your neck.
Gra. What is the matter?
Æmil. Diſprove this Villain, if thou be'ſt a man,
He ſays thou told'ſt him that his wife was falſe:
I know thou didſt not: Thou'rt not ſuch a Villain.
Speak, for my heart is full.
Jago. I told him what I thought,
And told no more
Than what he found himſelf was apt and true.
Æmil. But did you ever tell him,
She was falſe?
Jago. I did.
Æmil. You told a Lie, an odious damned Lie:
Upon my ſoul a Lie; a wicked Lie.
She falſe with Caſſio?
Did you ſay with Caſſio?
Jago. With Caſſio, Miſtreſs,
Go to, charm your tongue.
Æmil. I will not charm my tongue;
I am bound to ſpeak,
My Miſtreſs here lies murthered in her bed.
All. Oh heavens forefend.
Æmil. And your reports have ſet the Murther on.
Othel. Nay, ſtare not, Maſters,
It is true indeed.
Gra. 'Tis a ſtrange Truth.
Mont. Oh monſtrous Act.
Æmil. Villany, villany, villany:
I think upon't, I think: I ſmel't: O Villany:
I thought ſo then: I'll kill my ſelf for grief,
O villany, villany?
Jago. What, are you mad?
I charge you, get you home.
Æmil. Good Gentlemen, let me have leave to ſpeak:
'Tis proper I obey him; but not now:
Perchance, Jago, I will ne're go home.
Othel. Oh, oh, oh.
Æmil. Nay, lay thee down and roar:
For thou haſt kill'd the ſweeteſt innocent,
That e're did lift up eye.
Othel. Oh ſhe was foul!
I ſcarce did know you, Uncle, there lies your Niece,
Whoſe breath (indeed) theſe hands have newly ſtopp'd:
I know this Act ſhews horrible and grim.
Gra. Poor Deſdemona:
I am glad thy Father's dead,
Thy match was mortal to him; and pure grief
Shore his old thred in twain. Did he live now,
This ſight would make him do a deſperate turn:
Yea, curſe his better Angel from his ſide,
And fall to Reprobance.
Othel. 'Tis pitiful, but yet Jago knows,
That ſhe with Caſſio hath the act of ſhame
A thouſand times committed. Caſſio confeſt it,
And ſhe did gratifie his amorous works,
With that Recognizance and Pledge of Love,
Which I firſt gave her: I ſaw it in his hand:
It was a Handkerchief, an Antick Token
My Father gave my Mother.
Æmil. Oh heaven! Oh heavenly Powers!
Jago. Come, hold your peace.
Æmil. 'Twill out. 'Twill out, I peace?
No, I will ſpeak as liberal as the North,
Let Heaven, and Men, and Devils, let them all,
All, all, cry ſhame againſt me, yet I'll ſpeak.
Jago. Be wiſe and get you home.
Æmil. I will not.
Gra. Fie, your ſword upon a woman.
Æmil. Oh, thou dull Moor,
That Handkerchief thou ſpeak'ſt of
I found by fortune, and did give my husband,
For often, with a ſolemn earneſtneſs,
(More than indeed belong'd to ſuch a Trifle)
He begg'd of me, to ſteal it.
Jago. Villanous Whore.
Æmil. She give it Caſſio? Alas I found it,
And I did giv't my husband,
Jago. Filth, thou lieſt.
Æmil. By heaven I do not, I do not, Gentlemen:
Oh murd'rous Coxcomb, what ſhould ſuch a fool
Do with ſo good a wife?
Othel. Are there no ſtones in heaven,
But what ſerve for the Thunder?
Precious Villain.
Gra. The woman falls:
Sure he hath kill'd his Wife.
Æmil. I, I; Oh lay me by my Miſtreſs ſide.
Gra. He's gone, but his Wife's kill'd.
Mon. 'Tis a notorious Villain: take you this weapon,
Which I have recover'd from the Moor:
Come, guard the door without, let him not paſs,
But kill him rather: I'll after that ſame Villain,
For 'tis a damned Slave. [Exit.
Othel. I am not valiant neither:
But every Puny whipſter gets my Sword.
But why ſhould honour out-live honeſty?
Let it go all.
Æmil. What did thy Song boad, Lady?
Hark, canſt thou hear me? I will play the Swan,
And die in Muſick: Willough, willough, willough.
Moor, ſhe was chaſt: ſhe lov'd thee, cruel Moor:
So come my ſoul to bliſs, as I ſpeak true:
So ſpeaking as I think, alas, I die.
Othel. I have another weapon in this Chamber,
It was a Sword of Spain, the Ice brooks temper:
Oh here it is: Uncle, I muſt come forth.
Gra. If thou attempt it, it will coſt thee dear;
Thou haſt no weapon, and perforce muſt ſuffer.
Othel. Look in upon me then, and ſpeak with me,
Or naked as I am I will aſſault thee.
Gra. What is the matter?
Othel. Behold, I have a weapon:
A better never did it ſelf ſuſtain
Upon a Souldiers Thigh. I have ſeen the day,
That with this little Arm, and this good Sword,
I have made my way through more impediments,
Than twenty times you ſtop. But (oh vain boaſt)
Who can controul his fate? 'Tis not ſo now,
Be not afraid, though you do ſee me weapon'd:
Here is my Journeys end, here is my But,
And very Sea-mark of my utmoſt Sail.
Do you go back diſmaid? 'Tis a loſt fear,
Man but a Ruſh againſt Othello's breaſt,
And he retires. Where ſhould Othello go?
Now: How doſt thou look now? Oh ill-Starr'd wench,
Pale as thy Smock: When we ſhall meet at compt,
This look of thine will hurl my Soul from Heaven,
And Fiends will ſnatch at it. Cold, cold, my Girl?
Even like thy Chaſtity. O curſed, curſed Slave!
Whip me, ye Devils.
From the poſſeſſion of this heavenly ſight:
Blow me about in winds, and roaſt me in Sulphur,
Waſh me in ſteep-down gulfs of liquid Fire.
Oh Deſdemona! Dead, Deſdemona: Dead, dead. Oh, oh!

Enter Lodovico, Caſſio, Montano, and Jago with Officers.

Lod. Where is this raſh, and moſt unfortunate man?
Othel. That's he that was Othello: Here I am.

Lod.

Lod. Where is that Viper?
Bring the Villain forth.
Oth. I look down towards his feet; but that's a Fable,
If that thou beeſt a Devil, I cannot kill thee.
Lod. Wrench his Sword from him.
Iago. I bleed, Sir, but not kill'd.
Oth. I am not ſorry neither, I'd have thee live:
For in my ſenſe, 'tis happineſs to die.
Lod. Oh thou, Othello, that was once ſo good,
Faln in the practice of a curſed Slave,
What ſhall be ſaid to thee?
Oth. Why any thing:
An honourable Murderer, if you will:
For nought I did hate, but all in Honour.
Lod. This wretch hath part confeſt his Villany:
Did you and he conſent in Caſſio's Death?
Oth. I.
Caſ. Dear General, I never gave you cauſe,
Oth. I do believe it, and I ask your pardon:
Will you, I pray, demand that demy-Devil,
Why he hath thus enſnar'd my Soul and Body.
Iag. Demand me nothing: what you know, you know:
From this time forth, I never will ſpeak word.
Lod. What? not to pray?
Gra. Torments will ope your lips.
Oth. Well, thou do'ſt beſt.
Lod. Sir,
You ſhall underſtand what hath befaln,
(Which as I think, you know not) here is a Letter
Found in the pocket of the ſlain Roderigo,
And here another, the one of them imports
The Death of Caſſio, to be undertook
By Roderigo.
Oth. O Villain!
Caſſio. Moſt heatheniſh, and moſt groſs.
Lod. Now, here's another diſcontented paper
Found in his pocket too: and this it ſeems
Roderigo meant t'have ſent this damned Villain:
But that (belike) Iago in the interim
Came in, and ſatisfi'd him.
Oth. Oh thou pernicious Caitiff;
How came you (Caſſio) by that Handkerchief
That was my Wives?
Caſ. I found it in my Chamber:
And he himſelf confeſt it but even now,
That there he dropt it for a ſpecial purpoſe,
Which wrought to his deſire.
Oth. O Fool, Fool, Fool!
Caſ. There is beſides, in Roderigo's Letter,
How he upbraids Iago, that he made him
Brave me upon the Watch: whereon it came
That I was caſt: and even but now he ſpake
(After long ſeeming dead) Iago hurt him,
Iago ſet him on.
Lod. You muſt forſake this room, and go with us:
Your power, and your command is taken off,
And Caſſio rules in Cyprus. For this Slave,
If there be any cunning Cruelty,
That can torment him much, and hold him long,
It ſhall be his. You ſhall cloſe Priſoner reſt,
Till that the Nature of your fault be known
To the Venetian State. Come, bring away.
Oth. Soft you; a word or two before you go:
I have done the State ſome ſervice, and they know't:
No more of that. I pray, you in your Letters,
When you ſhall theſe unlucky deeds relate,
Speak of me, as I am. Nothing extenuate,
Nor ſet down ought in malice.
Then muſt you ſpeak,
Of one that lov'd not wiſely, but too well:
Of one, not eaſily Jealous, but being wrought,
Perplexed in the extream: Of one, whoſe hand
(Like the baſe Indian) threw a Pearl away
Richer than all his Tribe: Of one, whoſe ſubdu'd Eyes,
Albeit unuſed to the melting mood,
Drop tears as faſt as the Arabian Trees
Their Medicinable gum. Set you down this:
And ſay beſides, that in Aleppo once,
Where a malignant, and a Turbond-Turk
Beat a Venetian, and traduc'd the State,
I took by th' throat the circumciſed Dog,
And ſmote him, thus.
Lod. Oh bloudy period.
Gra. All that is ſpoke is marr'd.
Oth. I kiſt thee, ere I kill'd thee: No way but this,
Killing my ſelf, to die upon a kiſs. [Dies.
Caſ. This did I fear, but thought he had no Weapon:
For he was great of heart.
Lod. Oh Spartan Dog:
More fell than Anguiſh, Hunger, or the Sea:
Look on the Tragick Loading of this Bed:
This is thy work: The Object poyſons ſight,
Let it be hid. Gratiano, keep the Houſe,
And ſeize upon the Fortunes of the Moor,
For they ſucceed on you. To you, Lord Governour,
Remains the Cenſure of this hellish Villain:
The time, the place, the torture, oh inforce it.
My ſelf will ſtraight aboard, and to the State,
This heavy Act, with heavy heart relate. [Exeunt.

THE TRAGEDY OF ANTHONY and CLEOPATRA.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Demetrius, and Philo.

Philo. NAY, but this dotage of our General
O're-flows the measure: Those his goodly Eyes
That o're the Files and Musters of the War,
Have glow'd like plated Mars,
Now bend, now turn
The Office and Devotion of their view
Upon a Tawny Front. His Captains heart,
Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst
The Buckles on his brest, reneges all temper,
And is become the Bellows and the Fan
To cool a Gypsies Lust.

Enter Anthony, and Cleopatra, her Ladies; the Train, with Eunuchs fanning her.

Look where they come:
Take but good note, and you shall see him
The tripple Pillar of the World transform'd
Into a Strumpets Fool. Behold and see.

Cleo. If it be Love indeed, tell me how much?

Ant. There's beggery in the love that can be reckon'd.

Cleo. I'll set a bourn how far to be belov'd.

Ant. Then must thou needs find out new Heaven, new Earth.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. News (my good Lord) from Rome,

Ant. Rate me, the summ.

Cleo. Nay hear them Anthony.
Fulvia perchance is angry: or who knows,
If the scarce-bearded Cæsar have not sent
His powerful Mandate to you. Do this, or this;
Take in that Kingdom, and infranchise that:
Perform't, or else we damn thee.

Ant. How, my Love?

Cleo. Perchance? Nay, and most like;
You must not stay here longer, your dismission
Is come from Cæsar, therefore hear it Anthony.
Where's Fulvia's Process? (Cæsars I would say) both?
Call in the Messengers: as I am Egypts Queen,
Thou blushest Anthony, and that blood of thine
Is Cæsars Homager: else so thy Cheeks pay shame,
When shrill-tongu'd Fulvia scolds. The Messengers.

Ant. Let Rome in Tyber melt, and the wide Arch
Of the raign'd Empire fall: Here is my space,
Kingdoms are Clay: Our dungy Earth alike
Feeds Beast as Man; the Nobleness of life
Is to do thus: when such a mutual pair,
And such a twain can do't, in which I bind,
On pain of punishment, the World to weet
We stand up Peerless.

Cleo. Excellent falshood:
Why did he marry Fulvia, and not love her?
I'll seem the Fool I am not. Anthony will be himself.

Ant. But stirr'd by Cleopatra.
Now for the love of love, and her soft hours,
Let's not confound the time with Conference harsh;
There's not a minute of our lives should stretch
Without some pleasure now. What sport to night?

Cleo. Hear the Ambassadors.

Ant. Fie wrangling Queen:
Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh,
To weep: whose every passion fully strives
To make it self (in Thee) fair, and admir'd.
No Messenger but thine, and all alone, to night
We'll wander through the streets, and note
The qualities of people. Come my Queen,
Last night you did desire it. Speak not to us.

[Exeunt with the Train.

Dem. Is Cæsar with Anthonius priz'd so slight?

Philo. Sir, sometimes when he is not Anthony,
He comes too short of that great Property
Which still should go with Anthony.

Dem. I am full sorry, that he approves the common Lyar, who thus speaks of him at Rome: but I will hope of better deeds to morrow. Rest you happy. [Exeunt.

Enter Enobarbus, Lamprius, a Soothsayer, Rannius, Lucillius, Charmian, Iras, Mardian, the Eunuch, and Alexas.

Char. L. Alexas, sweet Alexas, most any thing Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the Soothsayer that you prais'd to th' Queen? Oh! that I knew this Husband, which you say, must change his Horns with Garlands.

Alex. Soothsayer.

Sooth. Your will?

Char. Is this the Man? Is't you, Sir, that know things?

Sooth. In Natures infinite Book of Secrecy, a little I can read.

Alex. Shew him your hand.

Enob. Bring in the Banquet quickly: Wine enough, Cleopatra's health to drink.

Char. Good Sir, give me good Fortune.

Sooth.

Sooth. I make not, but foreſee.
Char. Pray then, foreſee me one.
Sooth. You ſhall be yet far fairer than you are.
Char. He means in fleſh.
Iras. No, you ſhall paint when you are old.
Char. Wrinkles forbid.
Alex. Vex not his patience, be attentive.
Char. Huſh.
Sooth. You ſhall be more beloving, than beloved.
Char. I had rather heat my Liver with drinking.
Alex. Nay, hear him.
Char. Good now, ſome excellent Fortune. Let me be Married to three Kings in a Forenoon, and Widow them all: Let me have a Child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do Homage. Find me to marry me with Octavius Cæſar, and Companion me with my Miſtreſs.
Sooth. You ſhall out-live the Lady whom you ſerve.
Char. Oh excellent, I love long life better than Figs.
Sooth. You have ſeen and proved a fairer former Fortune, than that which is to approach.
Char. Then belike my Children ſhall have no names: Prithee how many Boyes and Wenches muſt I have?
Sooth. If every of your wiſhes had a Womb, and foretel every wiſh, a Million.
Char. Out Fool, I forgive thee for a Witch.
Alex. You think none but your ſheets are privy to your wiſhes.
Char. Nay come, tell Iras hers.
Alex. We'll know all our Fortunes.
Enob. Mine, and moſt of our Fortunes to night, ſhall be drunk to Bed.
Iras. There's a Palm preſages Chaſtity, if nothing elſe.
Char. E'ne as the o're-flowing Nylus preſageth Famine.
Iras. Go you wild Bedfellow, you cannot Soothſay.
Char. Nay, if an oily Palm be not a fruitful Prognoſtication, I cannot ſcratch mine Ear. Prithee tell her but a Workyday Fortune.
Sooth. Your Fortunes are alike.
Iras. But how, but how, give me particulars.
Sooth. I have ſaid.
Iras. Am I not an inch of Fortune better than ſhe?
Char. Well, if you were but an inch of Fortune better than I: where would you chooſe it?
Iras. Not in my Husbands Noſe.
Char. Our worſer thoughts Heavens mend.
Alexas. Come, his Fortune, his Fortune. Oh let him Marry a Woman that cannot go, ſweet Iſis, I beſeech thee, and let her die too, and give him a worſe, and let worſe follow worſe, till the worſt of all follow him laughing to his Grave, Fifty-fold a Cuckold. Good Iſis, hear me this Prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight: good Iſis, I beſeech thee.
Char. Amen, dear Goddeſs, hear that Prayer of the people. For, as it is a heart-breaking to ſee a handſome man looſe-wiv'd, ſo it is a deadly ſorrow, to behold a foul Knave Uncuckold'd: therefore, dear Iſis, keep decorum, and Fortune him accordingly.
Char. Amen.
Alex. Loe now, if it lay in their hands to make me a Cuckold, they would make themſelves Whores, but they'd do't.

Enter Cleopatra.

Enob. Huſh, Here comes Anthony.
Char. Not he, the Queen.
Cleo. Saw you my Lord?
Enob. No, Lady.
Cleo. Was he not here?
Char. No, Madam.
Cleo. He was diſpos'd to mirth, but on the ſudden A Roman thought had ſtruck him.
Enobarbus.
Enob. Madam.
Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither: where's Alexas?
Alex. Here at your ſervice.
My Lord approaches.

Enter Anthony with a Meſſenger.

Cleo. We will not look upon him:
Go with us. [Exeunt.
Meſſ. Fulvia thy Wife,
Firſt came into the Field.
Ant. Againſt my Brother Lucius.
Meſſ. I, but ſoon that War had end,
And the times ſtate
Made Friends of them, jointing their force 'gainſt Cæſar;
Whoſe better iſſue in the War of Italy,
Upon the firſt encounter drave them.
Ant. Well, what worſt.
Meſſ. The nature of bad news infects the Teller.
Ant. When it concerns the Fool or Coward: On.
Things that are paſt, are done, with me. 'Tis thus,
Who tells me true, though in his Tale lye Death,
I hear him as he flatter'd.
Meſſ. Labienus (this is ſtiff-news)
Hath with his Parthian Force
Extended Aſia: from Euphrates his conquering
Banner ſhook, from Syria to Lydia,
And to Ionia, whilſt——
Ant. Anthony thou would'ſt ſay.
Meſſ. Oh, my Lord.
Ant. Speak to me home,
Mince not the general tongue, name
Cleopatra as ſhe is call'd in Rome:
Rail thou in Fulvia's phraſe, and taunt thy faults
With ſuch full Licenſe, as both Truth and Malice
Have power to utter. Oh then we bring forth Weeds,
When our quick Winds lye ſtill, and our ills told us
Is as our Ear-ring are: fare thee well a while.
Meſſ. At your Noble pleaſure. [Exit Meſſenger.

Enter another Meſſenger.

Ant. From Scicion how the news? ſpeak there.
1 Meſſ. The man from Scicion,
Is there ſuch an one?
2 Meſſ. He ſtayes upon you will.
Ant. Let him appear:
Theſe ſtrong Egyptian Fetters I muſt break,
Or loſe my ſelf in dotage.

Enter another Meſſenger with a Letter.

What are you?
3 Meſſ. Fulvia thy Wife is dead.
Ant. Where died ſhe?
Meſſ. In Scicion, her length of ſickneſs,
With what elſe more ſerious,
Import to thee to know, this bears.
Ant. Forbear me,
There's a great ſpirit gone, thus did I deſire it:
What our contempts do often hurl from us,
We wiſh it ours again, the preſent pleaſure,
By revolution lowring, does become
The oppoſite of it ſelf: ſhe's good being gone,
The hand could pluck her back, that ſhov'd her on.
I muſt from this Queen break off:
Ten thouſand harms, more than the ills I know
My idleneſs doth hatch.

Enter Enobarbus.

How now, Enobarbus.
Enob. What's your pleaſure, Sir?
Ant. I muſt with haſt from hence.

Enob.

Eno. Why then we kill all our Women. We ſee how mortal an unkindneſs is to them, if they ſuffer our departure, death's the word.

Anth. I muſt be gone,

Eno. Under a compelling an occaſion, let women die. It were pitty to caſt them away for nothing, though between them and a great cauſe, they ſhould be eſteemed nothing. Cleopatra catching but the leaſt noiſe of this, dies inſtantly: I have ſeen her, die twenty times upon far poorer moment: I do think there is mettle in death, which commits ſome loving act upon her, ſhe hath ſuch a celerity in dying.

Ant. She is cunning paſt mans thought.

Eno. Alack, Sir, no, her paſſions are made of nothing but the fineſt part of pure love. We cannot call her winds and waters, ſighs and tears: they are greater ſtorms and Tempeſts than Almanacks can report. This cannot be cunning in her: if it be, ſhe makes a ſhowre of Rain as well as Jove.

Ant. Would I had never ſeen her.

Eno. Oh Sir, you had then left unſeen a wonderful piece of work, which not to have been bleſt withal, would have diſcredited your Travel.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Sir!

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Fulvia?

Ant. Dead.

Eno. Why Sir, give the gods a thankful Sacrifice: when it pleaſeth their Deities to take the wife of a man from him, it ſhews to man the Tailors of the earth: comforting therein, that when old Robes are worn out, there are members to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the caſe to be lamented: this grief is crown'd with Conſolation, your old Smock brings forth a new Petticoat, and indeed the tears live in an Onion, that ſhould water this ſorrow.

Ant. The buſineſs ſhe hath broached in the State,
Cannot endure my abſence.

Eno. And the buſineſs you have broach'd here cannot be without you, eſpecially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your aboad.

Ant. No more like Anſwers:
Let our Officers
Have notice what we propoſe. I ſhall break
The cauſe of our Expedience to the Queen,
And get her love to part. For not alone
The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches
Do ſtrongly ſpeak to us: but the letters too
Of many our contriving friends in Rome,
Petition us at home. Sextus Pompeius
Hath given thee dare to Ceſar, and commands
The Empire of the Sea. Our ſlippery people
Whoſe love is never link'd to the deſerver,
Till his deſerts are paſt, begin to throw
Pompey the great, and all his dignities
Upon his Son, who high in Name and Power,
Higher than both in bloud and life, ſtands up
For the main Souldier. Whoſe quality going on,
The ſides oth'world may danger. Much is breeding,
Which like the Courſers hare, hath yet but life,
And not a Serpents poyſon. Say our pleaſure,
To ſuch whoſe place is under us, requires
Our quick remove from hence.

Eno. I ſhall do't. [Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Alexas, and Iras.

Cleo. Where is he?

Char. I did not ſee him ſince.

Cleo. See where he is,
Who's with him, what he do's:
I did not ſend you. If you find him ſad,
Say I am dancing: if in mirth, report
That I am ſudden ſick. Quickly, and return.

Cha. Madam, methinks if you did love him dearly,
You do not hold the method, to enforce
The like from him.

Cleo. What ſhould I do, I do not?

Char. In each thing give him way, croſs him in nothing.

Cleo. Thou teacheſt like a fool: the way to loſe him.

Char. Tempt him not ſo too far. I wiſh forbear,
In time we hate that which we often fear.

Enter Anthony.

But here comes Anthony.

Cleo. I am Sick, and ſullen.

Ant. I am ſorry to give breathing to my purpoſe.

Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian, I ſhall fall,
It cannot be thus long, the ſides of Nature
Will not ſuſtain it.

Ant. Now, my dereſt Queen.

Cleo. Pray you ſtand farther from me,

Ant. What's the matter?

Cleo. I know by that ſame eye there's ſome good news.
What! ſaies the married woman you may go?
Would ſhe had never given you leave to come,
Let her not ſay 'tis I that keep you here,
I have no power upon you: Hers you are.

Ant. The gods beſt know.

Cleo. Oh never was there Queen
So mightily betrayed: yet at the firſt
I ſaw the treaſons planted.

Ant. Cleopatra.

Cleo. Why ſhould I think you can be mine, and true
(Though you ſwearing ſhake the Throned gods)
Who have been falſe to Fulvia?
Riotous madneſs,
To be entangled with thoſe mouth-made vows,
Which break themſelves in ſwearing.

Ant. Moſt ſweet Queen.

Cleo. Nay pray you ſeek no colour for your going,
But bid farewel, and go:
When you ſued ſtaying,
Then was the time for words: No going then,
Eternity was in our Lips, and Eyes,
Bliſs in our brows bent; none our parts ſo poor,
But was a race of Heaven. They are ſo ſtill,
Or thou the greateſt Souldier of the world,
Art turn'd the greater Lyar.

Ant. How now, Lady?

Cleo. I would I had thy inches, thou ſhould'ſt know
There were a heart in Egypt.

Ant. Hear me, Queen:
The ſtrong neceſſity of time, commands
Our ſervices a while: but my full heart
Remains in uſe with you. Our Italy
Shines o're with civil Swords; Sextus Pompeius
Makes his approaches to the Port of Rome,
Equality of two Domeſtick powers,
Breed ſcrupulous faction: the hated grown to ſtrength
Are newly grown to Love: the condemn'd Pompey,
Rich in his Fathers honour, creeps a pace
Into the hearts of ſuch, as have not thrived
Upon the preſent ſtate, whoſe numbers threaten,
And quietneſs grown ſick of reſt, would purge
By any deſperate change: My more particular,
And that which moſt with you ſhould ſave my going,
Is Fulvia's death.

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom,
It does from childiſhneſs. Can Fulvia die?

Ant. She's dead, my Queen,
Look here, and at thy Soveraign leiſure read
The Garboyls ſhe awak'd: at the laſt, beſt,
See when, and where ſhe died.

Cleo. O moſt falſe love!
Where be the ſacred Viols thou ſhould'ſt fill

With

With ſorrowful water? now I ſee, I ſee,
In Fulvia's death, how mine receiv'd ſhall be.
Ant. Quarrel no more, but be prepar'd to know
The purpoſes I bear: which are, or ceaſe,
As you ſhall give th'advice. By the fire
That quickens Nilus ſlime, I go from hence
Thy Souldier, Servant, making Peace or War,
As thou affect'ſt.
Cleo. Cut my Lace, Charmian, come,
But let it be, I am quickly ill, and well,
So Anthony loves.
Ant. My precious Queen forbear,
And give true evidence to his Love, which ſtands
An honourable Trial.
Cleo. So Fulvia told me.
I prithee turn aſide, and weep for her,
Then bid adieu to me, and ſay the tears
Belong to Egypt. Good now, play one Scene
Of excellent diſſembling, and let it look
Like perfect honour.
Ant. You'll heat my bloud no more?
Cleo. You can do better yet: but this is meetly.
Ant. Now by my Sword.
Cleo. And Target. Still he mends.
But this is not the beſt. Look prithee, Charmian,
How this Herculean Roman does become
The carriage of his chafe.
Ant. I'le leave you Lady.
Cleo. Courteous Lord, one word:
Sir, you and I muſt part, but that's not it:
Sir, you and I have lov'd, but there's not it:
That you know well, ſomething it is I would:
Oh, my oblivion is a very Anthony.
And I am all forgotten.
Ant. But that your Royalty
Holds idleneſs your ſubject, I ſhould take you
For Idleneſs it ſelf.
Cleo. 'Tis ſweating labour,
To bear ſuch idleneſs ſo near the heart
As Cleopatra this. But, Sir, forgive me,
Since my becomings kill me, when they do not
Eye well to you. Your honour calls you hence.
Therefore be deaf to my unpittied Folly,
And all the gods go with you. Upon your Sword
Sit Lawrell'd victory, and ſmooth ſucceſs
Be ſtrew'd before your feet.
Ant. Let us go.
Come: Our ſeparation ſo abides and flies,
That thou reſiding here, goeſt yet with me,
And I hence fleeting, here remain with thee.
Away. [Exeunt.

Enter Octavius reading a Letter, Lepidus, and their Train.

Caeſ. You may ſee Lepidus, and henceforth know,
It is not Cæſars Natural voice, to hate
One great Competitor. From Alexandria
This is the news: he fiſhes, drinks, and waſtes
The Lamps of night in revells: Is not more manlike
Than Cleopatra: nor the Queen of Ptolomy
More Womanly than he. Hardly gave audience,
Or did vouchſafe to think he had Partners. You
Shall find there a man, who is th'abſtract of all faults;
That all men follow.
Lep. I muſt not think
There are evils enow to darken all his goodneſs,
His faults in him, ſeem as the ſpots of Heaven,
More fiery by nights blackneſs; Hereditary,
Rather than purchaſt: what he cannot change,
Than what he chooſes.
Caeſ. You are too indulgent. Let's grant it is
Amiſs to tumble on the bed of Ptolomy,
To give a Kingdom for a Mirth, to ſit
And keep the turn of Tipling with a Slave,
To reel the ſtreets at Noon, and ſtand the Buffet
With knaves that ſmell of ſweat: Say this becomes him
(As his compoſure muſt be rare indeed, Whom theſe things cannot blemiſh) yet muſt Anthony
No way excuſe his ſoyls, when we do bear
So great weight in his Lightneſs. If he fill'd
His vacancy with his Voluptuouſneſs,
Full ſurfeits, and the drineſs of his bones,
Call on him for't. But to confound ſuch time,
That drums him from his ſport, and ſpeaks as loud
As his own State, and ours, 'tis to be chid:
As we rare Boyes, who being mature in knowledge,
Pawn their experience to their preſent pleaſure,
And ſo rebel to judgement.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Lep. Here's more news.
Meſ. Thy biddings have been done, and every hour
Moſt Noble Caeſar, ſhalt thou have report
How 'tis abroad. Pompey is ſtrong at Sea,
And it appears, he is belov'd of thoſe
That only have fear'd Caeſar: to the ports
The diſcontents repair, and mens reports
Give him much wrong'd.
Caeſ. I ſhould have known no leſs,
It hath been taught us from the primal ſtate,
That he which is, was wiſht, until he were:
And the ebb'd man,
Ne're lov'd till ne're worth love,
Comes fear'd, by being lack'd. This common body
Like to a Vagabond Flag upon the ſtream,
Goes to, and back, lacking the varying tyde
To rot it ſelf with motion.
Meſ. Caeſar, I bring thee word,
Menecrates and Menas, famous Pyrates,
Make the Sea ſerve them, which they ear and wound
With knells of every kind. Many hot inrodes
They make in Italy, the borders Maritime
Lack bloud to think on't, and fleſh youth to revolt,
No Veſſel can peep forth, but 'tis as ſoon
Taken as ſeen: for Pompeyes name ſtrikes more
Than could his War reſiſted.
Caeſar. Anthony.
Leave thy laſcivious Vaſſals. When thou once
Wert beaten from Medena, where thou ſlew'ſt
Hirtius and Panſa Conſuls, at thy heel
Did famine follow, whom thou fought'ſt againſt,
(Though daintily brought up) with patience more
Than Savages could ſuffer. Thou didſt drink
The ſtale of horſes, and the gilded Puddle
Which Beaſts would cough at. Thy pallat then did dain
The roughest Berry on the rudeſt Hedge.
Yea, like the Stag, when Snow the Paſture ſheets,
The barks of trees thou browſed'ſt. On the Alps,
It is reported thou did'ſt eat ſtrange fleſh,
Which ſome did die to look on: and all this
(It wounds thine honour that I ſpeak it now)
Was born ſo like a Souldiers, that thy cheek
So much as I lank'd not.
Lep. 'Tis pitty of him.
Caeſ. Let his ſhames quickly
Drive him to Rome, 'tis time we twain
Did ſhew our ſelves ith'Field, and to that end
Aſſemble we immediatly councel, Pompey
Thrives in our Idleneſs.
Lep. To morrow, Caeſar,
I ſhall be furniſh'd to inform you rightly
Both what by Sea and Land I can be able
To front this preſent time. (wel.
Caeſ. Till which encounter, it is my buſineſs too. Fare-
Lep. Farewel my Lord, what you ſhall know mean time
Of ſtirs abroad, I ſhall beſeech you, Sir,

To

To let me be partaker.
Cæſ. Doubt not, ſir, I knew it for my bond. [Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Mardian.

Cleo. Charmian.
Char. Madam.
Cleo. Ha, ha, give me to drink Mandragoras.
Char. Why, Madam?
Cleo. That I might ſleep out this great gap of time:
My Anthony is away.
Char. You think of him too much.
Cleo. O 'tis treaſon.
Char. Madam, I truſt not ſo.
Cleo. Thou, Eunuch Mardian?
Mar. What's your highneſs pleaſure?
Cleo. Not now to hear thee ſing. I take no pleaſure
In ought an Eunuch has: 'Tis well for thee,
That being unſeminaried, thy freer thoughts
May not fly forth of Egypt, Haſt thou Affections?
Mar. Yes, gracious Madam.
Cleo. Indeed?
Mar. Not in deed, Madam, for I can do nothing
But what indeed is honeſt to be done:
Yet have I fierce Affections, and think
What Venus did with Mars.
Cleo. Oh Charmian;
Where think'ſt thou he is now? Stands, or ſits he?
Or does he walk? Or is he on his horſe?
Oh happy horſe to bear the weight of Anthony!
Do bravely, horſe, for wot'ſt thou whom thou mov'ſt,
The demy Atlas of this Earth, the Arme
And Burgonet of man. He's ſpeaking now.
Or murmuring, where's my Serpent of old Nile,
(For ſo he call's me:) Now I feed my ſelf
With moſt delicious poyſon. Think on me
That am with Phœbus amorous pinches black,
And wrinkled deep in time. Broad-fronted Cæſar,
When thou waſt here above the ground, I was
A morſel of a Monarch; and great Pompey
Would ſtand and make his eyes grow in my brow,
There would he anchor his aſpect, and die
With looking on his life.

Enter Alexas from Cæſar.

Alex. Soveraign of Egypt, hail.
Cleo. How much art thou like Mark Anthony?
Yet coming from him, that great Med'cine hath
With his Tinct gilded thee.
How goes it with my brave Mark Anthony?
Alex. Laſt thing he did (dear Queen)
He kiſt the laſt of many doubled kiſſes,
This Orient Pearl. His ſpeech ſticks in my heart.
Cleo. Mine ear muſt pluck it thence.
Alex. Good friend, quoth he:
Say the firm Roman to great Egypt ſends
This treaſure of an Oyſter: at whoſe foot
To mend the petty preſent, I will piece
Her opulent Throne, with Kingdoms. All the Eaſt,
(Say thou) ſhall call her Miſtris. So he nodded,
And ſoberly did mount an Arme-gaunt Steed,
Who neigh'd ſo high, that what I would have ſpoke,
Was beaſtly dumb by him.
Cleo. What was he ſad or merry?
Ale. Like to the time oth'year, between the extreams
Of hot and cold, he was not ſad nor merry.
Cleo. Oh well divided diſpoſition: Note him:
Note him good Charmian, 'tis the man; but note him.
He was not ſad, for he would ſhine on thoſe
That make their looks by his. He was not merry,
Which ſeem'd to tell them, his remembrance lay
In Egypt with his joy, but between both.
Oh heavenly mingle? Be'ſt thou ſad, or merry,
The violence of either thee becomes,
So do's it no man elſe. Met'ſt thou my Poſts?
Alex. I, Madam, twenty ſeveral Meſſengers,
Why do you ſend ſo thick?
Cleo. Who's born that day, when I forget to ſend to Anthony, ſhall die a Begger. Ink and paper, Charmian.
VVelcom my good Alexas. Did I, Charmian, ever love Cæſar ſo?
Char. Oh that brave Cæſar.
Cleo. Be choak'd with ſuch another Emphaſis,
Say the brave Anthony.
Char. The valiant Cæſar.
Cleo. By Iſis, I will give thee bloudy teeth,
If thou with Cæſar Paragon again
My man of men.
Char. By your moſt gracious pardon,
I Sing but after you.
Cleo. My Sallad dayes,
When I was green in judgement, cold in bloud,
To ſay, as I ſaid then. But come, away,
Get me Ink and Paper,
He ſhall have every day ſeveral greetings, or I'le unpeople Ægypt. [Exeunt.

Enter Pompey, Menecrates, and Menas in warlike manner.

Pom. If the great gods be juſt, they ſhall aſſiſt
The deeds of juſteſt men.
Mene. Know worthy Pompey, that which they do delay, they not deny.
Pom. While we are ſuitors to their Throne, decayes the thing we ſue for.
Mene. We, ignorant of our ſelves,
Beg often our own harms, which the wiſe Powers
Deny us for our good: ſo find we profit
By loſing of our Prayers.
Pom. I ſhall do well:
The People love me, and the Sea is mine;
My powers are Creſcent, and my Auguring hope
Says it will come to th'full. Mark Anthony
In Ægypt ſits at dinner, and will make
No wars without doors. Cæſar gets mony where
He loſes hearts: Lepidus flatters both,
Of both is flatter'd: but he neither loves,
Nor either cares for him.
Mene. Cæſar and Lepidus are in the field,
A mighty ſtrength they carry.
Pom. Where have you this? 'Tis falſe.
Mene. From Silvia, Sir.
Pom. He dreams: I know they are in Rome together
Looking for Anthony: but all the charms of Love,
Salt Cleopatra ſoften thy wand lip,
Let witchcraft join with beauty: Luſt with both,
Tie up the Libertine in a field of Feaſts,
Keep his Brain fuming. Epicurean Cooks,
Sharpen with cloyleſs ſawce his Appetite.
That ſleep and feeding may prorogue his Honour,
Even 'till a Lethied dulneſs ———

Enter Varrius.

How now Varrius?
Var. This is moſt certain, that I ſhall deliver:
Mark Anthony is every hour in Rome
Expected. Since he went from Ægypt, 'tis
A ſpace for farther travel.
Pom. I could have given leſs matter
A better ear. Menas, I did not think
This amorous Surfeiter would have donn'd his Helm
For ſuch a petty War: His Souldierſhip
Is twice the other twain: But let us rear
The higher our Opinion, that our ſtirring
Can from the lap of Ægypt's Widow pluck

The near Luſt-wearied Anthony.
Mene. I cannot hope,
Cæſar and Anthony ſhall well greet together:
His Wife that's dead, did treſpaſſes to Cæſar,
His Brother warr'd upon him, although I think
Not mov'd by Anthony.
Pom. I know not, Menas,
How leſſer Enmities may give way to greater.
Were't not that we ſtand up againſt them all:
'Twere pregnant they ſhould ſquare between themſelves,
For they have entertained cauſe enough
To draw their Swords: but how the fear of us
May Cement their diviſions, and bind up
The petty difference, we yet not know:
Be't as our gods will have't; it only ſtands
Our lives upon, to uſe our ſtrongeſt hands:
Come, Menas. [Exeunt.

Enter Enobarbus and Lepidus.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed,
And ſhall become you well, to intreat your Captain
To ſoft and gentle ſpeech.
Enob. I ſhall intreat him
To anſwer like himſelf: if Cæſar move him,
Let Anthony look over Cæſar's head,
And ſpeak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter,
Were I the wearer of Anthonio's Beard,
I would not ſhave't to day.
Lep. 'Tis not a time for private ſtomaching.
Enob. Every time ſerves for the matter that is then born in't.
Lep. But ſmall to greater matters muſt give way.
Enob. Not if the ſmall come firſt.
Lep. Your ſpeech is paſſion: but pray you ſtir
No Embers up. Here comes the Noble Anthony.

Enter Anthony and Ventidius.

Enob. And yonder Cæſar.

Enter Cæſar, Mecænas, and Agrippa.

Ant. If we compoſe well here, to Parthia.
Hark, Ventidius.
Cæſ. I do not know, Mecænas, ask Agrippa.
Lep. Noble Friends,
That which combin'd us was moſt great, and let not
A leaner action rend us. What's amiſs,
May it be gently heard. When we debate
Our trivial difference loud, we do commit
Murther in healing wounds. Then noble Partners,
The rather, for I earneſtly beſeech,
Touch you the ſowreſt points with ſweeteſt terms,
Nor curſtneſs grow to th'matter.
Ant. 'Tis ſpoken well:
Were we before our Armies and to fight,
I ſhould do thus. [Flouriſh.
Cæſ. Welcom to Rome.
Ant. Thank you.
Cæſ. Sit.
Ant. Sit, Sir.
Cæſ. Nay then.
Ant. I learn you take things ill, which are not ſo:
Or being, concern you not.
Cæſ. I muſt be laught at, if, or for nothing, or a little,
Should ſay my ſelf offended, and with you
Chiefly i'th'world. More laught at, that I ſhould
Once name you derogately: when to ſound your name
It not concern'd me.
Ant. My being in Ægypt, Cæſar, what was't to you?
Cæſ. No more than my reſiding here at Rome
Might be to you in Ægypt: yet if you there
Did practiſe on my ſtate, your being in Ægypt
Might be my queſtion.
Ant. How intend you, practis'd?
Cæſ. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent,
By what did here befal me. Your Wife and Brother
Made wars upon me, and their conteſtation
Was Theam for you, you were the word of war.
Ant. You do miſtake your buſineſs, my brother never Did urge me in his Act: I did inquire it,
And have my learning from ſome true reports
That drew their Swords with you. Did he not rather Diſcredit my Authority with yours,
And make the wars alike againſt my Stomach,
Having alike your cauſe? Of this, my Letters
Before did ſatisfie you. If you patch a quarrel:
As matter whole you have to take it with,
It muſt not be with this.
Cæſ. You praiſe your ſelf, by laying defects of judgement to me: but you patch up your excuſes.
Ant. Not ſo, not ſo:
I know you could not lack, I am certain on't,
Very neceſſity of this thought, that I
Your partner in the cauſe 'gainſt which he fought,
Could not with graeceful eyes attend thoſe Wars
Which fronted mine own peace. As for my wife,
I would you had her Spirit, in ſuch another,
The third o't'h world is yours, which with a Snaffle,
You may pace eaſie, but not ſuch a wife.
Enob. Would we had all ſuch wives, that the men might go to wars with the women.
Ant. So much uncurbable, her Garboiles (Cæſar)
Made out of her impatience: which not wanted
Shrewdneſs of policy too: I grieving grant,
Did you too much diſquiet, for that you muſt,
But ſay I could not help it.
Cæſ. I wrote to you, when rioting in Alexandria you
Did pocket up my Letters: and with taunts
Did beg my Miſſive out of audience.
Ant. Sir, he fell upon me, ere admitted, then:
Three Kings I had newly feaſted, and did want
Of what I was i'th'morning: but next day
I told him of my ſelf, which was as much
As to have askt him pardon. Let this Fellow
Be nothing of our ſtrife: if we contend
Out of our queſtion wipe him.
Cæſ. You have broken the Article of your Oath, which you ſhall never have tongue to charge me with.
Lep. Soft, Cæſar.
Ant. No, Lepidus, let him ſpeak,
The Honour is Sacred which he talks on now,
Suppoſing that I lackt it: but on, Cæſar,
The Article of my Oath.
Cæſ. To lend me Arms, and aid when I requir'd them,
The which you both denied.
Ant. Neglected rather.
And then when poyſoned hours had bound me up
From mine own knowledge, as nearly as I may,
I'le play the penitent to you. But mine honeſty,
Shall not make poor my greatneſs, nor my power
Work without it. Truth is, that Fulvia,
To have me out of Ægypt, made Wars here,
For which my ſelf, the ignorant motive, do
So far ask pardon, as befits mine Honour
To ſtoop in ſuch a caſe.
Lep. 'Tis nobly ſpoken.
Mece. If it might pleaſe you, to enforce no further
The griefs between ye: to forget them quite.
Were to remember, that the preſent need,
Speaks to atone you.
Lep. Worthily ſpoken, Mecenas.
Eno. Or if you borrow one anothers love for the inſtant, you may when you hear no more words of Pompey return it again: you ſhall have time to wrangle in, when you have nothing elſe to do.
Ant. Thou art a Souldier, only ſpeak no more.

Enob.

Enobar. That truth ſhould be ſilent, I had almoſt forgot.

Anth. You wrong this preſence, therefore ſpeak no more.

Enob. Go to then: your Conſiderate ſtone.

Cæſar. I do not much diſlike the matter, but
The manner of his ſpeech: for't cannot be,
We ſhall remain in friendſhip, our conditions
So differing in their acts. Yet if I knew,
What Hoop ſhould hold us ſtaunch from edge to edge
Ath' world, I would purſue it.

Agri. Give me leave, Cæſar.

Caſ. Speak, Agrippa.

Agri. Thou haſt a Siſter by thy Mother's ſide, admir'd Octavia? Great Mark Anthony is now a Widower.

Caſ. Say not, ſay Agrippa; if Cleopatra heard you, your proof were well deſerved of raſhneſs.

Ant. I am not married, Cæſar: let me hear Agrippa further ſpeak.

Agri. To hold you in perpetual amitie,
To make you Brothers, and to knit your hearts
With an unſlipping knot, take Anthony
Octavia to his wife: whoſe beauty claims
No worſe a husband than the beſt of men:
Whoſe vi tue, and whoſe general graces ſpeak
That which none elſe can utter. By this marriage,
All little Jealouſies which now ſeem great,
And all great fears, which now import their dangers,
Would then be nothing. Truths would be tales,
Where now half tales be truths: her love to both
Would each to other, and all loves to both
Draw after her. Pardon what I have ſpoke,
For 'tis a ſtudied, not a preſent thought,
By duty ruminated.

Anth. Will Cæſar ſpeak?

Caſ. Not 'till he hears how Anthony is toucht
With what is ſpoken already.

Anth. What power is in Agrippa,
If I would ſay Agrippa, be it ſo,
To make this good?

Caſ. The power of Cæſar,
And his power unto Octavia.

Anth. May I never
(To this good purpoſe, that ſo fairly ſhews)
Dream of impediment: let me have thy hand
Further this act of grace: and from this hour,
The heart of Brothers govern in our Loves,
And ſway our great Deſigns.

Caſ. There's my hand:
A Siſter I bequeath you, whom no Brother
Did ever love ſo dearly. Let her live
To join our Kingdoms, and our hearts, and never Fly off our Loves again.

Lep. Happily, Amen.

Ant. I did not think to draw my Sword againſt Pompey,
For he hath ſtrange courteſies, and great
Of late upon me. I muſt thank him only,
Leſt my remembrance ſuffer ill report:
At heel of that defie him.

Lepi. Time calls upon's,
Of us muſt Pompey preſently be ſought,
Or elſe he ſeeks out us.

Anth. Where lies he?

Caſ. About the Mount-Meſena.

Anth. What is his ſtrength by land?

Caſ. Great, and increaſing:
But by Sea he is an abſolute Maſter.

Anth. So is the Frame,
Would we had ſpoke together. Haſte we for it,
Yet e're we put our ſelves in Arms, diſpatch we
The buſineſs we have talkt of.

Caſ. With moſt gladneſs.
And do invite you to my Siſters view,
Whither ſtraight I'le lead you.

Ant. Let us, Lepidus, not lack your company.

Lep. Noble Anthony, not ſickneſs ſhould detain me.

[Exeunt omnes.

Manent Enobarbus, Agrippa, Mecænas.

Mec. Welcom from Ægypt, Sir.

Eno. Half the heart of Cæſar, worthy Mecænas. My honourable Friend Agrippa.

Agri. Good Enobarbus.

Mecæ. We have cauſe to be glad, that matters are ſo well digeſted: you ſtay'd well by't in Ægypt.

Enob. I Sir, we did ſleep day out of countenance, and made the night light with drinking.

Mecæ. Eight wild-Boars roaſted whole at a breakfaſt: and but twelve perſons there. Is this true?

Enob. This was but as a Fly by an Eagle: we had much more monſtrous matter of Feaſt, which worthily deſerved noting.

Mecanas. She's a moſt triumphant Lady, if report be ſquare to her.

Enob. When ſhe firſt met Mark Anthony, ſhe purs'd up his heart upon the river of Cydnus.

Agrip. There ſhe appear'd indeed: or my reporter devis'd well for her.

Enob. I will tell you,
The Barge ſhe ſat in, like a burniſht Throne
Burnt on the water; the Poop was beaten Gold,
Purple the Sails: and ſo perfumed, that
The Winds were Love-ſick.
With them the Oars were Silver,
Which to the tune of Flutes kept ſtroke, and made
The water which they beat, to follow faſter:
As amorous of her ſtrokes. For her own perſon,
It beggar'd all deſcription, ſhe did lye
In her Pavillion, cloth of Gold, of Tiſſue,
O're-picturing that Venus, where we ſee
The fancie out-work nature. On each ſide her
Stood pretty Dimpled Boyes, like ſmiling Cupids,
With divers-colour'd Fans, whoſe wind did ſeem
To glove the delicate cheeks which they did cool,
And what they undid did.

Agrip. Oh rare for Anthony.

Eno. Her Gentlewomen, like the Nereides,
So many Mere-maids tended her i'th'eyes,
And made their bends adornings. At the Helm,
A ſeeming Mere-maid ſteers: the Silken Tackles
Swell with the touches of thoſe Flower-ſoft hands,
That yearly frame the office. From the Barge
A ſtrange inviſible perfume hits the ſenſe
Of the adjacent Wharfs. The City caſt
Her people out upon her: and Anthony
Enthron'd i'th' Market place, did ſit alone,
Whiſtling to th'air: which but for vacancy,
Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too,
And made a gap in Nature.

Agrip. Rare Ægyptian.

Eno. Upon her landing, Anthony ſent to her,
Invited her to Supper: ſhe replyed,
It ſhould be better, he became her gueſt:
Which ſhe entreated; our Courteous Anthony,
Whom nere the word of no woman heard ſpeak,
Being barber'd ten times o're, goes to the Feaſt:
And for his ordinary, payes his heart,
For what his eyes eat only.

Agrip. Royal wench:
She made great Cæſar lay his Sword to bed,
He ploughed her, and ſhe cropt.

Eno. I ſaw her once
Hop forty Paces through the publick ſtreet,
And having loſt her breath, ſhe ſpoke, and panted,
That ſhe did make defect, perfection,
And breathleſs power breathe forth.

Mecæ. Now Anthony muſt leave her utterly

Eno.

Eno. Never, he will not:
Age cannot wither her, nor cuſtom ſteal
Her infinite variety: other women cloy
The appetites they feed, but ſhe makes hungry,
Where moſt ſhe ſatisfies. For vileſt things
Become themſelves in her, that the holy Prieſts
Bleſs her, when ſhe is Riggiſh.
Meca. If Beauty, Wiſdom, Modeſty, can ſettle
The heart of Anthony: Octavia's
A bleſſed Lottery to him.
Agrip. Let us go. Good Enobarbus, make your ſelf my gueſt, whil'ſt you abide here.
Eno. Humbly, Sir, I thank you. [Exeunt.

Enter Anthony, Cæſar, Octavia between them.

Anth. The world, and my great office, will
Sometimes divide me from your boſom.
Octa. All which time, before the gods my knee ſhall bow my prayers to them for you.
Anth. Good night Sir. My Octavia,
Read not my blemiſhes in the world's report:
I have not kept my ſquare, but that to come
Shall all be done by th' Rule: good night, dear Lady.
Octa. Good night, Sir.
Cæſar. Good night. [Exit.

Enter Soothſayer.

Ant. Now ſirrah: do you wiſh your ſelf in Ægypt?
Sooth. Would I had never come from thence, nor you thither.
Ant. If you can, your reaſon?
Sooth. I ſee it in my motion: have it not in my tongue,
But yet hie you to Ægypt again.
Antho. Say to me, whoſe Fortune ſhall riſe higher, Cæſar's or mine?
Sooth. Cæſar's. Therefore (oh Anthony) ſtay not by his ſide.
Thy Dæmon (that's thy Spirit which keeps thee) is Noble, Couragious, high, unmatchable,
Where Cæſar's is not. But near him thy Angel
Becomes a fear: as being o're-powr'd, and therefore
Make ſpace enough between you.
Anth. Speak this no more.
Sooth. To none but thee no more, but when to thee,
If thou doſt play with him at any game,
Thou art ſure to loſe: And of that Natural luck
He beats thee 'gainſt the odds. Thy Luſter thickens,
When he ſhines by: I ſay again, thy Spirit
Is all afraid to govern thee near him:
But he alway is noble.
Anth. Get thee gone:
Say to Ventidius I would ſpeak with him. [Exit.
He ſhall to Parthia, be it art or hap,
He hath ſpoken true. The very Dice obey him,
And in our ſports my better cunning faints,
Under his chance, if we draw lots, he ſpeeds,
His Cocks do win the Battel, ſtill of mine,
When it is all to naught: and his Quailes ever
Beat mine (in hoopt) at odd's. I will to Ægypt:
And though I make this marriage for my peace,
I'th'Eaſt my pleaſure lies. Oh come, Ventidius.

Enter Ventidius.

You muſt to Parthia, your Commiſſion's ready:
Follow me and receiv't. [Exeunt.

Enter Lepidus, Mecænas, and Agrippa.

Lepidus. Trouble your ſelf no farther: pray you haſten your Generals after.
Agr. Sir, Mark Anthony will e'en but kiſs Octavia, and we'll follow.
Lep. 'Till I ſhall ſee you in your Souldier's dreſs,
Which will become you both, Farewel.
Meca. We ſhall, as I conceive the Journey, be at the Mount before you Lepidus.
Lep. Your way is ſhorter, my purpoſes do draw me much about, you'll win two dayes upon me.
Both. Sir, good ſucceſs.
Lep. Farewel. [Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras and Alexas.

Cleo. Give me ſome Muſick: Muſick, moody food of us that trade in love.
Omnes. The Muſick, hoa.

Enter Mardian the Eunuch.

Cleo. Let it alone, let's to Billiards: come Charmian.
Char. My arm is ſore, beſt play with Mardian.
Cleo. As well a woman with an Eunuch play'd, as with a woman. Come, you'll play with me, Sir?
Mardi. As well as I can, Madam
Cleo. And when good will is ſhewed,
Though't come too ſhort,
The Actor may plead pardon. I'le none now,
Give me mine Angle, we'll to the'River, there
My Muſick playing far off, I will betray
Tawny-fine fiſhes, my bended hook ſhall pierce
Their ſlimie jaws: and, as I draw them up,
I'le think them every one an Anthony,
And ſay, ah, ha; y'are caught.
Char. 'Twas merry when you wager'd on your Angling, when your diver did hang a ſalt fiſh on his hook, which he with fervencie drew up.
Cleo. That time? Oh times:
I laught him out of patience, and that night
I laught him into patience, and next morn,
E're the ninth hour I drunk him to his bed:
Then put my Tires and Mantles on him, whil'ſt
I wore his Sword Philippan. Oh from Italie.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Ramm thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears,
That long time have been barren.
Meſ. Madam, Madam.
Cleo. Anthony's dead,
If thou ſay ſo, Villain, thou kil'ſt thy Miſtreſs:
But well and free, if thou ſo yield him.
There is Gold, and here
My bleweſt veins to kiſs: a hand that Kings
Have lipt, and trembled kiſſing.
Meſ. Firſt, Madam, he is well.
Cleo. Why there's more Gold.
But, Sirrah, mark, we uſe
To ſay, the dead are well: bring me to that,
The Gold I give, will I melt and pour
Down thy ill-uttering throat.
Meſ. Good Madam, hear me.
Cleo. Well, go to, I will:
But there's no goodneſs in thy face, if Anthony
Be free and healthful; ſo tart a favour
To trumpet ſuch good tidings. If not well,
Thou ſhould'ſt come like a Fury crown'd with Snakes,
Not like a formal man.
Meſ. Wilt pleaſe you hear me?
Cleo. I have a mind to ſtrike thee e're thou ſpeak'ſt;
Yet if thou ſay, Anthony lives, 'tis well,
Or friends with Cæſar, or not Captain to him,
I'le ſee thee in a ſhowre of Gold, and hail
Rich Pearls upon thee.
Meſ. Madam, he's well.
Cleo. Well ſaid.
Meſ. And Friends with Cæſar.

Cleo. Th'art an honeſt man.
Meſ. Cæſar, and he, are greater Friends than ever.
Cleo. Mark thee a Fortune from me.
Meſ. But yet, Madam.
Cleo. I do not like but yet, it does allay
The good precedence, fie upon but yet,
But yet is as a Jaylor to bring forth
Some monſtrous Malefactor. Prithee, Friend,
Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear,
The good and bad together: he's friends with Cæſar,
In ſtate of health thou ſay'ſt, and thou ſayeſt, free.
Meſ. Free, Madam! no: I made no ſuch ſport,
He's bound unto Octavia.
Cleo. For what good turn?
Meſ. For the beſt turn i'th' bed.
Cleo. I am pale, Charmian.
Meſ. Madam, he's married to Octavia.
Cleo. The moſt infectious Peſtilence upon thee.
[Strikes him down.
Meſ. Good Madam, patience.
Cleo. What ſay you? [Strikes him.
Hence horrible Villain, or I'le ſpurn thine eyes
Like balls before me: I'le unhair thy head:
[She hales him up and down.
Thou ſhalt be whipt with Wyer, and ſtew'd in brine,
Smarting in lingring pickle.
Meſ. Gracious Madam,
I, that do bring the news, made not the match.
Cleo. Say 'tis not ſo, a Province I will give thee,
And make thy Fortunes proud: the blow thou had'ſt
Shall make thy peace, for moving me to rage,
And I will boot thee with what gift beſide
Thy modeſty can beg.
Meſ. He's married, Madam.
Cleo. Rogue, thou haſt liv'd too long. [Draw a knife.
Meſ. Nay then I'le run:
What mean you, Madam, I have made no fault. [Exit.
Char. Good Madam, keep your ſelf within your ſelf,
The man is innocent.
Cleo. Some Innocents ſcape not the thunderbolt:
Melt Ægypt into Nile; and kindled creatures
Turn all to Serpents. Call the ſlave again,
Though I am mad, I will not bite him: Call.
Char. He is afeard to come.
Cleo. I will not hurt him,
Theſe hands do lack Nobility, that they ſtrike
A meaner than my ſelf: ſince I my ſelf
Have given my ſelf the cauſe. Come hither, Sir.

Enter the Meſſenger again.

Though it be honeſt, it is never good
To bring bad news: give to a gracious Meſſage
An hoſt of tongues, but let ill tidings tell
Themſelves when they be felt.
Meſ. I have done my duty.
Cleo. Is he married?
I cannot hate thee worſer than I do,
If thou again ſay yes.
Meſ. He's married, Madam.
Cleo. The gods confound thee,
Doſt thou hold there ſtill?
Meſ. Should I lye, Madam?
Cleo. Oh, would thou did'ſt:
So half my Ægypt were ſubmerg'd and made
A Ciſtern for ſcal'd Snakes. Go get thee hence,
Had'ſt thou Narciſſus in thy face, to me
Thou would'ſt appear moſt ugly: He is married?
Meſ. I crave your highneſs pardon.
Cleo. He is married?
Meſ. Take no offence, that I would not offend you;
To puniſh me for what you make me do,
Seems much unequal: he's married to Octavia.
Cleo. Oh that his fault ſhould make a knave of thee,
That art not what thou art ſure of. Get thee hence,
The Merchandiſes which thou haſt brought from Rome,
Are all too dear for me:
Lie they upon thy hand, and be undone by'em.
Char. Good your Highneſs patience.
Cleo. In praiſing Anthony, I have diſprais'd Cæſar.
Char. Many times, Madam.
Cleo. I am paid for't now: lead me from hence,
I faint, oh Iras, Charmian: 'tis no matter.
Go to the fellow, good Alexas, bid him
Report the feature of Octavia, her years,
Her inclination, let him not leave out
The colour of her hair. Bring me word quickly.
Let him for ever go, let him not, Charmian,
Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,
The other way's a Mars. Bid you Alexas
Bring me word, how tall ſhe is: pity me, Charmian,
But do not ſpeak to me. Lead me to my Chamber.
[Exeunt.

Enter Pompy, at one door with Drum and Trumpet: at another Cæſar, Lepidus, Anthony, Enobarbus, Mecænas, Agrippa, Menas with Souldiers marching.

Pom. Your Hoſtages I have, ſo have you mine:
And we ſhall talk before we fight.
Cæſ. Moſt meet that firſt we come to words,
And therefore have we
Our written purpoſes before us ſent,
Which if thou haſt conſidered, let us know,
If it will tie up thy diſcontented Sword
And carry back to Sicily much tall youth,
That elſe muſt periſh here.
Pom. To you all three,
The Senators alone of this great world,
Chief Factors for the gods. I do not know,
Wherefore my Father ſhould revengers want,
Having a Son and Friends, ſince Julius Cæſar,
Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghoſted,
There ſaw you labouring for me. What was't
That mov'd pale Caſſius to conſpire? And what
Made the all-honour'd, honeſt Roman Brutus,
With the arm'd reſt, Courtiers of beauteous freedom,
To drench the Capitol, but that they would
Have one man but a man, and that is it
Hath made me rigge my Navie. At whoſe burthen,
The anger'd Ocean foams, with which I meant
To ſcourge th'ingratitude, that deſpightful Rome
Caſt on my Noble Father.
Cæſar. Take your time.
Ant. Thou canſt not fear us, Pompey, with thy ſails,
We'll ſpeak with thee at Sea. At land thou know'ſt
How much we do o're-count thee.
Pom. At Land indeed
Thou doſt o're-count me of my father's houſe.
But ſince the Cuckoo builds not for himſelf,
Remain in't as thou may'ſt.
Lepi. Be pleas'd to tell us,
(For this is from the preſent now you talk)
The offers we have ſent you.
Cæſar. There's the point.
Ant. Which do not be intreated to,
But weigh what it is worth embrac'd.
Cæſ. And what may follow to try a larger Fortune.
Pom. You have made me offer
Of Sicily, Sardinia: and I muſt
Rid all the Sea of Pirats: then, to ſend
Meaſures of Wheat to Rome: this 'greed upon,
To part with unhackt edges, and bear back
Our targets undinted.
Omnes. That's our offer.
Pom. Know then I came before you here,
A man prepar'd
To take this offer. But, Mark Anthony,

Put

Put me to ſome impatience: though I loſe
The praiſe of it by telling. You muſt know
When Cæſar and your Brother were at blowes,
Your Mother came to Sicily, and did find
Her welcom friendly.
Ant. I have heard it, Pompey,
And am well ſtudied for a liberal thanks,
Which I do owe you.
Pom. Let me have your hand:
I did not think, Sir, to have met you here.
Ant. The beds i'th'Eaſt are ſoft, and thanks to you,
That call'd me timelier than my purpoſe hither:
For I have gaind by't.
Cæſ. Since I ſaw you laſt, there's a change upon you.
Pom. Well, I know not,
What counts hard Fortune caſts upon my face,
But in my boſom ſhe ſhall never come,
To make my heart a vaſſal.
Lepi. Well met here.
Pom. I hope ſo, Lepidus, thus we are agreed:
I crave our compoſition my be written
And ſeal'd between us.
Cæſ. That's the next to do.
Pom. We'll feaſt each other, e're we part, and let's
Draw lots who ſhall begin.
Anth. That will I, Pompey.
Pompey. No, Anthony, take the lot: but firſt or laſt, your fine Ægyptian cookery ſhall have the fame, I have heard that Julius Cæſar grew fat with feaſting there.
Ant. You have heard much.
Pom. I have fair meaning, Sir.
Ant. And fair words to them.
Pom. Then ſo much have I heard.
And I have heard Apollodorus carried——
Eno. No more of that: he did ſo.
Pom. What, I pray you?
Eno. A certain Queen to Cæſar in a Materice.
Pom. I know thee now, how far'ſt thou, Souldier?
Eno. Well, and well am like to do, for I perceive
Four Feaſts are toward.
Pom. Let me ſhake thy hand,
I never hated thee: I have ſeen thee fight,
When I have envied thy behaviour.
Eno. Sir, I never lov'd you much, but I ha'prais'd ye,
When you have well deſerv'd ten times as much,
As I have ſaid you did.
Pom. Injoy thy plainneſs,
It nothing ill becomes thee:
A-board my Gally, I invite you all.
Will you lead, Lords?
All. Shew's the way, Sir.
Pom. Come. [Exeunt. Manent Enob. & Menas.
Men. Thy Father, Pompey, would ne're have made Treaty. You, and I have known, Sir.
Eno. At Sea, I think.
Men. We have, Sir.
Eno. You have done well by Water.
Men. And you by Land.
Eno. I will praiſe any man that will praiſe me, though it cannot be denied what I have done by Land.
Men. Nor what I have done by water.
Eno. Yes, ſomething you can deny for your own ſafety: you have been a good Thief by Sea.
Men. And you by Land.
Eno. There I deny my Land ſervice: but give me your hand, Menas, if your eyes had authority, here they might have two Thieves kiſſing.
Men. All mens faces are true, whatſoe're their hands are.
Enob. But there is ne're a fair VVoman, ha's a true Face.
Men. No ſlander, they ſteal hearts.
Eno. We came hither to fight with you.
Men. For my part, I am ſorry it is turn'd to a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his Fortune.
Eno. If he do, ſure he cannot weep't back again.
Men. Y'have ſaid, Sir, we look'd not for Mark Anthony here, pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?
Eno. Cæſar's Siſter is call'd Octavia.
Men. True, Sir, ſhe was the wife of Caius Marcellus.
Eno. But now ſhe is the wife of Marcus Anthonius.
Men. Pray ye, Sir.
Eno. 'Tis true.
Men. Then is Cæſar and he for ever knit together.
Eno. If I were bound to Divine of this unity, I would not Propheſie ſo.
Men. I think the policy of that purpoſe, made more in the Marriage than the Love of the parties.
Eno. I think ſo too. But you ſhall find the band that ſeems to tie their friendſhip together, will be the very ſtranger of their Amitie: Octavia is of a holy, cold, and ſtill converſation.
Men. Who would not have his wife ſo?
Eno. Not he that himſelf is not ſo: which is Mark Anthony: he will to his Ægyptian diſh again: then ſhall the ſighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Cæſar, and (as I ſaid before) that which is the ſtrength of their Amity, ſhall prove the immediate Author of their variance. Anthony will uſe his affection where it is. He married but his occaſion here.
Men. And thus it may be. Come, Sir, will you a-board? I have a health for you.
Eno. I ſhall take it, Sir: we have us'd our Throats in Ægypt.
Men. Come, let's away. [Exeunt.

Muſick playes.
Enter two or three Servants with a Banquet.

1. Here they'll be, man: ſome o'their Plants are ill rooted already, the leaſt wind i'th'world will blow them down.
2. Lepidus is high-colour'd.
1. They have made him drink Alms drink.
2. As they pinch one another by the diſpoſition he cries out, no more; reconciles them to his entreaty, and himſelf to th'drink.
1. But it raiſes the greater war between him and his diſcretion.
2. Why this it is to have a name in great men's Fellowſhip: I had as lieve have a Reed that will do me no ſervice, as a Partizan I could not heave.
1. To be call'd into a huge Sphere, and not to be ſeen to move in't, are the holes where eyes ſhould be, which pitifully diſaſter the cheeks.

A Sennet ſounded.
Enter Cæſar, Anthony, Pompey, Lepidus, Agrippa, Mecænas, Enobarbus, Menas, with other Captains.

Ant. Thus do they, Sir: they take the flow o'th'Nile
By certain ſcale, i'th'Pyramid: they know
By th'height, the lowneſs, or the mean: If dearth
Or Foizon follow. The higher Nilus ſwells,
The more it promiſes as it ebbs, the Seedſman
Upon the ſlime and Ooze ſcatters his grain,
And ſhortly comes to Harveſt.
Lep. Y'have ſtrange Serpents there?
Ant. I, Lepidus.
Lep. Your Serpent of Ægypt, is bred now of your mud by the operation of the Sun: ſo is your Crocodile.
Ant. They are ſo.
Pom. Sir, and ſome Wine: A health to Lepidus.
Lep. I am not ſo well as I ſhould be:
But I'le ne're out.
Eno. Not 'till you have ſlept: I fear me you'll be in 'till then.
Lep. Nay certainly, I have heard the Ptolemie's Py-ramisis are very goodly things: without contradiction I have heard that.

Men. Pompey, a word.

Pom. Say in mine ear, what is't?

Men. Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee, Captain, And hear me speak a word.

Pom. For me 'till anon. [Whisper in's Ear.

This Wine for Lepidus.

Lep. What manner o'thing is your Crocodile?

Ant. It is shap'd, sir, like it self, and it is as broad as it hath breadth; It is just so high as it is, and moves with it's own organs. It lives by that which nourisheth it, and the Elements once out of it, it transmigrates.

Lep. What colour is it of!

Ant. Of it's own colour too,

Lep. 'Tis a strange Serpent.

Ant. 'Tis so, and the tears of it are wet.

Cæs. Will this description satisfie him?

Ant. With the Health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very Epicure.

Pom. Go hang, Sir, hang: tell me of that? Away: Do as I bid you. Where's the Cup I call'd for?

Men. If for the sake of Merit thou wilt hear me, rise from the stool.

Pom. I think th'art mad: the matter?

Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy Fortunes.

Pom. Thou hast serv'd me with much faith: what's else to say? Be jolly, Lords.

Anth. These Quick-sands, Lepidus. Keep off them, for you sink.

Men. Wilt thou be Lord of all the world?

Pom. What saist thou?

Men. Wilt thou be Lord of the whole world? That's twice.

Pom. How should that be?

Men. But entertain it, and though thou think me poor, I am the man will give thee all the world.

Pom. Hast thou drunk well?

Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup, That if thou darst be, the earthly Jove: What e're the Ocean pales, or skie inclippes, Is thine, if thou wilt ha't.

Pom. Shew me which way.

Men. These three world-sharers, these Competitors Are in thy vessel. Let me cut the Cable. And when we are put off, fall to their throats: All there is thine.

Pom. Ah, this thou should'st have done, And not have spoken on't. In me 'tis villanie, In thee, 't had been good service: thou must know, 'Tis not my profit that does lead mine Honour: Mine Honour is, Repent that e're thy tongue, Hath so betrai'd thine act. Being done unknown, I should have found it afterwards well done: But must condemn it now: desist, and drink.

Men. For this I'le never follow Thy pall'd Fortunes more; Who seeks and will not take, when once 'tis offer'd, Shall never find it more.

Pom. This health to Lepidus.

Ant. Bear him a-shoar, I'le pledge it for him, Pompey.

Eno. Here's to thee, Menas.

Men. Enobarbus, welcom.

Pom. Fill 'till the cup be hid.

Eno. There's a strange Fellow, Menas.

Men. Why?

Eno. A bears the third part of the world, man: seest not?

Men. The third part, then he is drunk: would it were all, that it might go on wheels.

Eno. Drink thou, encrease the Reels.

Men. Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian Feast.

Ant. It ripens towards it: strike the Vessels hoa. Here's to Cæsar.

Cæsar. I could well forbear't, it's monstrous labour when I wash my brain, and it grows fouler.

Ant. Be a Child o'th'time.

Cæsar. Possess it, I'le make answer: but I had rather fast from all, four dayes, than drink so much in one.

Eno. Ha, my brave Emperour, shall we dance now the Ægyptian Bacchanals, and celebrate our drink?

Pom. Let's ha't, good Souldier.

Ant. Come, let's all take hands, 'Till that the conquering Wine hath steept our sense, In soft and delicate Lethe.

Eno. All take hands: Make battery to our ears with the loud Musick, The while, I'le place you, then the Boy shall sing. The holding every man shall bear as loud, As his strong sides can volly.

Musick Playes. Enobarbus places them hand in hand.

The Song.

Come thou Monarch of the Vine,
Plumpie Bacchus with pink eyne:
In thy Fattes our cares be drown'd:
With thy Grapes our hairs be crown'd.
Cup us 'till the world go round,
Cup us 'till the world go round.

Cæs. What would you more? Pompey, good night. Good Brother Let me request you of our graver business Frowns at this levity. Gentle Lords, let's part, You see we have burnt our cheek. Strong Enobarbe Is weaker than the wind, and mine own tongue Splits what it speaks: the wild disguise hath almost Antickt us all. What needs more words? good night. Good Anthony, your hand.

Pom. I'le try you on the shoar.

Ant. And shall, Sir, give's your hand.

Pom. Oh, Anthony, you have my Father's house. But what, we are Friends? Come down into the Boat.

Eno. Take heed you fall not, Menas; I'le not on shoar, No, to my Cabin: these Drumms, These Trumpets, Flutes: what, Let Neptune hear, we bid aloud farewel To these great Fellows. Sound and be hang'd, sound out. [Sound a Flourish with Drummes.

Eno. Hoo saies a, there's my Cap.

Men. Hoa, Noble Captain, come. [Exeunt.

Enter Ventidius as it were in a triumph, the dead body of Pacorus born before him.

Ven. Now darting Parthia art thou struck, and now Pleas'd Fortune does of Marcus Crassus death Make me revenger. Bear the King's Son's body, Before our Army, thy Pacorus Orades, Payes this for Marcus Crassus.

Roman. Noble Ventidius, Whilst yet with Parthian bloud thy Sword is warm, The Fugitive Parthians follow. Spurn through Media, Mesapotamia, and the shelters, whither The routed flie. So thy grand Captain Anthony Shall set thee on triumphant Chariots, and Put Garlands on thy head,

Ven. Oh Silius, Silius, I have done enough. A lower place, note well May make too great an act. For learn this, Silius, Better to leave undone, than by our deed Acquire too high a Fame, when him we serve's away. Cæsar and Anthony have ever won More in their officer, than person. Sossius,

One

One of my place in Syria, his Lieutenant,
For quick accumulation of renown,
Which atchiev'd by th'minute, loſt his favour.
Who does i'th'Wars more than his Captain can,
Becomes his Captain's Captain: and Ambition
(The Souldier's virtue) rather makes choice of loſs
Than gain, which darkens him.
I could do more to do Anthonius good,
But 'twould offend him. And in his offence,
Should my performance periſh.

Rom. Thou haſt, Ventidius, that, without the which a Souldier and his Sword grants ſcarce diſtinction: thou wilt write to Anthony.

Ven. I'le humbly ſignifie what in his name,
That magical word of War we have effected,
How with his Banners, and his well pai'd ranks,
The ne're-yet beaten Horſe of Parthia,
We have jaded out o'th'Field.

Rom. Where is he now?

Ven. He purpoſeth to Athens, whither with what haſt
The weight we muſt convey with's, will permit:
We ſhall appear before him. On there, paſs along.

[Exeunt.

Enter Agrippa at one door, Enobarbus at another.

Agri. What are the Brothers parted?

Eno. They have diſpatcht with Pompey, he is gone,
The other three are Sealing. Octavia weeps
To part from Rome: Cæſar is ſad, and Lepidus
Since Pompey's feaſt, as Menas ſayes, is troubled
With the Green-ſickneſs.

Agri. 'Tis a Noble Lepidus.

Eno. A very fine one: oh, how he loves Cæſar.

Agri. Nay but how dearly he adores Mark Anthony.

Eno. Cæſar? why he's the Jupiter of men.

Ant. VVhat's Anthony, the god of Jupiter?

Eno. Speak you of Cæſar? Oh? the non-pareil?

Agri. Oh Anthony, oh thou Arabian Bird!

Eno. VVould you praiſe Cæſar, ſay Cæſar, go no further.

Agri. Indeed he plied them both with excellent praiſes.

Eno. But he loves Cæſar beſt, yet he loves Anthony:
Ho, Hearts, Tongues, Figure,
Scribes, Bards, Poets, cannot
Think, ſpeak, caſt, write, ſing, number: ho,
His love to Anthony. But as for Cæſar,
Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.

Agri. Both he loves.

Eno. They are his Shards, and he their Beetle, ſo:
This is to Horſe: Adieu, Noble Agrippa.

Agri. Good Fortune worthy Souldier, and farewel.

Enter Cæſar, Anthony, Lepidus, and Octavia.

Antho. No farther, Sir.

Cæſar. You take from me a great part of my ſelf:
Uſe me well in't. Siſter, prove ſuch a wiſe
As my thoughts make thee, and as my fartheſt Band
Shall paſs on thy approof: moſt noble Anthony,
Let not the piece of Virtue which is ſet
Betwixt us, as the Cement of our love
To keep it builded, be the Ram to batter
The Fortune of it: for better might we
Have lov'd without this mean, if on both parts
This be not cheriſht.

Ant. Make me not offended in your diſtruſt.

Cæſ. I have ſaid.

Ant. You ſhall not find,
Though you be therein curious, the leaſt cauſe
For what you ſeem to fear, ſo the gods keep you,
And make the hearts of Romans ſerve your ends:
VVe will here part.

Cæſ. Farewel, my deareſt Siſter, fare thee well,
The Elements be kind to thee, and make
Thy Spirits all of comfort: fare thee well.

Octa. My Noble Brother.

Ant. The April's in her eyes, it is loves ſpring,
And theſe the ſhowers to bring it on: be chearful.

Octa. Sir, look well to my Husband's Houſe: and——

Cæſar. VVhat Octavia.

Octa. I'le tell you in your ear.

Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can
Her heart inform her tongue.
The Swan's doun feather
That ſtands upon the Swell at full of tide:
And neither way inclines.

Eno. VVill Cæſar weep?

Agri. He ha's a cloud in's face.

Eno. He were the worſe for that were he a Horſe, ſo is he being a man.

Agri. VVhy Enobarbus:
VVhen Anthony found Julius Cæſar dead,
He cryed almoſt to roaring: And he wept,
VVhen at Philippi he found Brutus ſlain.

Eno. That year indeed, he was troubled with a rheum,
VVhat willingly he did confound, he wail'd,
Believ't 'till I weep too.

Cæſ. No, ſweet Octavia,
You ſhall hear from me ſtill: the time ſhall not
Out-go my thinking on you.

Ant. Come Sir, come,
I'le wreſtle with you in my ſtrength of love:
Look here I have you: thus I let you go,
And give you to the gods.

Cæſ. Adieu, be happy.

Lep. Let all the number of the Stars give Light
To thy fair way.

Cæſ. Farewel, Farewel. [Kiſſes Octavia.

Ant. Farewel. Trumpets ſound. [Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. VVhere is the Fellow?

Alex. Half afeard to come.

Cleo. Go to, go to: Come hither, Sir.

Enter the Meſſenger as before.

Alex. Good Majeſtie, Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you, but when you are well pleas'd.

Cleo. That Herod's head, I'le have: but how? VVhen Anthony is gone, through whom I might command it:
Come thou near.

Meſ. Moſt gracious Majeſty.

Cleo. Did'ſt thou behold Octavia?

Meſ. I, dread Queen.

Cleo. VVhere?

Meſ. Madam, in Rome, I lookt her in the face: and ſaw her led between her Brother, and Mark Anthony.

Cleo. Is ſhe as tall as me?

Meſ. She is not, Madam.

Cleo. Did'ſt hear her ſpeak?
Is ſhe ſhrill tongu'd or low?

Meſ. Madam, I heard her ſpeak, ſhe is low voic'd.

Cleo. That's not ſo good: he cannot like her long.

Char. Like her? Oh Iſis: 'tis impoſſible.

Cleo. I think ſo, Charmian: dull of tongue, and dwarfiſh.
VVhat Majeſty is in her gate, remember
If e're thou look'ſt on Majeſty.

Meſ. She creeps; her motion and her ſtation are as one:
She ſhews a body, rather than a life,
A Statue, than a Breather.

Meſ. Is this certain?

Cleo. Or I have no obſervance.

Cha. Three in Ægypt cannot make better note.

Cleo. He's very knowing, I do perceiv't,
There's nothing in her yet.
The Fellow has good judgement.

Char. Excellent.
Cleo. Gueſs at her Years, I prythee.
Meſ. Madam, ſhe was a Widow.
Cleo. Widow? Charmian, hark.
Meſ. And I do think ſhe's thirty.
Cleo. Bear'ſt thou her face in mind? is't long or round?
Meſ. Round even to faultineſs.
Cleo. For the moſt part too, they are fooliſh that are ſo. Her hair what colour?
Meſ. Brown, Madam: and her Forehead.
As low as ſhe would wiſh it.
Cleo. There's Gold for thee,
Thou muſt not take my former ſharpneſs ill,
I will employ thee back again: I find thee
Moſt fit for buſineſs. Go, make thee ready,
Our Letters are prepar'd.
Char. A proper man.
Cleo. Indeed he is ſo: I repent me much
That ſo I harried him. Why methinks by him,
This Creature's no ſuch thing.
Char. Nothing, Madam.
Cleo. The man hath ſeen ſome Majeſty, and ſhould know.
Char. Hath he ſeen Majeſty? Iſis elſe defend: and ſerving you ſo long.
Cleo. I have one thing more to ask him yet, good Charmian: but 'tis no matter, thou ſhalt bring him to me where I will write; all may be well enough.
Char. I warrant you, Madam. [Exeunt.

Enter Anthony and Octavia.

Ant. Nay, nay Octavia, not only that,
That were excuſable, that and thouſands more
Of ſemblable import, but he hath wag'd
New Wars 'gainſt Pompey, Made his Will, and read it,
To publick Ear, ſpoke ſcantly of me,
When perforce he could not
But pay me terms of Honour: cold and ſickly
He vented then moſt narrow meaſure: lent me,
When the beſt hint was given him: he had lookt,
Or did it from his teeth.
Octa. Oh, my good Lord,
Believe not all, or if you muſt believe,
Stomach not all. A more unhappy Lady,
If this diviſion chance, ne're ſtood between
Praying for both parts:
The good gods will mock me preſently,
When I ſhall pray: oh bleſs my Lord and Husband,
Undo that Prayer: by crying out as loud,
Oh bleſs my Brother. Husband win, win Brother,
Prayes, and deſtroys the Prayer, no midway
'Twixt theſe extreams at all.
Ant. Gentle Octavia,
Let your beſt love draw to that point which ſeeks
Beſt to preſerve it: if I loſe mine Honour,
I loſe my ſelf: better I were not yours
Than yours ſo branchleſs. But as you requeſted,
Your ſelf ſhall go between's, the mean time, Lady,
I'll raiſe the preparation of a War
Shall ſtain your Brother, make your ſooneſt haſte
So your deſires are yours.
Octa. Thanks to my Lord,
The Jove of Power make me moſt weak, moſt weak,
Your reconciler: Wars 'twixt you twain would be,
As if the World ſhould cleave, and that ſlain men
Should fodder up the Rift.
Anth. When it appears to you where this begins,
Turn your diſpleaſure that way, for our faults
Can never be ſo equal, that your love
Can equally move with them. Provide your going,
Chooſe your own Company, and command what coſt
Your heart has mind to. [Exeunt.

Enter Enobarbus, and Eros.

Enob. How now, Friend Eros?
Eros. There's ſtrange News come, Sir.
Eno. What man?
Eros. Cæſar and Lepidus have made War upon Pompey.
Eno. This is old, what is the ſucceſs?
Eros. Cæſar having made uſe of him in the Wars 'gainſt Pompey: preſently denied him rivality, would not let him partake of the glory of the action, and not reſting here, accuſes him of Letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey. Upon his own appeal ſeizes him, ſo the poor third is up, 'till death enlarge his Confine.
Eno. Then would thou hadſt a pair of Chaps no more, and throw between them all the food thou haſt, they'll grind the other. Where's Anthony?
Eros. He's walking in the Garden thus, and ſpurns
The ruſh that lies before him. Cries, Fool Lepidus,
And threats the throat of that his Officer,
That murdred Pompey.
Eno. Our great Navy's rigg'd.
Eros. For Italy and Cæſar, more Domitius,
My Lord deſires you preſently: my News
I might have told hereafter.
Eno. 'Twill be naught, but let it be: bring me to Anthony.
Eros. Come, Sir. [Exeunt.

Enter Agrippa, Mecenas, and Cæſar.

Cæſ. Contemning Rome he has done all this, and more
In Alexandria: here's the matter of it:
I' th' Market-place on a Tribunal ſilver'd,
Cleopatra and himſelf in Chairs of Gold
Were publickly enthron'd: at the feet ſat
Cæſarion whom they call my Father's Son,
And all the unlawful Iſſue, that their luſt
Since then hath made between them. Unto her,
He gave the ſtabliſhment of Ægypt, made her
Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia, abſolute Queen.
Mec. This is the publick Eye?
Cæſ. I' th' common ſhew place where they exerciſe,
His Sons hither proclaim'd the King of Kings,
Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia
He gave to Alexander. To Ptolemy he aſſign'd,
Syria, Sicilia, and Phœnicia: ſhe
In th' abiliments of the Goddeſs Iſis
That day appear'd, and oft before gave audience,
As 'tis reported, ſo.
Mec. Let Rome be thus inform'd.
Agrip. Who queaſy with his inſolence already,
Will their good thoughts call from him.
Cæſ. The people know it,
And have now receiv'd his accuſations.
Agri. Whom do's he accuſe?
Cæſ. Cæſar, and that having in Sicily
Sextus Pompeius ſpoil'd, we had not rated him
His part o' th' Iſle. Then does he ſay, he lent me
Some ſhipping unreſtored. Laſtly he frets
That Lepidus of the Triumvirate, ſhould be depos'd,
And being that we detain all his Revenue.
Agri. Sir, this ſhould be anſwered.
Cæſ. 'Tis done already, and his Meſſenger gone:
I have told him Lepidus was grown too cruel,
That his high Authority abus'd,
And did deſerve his chance for what I have conquer'd,
I grant him part: but then in his Armenia,
And other of his conquer'd Kingdoms, I demand the like.
Mec. He'll never yield to that.
Cæſ. Nor muſt not then be yielded to in this.

Enter

Enter Octavia with her Train.

Oct. Hail Cæſar, and my Lord; hail, moſt dear Cæſar.
Cæſ. That ever I ſhould call thee Caſt-away.
Oct. You have not call'd me ſo, nor have you cauſe.
Cæſ. Why haſt thou ſtoln upon me thus? you came not Like Cæſar's Siſter; the Wife of Anthony
Should have an Army for an Uſher, and
The neighs of Horſe to tell of her approach,
Long e're ſhe did appear. The Trees by th' way
Should have born men, and expectation fainted
Longing for what it had not. Nay, the duſt
Should have aſcended to the Roof of Heaven,
Rais'd by your populous Troops: But you are come
A Market-maid to Rome, and have prevented
The oſtentation of our love; which left unſhewn,
Is often left unlov'd: we ſhould have met you
By Sea, and Land, ſupplying every ſtage
With an augmented greeting.
Oct. Good, my Lord,
To come thus was I not conſtrain'd, but did it
On my free-will. My Lord, Mark Anthony,
Hearing that you prepar'd for War, acquainted
My grieving Ear withal: whereon I begg'd
His pardon for return.
Cæſ. Which ſoon he granted,
Being an abſtract 'tween his Luſt, and him
Oct. Do not ſay ſo, my Lord.
Cæſ. I have Eyes upon him.
And his affairs come to me on the wind: where is he now?
Oct. My Lord, in Athens.
Cæſ. No, my moſt wronged Siſter, Cleopatra
Hath nodded him to her. He hath given his Empire
Up to a Whore, who now are levying
The Kings o' th' Earth for War. He hath diſſembled,
Bocchus the King of Lybia, Archilaus
Of Cappadocia, Philadelphos King
Of Paphlagonia: the Thracian King Adullas,
King Manchus of Arabia, King of Pont,
Herod of Jewry, Mithridates King
Of Comageat, Polemen and Amintas.
The King of Mede, and Lycaonia,
With a more larger Liſt of Scepters.
Oct. Aye me moſt wretched,
That have my heart parted betwixt two Friends,
That do afflict each other.
Cæſ. Welcome hither,
Your Letters did with-hold our breaking forth
'Till we perceiv'd both how you were wrong led,
And we in negligent danger: cheer your heart.
Be you not troubled with the time which drives
O're your content, theſe ſtrong neceſſities,
But let determin'd things to deſtiny
Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome:
Nothing more dear to me. You are abus'd
Beyond the mark of thought: and the high gods
To do you Juſtice, make his Miniſters
Of us, and thoſe that love you. Beſt of comfort,
And ever welcome to us.
Agrip. Welcome Lady.
Mec. Welcome, Dear Madam,
Each heart in Rome does love and pity you,
Only th' adulterous Anthony, moſt large
In his abominations, turns you off,
And gives his potent Regiment to a Trull
That noiſes it againſt us.
Oct. Is it ſo, Sir?
Cæſ. Moſt certain: Siſter, welcome; pray you
Be ever known to patience. My dear'ſt Siſter. [Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, and Enobarbus.

Cleo. I will be even with thee: doubt it not.
Enob. But why, why, why?
Cleo. Thou haſt foreſpoke my being in theſe Wars;
And ſay'ſt it is not fit.
Enob. Well: is it, is it?
Cleo. If not, denounc'd againſt us, why ſhould not we be there in perſon?
Enob. Well, I could reply: if we ſhould ſerve with Horſe and Mares together, the Horſe were merely loſt:
the Mares would bear a Souldier and his Horſe.
Cleo. What is't you ſay?
Enob. Your preſence needs muſt puzzle Anthony,
Take from his heart, take from his brain, take from's time,
What ſhould not then be ſpar'd. He is already
Traduc'd for Levity, and 'tis ſaid in Rome,
That Photinus an Eunuch, and your Maids
Mannage this War.
Cleo. Sink Rome, and their tongues rot
That ſpeak againſt us. A Charge we bear i' th' War,
And as the preſident of my Kingdom will Appear there for a man. Speak not againſt it,
I will not ſtay behind.

Enter Anthony and Camidius.

Enob. Nay I have done, here comes the Emperour.
Ant. Is it not ſtrange, Camidius,
That from Tarentum, and Brundiſium,
He could ſo quickly cut the Ionian Sea,
And take in Toryne? You have heard on't (Sweet?)
Cleo. Celerity is never more admir'd
Than by the negligent.
Ant. A good rebuke,
Which might have well becom'd the beſt of men
To taunt at ſlackneſs. Camidius, we,
Will fight with him by Sea.
Cleo. By Sea, what elſe?
Cam. Why will my Lord do ſo?
Ant. For that he dares us to't.
Enob. So hath my Lord dar'd him to ſingle fight.
Cam. I, and to wage his Battel at Pharſalia,
Where Cæſar fought with Pompey. But theſe offers
Which ſerves not for his vantage, he ſhakes off,
And ſo ſhould you.
Enob. Your Ships are not well mann'd,
Your Mariners are Muliters, Reapers, People,
Ingroſt by ſwift Impreſs. In Cæſar's Fleet
Are thoſe, that often have 'gainſt Pompey fought,
Their Ships are yare, yours heavy: no diſgrace
Shall fall you for refuſing him at Sea,
Being prepar'd for Land.
Ant. By Sea, by Sea.
Enob. Moſt worthy Sir, you therein throw away
The abſolute Souldierſhip you have by Land,
Diſtract your Army, which doth moſt conſiſt
Of War-markt-Footmen, leave unexecuted
Your own renowned knowledge, quite forgo
The way which promiſes aſſurance, and
Give up your ſelf merely to chance and hazard,
From firm Security.
Ant. I'll fight at Sea.
Cleo. I have ſixty Sails, Cæſar none better.
Ant. Our over-plus of ſhipping will we burn,
And with the reſt full-mann'd, from th' heart of Actium
Beat th' approaching Cæſar. But if we fail,
We then can do't at Land.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Thy buſineſs?
Meſ. The news is true, my Lord, he is deſcried,
Cæſar has taken Toryne.

Ant.

Ant. Can he be there in perſon? 'Tis impoſſible
Strange, that his power ſhould be ſo, Camidius,
Our nineteen Legions thou ſhalt hold by Land,
And our twelve thouſand Horſe. VVe'll to our Ship,
Away my Thetis.

Enter a Souldier.

How now, worthy Souldier?
Sould. Oh Noble Emperour, do not fight by Sea,
Truſt not to rotten planks: Do you miſdoubt
This Sword, and theſe my Wounds; let th' Egyptians
And the Phœnicians go a Ducking: we
Have us'd to conquer ſtanding on the Earth,
And fighting foot to foot.
Ant. Well, well, away. [Exeunt Ant. Cleo. and Enob.
Sould. By Hercules I think I am i' th' right.
Cam. Souldier thou art: but the whole action grows
Not in the power on't: ſo our Leaders lead,
And we are Womens men.
Sould. You keep by Land the Legions and the Horſe whole, do you not?
Ven. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Juſtius, Publicola, and Celius, are for Sea:
But we keep whole by Land. This ſpeed of Cæſar's
Carries beyond belief.
Sould. While he was yet in Rome
His power went out in ſuch diſtractions,
As begnil'd all Spies.
Cam. Who's his Lieutenant, hear you?
Sould. They ſay, one Towrus.
Cam. Well, I know the man.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſ. The Emperour calls Camidius.
Cam. With News the time's with Labour,
And throws forth each minute, ſome. [Exeunt.

Enter Cæſar with his Army, marching.

Cæſ. Towrus?
Tow. My Lord.
Cæſ. Strike not by Land.
Keep whole, provoke not Battel
'Till we have done at Sea. Do not exceed
The Preſcript of this Scroul: Our Fortune lyes
Upon this jump. [Exit.

Enter Anthony, and Enobarbus.

Ant. Set we our Squadrons on yond ſide o' th' Hill,
In Eye of Cæſar's Battel, from which place
We may the number of the Ships behold,
And ſo proceed accordingly. [Exit.

Camidius marching with his Land Army one way over the Stage, and Towrus the Lieutenant of Cæſar the other way: after their going in, is heard the noiſe of a Sea-fight. Alarum. Enter Enobarbus and Scarus.

Enob. Naught, naught, all naught, I can behold no longer:
Thantoniad, the Ægyptian Admiral,
With all their ſixty flie, and turn the Rudder:
To ſee't, mine Eyes are blaſted.

Enter Scarus.

Scar. Gods, and Goddeſſes, all the whole Synod of them!
Enob. What's thy paſſion?
Scar. The greater Cantle of the World is loſt
With very ignorance, we have kiſt away
Kingdoms, and Provinces.
Enob. How appears the fight?
Scar. On our ſide like the Token'd Peſtilence,
Where Death is ſure. Your ribauldred Nag of Ægypt,
(VVhom Leproſie o're) i' th' mid'ſt o' th' fight,
VVhen vantage like a pair of Twinns appear'd
Both of the ſame, or rather ours the Elder;
(The Breeze upon her) like a Cow in June,
Hoiſts Sails, and flies.
Enob. That I beheld:
Mine Eyes did ſicken at the ſight, and could not
Indure a further view.
Scar. She once being looſt,
The Noble ruine of her Magick, Anthony,
Claps on his Sea-wing, and (like a doating Mallard)
Leaving the Fight in heighth, flies after her:
I never ſaw an action of ſuch ſhame;
Experience, Man-hood, Honour ne're before,
Did violate ſo it ſelf.
Enob. Alack, alack.

Enter Camidius.

Cam. Our Fortune on the Sea is out of breath,
And ſinks moſt lamentably. Had our General
Been what he knew himſelf, it had gone well:
Oh he has given example for our flight;
Moſt groſly by his own.
Enob. I, are you thereabouts? Why then goodnight indeed.
Cam. Toward Peloponneſus are they fled.
Scar. 'Tis eaſie to't.
And there I will attend what further comes.
Cam. To Cæſar will I render
My Legions and my Horſe, ſix Kings already
Shew me the way of yielding.
Enob. I'll yet follow
The wounded chance of Anthony, though my reaſon
Sits in the Wind againſt me.

Enter Anthony with Attendants.

Ant. Hark, the Land bids me tread no more upon't,
It is aſham'd to bear me. Friends, come hither,
I am ſo lated in the World, that I
Have loſt my way for ever. I have a Ship
Laden with Gold, take that, divide it: flie,
And make your peace with Cæſar.
Omnes. Fly? Not we.
Ant. I have fled my ſelf, and have inſtructed Cowards
To run, and ſhew their Shoulders. Friends, be gone,
I have my ſelf reſolv'd upon a courſe,
Which has no need of you. Be gone,
My Treaſure's in the Harbour. Take it: Oh,
I follow'd that I bluſh to look upon,
My very Hairs do mutiny: for the white
Reprove the brown for raſhneſs, and they them
For fear, and doating. Friends be gone, you ſhall
Have Letters from me to ſome Friends, that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you look not ſad:
Nor make replies of lothneſs, take the hint
Which my deſpair proclaims. Let them be left
Which leaves it ſelf, to Sea-ſide ſtraightway;
I will poſſeſs you of that Ship and Treaſure.
Leave me, I pray, a little: pray you now,
Nay, do ſo: for indeed I have loſt command,
Therefore, I pray you, I'll ſee you by and by. [Sits down.

Enter Cleopatra, led by Charmian and Eros.

Eros. Nay, gentle Madam, to him, comfort him.
Iras. Do, moſt dear Queen.
Char. Do, why, what elſe?
Cleo. Let me ſit down: Oh Juno!
Ant. No, no, no, no, no.
Eros. See you here, Sir?

Ant. Oh fie, fie, fie.
Char. Madam.
Iras. Madam, Oh good Empreſs.
Eros. Sir, Sir.
Ant. Yes, my Lord, yes; he at Philippi kept
His Sword e'en like a Dancer, while I ſtrook
The lean and wrinkled Caſſius, and 'twas I
That the mad Brutus ended: he alone
Dealt on Lieutenantry, and no practice had
In the brave ſquares of War: yet now: no matter.
Cleo. Ah ſtand by.
Eros. The Queen, my Lord, the Queen.
Iras. Go to him, Madam, ſpeak to him,
He is unqualited with very ſhame.
Cleo. Well then, ſuſtain me: Oh.
Eros. Moſt Noble Sir, ariſe, the Queen approaches,
Her Head's declin'd, and Death will ſeize her, but
Your comfort makes the reſcue.
Ant. I have offended Reputation;
A moſt unnoble ſwerving.
Eros. Sir, the Queen.
Ant. O whither haſt thou led me, Ægypt, ſee
How I convey my ſhame, out of thine Eyes,
By looking back what I have left behind
Stroy'd in diſhonour.
Cleo. Oh, my Lord, my Lord;
Forgive my fearful Sails, I little thought
You would have followed.
Ant. Ægypt, thou knew'ſt too well,
My heart was to thy Rudder tyed by th' ſtrings,
And thou ſhould'ſt ſtowe me after. O're my ſpirit
The full ſupremacy thou knew'ſt, and that
Thy beck, might from the bidding of the gods
Command me.
Cleo. Oh, my pardon.
Ant. Now I muſt
To the young man ſend humble Treaties, dodge
And palter in the ſhifts of lowneſs, who,
With half the bulk o' th' World play'd as I pleas'd,
Making, and marring Fortunes. You did know
How much you were my Conquerour, and that
My Sword, made weak by my affection, would Obey it on all cauſe.
Cleo. Pardon, pardon.
Ant. Fall not a tear, I ſay, one of them rates
All that is won and loſt: Give me a Kiſs,
Even this repays.
We ſent our Schoolmaſter, is he come back?
Love I am full of Lead: ſome Wine
VVithin there, and our Viands: Fortune knows,
VVe ſcorn her moſt, when moſt ſhe offers blows. [Exeunt.

Enter Cæſar, Agrippa, Dolabella, with others.

Caſ. Let him appear that's come for Anthony.
Know you him?
Dol. Cæſar, 'tis his Schoolmaſter,
An argument that he is pluckt, when hither
He ſends ſo poor a Pinnion of his VVing,
VVhich had ſuperfluous Kings for Meſſengers,
Not many Moons gone by.

Enter Ambaſſador from Anthony.

Caſ. Approach, and ſpeak.
Amb. Such as I am, I come from Anthony:
I was of late as petty to his ends,
As is the Morn dew on the Myrtle Leaf
To his grand Sea.
Caſ. Be't ſo, declare thine Office.
Amb. Lord of his Fortunes he ſalutes thee, and Requires to live in Ægypt, which not granted
He Leſſens his requeſts, and to thee ſues
To let him breathe between the Heavens and Earth
A private man in Athens: this for him.
Next, Cleopatra does confeſs thy greatneſs:
Submits her to thy might, and of thee craves
The Circle of the Ptolomies for her Heirs,
Now hazarded to thy Grace.
Caſ. For Anthony,
I have no Ears to his requeſt. The Queen,
Of Audience, nor deſire ſhall fail, ſo ſhe
From Ægypt drive her all-diſgraced Friend.
Or take his life there. This if ſhe perform,
She ſhall not ſue unheard. So to them both.
Amb. Fortune purſue thee.
Caſ. Bring him through the Bands:
To try thy Eloquence, now 'tis time, diſpatch,
From Anthony win Cleopatra, promiſe
And in our Name, when ſhe requires, add more
From thine invention, offers. Women are not
In their beſt Fortunes ſtrong; but want will perjure
The ne're touch'd Veſtal. Try thy cunning, Thidias,
Make thine own Edict for thy pains, which we
Will anſwer as a Law.
Thid. Cæſar, I go.
Caſ. Obſerve how Anthony becomes his flaw,
And what thou thinkeſt his very Action ſpeaks
In every power that moves.
Thid. Cæſar, I ſhall. [Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian, and Iras.

Cleo. What ſhall we do, Enobarbus?
Enob. Think, and dye.
Cleo. Is Anthony, or we in fault for this?
Enob. Anthony only, that would make his will
Lord of his Reaſon. What though you fled,
From that great face of War, whoſe ſeveral ranges
Frighted each other? Why ſhould he follow?
The itch of his Affection ſhould not then
Have nickt his Captain-ſhip, at ſuch a point,
When half to half the World oppos'd, he being
The meered queſtion? 'Tis a ſhame no leſs
Than was his loſs, to courſe your flying Flags,
And leave his Navy gazing.
Cleo. Prythee peace.

Enter the Ambaſſador, with Anthony.

Ant. Is this his Anſwer?
Amb. I, my Lord.
Ant. The Queen ſhall then have courteſie,
So ſhe will yield us up.
Amb. He ſays ſo.
Ant. Let her know't. To the Boy Cæſar ſend this grizled Head, and he will fill thy wiſhes to the brim,
With Principalities.
Cleo. That Head, my Lord?
Ant. To him again, tell him he wears the Roſe
Of youth upon him: from which, the World ſhould note
Something particular: His Coyn, Ships, Legions,
May be a Cowards, whoſe Miniſters would prevail
Under the ſervice of a Child, as ſoon
As i' th' Command of Cæſar. I dare him therefore
To lay his gay compariſons apart,
And anſwer me declin'd, Sword againſt Sword,
Our ſelves alone; I'll write it, Follow me.
Enob. Yes, like enough: hye-battel'd Cæſar will
Unſtate his happineſs, and be Stag'd to th' ſhew
Againſt a Sworder. I ſee mens judgments are
A parcel of their Fortunes, and things outward
Do draw the inward quality after them
To ſuffer all alike, that he ſhould dream,
Knowing all meaſures, the full Cæſar will
Anſwer his emptineſs; Cæſar thou haſt ſubdu'd
His judgment too.

Enter

Enter a Servant.

Ser. A Meſſenger from Cæſar.
Cleo. What, no more Ceremony? See my Women,
Againſt the blown Roſe may they ſtop their Noſe,
That kneel'd unto the Buds. Admit him, Sir.
Enob. Mine honeſty, and I, begin to ſquare,
The Loyalty well held to Fools, does make
Our Faith meer Folly: yet be that can endure
To follow with Allegiance a faln Lord,
Do's conquer him that did his Maſter conquer,
And earns a place i' th' Story.

Enter Thidias.

Cleo. Cæſar's Will.
Thid. Here it apart.
Cleo. None but Friends: ſay boldly.
Thid. So haply are they Friends to Anthony.
Enob. He needs as many (Sir) as Cæſar has.
Or needs not us. If Cæſar pleaſe, our Maſter
Will leap to be his Friend: For as you know,
Whoſe he is, we are, and that is Cæſars.
Thid. So. Thus then thou moſt renown'd, Cæſar intreats
Not to conſider in what caſe thou ſtand'ſt
Further than he is Cæſar.
Cleo. Go on, right Royal.
Thid. He knows that you embrace not Anthony
As you did love, but as you feared him.
Cleo. Oh.
Thid. The ſcars upon your honour, therefore he
Do's pitty, as conſtrained blemiſhes,
Not as deſerved.
Cleo. He is a god,
And knows what is moſt right. Mine honour
Was not yielded, but conquer'd meerly.
Enob. To be ſure of that, I will ask Anthony.
Sir, Sir, thou art ſo leaky
That we muſt leave thee thy ſinking, for
Thy deareſt quit thee. [Exit Enob.
Thid. Shall I ſay to Cæſar,
What you require of him: for he partly begs
To be deſir'd to give. It much would pleaſe him,
That of his fortunes you ſhould make a ſtaff
To lean upon. But it would warm his ſpirits
To hear from me you had left Anthony,
And put your ſelf under his ſhrowd, the univerſal Landlord.
Cleo. What's your name?
Thid. My name is Thidias.
Cleo. Moſt kind Meſſenger,
Say to great Cæſar this in diſputation,
I kiſs his conqu'ring hand: Tell him, I am prompt
To lay my Crown at's feet, and there to kneel.
Tell him from his all-obeying breath, I hear
The doom of Ægypt.
Thid. 'Tis your nobleſt courſe:
Wiſdom and Fortune combating together,
If that the former dare but what it can,
No chance may ſhake it. Give me grace to lay
My duty on your hand.
Cleo. Your Cæſars Father oft
(When he hath mus'd of taking Kingdoms in)
Beſtow'd his lips on that unworthy place,
As it rain'd kiſſes.

Enter Anthony, and Enobarbus.

Ant. Favours? By Jove that thunders.
What art thou Fellow?
Thid. One that but performs
The bidding of the fulleſt man, and worthieſt
To have command obey'd.
Enob. You will be whipt.
Ant. Approach there: ah you Kite.
Now gods and devils,
Authority melts from me of late. When I cry'd hoa,
Like Boyes unto a muſs, Kings would ſtart forth,
And cry your will. Have you no Ears?
I am Anthony yet. Take hence this Jack and whip him.

Enter a Servant.

Enob. 'Tis better playing with a Lyons Whelp,
Than with an old one dying.
Ant. Moon and Stars,
Whip him: were twenty of the greateſt Tributaries
That do acknowledge Cæſar, ſhould I find them
So ſawcy with the hand of ſhe here, what's her name
Since ſhe was Cleopatra? Whip him, Fellows,
Till like a Boy you ſee him crindge his Face,
And whine aloud for mercy. Take him hence.
Thid. Mark Anthony.
Ant. Tug him away: being whipt,
Bring him again, the Jack of Cæſars ſhall
Bear us an errand to him. [Exeunt with Thidias.
You were half blaſted ere I knew you: Ha?
Have I my Pillow left unpreſt in Rome,
Forborn the getting of a lawful Race,
And by a Jem of Women, to be abus'd
By one that looks on Feeders?
Cleo. Good, my Lord.
Ant. You have been a Boggeler ever,
But when we in our vicioufneſs grew hard
(Oh miſery on't) the wiſe gods ſeal our Eyes
In our own filth, drop our clear judgments, make us
Adore our errours, laugh at's while we ſtrut
To our confuſion.
Cleo. Oh, is't come to this?
Ant. I found you as a Morſel, cold upon
Dead Cæſar's Trencher: Nay, you were a Fragment
Of Cneius Pompey's, beſides what hotter hours
Unregiſtred in vulgar Fame, you have
Luxuriouſly pickt out. For I am ſure,
Though you can gueſs what Temperance ſhould be,
You know not what it is.
Cleo. Wherefore is this?
Ant. To let a Fellow that will take rewards,
And ſay, God quit you, be familiar with
My Play-Fellow, your hand; this Kingly Seal,
And plighter of high hearts. O that I were
Upon the Hill of Baſan, to out-roar
The horned Herd, for I have Savage cauſe,
And to proclaim it civilly, were like
A halter'd neck, which do's the Hangman thank,
For being yare about him. Is he whipt?

Enter a Servant with Thidias.

Ser. Soundly, my Lord.
Ant. Cryed he? and begg'd a pardon?
Ser. He did ask favour.
Ant. If that thy Father live, let him repent
Thou waſt not made his Daughter, and be thou ſorry
To follow Cæſar in his triumph, ſince
Thou haſt been whipt. For following him, henceforth
The white hand of a Lady Fever thee,
Shake to look on't. Get thee back to Cæſar,
Tell him thy entertainment: look thou ſay
He makes me angry with him. For he ſeems
Proud and diſdainful, harping on what I am,
Not what he knew I was. He makes me angry,
And at this time moſt eaſie 'tis to do't:
When my good ſtars, that were my former guides
Have empty left their Orbes, and ſhut their Fires
Into the Abiſm of Hell. If he miſlike,
My ſpeech, and what is done, tell him he has Hiparchus, my enfranched Bondman, whom

He

He may at pleaſure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he ſhall like to quit me. Urge it thou:
Hence with thy ſtripes, be gone. [Exit Thid.
Cleo. Have you done yet?
Ant. Alack, our Terrene Moon is now Eclipſt,
And it portends alone the fall of Anthony.
Cleo. I muſt ſtay his time.
Ant. To flatter Cæſar, would you mingle Eyes
With one that ties his points.
Cleo. Not know me yet?
Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?
Cleo. Ah (Dear) if I be ſo,
From my cold heart, let Heaven ingender Hail,
And poyſon it in the ſource, and the firſt ſtone
Drop in my neck: as it determines ſo
Diſſolve my life, the next Cæſarian ſmile,
Till by degrees the memory of my Womb,
Together with my brave Ægyptians all,
By the diſcandering of this pelletted ſtorm,
Lye graveleſs, till the Flies and Gnats of Nyle
Have buried them for prey.
Ant. I am ſatisfied:
Cæſar ſets down in Alexandria, where
I will oppoſe his Fate. Our force by Land,
Hath nobly held, and ſever'd Navy too
Have knit again, and Fleet, threatning moſt Sea-like.
Where haſt thou been my heart? Doſt thou hear, Lady?
If from the Field I ſhall return once more
To kiſs theſe Lips, I will appear in blood,
I, and my Sword, will earn my Chronicle,
There's hope in't yet.
Cleo. That's my brave Lord.
Ant. I will be treble-ſinewed, hearted, breath'd,
And fight maliciouſly: for when mine hours
Were nice and lucky, men did ranſome lives
Of me for jeſts: but now, I'll ſet my teeth,
And ſend to darkneſs all that ſtop me. Come,
Lets have one other gawdy night: Call to me
All my ſad Captains, fill our Bowls once more:
Let's mock the midnight Bell.
Cleo. It is my Birth-day,
I had thought t' have held it poor. But ſince my Lord
Is Anthony again, I will be Cleopatra.
Ant. We will yet do well.
Cleo. Call all his noble Captains to my Lord,
Ant. Do ſo, we'll ſpeak to them,
And to night I'll force
The Wine peep through their ſcars.
Come on (my Queen)
There's ſap in't yet. The next time I do fight
I'll make death love me: for I will contend
Even with his peſtilent Scythe. [Exeunt.
Enob. Now he'll out-ſtare the Lightning, to be furious
Is to be frighted out of fear, and in that mood
The Dove will peck the Eſtridge; and I ſee ſtill
A diminution in our Captains brain,
Reſtores his heart; when valour prays in reaſon,
It eats the Sword it fights with: I will ſeek
Some way to leave him. [Exeunt.

Enter Cæſar, Agrippa, and Mecænas with his Army, Cæſar reading a Letter.

Cæſ. He calls me Boy, and chides as he had power
To beat me out of Ægypt. My Meſſenger
He hath whipt with Rods, dares me to perſonal Combat:
Cæſar to Anthony: let the old Ruffian know,
I have many other ways to die: mean time
Laugh at this Challenge.
Mec. Cæſar muſt think,
When one ſo great begins to rage, he's hunted
Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now
Make boot of his diſtraction: Never anger
Made good guard for it ſelf.
Cæſ. Let our beſt Heads know,
That to morrow, the laſt of many Battels
We mean to fight. Within our Files there are,
Of thoſe that ſerv'd Mark Anthony but late,
Enough to fetch him in. See it done,
And feaſt the Army, we have ſtore to do't,
And they have earn'd the waſte. Poor Anthony. [Exeunt.

Enter Anthony and Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian, Iras, Alexas, with others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitian.
Enob. No?
Ant. Why ſhould he not?
Enob. He thinks, being twenty times of better Fortune,
He is twenty men to one.
Ant. To morrow, Souldier,
By Sea and Land I'll fight: or I will live,
Or bathe my dying honour in the blood,
Shall make it live again. VVoo't thou fight well.
Enob. I'll ſtrike, and cry, take all.
Ant. VVell ſaid, come on:
Call forth my Houſhold Servants, let's to night.

Enter three or four Servitors.

Be bounteous at our Meal. Give me thy hand,
Thou haſt been rightly honeſt, ſo haſt thou,
Thou, and thou, and thou: you have ſerv'd me well,
And Kings have been your Fellows.
Cleo. VVhat means this?
Enob. 'Tis one of thoſe odd tricks which ſorrow ſhoots
Out of the mind.
Ant. And thou art honeſt too:
I wiſh I could be made ſo many men,
And all of you clapt up together, in
An Anthony: that I might do you ſervice,
So good as you have done.
Omnes. The gods forbid.
Ant. VVell, my good Fellows, wait on me to night:
Scant not my Cups, and make as much of me
As when mine Empire was your Fellow too,
And ſuffered my command.
Cleo. VVhat does he mean?
Enob. To make his Followers weep.
Ant. Tend me to night;
May be it is the period of your duty,
Haply you ſhall not ſee me more, or if,
A mangled ſhadow. Perchance to morrow,
You'll ſerve another Maſter. I look on you,
As one that takes his leave. Mine honeſt Friends,
I turn you not away, but like a Maſter
Married to your good ſervice, ſtay till death:
Tend me to night two hours, I ask no more,
And the gods yield you for't.
Enob. VVhat mean you (Sir)
To give them this diſcomfort? Look, you weep,
And I, an Aſs, am Onion-ey'd; for ſhame,
Transform us not to Women.
Ant. Ho, ho, ho:
Now the Witch take me, if I meant it thus.
Grace grow where thoſe drops fall (my hearty Friends)
You take me a too dolorous a ſence;
For I ſpake to you for your comfort, did deſire you
To burn this night with Torches: know (my hearts)
I hope well of to morrow, and will lead you,
Where rather I'll expect victorious Life,
Than Death, and Honour. Let's to Supper, come,
And drown conſideration. [Exeunt.

Enter a Company of Souldiers.

1 Soul. Brother, good night: to morrow is the day.
2 Soul. It will determine one way: Fare you well,

Heard

Heard you of nothing ſtrange about the ſtreets.
1. Nothing: what news?
2. Belike 'tis but a Rumour, good night to you.
1. Well, Sir, good night.
[They meet with other Souldiers.
2. Souldiers, have careful Watch.
1. And you: Good night, good night.
[They place themſelves in every corner of the Stage.
2. Here we, and if to morrow
Our Navy thrive, I have an abſolute hope
Our Landmen will ſtand up.
1. 'Tis a brave Army, and full of purpoſe.
[Muſick of the Hoboyes is under the Stage.
2. Peace, what noiſe?
1. Liſt, liſt.
2. Hark.
1. Muſick ith' Air.
3. Under the Earth.
It ſings well, do's it not?
3. No.
1. Peace I ſay: what ſhould this mean?
2. 'Tis the god Hercules, whom Anthony loved,
Now leaves him.
1. Walk, let's ſee if other Watchmen
Do hear what we do?
1. How now, Maſters? [Speak together.
Omnes. How now? how now? do you hear this?
1. Is't not ſtrange?
3. Do you hear, Maſters? Do you hear?
1. Follow the noiſe ſo far as we have quarter.
Let's ſee how it will give off.
Omnes. Content: 'Tis ſtrange. [Exeunt.

Enter Anthony, and Cleopatra, with others.

Ant. Eros, mine Armour, Eros.
Cleo. Sleep a little.
Ant. No, my Chuck: Eros, come, mine Armour, Eros.

Enter Eros.

Come good fellow, put thine Iron on,
If Fortune be not ours to day, it is
Becauſe we brave her. Come.
Cleo. Nay, I'le help too, Anthony.
What's this for? Ah, let be, let be, thou art
The Armourer of my heart: Falſe, falſe: This, this,
Sooth-law I'le help: Thus it muſt be.
Ant. Well, well, we ſhall thrive now.
Seeſt thou my good fellow. Go put on thy defences.
Eno. Briefly, Sir.
Cleo. Is not this buckled well?
Ant. Rarely, rarely:
He that unbuckles this, till we do pleaſe
To doff for our repoſe, ſhall hear a ſtorm.
Thou fumbleſt Eros, and my Queen's a Squire
More tight at this: Diſpatch. O Love,
That thou could'ſt ſee my wars to day, and knew'ſt
The Royal Occupation, thou ſhould'ſt ſee
A workman in't.

Enter an armed Souldier.

Good morrow to thee, welcom,
Thou look'ſt like him that knows a warlike charge:
To buſineſs that we love, we riſe betime,
And go to't with delight.
Soul. A thouſand, Sir, early though't be, have on their Rivetted trim, and at the Port expect you. [Shout.
[Trumpets flouriſh.

Enter Captains and Souldiers.

Alex. The Morn is fair: Good morrow, General.
All. Good morrow, General.
Ant. 'Tis well blown, Lad.
This morning like the Spirit of a youth
That means to be of note, begins betimes.
So, ſo: Come give me that, what ere becomes of me,
Fare thee well, Dame, what ere becomes of me,
This is a Souldiers kiſs: rebukeable,
And worthy ſhameful check it were, to ſtand
On more Mechanick Complement, I'le leave thee.
Now like a man of Steel, you that will fight,
Follow me cloſe, I'le bring you to't: Adieu. [Exeunt.
Char. Pleaſe you retire to your Chamber?
Cleo. Lead me:
He goes forth gallantly: that he and Cæſar might
Determine this great War in ſingle fight;
Then Anthony; but now. Well on. [Exeunt.

Trumpets ſound. Enter Anthony, and Eros.

Eros. The gods make this a happy day to Anthony.
Ant. Would thou, and thoſe thy ſcars had once pre-
To make me fight at Land. (vail'd,
Eros. Hadſt thou done ſo,
The Kings that have revolted, and the Souldier
That has this morning left thee, would have ſtill
Followed thy heels.
Ant. Who's gone this morning?
Eros. Who? one ever near thee, call for Enobarbus.
He ſhall not hear thee, or from Cæſar's Camp,
Say I am none of thine.
Ant. What ſayeſt thou?
Sold. Sir, he is with Cæſar.
Eros. Sir, his Cheſts and Treaſure he has not with him.
Ant. Is he gone?
Sold. Moſt certain.
Ant. Go, Eros, ſend his Treaſure after, do it,
Detain no jot, I charge thee: write to him,
(I will ſubſcribe) gentle adieus, and greetings:
Say, that I wiſh he never find more cauſe
To change a Maſter. Oh my Fortunes have Corrupted honeſt men. Diſpatch, Eros. [Exit.

Enter Agrippa, Cæſar, with Enobarbus, and Dolabella.

Caſ. Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight:
Our will is Anthony be took alive:
Make it ſo known.
Agri. Cæſar, I ſhall.
Cæſar. The time of univerſal peace is near,
Prove this a proſp'rous day, the three-nook'd world
Shall bear the Olive freely.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſ. Anthony is come into the field.
Caſ. Go charge Agrippa,
Plant thoſe that have revolted in the Van,
That Anthony may ſeem to ſpend his Fury
Upon himſelf. [Exeunt.
Enob. Alexas did revolt, and went to Jewry on
Affairs of Anthony; there did diſſwade
Great Herod to incline himſelf to Cæſar,
And leave his Maſter Anthony. For this pains
Cæſar hath hang'd him: Camidius and the reſt
That fell away, have entertainment, but
No honourable truſt: I have done ill,
Of which I do accuſe my ſelf ſo ſorely,
That I will joy no more.

Enter a Souldier of Cæſars.

Soul. Enobarbus, Anthony
Hath after thee ſent all thy Treaſure, with

His

His bounty over-plus. The Meſſenger
Came on my guard, and at thy Tent is now
Unloading of his Mules.
Enob. I give it you.
Soul. Mock not, Enobarbus,
I tell you true: Beſt you ſaf't the bringer
Out of the hoaſt, I muſt attend mine Office,
Or would have done't my ſelf. Your Emperour
Continues ſtill a Jove. [Exit.
Enob. I am alone the Villain of the Earth,
And feel I am ſo moſt. Oh Anthony,
Thou Mine of bounty, how wouldſt thou have payed
My better ſervice, when my turpitude
Thou doſt ſo Crown with Gold. This blows my heart
If ſwift thought break it not: a ſwifted mean
Shall out-ſtrike thought, but thought will do't. I feel
I fight againſt thee: No, I will go ſeek
Some Ditch, where to die: the foul'ſt beſt fits
My latter part of life. [Exit.

Alarum. Drums and Trumpets.
Enter Agrippa.

Agrip. Retire, we have engag'd our ſelves too far:
Cæſar himſelf has work, and our oppreſſion
Exceeds what we expected. [Exit.

Alarums.
Enter Anthony, and Scarus wounded.

Scar. O my brave Emperour, this is fought indeed,
Had we done ſo at firſt, we had droven them home
With Clouts about their Head. [Far off.
Ant. Thou bleed'ſt apace.
Scar. I had a wound here that was like a T,
But now 'tis made an H.
Ant. They do retire.
Scar. We'll beat 'em into Bench-holes, I have yet
Room for ſix ſcotches more.

Enter Eros.

Eros. They are beaten, Sir, and our advantage ſerves
For a fair Victory.
Scar. Let us ſcore their backs,
And ſnatch 'em up, as we take Hares behind,
'Tis a ſport to maul a Runner.
Ant. I will reward thee
Once for thy ſprightly comfort, and ten-fold
For thy good valour. Come thee on.
Scar. I'll halt after. [Exeunt

Alarum. Enter Anthony again in a march,
Scarus, with others.

Ant. We have beat him to his Camp: Run one
Before, and let the Queen know of our Gueſts: to morrow
Before the Sun ſhall ſee's, we'll ſpill the blood
That has to day eſcap'd. I thank you all,
For doughty handed are you, and have fought
Not as you ſerv'd the Cauſe, but as't had been
Each mans like mine: you have ſhewn all Hectors,
Enter the City, clip your Wives, your Friends,
Tell them your feats, whil'ſt they with joyful tears
Waſh the congealment from your Wounds, and kiſs
The honour'd gaſhes whole.

Enter Cleopatra.

Give me thy hand,
To this great Faiery, I'll commend thy acts,
Make her thanks bleſs thee. O thou day o' th' World,
Chain mine arm'd neck, leap thou, Attire and all
Through proof of Harneſs to my part, and there
Ride on the paints triumphing.
Cleo. Lord of Lords,
Oh infinite Virtue, com'ſt thou ſmiling from
The Worlds great ſnare uncaught.
Ant. My Nightingale,
We have beat them to their Beds.
What, Girl, though gray
Do ſomething mingle with our younger brown, yet ha'we
A brain that nouriſhes our Nerves, and can
Get gole for gole of youth. Behold this man,
Commend unto his Lips thy ſavouring hand,
Kiſs it my Warriour: He hath fought to day,
As if a god in hate of Mankind, had
Deſtroyed in ſuch a ſhape.
Cleo. I'll give thee, Friend,
An Armour all of Gold: it was a Kings.
Ant. He has deſerv'd it, were it Carbunkled
Like holy Phœbus Car. Give me thy hand,
Through Alexandria make a jolly March,
Bear our hackt Targets, like the men that owe them.
Had our great Palace the capacity
To Camp this hoaſt, we all would ſup together,
And drink Carowſes to the next dayes Fate
Which promiſes Royal peril. Trumpeters
With brazen din blaſt you the Cities Ear.
Make mingle with our ratling Tabourines,
That Heaven and Earth may ſtrike their ſounds together,
Applauding our reproach. [Exeunt.

Enter a Century, and his Company, Enobarbus follows.

Cent. If we be not reliev'd within this hour,
We muſt return to th' Court of Guard: the night
Is ſhiny, and they ſay, we ſhall embattle
By th' ſecond hour i' th' Morn.
1 Watch. This laſt day was a ſhrewd one to's.
Enob. Oh bear me witneſs night.
2. What man is this?
1. Stand cloſe, and liſt him.
Enob. Be witneſs to me (O thou bleſſed Moon)
When men revolted ſhall upon Record
Bear hateful memory: poor Enobarbus did
Before thy face repent.
Cent. Enobarbus?
3. Peace: hark further.
Enob. Oh Sovereign Miſtriſs of true Melancholy,
The poyſonous damp of night diſpunge upon me,
That life, a very Rebel to my will,
May hang no longer on me. Throw my heart
Againſt the flint and hardneſs of my fault,
Which being dried with grief, will break to Powder,
And finiſh all foul thoughts: Oh Anthony,
Nobler than my revolt is infamous,
Forgive me in thine own particular,
But let the World rank me in Regiſter
A Maſter-leaver, and a fugitive:
Oh Anthony! Oh Anthony!
1. Let's ſpeak to him.
Cent. Let's hear him, for the things he ſpeaks
May concern Cæſar.
2. Let's do ſo, but he ſleeps.
Cent. Swoonds rather, for ſo bad a Prayer as his
Was never yet for ſleep.
1. Go we to him.
2. Awake, Sir, awake, ſpeak to us.
1. Hear you, Sir?
Cent. The hand of death hath caught him.
[Drums afar off.
Hark how the Drums demurely wake the ſleepers:
Let us bear him to th' Court of Guard: he is of note:
Our hour is fully out.
2. Come on then, he may recover yet. [Exeunt.

Enter Anthony, and Scarus, with their Army.

Ant. Their preparation is to day by Sea,
We pleaſe them not by Land.
Scar. For both, my Lord.
Ant. I would they'ld fight ith' Fire, or ith' Air,
We'ld fight there too. But this it is, our Foot
Upon the hills adjoyning to the City
Shall ſtay with us. Order for Sea is given,
They have put forth the Haven:
Where their appointment we may beſt diſcover,
And look on their endeavour. [Exeunt.

Enter Cæſar, and his Army.

Caſ. But being charg'd, we will be ſtill by Land.
Which as I tak't we ſhall, for his beſt force
Is forth to Man his Gallies. To the Vales,
And hold our beſt advantage. [Exeunt.
[Alarum afar off, as at a Sea fight.

Enter Anthony, and Scarus.

Ant. Yet they are not joyn'd:
Where yond Pine does ſtand, I ſhall diſcover all.
I'le bring thee word ſtraight, how 'tis like to go. [Exit.
Scar. Swallows have built
In Cleopatra's Sailes their neſts. The Auguries
Say, they know not, they cannot tell, look grimly,
And dare not ſpeak their knowledge. Anthony
Is valiant, and dejected, and by ſtarts
His fretted Fortanes give him hope and fear
Of what he has, and has not.

Enter Anthony.

Ant. All is loſt:
This foul Ægyptian hath betrayed me:
My Fleet hath yielded to the Foe, and yonder,
They caſt their Caps up, and Carowſe together
Like friends long loſt. Triple-turn'd Whore, 'tis thou
Haſt ſold me to this Novice, and my heart
Makes only Wars on thee. Bid them all flye:
For when I am reveng'd upon my Charm,
I have done all. Bid them all flye, be gone.
Oh Sun, thy uprife ſhall I ſee no more:
Fortune and Anthony part here, even here
Do we ſhake hands? All come to this? The hearts
That pannelled me at heels, to whom I gave
Their wiſhes, do dis-Candy, melt their ſweets
On bloſſoming Ceſar: and this Pine is barkt,
That over-topt them all. Betray'd I am
O this falſe Soul of Ægypt! this grave Charm,
Whoſe eye beck'd forth my wars, and call'd them home:
Whoſe Boſom was my Crownet, my chief end,
Like a right Gypſie, hath at faſt and looſe
Beguil'd me, to the very heart of loſs.
What Eros, Eros?

Enter Cleopatra.

Ah, thou Spell! Avant.
Cleo. Why is my Lord enrag'd againſt his Love;
Ant. Vaniſh, or I ſhall give thee thy deſerving,
And blemiſh Ceſars Triumph. Let him take thee,
And hoiſt thee up to th' ſhouting Plebeians,
Follow his Chariot, like the greateſt ſpot
Of all thy Sex. Moſt Monſter like be ſhewn
For poor'ſt Diminutives, for Dolts, and let Patient Octavia plough thy viſage up
With her prepared nails. [Exit Cleopatra.
'Tis well th'art gone,
If it be well to live. But better 'twere
Thou fell'ſt into my fury, for one death
Might have prevented many. Eros, hoa?
The ſhirt of Neſſus is upon me, teach me,
Alcides, thou mine Anceſtor, thy rage.
Let me lodge Licas on the horns oth' Moon,
And with thoſe hands that graſpt the heavieſt Club,
Subdue my worthieſt ſelf: the Witch ſhall dye:
To the young Roman Boy ſhe hath ſold me, and I fall
Under his plot: ſhe dyes for't. Eros, hoa? [Exit.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, Mardian.

Cleo. Help me, my Woman: Oh he is more mad
Than Telamon for his Shield, the Boar of Theſſaly
Was never ſo imboſt.
Char. To th' Monument, there lock your ſelf,
And ſend him word you are dead:
The Soul and body rive not more in parting,
Than greatneſs going off.
Cleo. To th' Monument:
Mardian, go tell him I have ſlain my ſelf:
Say, that the laſt I ſpoke was Anthony,
And word it (prethee) pitiouſly. Hence, Mardian,
And bring me how he takes my death to th' Monument.
[Exeunt.

Enter Anthony and Eros.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'ſt me?
Eros. I, Noble Lord.
Ant. Sometime we ſee a cloud that's Dragoniſh,
A vapour ſometime, like a Bear, or Lyon,
A toward Cittadel, a pendant Rock,
A forked Mountain, or blew Promontory
With Trees upon't, that nodd unto the world,
And mock our eyes with Air.
Thou haſt ſeen theſe ſigns,
They are black Veſper's Pageants.
Eros. I, my Lord.
Ant. That which is now a Horſe, even with a thought
The Rack diſſimes, and makes indiſtinct
As water is in water.
Eros. It do's, my Lord.
Ant. My good Knave, Eros, now thy Captain is Even ſuch a body: here I am Anthony,
Yet cannot hold this viſible ſhape (my Knave)
I made theſe wars for Ægypt, and the Queen,
Whoſe heart I thought I had, for ſhe had mine:
Which whil'ſt it was mine, had annext unto't
A Million moe (now loſt:) ſhe, Eros, has
Packt Cards with Ceſars, and falſe plaid my Glory
Unto an Enemy's triumph.
Nay, weep not, gentle Eros, there is left us
Our ſelves to end our ſelves.

Enter Mardian.

Oh the vile Lady, ſhe has robb'd me of my Sword.
Mar. No, Anthony,
My Miſtris lov'd thee, and her Fortunes mingled
With thine intirely.
Ant. Hence, ſawcy Eunuch, peace, ſhe hath betraid me,
And ſhall dye the death.
Mar. Death of one perſon can be paid but once,
And that ſhe has diſcharg'd. What thou would'ſt do
Is done unto thy hand: the laſt ſhe ſpake
Was Anthony, moſt Noble Anthony:
Then in the midſt a tearing groan did break
The name of Anthony: it was divided
Between her heart and lips: ſhe tendred life
Thy name ſo buried in her.
Ant. Dead then?
Mar. Dead.
Ant. Unarme, Eros, the long dayes task is done,

And

And we muſt ſleep: that thou depart'ſt hence ſafe
Does pay thy labour richly: go. [Exit Mardian.
Oh, pluck off,
The ſeven-fold ſhield of Ajax cannot keep
The battery from my heart. Oh cleave my ſides.
Heart, once be ſtronger than thy Continent,
Crack thy frail Caſe. Apace, Eros, apace:
No more a Souldier: bruiſed pieces go,
You have been nobly born. From me a while. [Exit Eros.
I will o're-take thee, Cleopatra, and
Weep for my pardon. So it muſt be, for now
All length is Torture: ſince the Torch is out,
Lye down and ſtray no farther. Now all labour
Marrs what it does: yea, very force entangles
It ſelf with ſtrength: Seal then and all is done.
Eros? I come, my Queen. Eros? Say for me,
Where Souls do couch on Flowers, we'll hand in hand,
And with our ſprightly Port make the Ghoſts gaze:
Dido, and her Æneas ſhall want Troops,
And all the haunt be ours. Come, Eros, Eros.

Enter Eros.

Eros. What would my Lord?
Ant. Since Cleopatra died,
I have liv'd in ſuch diſhonour, that the gods
Deteſt my baſeneſs. I, that with my Sword,
Quarter'd the World, and o're green Neptunes back
With Ships, made Cities; condemn my ſelf, to lack
The Courage of a Woman, leſs Noble mind
Than ſhe which by her death, our Cæſar tells
I am Conqueror of my ſelf. Thou art ſworn Eros,
That when the exigent ſhould come, which now
Is come indeed: when I ſhould ſee behind me
Th' inevitable proſecution of diſgrace and horrour,
That on my command, thou then would'ſt kill me.
Do't, the time is come: thou ſtrik'ſt not me,
'Till Cæſar thou defeat'ſt. Put colour in my cheek.
Eros. The gods with-hold me,
Shall I do that which all the Parthian Darts,
(Though Enemy) loſt aim, and could not.
Anthony. Eros.
Would'ſt thou be window'd in great Rome, and ſee
The Maſter thus with pleacht Armes, bending down
His corrigible neck, his face ſubdu'd
To penetrative ſhame; whil'ſt the wheel'd ſeat
Of fortunate Cæſar drawn before him, branded
His baſeneſs that enſued.
Eros. I would not ſee't.
Ant. Come then: for with a wound I muſt be cur'd.
Draw that thy honeſt Sword which thou haſt worn
Moſt uſeful for thy Country.
Eros. Oh, Sir, pardon me.
Ant. When I did make thee free, ſwor'ſt thou not then
To do this when I bad thee? Do it at once,
Or thy precedent Services are all
But accidents unpurpos'd. Draw, and come.
Eros. Turn from me then that noble countenance,
Wherein the worſhip of the whole world lies.
Ant. Lo thee.
Eros. My Sword is drawn.
Ant. Then let it do at once
The thing why thou haſt drawn it.
Eros. My dear Maſter,
My Captain, and my Emperour. Let me ſay
Before I ſtrike this bloody ſtroke, farewel.
Ant. 'Tis ſaid, man, and farewel.
Eros. Farwel, great Chief. Shall I ſtrike now?
Ant. Now, Eros. [Kills himſelf.
Eros. Why there then:
Thus I do eſcape the ſorrow of Anthony's death.
Ant. Thrice nobler than my ſelf,
Thou teacheſt me: Oh valiant Eros, what
I ſhould, and could'ſt not, my Queen and Eros
Have by their brave inſtruction got upon me
A Nobleneſs in Record. But I will be
A Bride-groom in my death, and run into't
As to a Lovers bed. Come then, and Eros,
Thy Maſter dies thy Scholar: to do thus
I learnt of thee. How, not dead? not dead?
The Guard, how? oh diſpatch me.

Enter a Guard.

1. Guard. What's the noiſe?
Ant. I have done my work, ill Friends:
O make an end of what I have begun.
2. The Star is faln.
1. And time is at his Period.
All. Alas, and woe.
Ant. Let him that loves me, ſtrike me dead.
1. Not I.
2. Not I.
3. Nor any one. [Exeunt.
Decre. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers flye.
This Sword but ſhewn to Cæſar with this tidings,
Shall enter me with him.

Enter Diomedes.

Dio. Where's Anthony?
Decre. There, Diomed, there.
Diom. Lives he? wilt thou not anſwer, man?
Ant. Art thou there, Diomed?
Draw thy Sword, and give me
Sufficing ſtrokes for death.
Dio. Moſt abſolute Lord,
My Miſtris Cleopatra ſent me to thee.
Ant. When did ſhe ſend thee?
Diom. Now, my Lord.
Ant. Where is ſhe? (fear
Diom. Lockt in her Monument: ſhe had a Prophecying
Of what hath come to paſs: for when ſhe ſaw
(Which never ſhall be found) you did ſuſpect
She had diſpos'd with Cæſar, and that your rage
Would not be purg'd, ſhe ſent you word ſhe was dead:
But fearing ſince how it might work, hath ſent
Me to proclaim the truth, and I am come
I dread, too late.
Ant. Too late, good Diomed: call my Guard I prethee.
Dio. What hoo: the Emperours Guard.
The Guard, what hoa? Come, your Lord calls.

Enter four or five of the Guard of Anthony.

Ant. Bear me, good Friends, where Cleopatra bides,
'Tis the laſt ſervice that I ſhall command you.
1. Woe, woe are we, Sir, you may not live to wear
All your true Followers out.
All. Moſt heavy day.
Ant. Nay, good my fellows, do not pleaſe ſharp fate
To grace it with your ſorrows. Bid that welcom
Which comes to puniſh us, and we puniſh it
Seming to bear it lightly. Take me up,
I have led you oft, carry me now, good friends,
And have my thanks for all. [Exeunt bearing Anthony.

Enter Cleopatra, and her Maids aloft, with Charmian, and Iras.

Cleo. Oh Charmian, I will never go from hence.
Char. Be comforted, dear Madam.
Cleo. No, I will not:
All ſtrange and terrible events are welcom,
But comforts we deſpiſe: our ſize of ſorrow
Proportion'd to our cauſe, muſt be as great
As that which makes it.

Enter Diomed.

How now? Is he dead?

Diomed. His Death's upon him, but not dead.
Look out o'th' other ſide your Monument,
His Guard have brought him hither.

Enter Anthony, and the Guard.

Cleo. O Sun,
Burn the great Sphere thou mov'ſt in, darkling ſtand
The varying Shore o'th' world. O Antony, Antony, Antony,
Help, Charmian, help, Iras, help: help, friends,
Below, let's draw him hither.

Ant. Peace,
Not Cæſar's Valour hath o'er-thrown Anthony,
But Anthony hath triumpht on it ſelf.

Cleo. So it ſhould be,
That none but Anthony ſhould conquer Anthony,
But woe 'tis ſo.

Ant. I am dying, Ægypt, dying: Only
I here importune Death awhile, until
Of many thouſand kiſſes the poor laſt
I lay upon thy lips.

Cleo. I dare not, Dear,
Dear my Lord, pardon: I dare not,
Leſt I be taken: Not th' imperious ſhew
Of the dull-fortun'd Cæſar, ever ſhall
Be broach'd with me, If Knife, Drugs, Serpents have,
Edge, Sting, or Operation, I am ſafe:
Your Wife Octavia, with her modeſt Eyes,
And ſtill concluſion, ſhall acquire honour,
Demuring upon me: But, come, come, Antony,
Help me, my Women, we muſt draw thee up:
Aſſiſt, good friends.

Ant. Oh quick, or I am gone.

Cleo. Here's ſport indeed:
How heavy weighs my Lord?
Our ſtrength is all gone into heavineſs,
That makes the weight. Had I great Juno's power,
The ſtrong wing'd Mercury ſhould fetch thee up,
And ſet thee by Jove's ſide. Yet come a little,
Wiſhers were ever Fools. Oh come, come, come.
[They heave Antony aloft to Cleopatra.
And welcome, welcome. Dye when thou haſt liv'd,
Quicken with kiſſing: Had my lips that power,
Thus would I wear them out.

All. A heavy ſight.

Ant. I am dying, Ægypt, dying.
Give me ſome Wine, and let me ſpeak a little.

Cleo. No, let me ſpeak, and let me rail ſo high,
That the falſe Huswife, Fortune, break her wheel,
Provok'd by my offence.

Ant. One word (ſweet Queen)
Of Cæſar ſeek your honour, with your ſafety. Oh.

Cleo. They do not go together.

Ant. Gentle, hear me,
None about Cæſar truſt, but Proculeius.

Cleo. My Reſolution, and my hands, I'll truſt,
None about Cæſar.

Ant. The miſerable change now at my end,
Lament nor ſorrow at: But pleaſe your thoughts
In feeding them with thoſe my former fortunes,
Wherein I liv'd. The greateſt Prince o'th'world,
The Nobleſt: and do not baſely die,
Not Cowardly, put off my Helmet to
My Countryman. A Roman, by a Roman
Valiantly vanquiſh'd. Now my ſpirit is going,
I can no more.

Cleo. Nobleſt of men, woo't die,
Haſt thou no care of me, ſhall I abide
In this dull world, which in thy abſence is
No better than a Stye? O ſee, my Women:
The Crown o'th' Earth doth melt. My Lord?
Oh wither'd is the Garland of the War.
The Souldiers Pole is faln: Young Boys and Girls
Are level now with men: The odds is gone,
And there is nothing left remarkable,
Beneath the viſiting moon.

Char. Oh quietneſs, Lady.

Iras. She's dead too, our Sovereign.

Char. Lady.

Iras. Madam.

Char. Oh Madam, Madam, Madam.

Iras. Royal Ægypt: Empreſs.

Char. Peace, peace, Iras.

Cleo. No more but in a Woman, and commanded
By ſuch poor paſſion, as the Maid that milks,
And does the meaneſt chares. It were for me
To throw my Scepter at the injurious gods,
To tell them that this world did equal theirs,
Till they had ſtoln our Jewel. All's but nought:
Patience is ſottiſh, and Impatience does
Become a Dog that's mad: Then is it ſin,
To ruſh into the ſecret houſe of death,
Ere death dare come to us? How do you, women?
What, what good cheer? why how now, Charmian?
My Noble Girls? Ah, women, women! Look,
Our Lamp is ſpent, it's out. Good Sirs, take heart,
We'll bury him: And then what's brave, what's Noble,
Let's do't after the high Roman faſhion,
And make Death proud to take us. Come, away,
This caſe of that huge Spirit now is cold.
Ah, women, women! Come, we have no friend,
But Reſolution, and the briefeſt end.
[Exeunt, bearing of Anthony's Body.

Enter Cæſar, Agrippa, Dolabella, Menas, with his Counſel of War.

Cæſ. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield,
Being ſo fruſtrate, tell him,
He mocks the pawſes that he makes.

Dol. Cæſar, I ſhall.

Enter Decretas with the Sword of Anthony.

Cæſ. VVherefore is that? and what art thou that dar'ſt
Appear thus to us?

Dec. I am called Decretas,
Mark Anthony I ſerv'd, who beſt was worthy
Beſt to be ſerv'd: whil'ſt he ſtood up, and ſpoke,
He was my Maſter, and I wore my life
To ſpend upon his haters. If thou pleaſe
To take me to thee, as I was to him,
I'll be to Cæſar: If thou pleaſeſt not,
I yield thee up my life.

Cæſ. VVhat is't thou ſayeſt?

Dec. I ſay (Oh Cæſar) Anthony is dead.

Cæſ. The breaking of ſo great a thing, ſhould make
A greater crack. The round world
Should have ſhook Lyons into civil ſtreets,
And Citizens to their Dens. The Death of Anthony
Is not a ſingle Doom, in the name lay
A moiety of the world.

Dec. He is dead Cæſar,
Not by a publick miniſter of Juſtice,
Nor by a hired Knife, but that ſelf-hand
Which writ his honour in the Acts it did,
Hath with the Courage which the heart did lend it,
Splitted the heart. This is his Sword,
I robb'd his wound of it: Behold it ſtain'd
With his moſt noble Blood.

Cæſ. Look you, ſad friends,
The gods rebuke me, but it is a Tidings
To waſh the eyes of Kings.

Dol. And ſtrange it is,

That

That Nature muſt compel us to lament
Our moſt perſiſted deeds.
Men. His taints and honours may equal with him.
Dol. A Rarer Spirit never
Did ſteer humanity: but you gods will give us
Some faults to make us men. Cæſar is touch'd.
Men. When ſuch a ſpacious Mirror's ſet before him,
He needs muſt ſee himſelf.
Cæſar. Oh Anthony,
I have followed thee to this, but we do launch
Diſeaſes in our Bodies. I muſt perforce
Have ſhewn to thee ſuch a declining day,
Or look on thine: we could not ſtall together,
In the whole world. But yet let me lament
With tears as Soveragin as the blood of hearts,
That thou my Brother, my Competitor,
In top of all deſign; my Mate in Empire,
Friend and Companion in the front of War,
The Arm of mine own Body, and the heart
Where mine his thoughts did kindle; that our Stars
Unreconcileable, ſhould divide our equalneſs to this.
Hear me, good Friends,
But I will tell you at ſome meeter Seaſon,
The buſineſs of this man looks out of him,
We'll hear him what he ſayes.

Enter an Ægyptian.

Whence are you?
Ægyp. A poor Ægyptian yet, the Queen my Miſtris
Confin'd in all, ſhe has her Monument
Of thy intents, deſires, inſtruction,
That ſhe preparedly may frame her ſelf
To th' way ſhe's forc'd to.
Caſ. Bid her have good heart,
She ſoon ſhall know of us, by ſome of ours,
How honourable, and how kindly we
Determine for her. For Cæſar cannot leave to be ungentle
Ægyp. So the gods preſerve thee. [Exit.
Caſ. Come hither Proculeius, go and ſay
We purpoſe her no ſhame: give her what comforts
The quality of her paſſion ſhall require;
Leſt in her greatneſs, by ſome mortal ſtroke
She do defeat us. For her life in Rome
Would be eternal in our triumph: go,
And with your ſpeedieſt bring us what ſhe ſayes,
And how you find of her.
Pro. Cæſar, I ſhall. [Exit Proculeius.
Caſ. Gallus, go you along: where's Dolabella, to ſecond Proculeius?
All. Dolabella.
Caſ. Let him alone: for I remember now
How he's employ'd: he ſhall in time be ready.
Go with me to my Tent, where you ſhall ſee
How hardly I was drawn into this War,
How calm and gentle I proceeded ſtill
In all my Writings. Go with me, and ſee
What I can ſhew in this. [Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Mardian.

Cleo. My deſolation does begin to make
A better life: 'Tis paltry to be Cæſar:
Not being fortune, he's but fortunes knave,
A miniſter of her will: and it is great,
To do that thing that ends all other deeds,
Which ſhackles accidents, and bolts up change;
Which ſleeps, and never pallats more the dung,
The Beggar's Nurſe, and Cæſars.

Enter Proculeius.

Pro. Cæſar ſends greeting to the Queen of Ægypt,
And bids thee ſtudy on what fair demands
Thou mean'ſt to have him grant thee.
Cleo. What's the name?
Pro. My name is Proculeius.
Cleo. Anthony
Did tell me of you, bad me truſt you, but
I do not greatly care to be deceiv'd
That have no uſe for truſting. If your Maſter
Would have a Queen his Beggar, you muſt tell him,
That Majeſty, to keep decorum, muſt
No leſs beg than a Kingdom: if he pleaſe
To give me conquer'd Ægypt for my Son,
He gives me ſo much of mine own, as I
Will kneel to him with thanks.
Pro. Be of good cheer:
Y'are faln into a Princely hand, fear nothing,
Make your full reference freely to my Lord,
Who is full of Grace, that it flows over
On all that need. Let me report to him
Your ſweet dependency, and you ſhall find
A Conqueror that will pray in aid for kindneſs,
Where he for Grace is kneel'd to.
Cleo. Pray you tell him,
I am his Fortunes Vaſſal, and I ſend him
The greatneſs he has got. I hourly learn
A Doctrine of Obedience, and would gladly
Look him i' th' Face.
Pro. This I'le report (dear Lady)
Have comfort, for I know your plight is pitied
Of him that caus'd it.
Char. You ſee how eaſily ſhe may be ſurpris'd:
Guard her till Cæſar come.
Iras. Royal Queen.
Char. Oh Cleopatra, thou art taken Queen.
Cleo. Quick, quick, good hands.
Pro. Hold, worthy Lady, hold:
Do not your ſelf ſuch wrong, who are in this
Reliev'd, but not betraid.
Cleo. What of death too that rids our dogs of languiſh?
Pro. Cleopatra, do not abuſe my Maſters bounty, by
Th' undoing of your ſelf: Let the world ſee
His Nobleneſs well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.
Cleo. Where art thou, Death?
Come hither, come: Come, and take a Queen
Worth many Babes and Beggars.
Pro. Oh temperance, Lady.
Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'e not drink, Sir:
If idle talk will once be neceſſary,
I'le not ſleep neither. This mortal houſe I'le ruine,
Do Cæſar what he can. Know, Sir, that I
Will not wait pinnion'd at your Maſter's Court,
Not once to be chaſtis'd with the ſober eye
Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoiſt me up,
And ſhew me to the ſhouting Varlotry
Of cenſuring Rome? rather a ditch in Ægypt.
Be gentle, grave, unto me: rather on Nilus mud
Lay me ſtark nak'd, and let the water-Flies
Blow me into abhorring: rather make
My Countreys high Pyramids my Gibbet,
And hang me up in Chains.
Pro. You do extend
Theſe thoughts of horrour further than you ſhall
Find cauſe in Cæſar.

Enter Dolabella.

Dolabella. Proculeius,
What thou haſt done, my Maſter Cæſar knows,
And he hath ſent for thee: as for the Queen,
I'le take her to my Guard.
Proculeius. So, Dolabella,
It ſhall content me beſt: be gentle to her:
To Cæſar I will ſpeak what you ſhall pleaſe,
If you'll employ me to him. [Exit Proculeius.

Cleo. Say. I would die.
Dol. Moſt Noble Empreſs, you have heard of me.
Cleo. I cannot tell.
Dol. Aſſuredly you know me.
Cleo. No matter, Sir, what I have heard or known:
You laugh when Boyes or Women tell their Dreams,
Is't not your trick?
Dol. I underſtand not, Madam.
Cleo. I dreamt there was an Emperour Anthony.
Oh ſuch another ſleep, that I might ſee
But ſuch another man.
Dol. If it might pleaſe ye.
Cleo. His face was as the Heavens, and therein ſtuck
A Sun and Moon, which kept their courſe, and lighted
The little oth' Earth.
Dol. Moſt Sovereign Creature.
Cleo. His Legs beſtrid the Ocean, his rear'd Arm
Creſted the World: his Voice was propertied
As all the tuned Spheres, and that to Friends:
But when he meant to quail, and ſhake the Orb,
He was as ratling Thunder. For his bounty,
There was no Winter in't. An Anthony it was,
That grew the more by reaping: his delights
Were Dolphin-like, they ſhew'd his back above
The Element they liv'd in; In his Livery
Walk'd Crowns and Crownets: Realms and Iſlands
As plates dropt from his pocket.
Dol. Cleopatra.
Cleo. Think you there was, or might be ſuch a man
As this I dreamt of?
Dol. Gentle Madam, no.
Cleo. You Lye up to the hearing of the gods:
But if there be, or ever were one ſuch,
Its paſt the ſize of dreaming: Nature wants ſtuff
To vy ſtrange forms with fancy, yet t' imagine
An Anthony with Natures piece, 'gainſt Fancy,
Condemning ſhadows quite,
Dol. Hear me, good Madam:
Your loſs is as your ſelf, great; and you bear it
As anſwering to the weight, would I might never O're-take purſu'd ſucceſs: but I do feel
By the rebound of yours, a grief that ſuits
My very heart at root.
Cleo. I thank you, Sir:
Know you what Cæſar means to do with me?
Dol. I am loth to tell you what, I would you knew.
Cleo. Nay, pray you, Sir.
Dol. Though he be honourable.
Cleo. He'll lead me then in triumph.
Dol. Madam, he will, I know't.

Enter Proculeius, Cæſar, Gallus, Mecænas, and others of his Train.

All. Make way there, Cæſar.
Cæſ. Which is the Queen of Ægypt.
Dol. It is the Emperour, Madam. [Cleo. kneels.
Cæſ. Ariſe, you ſhall not kneel:
I pray you riſe, riſe, Ægypt.
Cleo. Sir, the gods will have it thus,
My Maſter and my Lord I much obey.
Cæſ. Take to you no hard thoughts,
The Record of what injuries you did us,
Though written in our fleſh, we ſhall remember
As things but done by chance.
Cleo. Sole Sir oth' World,
I cannot project mine own cauſe ſo well
To make it clear, but do confeſs I have
Been laden with like frailties, which before
Have often ſham'd our Sex.
Cæſ. Cleopatra, know,
We will extenuate rather than inforce:
If you apply your ſelf to our intents,
Which towards you are moſt gentle, you ſhall find
A benefit in this change, but if you ſeek
To lay on me a Cruelty, by taking
Anthony's courſe, you ſhall bereave your ſelf
Of my good purpoſes, and put your Children
To that deſtruction which I'll guard them from,
If thereon you rely. I'll take my leave.
Cleo. And may through all the World: 'tis yours, and we
Your Scutcheons, and your ſigns of Conqueſt ſhall
Hang in what place you pleaſe. Here, my good Lord.
Cæſ. You ſhall adviſe me in all for Cleopatra.
Cleo. This is the brief: of Money, Plate, and Jewels
I am poſſeſt of, 'tis exactly valued,
Not petty things admitted. Whereas Seleucus?
Sel. Here, Madam.
Cleo. This is my Treaſurer, let him ſpeak (my Lord)
Upon his peril, that I have reſerv'd
To my ſelf nothing. Speak the truth, Seleucus.
Sel. Madam, I had rather ſeal my Lips,
Than to my peril ſpeak that which is not.
Cleo. What have I kept back?
Sel. Enough to purchaſe what you have made known.
Cæſ. Nay, bluſh not, Cleopatra, I approve
Your wiſdom in the deed.
Cleo. See Cæſar: Oh behold,
How pomp is followed: mine will now be yours,
And ſhould we ſhift Eſtates, yours would be mine,
The ingratitude of this Seleucus, do's
Even make me wild. Oh Slave, of no more truſt
Than love that's hir'd? What, goeſt thou back, thou ſhalt
Go back I warrant thee: but I'll catch thine Eyes
Though they had Wings. Slave, Soul-leſs, Villain, Dog,
O rarely baſe!
Cæſ. Good Queen, let us entreat you.
Cleo. O Cæſar, what a wounding ſhame is this,
That thou vouchſafing here to viſit me,
Doing the honour of thy Lordlineſs
To one ſo meek, that mine own Servant ſhould
Parcel the ſumm of my diſgraces, by Addition of his Envy! Say (good Cæſar)
That I ſome Lady-trifles have reſerv'd,
Immoment toyes, things of ſuch Dignity
As we greet modern Friends withal, and ſay
Some Nobler Token I have kept apart
For Livia and Octavia, to induce
Their meditation, muſt I be unfolded
With one that I have bred: the gods! it ſmites me
Beneath the fall I have. Prethee go hence,
Or I ſhall ſhew the Cynders of my ſpirits
Through th' aſhes of my chance: Wer't thou a man,
Thou would'ſt have mercy on me.
Cæſ. Forbear, Seleucus.
Cleo. Be it known, that we the greateſt are miſ-thought
For things that others do: and when we fall,
We anſwer others merits, in our name
Are therefore to be pittied.
Cæſ. Cleopatra,
Not what you have reſerv'd, nor what acknowledg'd
Put we i' th' Roll of Conqueſt: ſtill be't yours,
Beſtow it at your pleaſure, and believe
Cæſar's no Merchant to make prize with you
Of things that Merchants ſold. Therefore be cheer'd,
Make not your thoughts your Priſons: No, dear Queen,
For we intend ſo to diſpoſe you, as
Your ſelf ſhall give us counſel: Feed, and ſleep:
Our care and pitty is ſo much upon you,
That we remain your Friend, and ſo adieu.
Cleo. My Maſter, and my Lord.
Cæſ. Not ſo: Adieu.
[Exeunt Cæſar, and his train.
Cleo. He words me, Girls, he words me,
That I ſhould not be noble to my ſelf.
But hark thee, Charmian.
Iras. Finiſh, good Lady, the bright day is done,
And we are for the dark.

Cleo.

Cleo. Hye thee again.
I have ſpoke already, and it is provided,
Go put it to the haſte.
Char. Madam, I will.

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. Where's the Queen?
Char. Behold, Sir.
Cleo. Dolabella.
Dol. Madam, as thereto ſworn, by your command
(Which my love makes Religion to obey)
I tell you this: Cæſar through Syria
Intends his Journey, and within three dayes,
You with your Children will he ſend before,
Make your beſt uſe of this. I have perform'd
Your pleaſure, and my promiſe.
Cleo. Dolabella, I ſhall remain your Debtor.
Dol. I your Servant:
Adieu, good Queen, I muſt attend on Cæſar. [Exit.
Cleo. Farewel, and thanks.
Now, Iras, what think'ſt thou?
Thou, an Ægyptian Puppet, ſhalt be ſhewn
In Rome as well as I: Mechanick Slaves
With greaſie Aprons, Rules, and Hammers ſhall
Uplift us to the view. In their thick breaths,
Rank of groſs Diet, ſhall we be enclouded,
And forc'd to drink their vapour.
Iras. The gods forbid.
Cleo. Nay, 'tis moſt certain, Iras: ſawcy Lictors
Will catch at us like Strumpets, and ſcall'd Rhimers
Ballad us out a tune. The quick Comedians
Extemporally will ſtage us, and preſent
Our Alexandria Revels: Anthony
Shall be brought drunken forth, and I ſhall ſee
Some ſpeaking Cleopatra-Boy my greatneſs
Ith' poſture of a Whore.
Iras. O the good gods!
Cleo. Nay that's certain.
Iras. I'll never ſee't; for I am ſure my Nails
Are ſtronger than mine Eyes.
Cleo. Why that's the way to fool their preparation,
And conquer their moſt abſurd intents.

Enter Charmian.

Now Charmian.
Shew me my Women like a Queen: Go fetch
My beſt Attires. I am again for Cidrus
To meet Mark Anthony. Sirrah Iras, go,
(Now, noble Charmian, we'll diſpatch indeed,)
And when thou haſt done this chare. I'll give thee leave
To play till Doomſ-day: bring our Crown, and all.
[A noiſe within.
Wherefore this noiſe?

Enter a Guardſman.

Guardſ. Here is a rural Fellow,
That will not be deny'd your Highneſs preſence,
He brings you Figs.
Cleo. Let him come in. [Exit Guardſman.
How poor an Inſtrument
May do a noble deed: he brings me liberty:
My reſolution's plac'd, and I have nothing
Of Woman in me: Now from head to foot
I am Marble conſtant: now the fleeting Moon
No Planet is of mine.

Enter Guardſman and Clown.

Guardſ. This is the Man.
Cleo. Avoid and leave him. [Exit Guardſman.
Haſt thou the pretty Worm of Nilus there,
That kills and pains not?
Clown. Truly I have him: but I would not be the party that ſhould deſire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal: thoſe that do die of it, do ſeldom or never recover.
Cleo. Remember'ſt thou any that have di'd on't?
Clown. Very many Men and Women too. I heard of one of them no longer than yeſterday, a very honeſt Woman, but ſomething given to lye, as a Woman ſhould not do, but in the way of honeſty, how ſhe died of the biting of it, what pain ſhe felt: Truly, ſhe makes a very good report oth' Worm: but he that will believe all that they ſay, ſhall never be ſaved by half that they do: but this is moſt fallible, the Worm's an odd Worm.
Cleo. Get thee hence, farewel.
Clown. I wiſh you all joy of the Worm,
Cleo. Farewel.
Clown. You muſt think this (look you) that the Worm will do his kind.
Cleo. I, I, farewel.
Clown. Look you, the Worm is not to be truſted, but in the keeping of wiſe people: for indeed, there is no goodneſs in the Worm.
Cleo. Take no care, it ſhall be heeded.
Clown. Very good: give it nothing I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.
Cleo. Will it eat me?
Clown. You muſt not think I am ſo ſimple, but I know the Devil himſelf will not eat a Woman: I know, that a Woman is a diſh for the gods, if the Devil dreſs her not. But truly, theſe ſame whorſon Devils do the gods great harm in their Women: for in every ten that they make, the Devils mar five.
Cleo. Well, get the gone, farewel.
Clown. Yes forſooth, I wiſh you joy oth' Worm. [Exit.
Cleo. Give me my Robe, put on my Crown, I have Immortal longings in me. Now no more
The juice of Ægypts Grape ſhall moiſt his Lip.
Yare, yare, good Iras, quick: me thinks I hear
Anthony call: I ſee him rowſe himſelf
To praiſe my Noble Act. I hear him mock
The luck of Cæſar, which the gods give men
To excuſe their after wrath. Husband, I come:
Now to that name, my courage prove my Title.
I am Fire, and Air; my other Elements
I give no baſer life. So, have you done?
Come then, and take the laſt warmth of my Lips.
Farewel kind Charmian, Iras, long farewel.
Have I the Aſpick in my Lips? Doſt fall?
If thou and Nature can ſo gently part,
The ſtroke of death is as a Lovers pinch,
Which hurts, and is deſir'd. Doſt thou lie ſtill?
If thus thou vaniſheſt, thou tell'ſt the World
It is not worth leave taking.
Char. Diſſolve thick Cloud and Rain, that I may ſay,
The gods themſelves do weep.
Cleo. This proves me baſe:
If ſhe proves the curſed Anthony,
He'll make demand of her, and ſpend that kiſs
Which is my Heaven to have. Come thou mortal wretch,
With thy ſharp teeth this knot intrinſicate,
Of life at once unty: Poor venemous Fool,
Be angry and diſpatch. Oh could'ſt thou ſpeak,
That I might hear thee call great Cæſar Aſs, unpolicied.
Char. Oh Eaſtern ſtar,
Cleo. Peace, peace:
Doſt thou not ſee my Baby at my Breaſt,
That ſucks the Nurſe aſleep.
Char. O break! O break!
Cleo. As ſweet as Balm, as ſoft as Air, as gentle.
O Anthony! Nay I will take thee too.
What ſhould I ſtay —— [Dies.
Char. In this wild World? So fare thee well:
Now boaſt thee Death, in thy poſſeſſion lies

A Laſs

A Laſs unparallel'd. Downy Windows cloſe,
And golden Phœbus never be beheld
Of Eyes again ſo Royal: your Crowns away,
I'll mend it, and then play ——

Enter the Guard ruſtling in, and Dolabella.

1 Guard. Where's the Queen?
Char. Speak ſoftly, wake her not.
1. Cæſar hath ſent.
Char. Too ſlow a Meſſenger.
Oh come apace, diſpatch, I partly feel thee.
1. Approach ho,
All's not well: Cæſar's beguil'd.
2. There's Dolabella ſent from Cæſar: call him.
1. What work is here, Charmian?
Is this well done?
Char. It's well done, and fitting for a Princeſs
Deſcended of ſo many Royal Kings.
Ah Souldier! [Charmian dyes.

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. How goes it here?
2. Guard. All dead.
Dol. Cæſar, thy thoughts
Touch their effects in this: thy ſelf art coming
To ſee perform'd the dreaded Act which thou
So ſought'ſt to hinder.

Enter Cæſar and all his Train, marching.

All. Make way there, make way for Cæſar.
Dol. Oh, Sir, you are too ſure an Augurer:
That you did fear, is done.
Cæſar. Braveſt at the laſt,
She levell'd at our purpoſes, and being Royal
Took her own way: the manner of her Deaths?
I do not ſee them bleed.
Dol. Who was laſt with them?
1. Guard. A ſimple Countryman, that brought her Figs:
This was his Basket.
Caſ. Poyſon'd then.
1 Guard. Oh Cæſar:
This Charmian liv'd but now, ſhe ſtood and ſpake:
I found her trimming up the Diadem,
On her dead Miſtriſs, tremblingly ſhe ſtood,
And on the ſudden dropt.
Cæſar. Oh noble weakneſs:
If they had ſwallowed poyſon, 'twould appear.
By external ſwelling: but ſhe looks like ſleep,
As ſhe would catch another Anthony
In her ſtrong toil of Grace.
Dol. Here on her Breaſt,
There is a vent of blood, and ſomething blown,
The like is on her Arm.
1 Guard. This an Aſpects trail
And theſe Fig-leaves have ſlime upon them ſuch
As th' Aſpick leaves upon the Caves of Nile.
Caſ. Moſt probable
That ſo ſhe died: for her Phyſician tells me
She hath purſu'd Concluſions infinite
Of eaſie ways to dye. Take up her Bed,
And bear her Women from the Monument,
She ſhall be buried by her Anthony.
No Grave upon the Earth ſhall clip in it
A pair ſo famous: high events as theſe
Strike thoſe that make them: and their ſtory is
No leſs in pitty, than his glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our Army ſhall,
In ſolemn ſhew, attend this Funeral,
And then to Rome. Come, Dolabella, ſee
High Order in this great Solemnity. [Exeunt omnes.

THE

THE TRAGEDY OF CYMBELINE.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. You do not meet a man but frowns. Our blouds no more obey the Heavens Than our Courtiers: Still ſeem as do's the Kings.

2 Gent. But what's the matter?

1. His Daughter, and the Heir of's Kingdom (whom He purpos'd to his Wives ſole Son, a Widow That late he married) hath referr'd her ſelf Unto a poor, but worthy Gentleman. She's wedded. Her Husband baniſh'd; ſhe impriſon'd, all Is outward ſorrow, though I think the King Be touch'd at very heart.

2. None but the King?

1. He that hath loſt her too: ſo is the Queen, That moſt deſir'd the Match. But not a Courtier, Although they wear their faces to the bent Of the Kings looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they ſcoul at.

2. And why ſo?

1. He that hath miſs'd the Princeſs, is a thing Too bad, for bad report: and he that hath her, (I mean, that married her, alack good man, And therefore baniſh'd) is a Creature, ſuch, As to ſeek through the Regions of the Earth For one, he likes; there would be ſomething failing In him, that ſhould compare. I do not think, So fair an Outward, and ſuch ſtuff within Endows a man, but he.

2. You ſpeak him fair.

1. I do extend him (Sir) which himſelf, Cruſh him together, rather than unfold His meaſure dully.

2. What's his name and Birth?

1. I cannot delve him to the root: his Father Was call'd Sicillius, who did join his honour Againſt the Romans, with Caſſibelan, But had his Titles by Tenantius, whom He ſerv'd with Glory and admir'd Succeſs: So gain'd the Sur-addition, Leonatus. And had (beſides this Gentleman in queſtion) Two other Sons, who in the Wars o' th' time Dy'd with their Swords in hand. For which their Father Then old, and fond of iſſue, took ſuch ſorrow That he quit Being; and his gentle Lady Big of this Gentleman (our Theam deceaſt) As he was born. The King he takes the Babe To his protection, calls him Poſthumus Leonatus, Breeds him, and makes him of his Bed-Chamber, Puts to him all the Learnings that his time Could make him the receiver of, which he took As we do air, faſt as 'twas miniſtred, And in's Spring, became a Harveſt: Liv'd in Court (Which rare it is to do) moſt prais'd, moſt lov'd, A ſample to the youngeſt: to th' more Mature, A glaſs that feated them: and to the graver, A Child that guided Dotards. To his Miſtriſs, (For whom he now is baniſh'd) her own price Proclaims how ſhe eſteem'd him; and his Vertue By her Election may be truly read, what kind of man he is.

2. I honour him, even out of your report. But pray you tell me, is ſhe ſole Child to th' King?

1. His only Child? He had two Sons (if this be worth your hearing, Mark it) the eldeſt of them, at three years old I' th' ſwathing Cloaths, the other from their Nurſery Were ſtoln, and to this hour, no gueſs in knowledge Which way they went.

2. How long is this ago?

1. Some twenty years.

2. That a Kings Children ſhould be ſo convey'd, So ſlackly guarded, and the ſearch ſo ſlow That could not trace them.

1. Howſoere 'tis ſtrange, Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at: Yet is it true, Sir.

2. I do well believe you.

1. We muſt forbear. Here comes the Gentleman, The Queen, and Princeſs. [Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the Queen, Poſthumus, and Imogen.

Qu. No, be aſſur'd you ſhall not find me (Daughter) After the ſlander of moſt Step-Mothers, Evil-ey'd unto you. You're my Priſoner, but Your Gaoler ſhall deliver you the Keys That lock up your reſtraint. For you, Poſthumus, So ſoon as I can win th' offended King, I will be known your Advocate: marry yet The fire of Rage is in him, and 'twere good You lean'd unto his Sentence, with what patience

Your

Your wiſdom may inform you.
Poſt. Pleaſe your Highneſs,
I will from hence to day.
Que. You know the peril:
I'le fetch a turn about the Garden, pitying
The bangs of barr'd affections, though the King
Hath charg'd you ſhould not ſpeak together. [Exit.
Imo. O diſſembling Curteſie! How fine this tyrant
Can tickle where ſhe wounds? My deareſt Husband,
I ſomething fear my Fathers wrath, but nothing
(Always reſerv'd my holy duty) what
His rage can do on me. You muſt be gone,
And I ſhall here abide the hourly ſhot
Of angry eyes: not cõforted to live,
But that there is this Jewel in the world,
That I may ſee again.
Poſt. My Queen, my Miſtris:
O Lady, weep no more, leſt I give cauſe
To be ſuſpected of more tenderneſs
Than doth become a man. I will remain
The loyall'ſt husband, that did ere plight troth.
My reſidence in Rome, at one Florio's,
Who to my Father was a friend, to me
Known but by Letter; thither write (my Queen)
And with mine eyes, I'le drink the words you ſend,
Though Ink be made of Gall.

Enter Queen.

Que. Be brief, I pray you:
If the King come, I ſhall incur, I know not
How much of his diſpleaſure: yet I'le move him
To walk this way: I never do him wrong,
But he do's buy my injuries, to be friends.
Payes dear for my offences.
Poſt. Should we be taking leave
As long a term as yet we have to live,
The lothneſs to depart, would grow: Adieu.
Imo. Nay, ſtay a little:
Were you but riding forth to air your ſelf,
Such parting were too petty. Look here (Love)
This Diamond was my Mothers: take it (Heart)
But keep it till you wooe another Wife,
When Imogen is dead.
Poſt. How, how? Another?
You gentle gods, give me but this I have,
And ſear up my embracements from a next,
With bonds of death. Remain, remain thou here,
While ſenſe can keep it on: And ſweeteſt, faireſt,
As I (my poor ſelf) did exchange for you
To your ſo infinite loſs: ſo in our triſles
I ſtill win of you. For my ſake wear this,
It is a Manacle of Love, I'le place it
Upon this faireſt Priſoner.
Imo. O the gods!
When ſhall we ſee again?

Enter Cymbeline, and Lords.

Poſt. Alack, the King.
Cym. Thou baſeſt thing, avoid hence, from my ſight:
If after this command thou fraught the Court
With thy unworthineſs, thou dyeſt. Away,
Thou'rt poiſon to my bloud.
Poſt. The gods protect you,
And bleſs the good Remainders of the Court:
I am gone. [Exit.
Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death
More ſharp than this is.
Cym. O diſloyal thing,
That ſhould'ſt repair my youth, thou heap'ſt
A years age on me.
Imo. I beſeech you, Sir,
Harm not your ſelf with your vexation,
I am ſenſeleſs of your wrath; a touch more rare
Subdues all pangs, all fears.
Cym. Paſt Grace? Obedience?
Imo. Paſt hope, and in diſpair, that way paſt Grace.
Cym. That might'ſt have had
The ſole Son of my Queen.
Imo. O bleſſed that I might not: I choſe an Eagle,
And did avoid a Puttock.
Cym. Thou took'ſt a Beggar, would'ſt have made my Throne, a Seat for baſeneſs.
Imo. No, I rather added a luſtre to it.
Cym. O thou vile one!
Imo. Sir,
It is your fault that I have lov'd Poſthumus:
You bred him as my Play-fellow, and he is
A man, worth any woman: over-buys me
Almoſt the ſumm he payes.
Cym. What? art thou mad?
Imo. Almoſt, Sir: Heaven reſtore me: would I were
A Neat-herds Daughter, and my Lecnatus
Our Neighbour-Shepherds Son.

Enter Queen.

Cym. Thou fooliſh thing;
They were again together: you have done
Not after our command. Away with her,
And pen her up.
Que. Beſeech your patience: Peace,
Dear Lady Daughter, peace. Sweet Soveraign,
Leave us to our ſelves, and make your ſelf ſome comfort
Out of your beſt advice.
Cym. Nay let her languiſh
A drop of bloud aday, and being aged
Dye of this Folly.
[Exit.

Enter Piſanio.

Que. Fie, you muſt give away:
Here is your Servant. How now, Sir? What news?
Piſ. My Lord your Son, drew on my Maſter.
Que. Hah!
No harm I truſt is done?
Piſa. There might have been,
But that my Maſter rather plaid, than fought,
And had no help of Anger: they were parted
By Gentlemen, at hand.
Que. I am very glad on't.
Imo. Your Son's my Fathers Friend, he takes his part
To draw upon an Exile, O brave Sir,
I would they were in Africk both together,
My ſelf by with a Needle, that I might prick
The goer back. Why came you from your Maſter?
Piſa. On his command: he would not ſuffer me
To bring him to the haven: left theſe notes
Of what commands I ſhould be ſubject to,
When't pleaſe you to employ me.
Que. This hath been
Your faithful Servant: I dare lay mine honour
He will remain ſo.
Piſa. I humbly thank your Highneſs.
Que. Pray walk a while.
Imo. About ſome half hour hence,
Pray you ſpeak with me;
You ſhall (at leaſt) go ſee my Lord aboard.
For this time leave me. [Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Clotten, and two Lords.

1. Sir, I would adviſe you to ſhift a ſhirt; the Violence of Action hath made you reek as a Sacrifice: where air air comes out, air comes in: there's none abroad ſo wholſome as that you vent.

Clot. If my Shirt were bloudy, then to ſhift it. Have I hurt him?

2. No faith: not ſo much as his patience.

1. Hurt him? His bodie's a paſſable Carkaſs if he be not hurt. It is a through-fare for Steel if it be not hurt.

2. His Steel was in debt, it went oth' back-ſide the Town.

Clot. The Villain would not ſtand me.

2. No, but he fled forward ſtill, toward your face.

1. Stand you? you have Land enough of your own: But he added to your having, gave you ſome ground.

2. As many Inches, as you have Oceans (Puppies.)

Clot. I would they had not come between us.

2. So would I, till you had meaſur'd how long a fool you were upon the ground.

Clot. And that ſhe ſhould love this fellow, and refuſe me

2. If it be a ſin to make a true election, ſhe is damn'd.

1. Sir, as I told you always: her Beauty and her Brain go not together. She's a good ſign, but I have ſeen ſmall reflection of her wit.

2. She ſhines not upon Fools, leſt the reflection Should hurt her.

Clot. Come, I'le to my Chamber: would there had been ſome hurt done.

2. I wiſh not ſo, unleſs it had been the fall of an Aſs, which is no great hurt.

Clot. You'll go with us?

1. I'le attend your Lordſhip.

Clot. Nay come, let's go together.

2. Well, my Lord.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Imogen, and Piſanio.

Imo. I would thou grew'ſt unto the ſhores oth' haven,
And queſtioned'ſt every Sail: if he ſhould write,
And I not have it, 'twere a Paper loſt
As offer'd mercy is: what was the laſt
That he ſpake to thee?

Piſa. It was his Queen, his Queen.

Imo. Then wav'd his Handkerchief?

Piſa. And kiſt it, Madam.

Imo. Senſeleſs Linnen, happier therein than I:
And that was all?

Piſa. No, Madam: for ſo long
As he could make me with his eyes, or ear,
Diſtinguiſh him from others, he did keep
The Deck, with Glove, or Hat, or Handkerchief,
Still waving, as the fits and ſtirts of's mind
Could beſt expreſs how ſlow his Soul ſail'd on,
How ſwift his Ship.

Imo. Thou ſhould'ſt have made him
As little as a Crow, or leſs, ere left
To after-eye him.

Piſa. Madam, ſo I did

Imo. I would have broke mine eye-ſtrings;
Crack'd them, but to look upon him, till the diminution
Of ſpace, had pointed him ſharp as my Needle:
Nay, followed him, till he had melted from
The ſmallneſs of a Gnat, to air: and then
Have turn'd mine eye, and wept. But, good Piſanio,
When ſhall we hear from him.

Piſa. Be aſſur'd, Madam,
With his next vantage.

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had
Moſt pretty things to ſay: Ere I could tell him
How I would think on him at certain hours,
Such thoughts, and ſuch: Or I could make him ſwear,
The She's of Italy ſhould not betray
Mine Intereſt, and his Honour: or have charg'd him
At the ſixth hour of Morn, at Noon, at Midnight,
T'encounter me with Oriſons, for then
I am in Heaven for him: Or ere I could,
Give him that parting kiſs, which I had ſet
Betwixt two charming words, comes in my Father,
And like the tyrannous breathing of the North,
Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. The Queen (Madam)
Deſires your highneſs Company.

Imo. Thoſe things I bid you do, get them diſpatch'd,
I will attend the Queen.

Piſa. Madam, I ſhall. [Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Philario, Iachimo, Frenchman, Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Believe it, Sir, I have ſeen him in Britain; he was then of a Creſcent, none expected to prove ſo worthy, as ſince he hath been allowed the name of. But I could then have look'd on him, without the help of Admiration, though the Catalogue of his endowments had been tabled by his ſide, and I to peruſe him by Items.

Phil. You ſpeak of him when he was leſs furniſh'd, than now he is, with that which makes him both without and within.

French. I have ſeen him in France: we had very many there, could behold the Sun, with as firm eyes as he.

Iach. This matter of marrying his Kings Daughter, wherein he muſt be weighed rather by her value, than his own, words him (I doubt not) a great deal from the matter.

French. And then his baniſhment.

Iach. I, and the approbation of thoſe that weep this lamentable divorce under her colours, are wonderfully to extend him, be it but to fortifie her judgement, which elſe an eaſie battery might lay flat, for taking a Beggar without leſs quality. But how comes it, he is to ſojourn with you? how creeps acquaintance?

Phil. His father and I were Souldiers together, to whom I have been often bound for no leſs than my life.

Enter Poſthumus.

Here comes the Britain. Let him be ſo entertained amongſt you, as ſuits with Gentlemen of your knowing, to a ſtranger of his quality. I beſeech you all be better known to this Gentleman, whom I commend to you, as a Noble friend of mine. How worthy he is, I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than ſtory him in his own hearing.

Fren. Sir, we have known together in Orleance.

Poſt. Since when I have been debter to you for courteſies, which I will be ever to pay, and yet pay ſtill.

Fren. Sir, you o're-rate my poor kindneſs, I was glad I did atone my Countryman and you; it had been pitty you ſhould have been put together, with ſo mortal a purpoſe, as then each bore, upon importance of ſo ſlight and trivial a nature.

Poſt. By your pardon, Sir, I was then a young Traveller, rather, ſhun'd to go even with what I heard, than in my very action to be guided by others experiences: but upon my mended judgement (if I offend to ſay it is mended) my Quarrel was not altogether ſlight.

French. Faith yes, to be put to the arbitrement of ſwords, and by ſuch two, that would by all likelihood have confounded one the other, or have faln both.

Iach. Can we with manners, ask what was the difference?

Fren. Safely, I think, 'twas a contention in publick, which may (without contradiction) ſuffer the report. It was

was much alike an agrument that fell out laſt night, where each of us fell in praiſe of our Country-Miſtreſſes. This Gentleman, at that time vouching (and upon warrant of bloudy affirmation) his to be more Fair, Vertuous, Wiſe, Chaſt, Conſtant, Qualified, and leſs attemptible than any, the rareſt of our Ladies in France.

Iach. That Lady is not now living: this Gentleman's opinion by this worn out.

Poſt. She holds her Vertue ſtill, and I my mind.

Iach. You muſt not ſo far preferr her, 'fore ours of Italy.

Poſt. Being ſo far provok'd as I was in France: I would abate her nothing, though I profeſs my ſelf her Adorer, not her Friend.

Iach. As fair, and as good: a kind of hand in hand compariſon, had been ſomething too fair, and too good for any Lady in Britany: if ſhe went before others. I have ſeen, as that Diamond of yours out-luſters many I have beheld. I could not believe ſhe excelled many: but I have not ſeen the moſt precious Diamond that is, nor you the Lady.

Poſt. I prais'd her, as I rated her: ſo do I my ſtone.

Iach. What do you eſteem it at?

Poſt. More than the world enjoys.

Iach Either your unparagon'd Miſtris is dead, or ſhe's out-priz'd by a triſle.

Poſt. You are miſtaken: the one may be ſold or given, or if there were wealth enough for the purchaces, or merit for the gift. The other is not a thing for ſale, and only the gift of the gods.

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Poſt. Which by their Graces I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title yours: but you know ſtrange Fowle light upon neighbouring Ponds. Your Ring may be ſtoln too, ſo your brace of unprizeable Eſtimations, the one is but frail, and the other Caſual. A cunning Thief, or a (that way) accompliſh'd Courtier, would hazzard the winning both of firſt and laſt.

Poſt. Your Italy contains none ſo accompliſh'd a Courtier to convince the honour of my Miſtris: if in the holding or loſs of that, you term her frail, I do nothing doubt you have ſtore of Thieves, notwithſtanding I fear not my Ring.

Phil. Let us leave here, Gentlemen.

Poſt. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy Signior I thank him, makes no ſtranger of me, we are familiar at firſt.

Iach. With five times ſo much converſation, I ſhould get ground of your fair Miſtris; make her go back, even to the yielding, had I admittance, and opportunity to Friend.

Poſt. No, no.

Iach. I dare thereupon pawn the moyety of my Eſtate, to your Ring, which in my opinion o'r-evalues it ſomething: but I make my wager rather againſt your Confidence, than her Reputation. And to bar your offence herein too, I durſt attempt it againſt any Lady in the world.

Poſt. You are a great deal abus'd in too bold a perſwaſion, and I doubt not you ſuſtain what y'are worthy of, by your Attempt.

Iach. What's that?

Poſt. A Repulſe, though your Attempt (as you call it) deſerves more; a puniſhment too.

Phil. Gentlemen, enough of this, it came in too ſuddenly, let it dye as it was born, and I pray you be better acquainted.

Iach. Would I had put my Eſtate, and my Neighbours on th' approbation of what I have ſpoke.

Poſt. What Lady would you chooſe to aſſail?

Iach. Yours, whom in conſtancy you think ſtands ſo ſafe. I will lay you ten thouſand Duckets to your Ring, that commend me to the Court where your Lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a ſecond conference, and I will bring from thence, that honour of hers, which you imagine ſo reſerv'd.

Poſt. I will wage againſt your Gold, Gold to it: My Ring I hold dear as my finger, 'tis part of it.

Iach. You are a friend, and therein the wiſer: if you buy Ladies fleſh at a Million a Dram, you cannot preſerve it from tainting; but I ſee you have ſome Religion in you, that you fear.

Poſt. This is but a cuſtom in your tongue: you bear a graver purpoſe I hope.

Iach. I am the Maſter of my ſpeeches, and would undergo what's ſpoken, I ſwear.

Poſt. Will you? I ſhall but lend my Diamond till your return: let there be Covenants drawn between's. My Miſtris exceeds in goodneſs, the hugeneſs of your unworthy things. I dare you to this match: here's my Ring.

Phil. I will have it no lay.

Iach. By the gods it is one: if I bring you no ſufficient Teſtimony that I have enjoy'd the deareſt bodily part of your Miſtris: my ten thouſand Duckets are yours, ſo is your Diamond too: if I come off, and leave her in ſuch honour as you have truſt in: She your Jewel, this your Jewel, and my Gold are yours: provided I have your commendation, for my more entertainment.

Poſt. I embrace theſe Conditions, let us have Articles betwixt us: only thus far you ſhall anſwer, if you make your voyage upon her, and give me directly to underſtand, you have prevail'd, I am no further your Enemy, ſhe is not worth our debate. If ſhe remain unſeduc'd, you not making it appear otherwiſe: for your ill opinion, and th' aſſault you have made to her chaſtity, you ſhall anſwer me with your Sword.

Iach. Your hand, a Covenant: we will have theſe things ſet down by lawful Counſel, and ſtraight away for Britain, leſt the Bargain ſhould catch cold, and ſtarve: I will fetch my Gold, and have our two Wagers recorded.

Poſt. Agreed.

French. Will this hold, think you.

Phil. Signior Iachimo will not from it.
Pray let us follow 'em. [Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Queen, Ladies, and Cornelius.

Que. Whiles yet the dew's on ground
Gather thoſe Flowers,
Make haſt. Who has the note of them?

Lad. I Madam.

Que. Diſpatch. [Exeunt Ladies.
Now Maſter Doctor, have you brought thoſe drugs:

Cor. Pleaſeth your higneſs, I: here they are, Madam:
But I beſeech your Grace, without offence
(My Conſcience bids me ask) wherefore you have Commanded of me theſe moſt poiſonous Compounds,
Which are the movers of a languiſhing death:
But though ſlow, deadly.

Que. I wonder, Doctor,
Thou ask'ſt me ſuch a Queſtion; have I not been Thy Pupill long? haſt thou not learn'd me how
To make Perfumes? Diſtil? Preſerve? Yea ſo,
That our great King himſelf doth wooe me oft
For my Confections? having thus far proceeded,
(Unleſs thou think'ſt me deviliſh) is it not meet
That I did amplifie my judgement in
Other Concluſions? I will try the forces
Of theſe thy Compounds, on ſuch Creatures as
We count not worth the hanging (but none humane)
To try the vigour of them, and apply
Allayments to their Act, and by them gather
Their ſeveral vertues, and effects.

Corn. Your highneſs
Shall from this practice, but make hard your heart:
Beſides, the ſeeing theſe effects will be

Both

Both noyſome and infectious.
Qu. O content thee.

Enter Piſanio.

Here comes a flattering Raſcal, upon him
Will I firſt work: He's for his Maſter,
And Enemy to my Son. How now, Piſanio?
Doctor, your ſervice for this time is ended,
Take your own way.
Cor. I do ſuſpect you, Madam.
But you ſhall do no harm.
Qu. Hark thee a word.
Cor. I do not like her. She doth think ſhe has
Strange ling'ring poiſons: I do know her ſpirit,
And will not truſt one of her malice, with
A drug of ſuch damn'd Nature. Thoſe ſhe has,
Will ſtupefie and dull the Senſe a while,
Which firſt (perchance) ſhe'll prove on Cats and Dogs,
Then afterward up higher: but there is
No danger in what ſhew of death it makes,
More than the locking up the Spirits a time,
To be more freſh, reviving. She is fool'd
With a moſt falſe effect: and I the truer,
So to be falſe with her.
Qu. No further ſervice, Doctor,
Until I ſend for thee.
Cor. I humbly take my leave. [Exit.
Qu. Weeps ſhe ſtill (ſaiſt thou?)
Do'it thou think in time
She will not quench, and let inſtructions enter
Where folly now poſſeſſes? do thou work:
When thou ſhalt bring me word ſhe loves my Son,
I'll tell thee on the inſtant, thou art then
As great as is thy Maſter: Greater, for
His Fortunes all lie ſpeechleſs, and his name
Is at laſt gaſp. Return he cannot, nor
Continue where he is: to ſhift his being,
Is to exchange one miſery with another,
And every day that comes, comes to decay
A dayes work in him. What ſhalt thou expect
To be depender of a thing that leans?
Who cannot be new built, nor has no Friends
So much, as but to prop him? Thou tak'ſt up
Thou know'ſt not what: But take it for thy labour,
It is a thing I make, which hath the King
Five times redeem'd from death. I do not know
What is more Cordial. Nay I prethee take it,
It is an earneſt of a farther good
That I mean to thee. Tell thy Miſtriſs how
The caſe ſtands with her: do't, as from thy ſelf:
Think what a chance thou changeſt on, but think
Thou haſt thy Miſtriſs ſtill, to boot, my Son,
Who ſhall take notice of thee. I'll move the King
To any ſhape of thy Preferment, ſuch
As thou'lt deſire: and then my ſelf, I chiefly,
That ſet thee on to this deſert, am bound
To load thy merit richly. Call my Women. [Exit Piſanio.
Think on my words. A ſlye, and conſtant Knave,
Not to be ſhak'd: the Agent for his Maſter,
And the Remembrancer of her, to hold
The hand faſt to her Lord. I have given him that,
Which if he take, ſhall quite unpeople her
Of Leidgers for her Sweet: and which ſhe after,
Except ſhe bend her humour, ſhall be aſſur'd
To taſte of too.

Enter Piſanio, and Ladies.

So, ſo: well done, well done:
The Violets, Cowſlips, and the Prime-Roſes
Bear to my Cloſſet: Fare thee well, Piſanio,
Think on my words. [Exit Queen, and Ladies.
Piſa. And ſhall do:
But when to my good Lord, I prove untrue,
I'll choak my ſelf: there's all I'll do for you. [Exit.

Scena Septima.

Enter Imogen alone.

Imo. A Father cruel, and a Stepdame falſe,
A Fooliſh Suiter to a Wedded Lady,
That hath her Husband baniſh'd: O, that Husband,
My ſupream Crown of grief, and thoſe repeated
Vexations of it. Had I been Thief-ſtoln,
As my two Brothers, happy: but moſt miſerable
Is the deſire that's glorious. Bleſſed be thoſe
How mean ſo ere, that have their honeſt wills,
Which ſeaſons comfort. Who may this be? Fie.

Enter Piſanio, and Jachimo.

Piſa. Madam, a Noble Gentleman of Rome,
Comes from my Lord with Letters.
Jach. Change you, Madam!
The Worthy Leonatus is in ſafety,
And greets your Highneſs dearly.
Imo. Thanks, good Sir,
You're kindly welcome.
Jach. All of her, that is out of door, moſt rich:
If ſhe be furniſh'd with a mind ſo rare,
She is alone th' Arabian Bird; and I
Have loſt the wager. Boldneſs be my Friend:
Arm me Audacity from head to foot,
Or like the Parthian I ſhall flying fight,
Rather directly flye

Imogen reads.

He is one of the Nobleſt note, to whoſe kindneſſes I am moſt infinitely tyed. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your truſt. Leonatus.

So far I read aloud.
But even the very middle of my heart
Is warm'd by th' reſt, and take it thankfully.
You are as welcome (worthy Sir) as I
Have words to bid you, and ſhall find it ſo
In all that I can do.
Jach. Thanks, faireſt Lady:
What are men mad? hath Nature given them Eyes
To ſee this vaulted Arch, and the rich Crop
Of Sea, and Land, which can diſtinguiſh 'twixt
The fiery Orbes above, and the twinn'd Stones
Upon the number'd Beach, and can we not Partition make with Spectacles ſo pretious
'Twixt fair, and foul?
Imo. What makes your admiration?
Jach. It cannot be i' th' Eye: for Apes, and Monkeys
'Twixt two ſuch She's, would chatter this way, and Contemn with mowes the other. Nor i' th' judgment:
For Ideots in this caſe of favour, would
Be wiſely definit: Nor in the Appetite.
Sluttery to ſuch neat Excellence, oppos'd
Should make deſire vomit emptineſs,
Not ſo allur'd to feed.
Imo. What is the matter trow?
Jach. The Cloyed will,
That ſatiate yet unſatisfi'd deſire, that Tub
Both fill'd and running: Ravening firſt the Lamb,
Longs after for the Garbage.
Imo. What, dear Sir,
Thus rap's you? Are you well?
Jach. Thanks, Madam, well: Beſeech you, Sir,
Deſire my Man's abode, where I did leave him:
He's ſtrange and peeviſh.
Piſa. I was going, Sir,

To give him welcome.
Imo. Continues well my Lord?
His health, beſeech you?
Jach. VVell, Madam.
Imo. Is he diſpos'd to mirth? I hope he is.
Jach. Exceeding pleaſant: none a ſtranger there,
So merry, and ſo gameſome: he is call'd
The Britain Reveller.
Imo. When he was here
He did incline to ſadneſs, and oft times
Not knowing why.
Jach. I never ſaw him ſad.
There is a Frenchman his Companion, one
An eminent Monſieur, that it ſeems much loves
A Gallian-Girl at home. He Furnaces
The thick ſighs from him; whiles the jolly Britain,
(Your Lord I mean) laughs from's free Lungs: cries oh,
Can my ſides hold, to think that man who knows
By Hiſtory, Report, or his own proof
What Woman is, yea what ſhe cannot chooſe
But muſt be: will's free hours languiſh,
For aſſured Bondage?
Imo. Will my Lord ſay ſo?
Jach. I Madam, with his Eyes in flood with laughter,
It is a Recreation to be by
And hear him mock the Frenchman:
But Heavens know ſome men are much too blame.
Imo. Not he, I hope.
Jach. Not he.
But yet Heavens bounty towards him, might
Be us'd more thankfully. In himſelf 'tis much;
In you which I account his beyond all Talents,
Whilſt I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pitty too.
Imo. What do you pitty, Sir?
Jach. Two Creatures heartily.
Imo. Am I one, Sir?
You look on me: what wrack diſcern you in me
Deſerves your pitty?
Jach. Lamentable: what
To hide me from the radiant Sun, and ſolace
I' th' Dungeon by a Snuff?
Imo. I pray you, Sir,
Deliver with more openneſs your Anſwers
To my demands. Why do you pitty me?
Jach. That others do
(I was about to ſay) enjoy your —— but
It is an office of the gods to venge it,
Not mine to ſpeak on't.
Imo. You do ſeem to know
Something of me, or what concerns me; pray you
Since doubting things go ill, often hurts more
Than to be ſure they do. For Certainties
Either are paſt remedies; or timely knowing,
The remedy then born. Diſcover to me
What both you ſpur and ſtop.
Jach. Had I this Cheek
To bath my Lips upon: this Hand, whoſe touch,
(Whoſe very touch) would force the feelers Soul
To th' Oath of Loyalty. This object, which Takes Priſoner, the wild motion of mine Eye,
Fixing it only here, ſhould I (damn'd then)
Slaver with Lips as common as the ſtairs
That mount the Capitol: join gripes, with hands
Made hard with hourly (falſhood as
With labour:) than by peeping in an Eye
Baſe and illuſtrious as the ſmoaky light
That's fed with ſtinking Tallow: it were fit
That all the Plagues of Hell ſhould at one time
Encounter ſuch revolt.
Imo. My Lord, I fear
Has forgot Britain.
Jach. And himſelf, not I
Inclin'd to this intelligence, pronounce
The Beggery of his change: but 'tis your Graces
That from my muteſt Conſcience, to my tongue,
Charms this report out.
Imo. Let me hear no more,
Jach. O deareſt Soul: your Cauſe doth ſtrike my heart
With pitty, that doth make me ſick. A Lady
So fair, and faſtned to an Empery
Would make the great'ſt King double, to be partner'd
With Tomboys hir'd, with that ſelf exhibition
Which your own Coffers yield: with diſeas'd ventures
That play with all infirmities for Gold,
Which rottenneſs can lend Nature, Such boyl'd ſtuff
As well might poiſon Poiſon. Be reveng'd,
Or ſhe that bore you, was no Queen, and you
Recoil from your great Stock.
Imo. Reveng'd:
How ſhould I be reveng'd? if this be true,
(As I have ſuch a heart, that both mine Ears
Muſt not in haſte abuſe) if it be true,
How ſhall I be reveng'd?
Jach. Should he make me
Live like Diana's Prieſt, betwixt cold ſheets;
Whiles he is vaulting variable Ramps
In your deſpight, upon your Purſe: revenge it.
I dedicate my ſelf to your ſweet pleaſure,
More Noble than that runnagate to your Bed,
And will continue faſt to your Affection,
Still cloſe, as ſure.
Imo. What ho, Piſanio?
Jach. Let my ſervice tender on your Lips.
Imo. Away, I do condemn mine Ears, that have
So long attended thee. If thou wert honourable
Thou wouldſt have told this tale for Vertue, not
For ſuch an end thou ſeek'ſt, as baſe, as ſtrange:
Thou wrong'ſt a Gentleman, who is as far
From thy report, as thou from honour: and Solicit'ſt here a Lady, that diſdains
Thee, and the Devil alike. What ho, Piſanio?
The King my Father ſhall be made acquainted
Of thy Aſſault: if he ſhall think it fit,
A ſawcy Stranger in his Court, to Mart
As is a Romiſh Stew, and to expound
His beaſtly mind to us; he hath a Court
He little cares for, and Daughter, whom
He not reſpects at all. What ho, Piſanio?
Jach. O happy Leonatus, I may ſay,
The credit that thy Lady hath of thee
Deſerves thy truſt, and thy moſt perfect goodneſs
Her aſſur'd credit, bleſſed live you long,
A Lady to the worthieſt Sir, that ever
Country call'd his: and you his Miſtriſs, only
For the moſt worthieſt fit. Give me your pardon.
I have ſpoke this to know if your Affiance
Were deeply rooted, and ſhall make your Lord,
That which he is, new ore; and he is one
The trueſt manner'd: ſuch a holy Witch,
That he inchants Societies into him:
Half all mens hearts are his.
Imo. You make amends.
Jach. He ſits amongſt men, like a deſcended god:
He hath a kind of honour ſets him off,
More than a mortal ſeeming. Be not angry
(Moſt mighty Princeſs) that I have adventur'd
To try your taking of a falſe report, which hath
Honour'd with confirmation your great judgment,
In the Election of a Sir, ſo rare,
Which you know, cannot erre. The Love I bear him,
Made me to fan you thus, but the gods made you
(Unlike all others) chaſtleſs. Pray your Pardon.
Imo. All's well, Sir:
Take my power i' th' Court for yours.
Jach. My humble thanks: I had almoſt forgot
T' intreat your Grace, but in a ſmall requeſt,
And yet of moment too, for it concerns

Your

Your Lord, my ſelf, and other Noble Friends
Are Partners in the buſineſs.
Imo. Pray what is't?
Jach. Some dozen Romans of us, and your Lord
(The beſt Feather of our Wing) have mingled ſumms
To buy a Preſent for the Emperour:
Which I (the Factor for the reſt) have done
In France: 'tis Plate of rare device, and Jewels
Of rich and exquiſite form, their values great,
And I am ſomething curious, being ſtrange,
To have them in ſafe ſtowage: May it pleaſe you
To take them in protection.
Imo. Willingly:
And pawn mine honour for their ſafety, ſince
My Lord hath intereſt in them, I will keep them
In my Bed-Chamber.
Jach. They are in a Trunk
Attended by my men: I will make bold
To ſend them to you, only for this night:
I muſt aboard to morrow.
Imo. O no, no.
Jach. Yes, I beſeech you: or I ſhall ſhort my word
By length'ning my return. From Gallia,
I croſt the Seas on purpoſe, and on promiſe
To ſee your Grace.
Imo. I thank you for your pains:
But not away to morrow.
Jach. O, I muſt Madam.
Therefore I ſhall beſeech you, if you pleaſe
To greet your Lord with writing, do't to night,
I have out-ſtood my time, which is material
To th' tender of our Preſent.
Imo. I will write:
Send your Trunk to me, it ſhall be ſafe kept,
And truly yielded you: you're very welcome. [Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Clotten, and the two Lords.

Clot. WAs there ever man had ſuch luck? when I kiſt the Jack upon an up-caſt, to be hit away? I had an hundred pound on't; and then a whorſon Jack-an-Apes, muſt take me up for ſwearing, as if I borrowed mine Oaths of him, and might not ſpend them at my pleaſure.

1. What got he by that? you have broke his pate with your Bowl.

2. If his wit had been like him that broke it: it would have run all out.

Clot. When a Gentleman is diſpoſed to ſwear: it is not for any ſtanders by to curtail his Oaths. Ha?

2. No, my Lord; nor crop the Ears of them.

Clot. Whorſon Dog: I give him ſatisfaction? would he had been one of my Rank.

2. To have ſmelt like a Fool.

Clot. I am not vext more at any thing in the Earth: a Pox on't. I had rather not be ſo Noble as I am: they dare not fight with me, becauſe of the Queen my Mother: every Jack-ſlave hath his belly full of fighting, and I muſt go up and down like a Cock, that no body can match.

2. You are a Cock and a Capon too, and you crow Cock, with your comb on.

Clot. Sayeſt thou?

2. It is not fit your Lordſhip ſhould undertake every Companion, that you give offence to.

Clot. No, I know that: but it is fit I ſhould commit offence to my inferiours.

2. I, it is fit for your Lordſhip only.

Clot. Why ſo I ſay.

1. Did you hear of a Stranger that's come to Court to Night?

Clot. A Stranger, and I not know on't?

2. He's a ſtrange Fellow himſelf, and knows it not.

1. There's an Italian come, and 'tis thought one of Leonatus Friends.

Clot. Leonatus? A baniſh'd Raſcal; and he's another, whereſoever he be. Who told you of this Stranger?

1. One of your Lordſhips Pages.

Clot. It is fit I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in't?

2. You cannot derogate, my Lord.

Clot. Not eaſily I think.

2. You are a Fool granted, therefore your Iſſues being Fooliſh, do not derogate.

Clot. Come, I'll go ſee this Italian: what I have loſt to day at Bowls, I'll win to night of him. Come: go.

2. I'll attend your Lordſhip. [Exit.

That ſuch a crafty Devil as is his Mother,
Should yield the World this Aſs: a Woman, that
Bears all down with her Brain, and this her Son,
Cannot take two from twenty for his heart,
And leave eighteen. Alas poor Princeſs,
Thou divine Imogen, what thou endur'ſt,
Betwixt a Father by thy Step-dame govern'd,
A Mother hourly coining Plots: A Wooer,
More hateful than the foul expulſion is
Of thy dear Husband, than that horrid Act
Of the divorce, he'ld make the Heavens hold firm
The Walls of thy dear honour. Keep unſhak'd
That Temple thy fair mind, that thou maiſt ſtand
T' enjoy thy baniſh'd Lord: and this great Land. [Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Imogen, in her Bed, and a Lady.

Imo. Who's there? my VVoman Helen?
Lady. Pleaſe you, Madam.
Imo. VVhat hour is it?
Lady. Almoſt midnight, Madam.
Imo. I have read three hours then:
Mine Eyes are weak,
Fold down the Leaf where I have left: to Bed
Take not away the Taper, leave it burning:
And if thou canſt awake by four o' th' Clock,
I prithee call me: Sleep hath ſeiz'd me wholly.
To your protection I commend me, gods,
From Fairies, and the Tempters of the night,
Guard me, beſeech ye. [Sleeps.

[Iachimo from the Trunk.

Jach. The Crickets ſing, and mans ore-labour'd ſenſe,
Repairs it ſelf by reſt: Our Tarquin thus
Did ſoftly preſs the Ruſhes, ere he waken'd
The Chaſtity he wounded. Cytherea,
How bravely thou becom'ſt thy Bed; freſh Lilly,
And whiter than the Sheets: that I might touch,
But kiſs, one kiſs. Rubies unparagon'd,
How dearly they do't: 'Tis her breathing that
Perfumes the Chamber thus: the flame o' th' Taper
Bows toward her, and would under-peep her lids.
To ſee th' incloſed Lights, now Canopied
Under the VVindows, VVhite and Azure lac'd
VVith Blue of Heavens own tinct, but my deſign's
To note the Chamber, I will write all down,
Such, and ſuch Pictures: there the VVindow, ſuch
Th' adornment of her Bed; the Arras, Figures,
Why ſuch, and ſuch: and the Contents o' th' Story.
Ah, but ſome natural notes about her Body,
Above ten thouſand meaner Moveables
VVould teſtifie, t' enrich mine Inventory.
O ſleep, thou Ape of Death, lye dull upon her,
And be her ſenſe but as a Monument,
Thus in a Chappel lying. Come off, come off;
As ſlippery as the Gordian-Knot was hard.

'Tis mine, and this witneſs outwardly,
As ſtrongly as the Conſcience do's within:
To th' madding of her Lord. On her left breſt
A mole Cinque-ſpotted: Like the Crimſon drops
I' th' bottom of a Cowſlip. Heres a Voucher,
Stronger than ever Law could make: this Secret
Will force him think I have pick'd the lock, and t'ane
The treaſure of her honour. No more: to what end?
Why ſhould I write this down, that's rivetted,
Screw'd to my memory. She hath been reading late,
The Tale of Tereus, here the leaf's turn'd down
Where Philomele gave up. I have enough,
To th' Trunk again, and ſhut the ſpring of it.
Swift, ſwift, you Dragons of the night, that dawning
May bear the Ravens Eye: I lodge in fear,
Though this a Heavenly Angel: Hell is here. [Clock ſtrikes.
One, two, three: time, time. [Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Clotten, and Lords.

1. Your Lordſhip is the moſt patient man in loſs, the moſt coldeſt that turn'd up Ace.

Clot. It would make any man cold to looſe.

1. But not every man patient, after the noble temper of your Lordſhip; You are moſt hot, and furious when you win.

Clot. Winning will put any man into Courage: if I could get this fooliſh Imogen, I ſhould have Gold enough: it's almoſt Morning, is't not?

1. Day, my Lord.

Clot. I would this Muſick would come: I am adviſed to give her Muſick a Mornings, they ſay it will penetrate.

Enter Muſicians.

Come on, tune: if you can penetrate here with your Fingering, ſo: we'll try with tongue too: if none will do, let her remain: but I'll never give o're. Firſt, a very excellent good conceited thing; after a wonderful ſweet air, with admirable rich words to it, and then let her conſider.

Song.

Hark, hark, the Lark at Heavens Gate ſings,
and Phœbus 'gins ariſe,
His Steeds to water at thoſe Springs
on chalic'd Flowers that lies:
And winking Mary-buds begin to ope their Golden Eyes
With every thing that pretty is, my Lady ſweet ariſe:
Ariſe, ariſe.

So, get you gone: if this penetrate, I will conſider your Muſick the better: if it do not, it is a voice in her Ears which Horſe-hairs, and Calves-Guts, nor the voice of unpaved Eunuch to boot, can never amend.

Enter Queen and Cymbeline.

2. Here comes the King.

Clot. I am glad I was up ſo late, for that's the reaſon I was up ſo early: he cannot chooſe but take this Service I have done, Fatherly. Good morrow to your Majeſty, and gracious Mother.

Cym. Attend you here the door of our ſtern Daughter. Will ſhe not forth?

Clot. I have aſſail'd her with Muſicks, but ſhe vouchſafes no notice.

Cym. The Exile of her Minion is too new.
She hath not yet forgot him, ſome more time
Muſt wear the print of his remembrance on't,
And then ſhe's yours.

Qu. You are moſt bound to th' King,
Who lets go by no vantages, that may
Prefer you to his Daughter: frame your ſelf
To orderly ſolicits, and be friended
With aptneſs of the ſeaſon: make denials
Encreaſe your ſervices: ſo ſeem, as if
You were inſpir'd to do thoſe duties which
You tender to her: that you in all obey her.
Save when command to your diſmiſſion tends,
And therein you are ſenſeleſs.

Clot. Senſeleſs? Not ſo.

Meſ. So like you (Sir) Ambaſſadors from Rome;
The one is Caius Lucius.

Cym. A worthy Fellow,
Albeit he comes on angry purpoſe now;
But that's no fault of his: we muſt receive him
According to the honour of his Sender,
And towards himſelf, his goodneſs fore-ſpent on us
We muſt extend our notice: Our dear Son,
When you have given good Morning to your Miſtriſs,
Attend the Queen, and us, we have need
T' employ you towards this Roman.
Come, our Queen. [Exeunt.

Clot. If ſhe be up, I'll ſpeak with her: if not,
Let her lye ſtill, and dream: by your leave ho,
I know her Women are about her: what
If I do line one of their hands: 'tis gold
Which buys admittance (oft it doth) yea and makes
Diana's Rangers falſe themſelves, yield up
Their Deer to' th' ſtand o' th' Stealer: and 'tis gold
Which makes the True-man kill'd, and ſaves the Thief:
Nay, ſometime hangs both Thief, and True-man: what
Can it not do, and undo: I will make
One of her Women Lawyer to me, for
I yet not underſtand the caſe my ſelf.
By your leave. [Knocks.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. Who's there that knocks?

Clot. A Gentleman.

Lady. No more.

Clot. Yes, and a Gentlewomans Son.

Lady. That's more
Than ſome whoſe Taylors are as dear as yours,
Can juſtly boaſt of: what's your Lordſhips pleaſure?

Clot. Your Ladies perſon, is ſhe ready?

Lady. I, to keep her Chamber.

Clot. There is gold for you,
Sell me your good report.

Lady. How, my good name? or to report of you
What I ſhall think is good. The Princeſs.

Enter Imogen.

Clot. Good morrow faireſt, Siſter your ſweet hand.

Imo. Good morrow, Sir, you lay out too much pains
For purchaſing but trouble: the thanks I give,
Is telling you that I am poor of thanks,
And ſcarce can ſpare them.

Clot. Still I ſwear I love you.

Imo. If you'd but ſaid ſo, 'twere as deep with me:
If you ſwear ſtill, your recompence is ſtill
That I regard it not.

Clot. This is no anſwer.

Imo. But that you ſhall not ſay, I yield being ſilent,
I would not ſpeak. I pray you ſpare me, Faith
I ſhall unfold equal diſcourteſie
To your beſt kindneſs: one of your great knowing
Should learn (being taught) forbearance.

Clot. To leave you in your madneſs, 'twere my ſin,
I will not.

Imo. Fools are not mad Folks.

Clot. Do you call me Fool?

Imo.

Imo. As I am mad I do:
If you'll be patient, I'll no more be mad,
That cures us both. I am much ſorry (Sir)
You put me to forget a Ladies manners
By being ſo verbal: and learn now, for all,
That I which know my heart, do here pronounce
By th' very truth of it, I care not for you,
And am ſo near the lack of Charity
To accuſe my ſelf, I hate you: which I had rather
You felt, than make't my boaſt.
Clot. You ſin againſt
Obedience, which you owe your Father, for
The Contract you pretend with that baſe Wretch,
One, bred of Alms, and foſter'd with cold Diſhes
With ſcraps oth' Court: It is no Contract, none;
And though it be allowed in meaner parties
(Yet who than he more mean) to knit their Souls
(On whom there is no more dependancy
But Brats and Beggery) in ſelf figur'd knot,
Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement, by
The conſequence o' th' Crown, and muſt not foil
The precious note of it; with a baſe Slave,
A Hilding for a Livory, a Squires Cloth,
A Pantler; not ſo eminent.
Imo. Prophane Fellow:
Wert thou the Son of Jupiter, and no more,
But what thou art beſides: thou wer't too baſe,
To be his Groom: thou wer't dignified enough
Even to the point of Envy, if 'twere made
Comparative for your Vertues, to be ſtil'd
The under Hangman of his Kingdom; and hated
For being preferr'd ſo well.
Clot. The South Fog rot him.
Imo. He never can meet more miſchance, than come
To be but nam'd of thee. His meaneſt Garment
That ever hath but clipt his body, is dearer
In my reſpect, than all the hairs above thee,
VVere they all made ſuch men: How now, Piſanio?

Enter Piſanio.

Clot. His Garment? Now the Devil.
Imo. To Dorothy, my Woman, hye thee preſently.
Clot. His Garment?
Imo. I am ſprighted with a Fool,
Frighted, and angred worſe: Go bid my Woman
Search for a Jewel, that too caſually
Hath left mine Arm: it was thy Maſters. Shrew me
If I would loſe it for a Revenue
Of any Kings in Europe. I do think,
I ſaw't this Morning: Confident I am,
Laſt night 'twas on my Arm: I kiſs'd it,
I hope it be not gone, to tell my Lord
That I kiſs ought but him.
Piſa. 'Twill not be loſt.
Imo. I hope ſo: go and ſearch.
Clot. You have abus'd me:
His meaneſt Garment?
Imo. I, I ſaid ſo, Sir,
If you will mak't an Action, call witneſs to't.
Clot. I will enform your Father.
Imo. Your Mother too:
She's my good Lady; and will conceive, I hope
But the worſt of me. So I leave you, Sir,
To th' worſt of diſcontent. [Exit.
Clot. I'll be reveng'd:
His meaneſt Garment? VVell. [Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Poſthumus, and Philario.

Poſt. Fear it not, Sir: I would I were ſo ſure
To win the King, as I am bold, her honour
VVill remain hers.
Phil. VVhat means do you make to him?
Poſt. Not any: but abide the change of Time,
Quake in the preſent VVinters ſtate, and wiſh
That warmer dayes would come: In theſe fear'd hopes
I barely gratify your love; they failing
I muſt die much your Debtor.
Phil. Your very goodneſs, and your Company,
O're payes all I can do. By this your King
Hath heard of Great Auguſtus: Caius Lucius,
VVill do's Commiſſion throughly. And I think
He'll grant the Tribute: ſend th' Arrearages,
Or look upon our Romans, whoſe remembrance
Is yet freſh in their grief.
Poſt. I do believe
(Statiſt though I am none, nor like to be)
That this will prove a War; and you ſhall hear
The Legion now in Gallia, ſooner landed
In our not fearing-Britain, than have tidings
Of any penny Tribute paid. Our Countrymen
Are men more order'd than when Julius Cæſar
Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage
Worthy his frowning at. Their Diſcipline,
(Now mingled with their courages) will make known
To their Approvers, they are People, ſuch
That mend upon the World.

Enter Jachimo.

Phil. See Jachimo.
Poſt. The ſwifteſt harts have poſted you by land;
And Winds of all the Corners kiſs'd your Sails.
To make your Veſſel nimble.
Phil. Welcome, Sir.
Poſt. I hope the briefneſs of your anſwer, made
The ſpeedineſs of your return.
Jach. Your Lady,
Is one of the faireſt that I have look'd upon.
Poſt. And therewithal the beſt, or let her beauty
Look thorough a Caſement to allure falſe hearts,
And be falſe with them.
Jach. Here are Letters for you.
Poſt. Their tenure good I truſt.
Jach. 'Tis very like.
Poſt. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain Court,
VVhen you were there?
Jach. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.
Poſt. All is well yet,
Sparkles this Stone as it was wont, or is't not Too dull for your good wearing?
Jach. If I have loſt it,
I ſhould have loſt the worth of it in Gold,
I'll make a Journey twice as far, t' enjoy
A ſecond night of ſuch ſweet ſhortneſs, which VVas mine in Britain, for the Ring is won.
Poſt. The Stones too hard to come by.
Jach. Not a whit,
Your Lady being ſo eaſie.
Poſt. Make not, Sir,
Your loſs, your Sport: I hope you know that we
Muſt not continue Friends.
Jach. Good Sir, we muſt
If you keep Covenant: had I not brought
The knowledge of your Miſtriſs home, I grant
VVe were to queſtion farther; but I now

Profeſs my ſelf the winner of her honour,
Together with your Ring; and not the wronger
Of her, or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills.
Poſt. If you can mak't apparent
That you have taſted her in Bed; my hand,
And Ring is yours. If not the foul opinion
You had of her poor honour, gains, or loſes
Your Sword or mine, or Maſterleſs leave both
To who ſhall find them.
Jach. Sir, my Circumſtances
Being ſo neat the truth, as I will make them,
Muſt firſt induce you to believe: whoſe ſtrength
I will confirm with Oath, which I doubt not
You'll give me leave to ſpare, when you ſhall find
You need it not.
Poſt. Proceed.
Jach. Firſt, her Bed-Chamber
(Where I confeſs I ſlept not, but profeſs
Had that was well worth watching) it was hang'd
With Tapiſtry of Silk, and Silver, the Story
Proud Cleopatra, when ſhe met her Roman,
And Cidnus ſwell'd above the Banks, or for
The preſs of Boats, or Pride: A piece of Work
So bravely done, ſo rich, that it did ſtrive
In Workmanſhip, and Value, which I wonder'd
Could be ſo rarely, and exactly wrought
Since the true life on't was ——
Poſt. This is true:
And this you might have heard of here, by me,
Or by ſome other.
Jach. More particulars
Must juſtify my knowledge.
Poſt. So they muſt,
Or do your Honour injury.
Jach. The Chimney
Is South the Chamber, and the Chimney-piece
Chaſt Dian, bathing: never ſaw I figures
So likely to report themſelves; the Cutter
Was as another Nature dumb, out-went her,
Motion, and Breath left out.
Poſt. This is a thing
Which you might from Relation likewiſe read,
Being, as it is, much ſpoke of.
Jach. The Roof o' th' Chamber,
With golden Cherubins is fretted. Her Andirons
(I had forgot them) were two winking Cupids
Of Silver, each on one foot ſtanding, nicely
Depending on their Brands.
Poſt. This is her honour:
Let it be granted you have ſeen all this (and praiſe
Be given to your remembrance) the deſcription
Of what is in her Chamber, nothing ſaves
The Wager you have laid.
Jach. Then if you can
Be pale, I beg but leave to air this Jewel: See,
And now 'tis up again: it muſt be married
To that your Diamond, I'll keep them.
Poſt. Jove —
Once more let me behold it: Is it that
Which I left with her?
Jach. Sir (I thank her) that
She ſtript it from her Arm: I ſee her yet
Her pretty Action, did out-ſell her gift,
And yet enrich'd it too: ſhe gave it me,
And ſaid ſhe priz'd it once.
Poſt. May be, ſhe pluck'd it off
To ſend it me.
Jach. She writes ſo to you? doth ſhe?
Poſt. O no, no, no, 'tis true. Here take this too,
It is a Baſilisk unto mine Eye,
Kills me to look on't: Let there be no Honour,
VVhere there is beauty: Truth, where ſemblance: Love,
VVhere there's another man. The Vows of VVomen,
Of no more bondage be, to where they are made,
Than they are to their Vertues, which is nothing:
O, above meaſure falſe.
Phil. Have patience, Sir.
And take your Ring again, 'tis not yet won;
It may be probable ſhe loſt it: or
VVho knows if one of her VVomen, being corrupted,
Hath ſtoln it from her.
Poſt. Very true,
And ſo I hope he came by't: back my Ring,
Render to me ſome corporrl ſign about her
More evident than this: for this was ſtole.
Jach. By Jupiter, I had it from her Arm.
Poſt. Hark you, he ſwears: by Jupiter he ſwears.
'Tis true, nay keep the Ring; 'tis true: I am ſure
She ſhould not loſe it: her Attendants are
All ſworn, and honourable: they induc'd to ſteal it?
And by a Stranger? No, he hath enjoy'd her,
The Cognizance of her incontinency
Is this: ſhe hath bought the name of Whore, thus dearly.
There, take thy hire, and all the Fiends of Hell
Divide themſelves between you.
Phil. Sir, be patient:
This is not ſtrong enough to be believ'd
Of one perſwaded well of.
Poſt. Never talk on't:
She hath been colted by him.
Jach. If you ſeek
For further ſatisfying; under her Breaſt
(Worthy her preſſing) lies a Mole, right proud
Of that moſt delicate Lodging. By my life
I kiſt it, and it gave me preſent hunger
To feed again, though full. You do remember
This ſtain upon her?
Poſt. I, and it doth confirm
Another ſtain, as big as Hell can hold,
Were there no more but it.
Jach. Will you hear more?
Poſt. Spare your Arithmetick,
Never count the Turns: Once, and a Million.
Jach. I'll be ſworn.
Poſt. No ſwearing:
If you will ſwear you have not don't, you lie,
And I will kill thee if thou do'ſt deny
Thou'ſt made me Cuckold.
Jach. I'll deny nothing.
Poſt. O that I had her here, to tear her Limb-meal;
I will go there and do't i' th' Court, before
Her Father. I'll do ſomething. [Exit.
Phil. Quite beſides.
The Government of Patience. You have won:
Let's follow him, and pervert the preſent wrath
He hath againſt himſelf.
Jach. With all my heart. [Exeunt.

Enter Poſthumus.

Poſt. Is there no way for Men to be, but Women
Muſt be half-workers? We are all Baſtards,
And that moſt venerable man, which I
Did call my Father, was, I know not where,
When I was ſtampt. Some Coyner with his Tools
Made me a counterfeit: yet my Mother ſeem'd
The Dian of that time: ſo doth my Wife
The Non pareill of this. Oh Vengeance, Vengeance!
Me of my lawful pleaſure ſhe reſtrain'd,
And pray'd me oft forbearance: did it with
A pudency ſo Roſie, the ſweet view on't
Might well have warm'd old Saturn:
That I thought her
As Chaſte, as un-Sunn'd Snow. Oh, all the Devils!
This yellow Jachimo in an hour, was't not?
Or leſs; at firſt? Perchance ſpoke not, but Like a full Acorn'd Boar, a Jarmen on,

Cry'd

Cry'd oh, and mounted, found no oppoſition
But what he look'd for, ſhould oppoſe, and ſhe
Should from encounter guard. Could I find out
The Womans part in me, for there's no motion
That tends to vice in man, but I affirm
It is the Womans part: be it Lying, note it,
The Womans: Flattering, hers: deceiving, hers:
Luſt, and rank thoughts, hers, hers: Revenges hers:
Ambitions, Covetings, change of Prides, Diſdain,
Nice-longing, Slanders, Mutability:
All faults that may be named, nay, that Hell knows,
Why hers, in part, or all: but rather all. For even to Vice
They are not conſtant, but are changing ſtill;
One Vice, but of a minute old, for one
Not half ſo old as that. I'le write againſt them,
Deteſt them, curſe them: yet 'tis greater Skill
In a true Hate, to pray they have their will:
The very Devils cannot plague them better. [Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter in State, Cymbeline, Queen, Clotten, and Lords at one door, and at another, Caius, Lucius, and Attendants.

Cym. NOw ſay, what would Auguſtus Ceſar with us?
Luc. When Julius Ceſar (whoſe remembrance yet
Lives in mens eyes, and will to Ears and Tongues
Be Theam, and hearing ever) was in this Britain,
And Conquer'd it, Caſſibelan thine Uncle
(Famous in Ceſar's praiſes, no whit leſs
Than in his Feats deſerving it) for him,
And his ſucceſſion, granted Rome a Tribute,
Yearly three thouſand pounds; which (by thee) lately
Is left untender'd.
Que. And to kill the marvail,
Shall be ſo ever.
Clot. There be many Ceſars,
Ere ſuch another Julius: Britain's a world
By it ſelf, and we will nothing pay
For wearing our own Noſes.
Queen. That opportunity
Which then they had to take from's, to reſume
We have again; Remember, Sir, my Liege,
The Kings your Anceſtors, together with
The Natural bravery of your Iſle, which ſtands
As Neptune's Park ribb'd, and pal'd in
With Oaks unſkaleable, and roaring Waters,
With Sand that will not bear your enemies Boats,
But ſuck them up to' th' Top-maſt. A kind of Conqueſt
Ceſar made here, but made not here his brag
Of, came, and Saw, and Overcame: with ſhame
(The firſt that ever touch'd him) he was carried
From off our Coaſt, twice beaten; and his ſhipping
(Poor ignorant Baubles) on our terrible Seas
Like Egg-ſhells, mov'd upon their Surges crack'd
As eaſily 'gainſt our Rocks. For joy whereof,
The fam'd Caſſibelan, who was once at point
(Oh giglet Fortune) to maſter Ceſars ſword,
Made Lud's-Town with rejoycing-Fires bright,
And Britains ſtrut with Courage.
Clot. Come, there's no more Tribute to be paid. Our Kingdom is ſtronger than it was at that time: and (as I ſaid) there is no more ſuch Ceſars, other of them may have crook'd Noſes, but to owe ſuch ſtrait Arms, none.
Cym. Son, let your Mother end.
Clot. We have yet many among us, can gripe as hard as Caſſibelan, I do not ſay I am one: but I have a hand. Why Tribute? Why ſhould we pay Tribute? If Ceſar can hide the Sun from us with a Blanket, or put the Moon in his pocket: we will pay him Tribute for Light: elſe, Sir, no more Tribute, pray you now.
Cym. You muſt know,
Till the injurious Romans did extort
This Tribute from us, we were free. Ceſar's Ambition,
Which ſwell'd ſo much, that it did almoſt ſtretch
The ſides o' th' world, againſt all colour here,
Did put the yoak upon's: which to ſhake off
Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon
Our ſelves to be, we do. Say then to Ceſar,
Our Anceſtor was that Mulmutius, which
Ordain'd our Laws, whoſe uſe the ſword of Ceſar
Hath too much mangled: whoſe repair, and franchiſe,
Shall (by the power we hold) be our good deed,
Though Rome be therefore angry. Mulmutius made our laws,
Who was the firſt of Britain, which did put
His brows within a golden Crown, and call'd
Himſelf a King.
Luc. I am ſorry, Cymbeline,
That I am to pronounce Auguſtus Ceſar
(Ceſar that hath more Kings his Servants, than Thy ſelf Domeſtick Officers) thine Enemy.
Receive it from me then. War, and Confuſion
In Ceſars name pronounce I 'gainſt thee: Look
For fury, not to be reſiſted. Thus defi'd.
I thank thee for my ſelf.
Cym. Thou art welcom, Caius,
Thy Ceſar Knighted me; my youth I ſpent
Much under him: of him, I gather'd Honour,
Which he, to ſeek of me again, perforce,
Behooves me keep at utterance. I am perfect,
That the Pannonians and Dalmatians, for
Their Liberties are now in Armes: a Precedent
Which not to read, would ſhew the Britains cold:
So Ceſar ſhall not find them.
Luc. Let proof ſpeak.
Clot. His Majeſty bids you welcom. Make paſtime with us a day, or two, or longer: if you ſeek us afterwards in other terms, you ſhall find us in our Salt-water-Girdle: if you beat us out of it, it is yours: if you fall in the adventure, our Crows ſhall fare the better for you: and there's an end.
Luc. So, Sir.
Cym. I know your Maſters pleaſure, and he mine:
All the Remain, is welcom. [Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Piſanio reading of a Letter.

Piſ. How? of Adultery? Wherefore write you not
What Monſters her accuſe? Leonatus:
Oh Maſter, what a ſtrange infection
Is faln into thy ear? What falſe Italian,
(As poiſonous tongu'd, as handed) hath prevail'd
On thy too ready hearing? Diſloyal? No.
She's puniſh'd for her truth; and undergoes
More Goddeſs-like, than Wife-like; ſuch Aſſaults
As would take in ſome Virtue. Oh my Maſter,
Thy mind to her, is now as low, as were
Thy Fortunes. How? that I ſhould murther her,
Upon the Love, and truth, and vows: which I
Have made to thy command? I her? Her blood?
If it be ſo, to do good ſervice, never
Let me be counted ſerviceable. How look I,
That I ſhould ſeem to lack humanity,
So much as this Fact comes to? Do't: the Letter.
That I have ſent her, by her own command,
Shall give the opportunity. Oh damn'd paper,
Black as the Ink that's on thee: ſenſeleſs bauble,
Art thou a Fœdarie for this act; thou look'ſt
So Virgin-like without? Lo here ſhe comes.

Enter

Enter Imogen.

I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

Imo. How now, Pisanio?

Pis. Madam, here is a Letter from my Lord.

Imo. Who! thy Lord? that is my Lord Leonatus?
Oh, learn'd indeed were that Astronomer
That knew the Stars, as I his Characters,
He'ld lay the Future open. You good gods,
Let what is here contain'd, relish of Love,
Of my Lord's health, of his content: yet not
That we two are asunder, let that grieve him;
Some griefs are medicinable, that is one of them,
For it doth physick Love, of his content,
All but in that. Good Wax, thy leave: blest be
You Bees that make these Locks of counsel. Lovers,
And men in dangerous Bonds pray not alike.
Though Forfeitours you cast in prison, yet
You clasp young Cupid's tables: good News, gods.

JUstice, and your Father's wrath (should he take me in his Dominion) could not be so cruel to me, as you, (oh the dearest of Creatures) would even renew me with your eyes. Take notice that I am in Cambria at Milford-Haven: what your own Love, will out of this advise you, follow. So he wishes you all happiness, that remains loyal to his Vow, and your increasing in Love, Leonatus Posthumus.

Oh for a Horse with wings! Hear'st thou, Pisanio?
He is at Milford-Haven: Read, and tell me
How far 'tis thither. If one of mean affairs
May plod it in a week, why may not I
Glide thither in a day? then, true Pisanio,
Who long'st like me, to see thy Lord; who long'st
(Oh let me bate) but not like me: yet long'st
But in a fainter kind. Oh not like me,
For mine's beyond, beyond, say, and speak thick
(Love's Counsellor should fill the bores of hearing
To th' smothering of the Sense) how far it is
To this same blessed Milford. And by the way
Tell me how Wales was made so happy, as
T' inherit such a Haven. But first of all,
How may we steal from hence: and for the gap
That we shall make in time, from our hence-going,
And our return, to excuse: but first, how get hence.
Why should excuse be born or e're begot?
We'll talk of that hereafter. Prythee speak,
How many score of Miles may we well ride
'Twixt hour and hour?

Pis. One score 'twixt Sun, and Sun,
Madam's enough for you: and too much too.

Imo. Why, one that rode to's Execution, Man,
Could never go so slow: I have heard of Riding wagers,
Where Horses have been nimbler than the Sands
That run i' th' Clocks behalf. But this is Foolrie,
Go, bid my Woman feign a sickness, say
She'll home to her Father, and provide me presently
A Riding Suit: No costlier than would fit
A Franklins Housewife.

Pis. Madam, you're best consider.

Imo. I see before me (Man) nor here, nor here,
Nor what ensues but have a Fog in them,
That I cannot look through. Away, I prithee,
Do as I bid thee: there's no more to say:
Accessible is none but Milford way. [Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. A goodly day, not to keep house with such,
Whose Roof's as low as ours: Sleep, Boys, this gate
Instructs you how't adore the Heavens; and bows you
To a mornings holy office. The Gates of Monarchs
Are Arch'd so high, that Giants may jet through
And keep their impious Turbands on, without
Good morrow to the Sun. Hail, thou fair Heaven,
We house i' th' Rock, yet use thee not so hardly,
As prouder livers do.

Guid. Hail, Heaven.

Arvir. Hail, Heaven.

Bela. Now for our Mountain sport, up to yond hill,
Your legs are young: I'le tread these Flats. Consider,
When you above perceive me like a Crow,
That it is Place, which lessens and sets off,
And you may then revolve what tales I have told you,
Of Courts of Princes: of the tricks in War.
This service, is not Service; so being done,
But being so allowed. To apprehend thus,
Draws us profit from all things we see:
And often to our comfort, shall we find
The sharded Beetle, in a safer hold
Than is the full-wing'd Eagle. Oh this life,
Is Nobler than attending for a check:
Richer, than doing nothing for a Babe:
Prouder, than rustling in un-paid-for Silk:
Such gain the Cap of him, that makes him fine,
Yet keeps his Book uncross'd, no life to ours.

Gui. Out of your proof you speak: we poor unfledg'd,
Have never wing'd from view o' th' nest; nor know not
What Air's from home. Hap'ly this life is best,
(If quiet life be best) sweeter to you
That have a sharper known; Well corresponding
With your stiff Age; but unto us, it is
A Cell of Ignorance: travailing a bed,
A Prison, or a Debtor, that not dares
To stride a limit.

Arvi. What should we speak of
When we are old as you? when we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December? How
In this our pinching Cave, shall we discourse
The freezing hours away? We have seen nothing:
We are beastly; subtle as the Fox for prey,
Like warlike as the Wolf, for what we eat:
Our Valour is to chase what flies: our Cage
We make a Quire, as doth the prison'd Bird,
And sing our Bondage freely.

Bel. How you speak?
Did you but know the Citie's Usuries,
And felt them knowingly: the art o' th' Court,
As hard to leave, as keep: whose top to climb
Is certain falling: or so slipp'ry, that
The fear's as bad as falling. The toil o' th' VVar
A pain that only seems to seek our danger
I'th'name of Fame, and Honour, which dyes i'th'search,
And hath as oft a sland'rous Epitaph,
As Record of fair act. Nay, many times
Doth ill deserve, by doing well: what's worse
Must curt'sie at the Censure. Oh Boyes, this Storie
The world may read in me: My bodie's mark'd
With Roman Swords; and my report was once
First with the best of Note. Cymbeline lov'd me,
And when a Souldier was the Theme, my name
Was not far off: then was I as a Tree
Whose boughs did bend with fruit. But in one night,
A Storm, or Robbery (call it what you will)
Shook down my mellow hangings: nay my Leaves,
And left me bare to weather.

Gui. Uncertain favour.

Bel. My fault being nothing (as I have told you oft)
But that two Villains, whose false Oaths prevail'd
Before my perfect Honour, swore to Cymbeline,
I was Confederate with the Romans: so
Followed my Banishment, and this twenty years,
This Rock, and these Demesnes, have been my VVorld,
VVhere I have liv'd at honest freedom, payed

More

More pious debts to Heaven, than in all
The fore-end of my time. But, up to th' Mountains,
This is not Hunter's Language; he that ſtrikes
The Veniſon firſt, ſhall be the Lord o'th' Feaſt,
To him the other two ſhall miniſter,
And we will fear no poiſon, which attends
In place of greater State:
I'le meet you in the Valleys. [Exeunt,
How hard it is to hide the ſparks of Nature?
Theſe Boyes know little they are Sons to th' King,
Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.
They think they are mine,
And though train'd up thus meanly
I'th' Cave, whereon the Bow their thoughts do hit
The Roofs of Palaces, and Nature prompts them
In ſimple and low things, to Prince it, much
Beyond the trick of others. This Palador,
The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, whom
The King his Father call'd Guiderius. Jove,
When on my three-foot ſtool I ſit, and tell
The warlike feats I have done, his Spirits fly out
Into my ſtory: ſay thus mine Enemy fell,
And thus I ſet my foot on's neck, even then
The Princely blood flows in his Cheek, he ſweats,
Strains his young Nerves, and puts himſelf in poſture
That acts my words. The younger Brother Cadwall,
Once Arviragus, in as like a figure
Strikes life into my ſpeech, and ſhews much more
His own conceiving. Hark, the Game is rouz'd,
Oh Cymbeline. Heaven and my Conſcience knows
Thou did'ſt unjuſtly baniſh me: whereon
At three, and two years old, I ſtole theſe Babes,
Thinking to bar thee of Succeſſion, as
Thou refts me of my Lands. Euriphile,
Thou waſt their Nurſe, they took thee for their Mother
And every day do honour to her Grave:
My ſelf Belarius, that am Morgan call'd,
They take for Natural Father. The Game is up. [Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Piſanio and Imogen.

Imo. Thou told'ſt me when we came from horſe, the place
Was near at hand: Ne're long'd my Mother ſo
To ſeem firſt, as I have now: Piſanio, Man:
Where is Poſthumus? What is in thy mind
That makes thee ſtare thus? Wherefore breaks that ſigh
From th' inward of thee? One, One, but painted thus
Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond ſelf-explication. Put thy ſelf
Into a haviour of leſs fear, e're wildneſs
Vanquiſh my ſtaieder Senſes. What's the matter?
Why tender'ſt thou that Paper to me, with
A look untender? If't be Summer News,
Smile to't before: if Winterly, thou need'ſt
But keep that count'nance ſtill. My Husband's hand?
That Drug-damn'd Italy, hath out-craftied him,
And he's at ſome hard point. Speak, man, thy tongue
May take off ſome extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.
Piſ. Pleaſe you read,
And you ſhall find me (wretched man) a thing
The moſt diſdain'd of Fortune.

Imogen reads.

THY Miſtreſs (Piſanio) hath play'd the Strumpet in my Bed: the Teſtimonies whereof, lyes bleeding in me. I ſpeak not out of weak Surmiſes, but from proof as ſtrong as my grief, and as certain as I expect my Revenge. That part, thou (Piſanio) muſt act for me, if thy Faith be not tainted with the breach of hers; let thine own hands take away her life: I ſhall give thee opportunity at Milford Haven. She hath my Letter for the purpoſe; where, if thou fear to ſtrike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the Pander to her diſhonour, and equally to me diſloyal.

Piſ. What ſhall I need to draw my Sword, the Paper
Hath cut her throat already. No, 'tis ſlander,
Whoſe edge is ſharper than the Sword, whoſe tongue
Out-venoms all the Worms of Nile, whoſe breath
Rides on the poſting winds, and doth belye
All corners of the World. Kings, Queens, and States,
Maids, Matrons, nay the ſecrets of the Grave
This viperous ſlander enters. What chear, Madam?
Imo. False to his Bed? What is it to be falſe?
To lye in watch there, and to think on him?
To weep 'twixt clock and clock? If ſleep charge Nature,
To break it with a fearful dream of him,
And cry my ſelf awake? that's falſe to's bed? is it?
Piſa. Alas, good Lady.
Imo. I falſe? thy Conſcience witneſs: Iachimo,
Thou did'ſt accuſe him of Incontinency,
Thou then look'dſt like a Villain: now, methinks,
Thy favours good enough. Some Jay of Italy
(whoſe Mother was her painting) hath betraid him:
Poor I am ſtale, a Garment out of faſhion,
And for I am richer than to hang by th' walls,
I muſt be ript: To pieces with me: Oh!
Mens Vows are womens Traitors. All good ſeeming
By thy revolt (oh Husband) ſhall be thought
Put on for Villany: not born where't grows,
But worn a bait for Ladies.
Piſa. Good Madam, hear me.
Imo. True honeſt men being heard, like falſe Æneas,
Were in his time thought falſe: and Synons weeping
Did ſcandal many a holy tear: took pitty
From moſt true wretchedneſs. So thou Poſthumus,
Wilt lay the leven to all proper men;
Goodly, and gallant, ſhall be falſe and perjur'd
From thy great fail: Come, Fellow, be thou honeſt,
Do thou thy Maſters bidding. When thou ſeeſt him,
A little witneſs my obedience. Look,
I draw the Sword my ſelf, take it, and hit
The innocent Manſion of my Love (my Heart:)
Fear not, 'tis empty of all things, but Grief:
Thy Maſter is not there, who was indeed
The riches of it. Do his bidding, ſtrike,
Thou may'ſt be valiant in a better cauſe:
But now thou ſeem'ſt a Coward.
Piſa. Hence, vile Inſtrument,
Thou ſhalt not damn my hand.
Imo. Why, I muſt dye,
And if I do not by thy hand, thou art
No Servant of thy Maſters. Againſt Self-ſlaughter,
There is a prohibition ſo Divine
That cravens my weak hand: Come, here's my heart:
Something's afoot: Soft, ſoft, we'll no defence,
Obedient as the Scabbard. What is here,
The Scriptures of the Loyal Leonatus,
All turn'd to Hereſie? Away, away,
Corrupters of my faith, you ſhall no more
Be Stomachers to my heart: thus may poor Fools
Believe falſe Teachers: Though thoſe that art betraid
Do feel the Treaſon ſharply, yet the Traitor
Stands in worſe caſe of woe. And thou Poſthumus,
That did'ſt ſet up my diſobedience 'gainſt the King
My Father, and makes me put into contempt the ſuits
Of Princely Fellows, ſhalt hereafter find
It is no act of common paſſage, but
A ſtrain of Rareneſs: and I grieve my ſelf,
To think, when thou ſhalt be diſedg'd by her,
That now thou tireſt on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me. Prethee diſpatch,
The Lamb entreats the Butcher. Where's the Knife?
Thou art too ſlow to do thy Maſters bidding,
When I deſire it too.

Piſa.

Piſa. Oh gracious Lady:
Since I receiv'd command to do this buſineſs,
I have not ſlept one wink.
Imo. Do't, and to bed then.
Piſa. I'le wake mine eye-balls firſt.
Imo. Wherefore then
Did'ſt undertake it? Why haſt thou abus'd
So many Miles, with a pretence? This place?
Mine action? and thine own? Our Horſes labour?
The time inviting thee? the perturb'd Court
For my being abſent; whereunto I never
Purpoſe return. Why haſt thou gone ſo far
To be un-bent? when thou haſt tane thy ſtand,
Th' elected Deer before thee?
Piſa. But to win time
To loſe ſo bad employment, in the which
I have conſider'd of a courſe: good Lady,
Hear me with patience.
Imo. Talk thy tongue weary, ſpeak:
I have heard I am a Strumpet, and mine ear
Therein falſe ſtrook, can take no greater wound,
Nor tent, to bottom that. But ſpeak.
Piſa. Then, Madam,
I thought you would not back again.
Imo. Moſt like,
Bringing me here to kill me.
Piſa. Not ſo neither:
But if I were as wiſe, as honeſt, then
My purpoſe would prove well: it cannot be,
But that my Maſter is abus'd. Some Villain,
I, and ſingular in his Art, hath done you both
This curſed injury.
Imo. Some Roman Curtezan?
Piſa. No, on my life:
I'le give him notice you are dead, and ſend him
Some bloody ſign of it. For 'tis commanded
I ſhould do ſo: you ſhall be miſt at Court,
And that will well confirm it.
Imo. Why, good Fellow,
What ſhall I do the while? Where bide? How live?
Or in my life, what comfort, when I am
Dead to my Husband?
Piſa. If you'll back to th' Court.
Imo. No Court, no Father: nor no more adoe
With that harſh, noble, ſimple nothing?
That Clotten, whoſe Love-ſuit hath been to me
As fearful as a Siege. Piſa. If not at Court,
Then not in Britain muſt you bide. Luc. Where then?
Hath Britain all the Sun that ſhines? Day? Night?
Are they not but in Britain? Ith' worlds Volum
Our Britain ſeems as of it, but not in't:
In a great Pool a Swans neſt, prethee think
There's livers out of Britain.
Piſa. I am moſt glad
You think of other Place: Th' Ambaſſador
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To morrow. Now, if you could wear a mind
Dark as your Fortune is, and but diſguiſe
That which t'appear it ſelf, muſt not yet be,
But by ſelf-danger, you ſhould tread a courſe
Pretty, and full of view: yea, happily, near
The reſidence of Poſthumus; ſo nigh (at laſt)
That though his Actions were not viſible, yet
Report ſhould render him hourly to your ear,
As truly as he moves.
Imo. Oh for ſuch means,
Though peril to my modeſty, not death on't,
I would adventure.
Piſa. Well then, there's the point:
You muſt forget to be a Woman: change
Command into Obedience. Fear and Niceneſs
(The Handmaids of all Women, or more truly
VVoman it prety ſelf) into a waggiſh courage,
Ready in gybes, quick-anſwer'd, ſawcy, and
As quarrellous as the VVeazel: Nay, you muſt
Forget that rareſt treaſure of your Cheek,
Expoſing it (but oh the harder heart,
Alack no remedy) to the greedy touch
Of common-kiſſing Titan: and forget
Your labourſome and dainty trimms, wherein
You made great Juno angry. Imo. Nay, be brief:
I ſee into thy end, and am almoſt
A man already.
Piſa. Firſt, make your ſelf but like one,
Fore-thinking this. I have already fit
('Tis in my Cloak-bagg) Doublet, Hat, Hoſe, all
That anſwer to them: VVould you in their ſerving,
(And with what imitation you can borrow
From youth of ſuch a ſeaſon) 'fore Noble Lucius
Preſent your ſelf, deſire his ſervice: tell him
VVherein you're happy, which will make him know,
If that his head have ear in Muſick, doubtleſs
VVith joy he will embrace you: for he's Honourable,
And doubling that, moſt holy. Your means abroad:
You have me rich, and I will never fail
Beginning, nor ſupplyment.
Imo. Thou art all the comfort
The Gods will diet me with. Prethee away,
There's more to be conſider'd: but we'll even
All that good time will give us. This attempt,
I am Souldier too, and will abide it with
A Princes Courage. Away, I prethee.
Piſa. VVell, Madam, we muſt take a ſhort farewel,
Leſt being miſt, I be ſuſpected of
Your carriage from the Court. My Noble Miſtris,
Here is a box, I had it from the Queen,
VVhat's in't is precious: If you are ſick at Sea,
Or Stomach qualm'd at Land, a Dram of this
VVill drive away diſtemper. To ſome ſhade,
And fit you to your Manhood: may the Gods
Direct you to the beſt.
Imo. Amen: I thank thee. [Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, Lucius, and Lords.

Cym. Thus far, and ſo farewel.
Luc. Thanks, Royal Sir:
My Emperour hath wrote, I muſt from hence,
And am right ſorry, that I muſt report ye
My Maſters Enemy.
Cym. Our Subjects (Sir)
VVill not endure his yoak; and for our ſelf
To ſhew leſs Soveraignty than they, muſt needs
Appear un-King like.
Luc. So, Sir: I deſire of you
A Conduct over Land, to Milford-Haven.
Madam, all joy befal your Grace, and you.
Cym. My Lords, you are appointed for that Office:
The due of Honour in no point omit:
So farewel, Noble Lucius.
Luc. Your hand, my Lord.
Clot. Receive it friendly: but from this time forth
I wear it as your Enemy.
Luc. Sir, the Event
Is yet to name the winner. Fare you well.
Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my Lords,
Till he have croſt Severn. Happineſs. [Exit Lucius, &c.
Qu. He goes hence frowning: but it honours us,
That we have given him cauſe.
Clot. 'Tis all the better,
Your valiant Britains have their wiſhes in it.
Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the Emperour,
How it goes here. It fits us therefore ripely,
Our Chariots, and our Horſemen be in readineſs:
The Powers that he already hath in Gallia

VVill

Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves
His war for Britain.
Que. 'Tis not sleepy business,
But must be look'd to speedily, and strongly.
Cym. Our expectation that it should be thus
Hath made us forward. But, my gentle Queen,
Where is our Daughter? She hath not appear'd
Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd
The Duty of the day. She looks as like
A thing more made of malice, than of Duty,
We have noted it. Call her before us, for
We have been too light in sufferance.
Que. Royal Sir,
Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir'd
Hath her life been: the Cure whereof, my Lord,
'Tis time must do. Beseech your Majesty,
Forbear sharp speeches to her. She's a Lady
So tender of rebukes, that words are strokes,
And strokes death to her.

Enter a Messenger.

Cym. Where is she, Sir? How
Can her contempt be answer'd?
Mes. Please you, Sir,
Her Chambers are all lock'd, and there's no answer
That will be given to th' loud of noise we make.
Que. My Lord, when last I went to visit her,
She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close,
Whereto constrain'd by her infirmity,
She should that duty leave unpaid to you
Which daily she was bound to proffer: this
She wish'd me to make known: but our great Court
Made me to blame in memory.
Cym. Her doors lock'd?
Not seen of late? Grant Heavens, that which I
Fear, prove false. [Exit.
Que. Son, I say, follow the King.
Clot. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old Servant
I have not seen these two days. [Exit.
Que. Go, look after:
Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus,
He hath a Drugg of mine: I pray, his absence
Proceed by swallowing that. For he believes
It is a thing most precious. But for her,
Where is she gone? Haply despair hath seiz'd her:
Or wing'd with fervour of her love, she's flown
To her desired Posthumus: gone she is,
To death, or to dishonour, and my end
Can make good use of either. She being down,
I have the placing of the British Crown.

Enter Cloten.

How now, my Son?
Clot. 'Tis certain she is fled.
Go in and cheer the King, he rages, none
Dare come about him.
Que. All the better: may
This night forestall him of the coming day. [Exit Qu.
Clot. I love and hate her: for she's fair and Royal,
And that she hath all courtly parts more exquisite
Than Lady, Ladies Woman, from every one
The best she hath, and she of all compounded
Out-sells them all. I love her therefore, but Disdaining me, and throwing Favours on
The low Posthumus, slanders so her judgement,
That what's else rare, is chastis'd: and in that point
I will conclude to hate her, nay indeed,
To be reveng'd upon her. For, when Fools——

Enter Pisanio.

Who is here? What, are you packing, Sirrah?
Come hither: Ah you precious Pander, Villain,
Where is thy Lady? In a word, or else
Thou art straight way with the Fiends.
Pisa. Oh, good my Lord.
Clot. Where is thy Lady? Or, by Jupiter,
I will not ask again. Close Villain,
I'le have this secret from thy heart, or rip
Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus?
From whose so many weights of baseness, cannot
A dram of worth be drawn.
Pisa. Alas, my Lord,
How can she be with him? When was she miss'd?
He is in Rome.
Clot. Where is she, Sir? Come nearer:
No farther halting: satisfie me home,
What is become of her:
Pisa. Oh, my all-worthy Lord,
Clot. All worthy Villain,
Discover where thy Mistris is, at once,
At the next word: no more of worthy Lord:
Speak, or thy silence on the instant, is
Thy condemnation and thy death.
Pisa. Then, Sir,
This Paper is the history of my knowledge
Touching her flight.
Clot. Let's see't; I will pursue her
Even to Augustus Throne.
Pisa. Or this, or perish.
She's far enough, and what he learns by this,
May prove his travel, not her danger.
Clot. Humh.
Pisa. I'le write to my Lord she is dead: Oh, Imogen,
Safe may'st thou wander, safe return agen.
Clot. Sirrah, is this Letter true?
Pisa. Sir, as I think.
Clot. It is Posthumus's hand, I know't. Sirrah, if thou would'st not be a Villain, but do me true service: undergo those employments wherein I should have cause to use thee with a serious industry, that is, what villainy soe're I bid thee do to perform it, directly and truly, I would think thee an honest man: thou should'st neither want my means for thy relief, nor my voyce for thy preferment.
Pisa. Well, my good Lord.
Clot. Wilt thou serve me? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare Fortune of that Beggar Posthumus, thou canst not in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serve me?
Pisa. Sir, I will.
Clot. Give me thy hand, here's my Purse. Hast any of thy late Masters Garments in thy possession?
Pisa. I have (my Lord) at the Lodging, the same Suit he wore, when he took leave of my Lady and Mistress.
Clot. The first service thou do'st me, fetch that Suit hither; let it be thy first service, go.
Pisa. I shall, my Lord. [Exeunt.
Clot. Meet thee at Milford Haven: (I forgot to ask him one thing, I'le remember't anon:) even there, thou villain, Posthumus, will I kill thee. I would these Garments were come. She said upon a time (the bitterness of it, I now belch from my heart) that she held the very Garment of Posthumus, in more respect, than my Noble and natural person; together with the adornment of my Qualities. With that Suit upon my back will I ravish her: first kill him, and in her eyes: there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body, and when my lust hath dined (which as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the Cloaths that she so prais'd:) to the Court I'le knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despis'd me rejoycingly, and I'le be merry in my Revenge.

Enter

Enter Pisanio.

Be those the Garments?
Pis. I, my Noble Lord.
Clo. How long is't since she went to Milford-Haven?
Pis. She can scarce be there yet.
Clo. Bring this Apparel to my Chamber, that is the second thing that I have commanded thee. The third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary Mute to my design. Be but dutious, and true preferment shall tender it self to thee. My Revenge is now at Milford, would I had Wings to follow it. Come and be true. [Exit.
Pis. Thou bidd'st me to my loss: for true to thee,
VVere to prove false, which I will never be
To him that is most true. To Milford go,
And find not her, whom thou pursuest. Flow, flow,
You Heavenly Blessings on her: This Fool's speed
Be crost with slowness; Labour be his meed. [Exit.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Imogen alone.

Imo. I see a man's life is a tedious one,
I have tired my self: and for two nights together
Have made the ground my Bed. I should be sick,
But that my resolution helps me: Milford,
When from the Mountain top Pisanio shew'd thee,
Thou was't within a ken. Oh, Jove, I think
Foundations flie the wretched, such I mean,
VVhere they should be reliev'd. Two Beggars told me,
I could not miss my way. VVill poor Folks lye
That have afflictions on them, knowing 'tis
A punishment, or trial? Yes; no wonder,
VVhen Rich-ones scarce tell true. To lapse in Fulness
Is sorer, than to lie for Need: and Falshood
Is worse in Kings, than Beggars. My dear Lord,
Thou art one o' th' false Ones: now I think on thee,
My hunger's gone; but even before, I was
At point to sink for Food. But what is this?
Here is a path to't: 'tis some savage hold:
I were best not call; I dare not call: yet Famine
Ere it clean o're-throw Nature, make it valiant.
Plenty and peace breeds Cowards, Hardness ever
Of Hardiness is Mother. Ho? who's here?
If any that's civil, speak, if savage,
Take, or lend. Ho? no answer? then I'll enter,
Best draw my Sword; and if mine Enemy
But fear the Sword like me, he'll scarcely look on't.
Such a Foe, good Heavens. [Exit.

Scena Septima.

Enter Bellarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. You Polidore have prov'd best Woodman, and
Are Master of the Feast: Cadwall and I
Will play the Cook, and Servant, 'tis our match:
The sweat of industry would dry, and die
But for the end it works to. Come, our stomachs
Will make what's homely, savoury; Weariness
Can snore upon the Flint, when resty Sloth
Finds the Down-Pillow hard. No peace be here,
Poor House, that keep'st thy self.
Gui. I am throughly weary.
Arv. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite.
Gui. There is cold meat i' th' Cave, we'll brouze on that
Whil'st what we have kill'd be Cook'd.
Bel. Stay, come not in:
But that it eats our Victuals, I should think
Here were a Faiery.
Gui. What's the matter, Sir?
Bel. By Jupiter an Angel: or if not,
An Earthly Paragon. Behold Divineness
No elder than a Boy.

Enter Imogen.

Imo. Good Master, harm me not:
Before I enter'd here, I call'd, and thought
To have begg'd, or bought, what I have took: good troth
I have stoln nought, nor would not, though I had found
Gold strew'd i' th' Floor. Here's money for my Meat,
I would have left it on the Board so soon
As I had made my Meal: and parted
With Prayers for the Provider.
Gui. Money? Youth.
Arv. All Gold and Silver rather turn do dust,
As 'tis no better reckon'd, but of those
Who worship durty gods.
Imo. I see you're angry:
Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should
Have died, had I not made it.
Bel. Whither bound?
Imo. To Milford-Haven.
Bel. What's your name?
Imo. Fidele, Sir; I have a Kinsman, who
Is bound for Italy: he embark'd at Milford,
To whom being going, almost spent with hunger,
I am falu in this offence.
Bel. Prethee (fair youth)
Think us no Churls: nor measure our good minds
By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd,
'Tis almost night, you shall have better cheer
Ere you depart, and thanks to stay and eat it:
Boys, bid him welcome.
Gui. Were you a Woman, youth,
I should woe hard, but be your Groom in honesty;
I bid for you, as I do buy.
Arv. I'll make't my comfort
He is a man, I'll love him as my Brother:
And such a welcome as I'ld give to him
(After long absence) such is yours. Most welcome:
Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst Friends.
Imo. 'Mongst Friends.
If Brothers: would it had been so, that they
Had been my Father's Sons, then had my prize
Been less, and so more equal ballasting
To thee, Posthumus.
Bel. He wrings at some distress.
Gui. Would I could free't.
Arv. Or I, what ere it be,
What pain it cost, what danger: gods!
Bel. Hark, Boyes.
Imo. Great men
That had a Court no bigger than this Cave,
That did attend themselves, and had the virtue
Which their own Conscience seal'd them: laying by
That nothing-gift of differing Multitudes
Could not out-piece these twain. Pardon me gods,
I'ld change my Sex to be Companion with them,
Since Leonatus false.
Bel. It shall be so:
Boyes, we'll go dress our Hunt. Fair, you come in;
Discourse is heavy, fasting: when we have supp'd
We'll mannerly demand thee of thy Story.
So far as thou wilt speak it,
Gui. Pray draw near.
Arv. The night to th' Owl,
And Morn to th' Lark less welcome.
Imo. Thanks, Sir.
Arv. I pray draw near. [Exeunt.

Scena

Scena Octava.

Enter two Roman Senators, and Tribunes.

1 Sen. This is the tenour of the Emperours Writ;
That ſince the common men are now in Action
'Gainſt the Pannonians, and Dalmatians,
And that the Legions now in Gallia, are Full weak to undertake our Wars againſt
The falu-off Britains, that we do incite
The Gentry to this buſineſs. He creates
Lucius Pro-Conſul: and to you the Tribunes
For this immediate Levy, he commands
His abſolute Commiſſion. Long live Cæſar.
Tri. Is Lucius General of the Forces?
2 Sen. I.
Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?
1 Sen. With thoſe Legions
Which I have ſpoke of, whereunto your Levy
Muſt be ſuppliant: the words of your Commiſſion
Will tye you to the Numbers and the time
Of their diſpatch
Tri. We will diſcharge our duty. [Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Cloten alone.

Clot. I Am near to th' place where they ſhould meet, if Piſanio have map'd it truly. How fit his Garments ſerve me? Why ſhould his Miſtriſs, who was made by him, that made the Taylor not be fit too? The rather (ſaving reverence of the Word) for 'tis ſaid a Womans fitneſs comes by fits: therein I muſt play the Workman, I dare ſpeak it to my ſelf, for it is not Vain-glory for a man and his Glaſs, to confer in his own Chamber; I mean, the Lines of my Body are as well drawn as his; no leſs young, more ſtrong, not beneath him in Fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in Birth, alike converſant in general ſervices, and more remarkable in ſingle oppoſitions: yet this imperſeverant Thing loves him in my deſpight. What Mortality is? Poſthumus, thy Head (which now is growing upon thy ſhoulders) ſhall within this hour be off, thy Miſtriſs inforced, thy Garments cut to pieces before thy Face: and all this done, ſpurn her home to her Father, who may (happily) be a little angry for my ſo rough uſage: but my Mother having power of his teſtineſs, ſhall turn all into my commendations. My Horſe is tyed up ſafe, out Sword, and to a ſore purpoſe: Fortune put them into my hand: This is the very deſcription of their meeting place, and the Fellow dares not deceive me. [Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Bellarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, and Imogen from the Cave.

Bel. You are not well: Remain here in the Cave,
We'll come to you after Hunting.
Arv. Brother, ſtay here:
Are we not Brothers?
Imo. So man and man ſhould be,
But Clay and Clay differs in dignity,
Whoſe duſt is both alike. I am very ſick,
Gui. Go you to Hunting, I'll abide with him.
Imo. So ſick I am not, yet I am not well:
But not ſo Citizen a wanton, as
To ſeem to die, ere ſick: So pleaſe you, leave me,
Stick to your Journal courſe: the breach of Cuſtom,
Is breach of all. I am ill, but your being by me
Cannot amend me. Society is no comfort
To one not ſociable: I am not very ſick,
Since I can reaſon of it: pray you truſt me here,
I'll rob none but my ſelf, and let me die
Stealing ſo poorly.
Gui. I love thee: I have ſpoke it,
How much the quantity, the weight as much,
As I do love my Father.
Bel. What? how? how?
Arv. If it be ſin to ſay ſo (Sir) I yoak me
In my good Brothers fault: I know not why
I love this youth, and I have heard you ſay,
Love's reaſons without reaſon. The Beer at Door,
And a demand who is't ſhall die, I'd ſay
My Father, not this Youth.
Bel. Oh noble ſtrain!
O worthineſs of Nature, breed of greatneſs!
"Cowards, Father, Cowards, and baſe things, Sire, baſe:
"Nature hath Meal and Bran; Contempt and Grace.
I'm not their Father, yet who this ſhould be,
Doth miracle it ſelf, lov'd before me.
'Tis the ninth hour o' th' Morn.
Arv. Brother, farewel.
Imo. I wiſh ye ſport.
Arv. You health. —— So pleaſe you, Sir.
Imo. Theſe are kind Creatures.
Gods, what lies I have heard:
Our Courtiers ſay, all's ſavage, but at Court:
Experience, oh thou diſprov'ſt Report.
Th' imperious Seas breed Monſters; for the Diſh,
Poor Tributary Rivers, as ſweet Fiſh:
I am ſick ſtill, heart-ſick: Piſanio,
I'll now taſt of thy Drugg.
Gui. I could not ſtir him:
He ſaid he was gentle, but unfortunate;
Diſhoneſtly afflicted, but yet honeſt.
Arv. Thus did he anſwer me: yet ſaid hereafter,
I might know more.
Bel. To th' Field, to th' Field:
We'll leave you for this time, go in, and reſt.
Arv. We'll not be long away.
Bel. Pray be not ſick,
For you muſt be our Huſwife.
Imo. Well or ill,
I am bound to you. [Exit.
Bel. And ſhalt be ever.
This youth, how e're diſtreſt, appears he hath had Good Anceſtors.
Arv. How Angel-like he ſings?
Gui. But his neat Cookery?
Arv. He cut our Roots in Characters,
And ſawc't our Broths, as Juno had been ſick,
And he her Dieter.
Arv. Nobly he yoaks
A ſmiling with a ſigh: as if the ſigh
Was that it was, for not being ſuch a ſmile:
The ſmile mocking the ſigh, that it would fly
From ſo divine a Temple, to commix
With Winds that Sailors rail at.
Gui. I do note,
That grief and patience rooted in them both,
Mingle their ſpurs together,
Arv. Grow patient,
And let the ſtinking Elder (Grief) untwine
His periſhing root, with the encreaſing Vine.
Bel. It is great Morning. Come away: who's there?

Enter Cloten.

Clo. I cannot find thoſe Runagates, that Villain
Hath mock'd me. I am faint.
Bel. Thoſe Runagates?
Means he not us? I partly know him, 'tis
Cloten, the Son o' th' Queen. I fear ſome Ambuſh:
I ſaw him not theſe many years, and yet
I know 'tis he: we are held as Out-laws; hence.
Gui. He is but one: you, and my Brother ſearch
What Companies are near: pray you away,
Let me alone with him.
Clot. Soft, what are you
That flie me thus? Some Villain Mountainers?
I have heard of ſuch. What Slave art thou?
Gui. A thing,
More ſlaviſh did I ne're, than anſwering
A Slave without a knock.
Clot. Thou art a Robber,
A Law-Breaker, a Villain: yield thee, Thief.
Gui. To whom? to thee? what art thou? Have not I
An Arm as big as thine? a Heart as big?
Thy words I grant are bigger: for I wear not
My Dagger in my mouth. Say what thou art,
Why I ſhould yield to thee?
Clo. Thou Villain baſe,
Know'ſt me not by my Cloths?
Gui. No, nor thy Taylor, Raſcal,
Who is thy Grandfather: He made thoſe Cloaths,
Which (as it ſeems) make thee.
Clo. Thou precious Varlet,
My Taylor made them not.
Gui. Hence then, and thank
The man that gave them thee. Thou art ſome Fool,
I am loth to beat thee.
Clo. Thou injurious Thief,
Hear but my name, and tremble.
Gui. What's thy Name?
Clo. Cloten, thou Villain.
Gui. Cloten, thou double Villain be thy name,
I cannot tremble at it, were it Toad, or Adder, Spider,
'Twould move ſooner.
Clot. To thy further fear,
Nay, to thy meer Confuſion, thou ſhalt know
I am Son to th' Queen.
Gui. I am ſorry for't: not ſeeming
So worthy as thy Birth.
Clo. Art not afeard?
Gui. Thoſe that I reverence, thoſe I fear, the Wiſe:
At Fools I laugh, not fear them.
Clo. Die the Death:
When I have ſlain thee with my proper hand,
I'll follow thoſe that even now fled hence:
And on the Gates of Luds-Town ſet your heads:
Yield Ruſtick Mountaineer. [Fight and Exeunt.

Enter Bellarius and Arviragus.

Bel. No Company's abroad?
Arv. None in the World: you did miſtake him ſure.
Bel. I cannot tell: long is it ſince I ſaw him,
But Time hath nothing blurr'd thoſe lines of Favour
Which then he wore: the ſnatches in his Voice,
And burſt of ſpeaking were as his: I am abſolute
'Twas very Cloten.
Arv. In this place we left them;
I wiſh my Brother make good time with him,
You ſay he is ſo fell.
Bel. Being ſcarce made up,
I mean to man; he had not apprehenſion
Of roaring terrors: For defect of judgment
Is oft the cauſe of Fear.

Enter Guiderius.

But ſee thy Brother.
Gui. This Cloten was a Fool, an empty Purſe,
There was no money in't: Not Hercules
Could have knock'd out his Brains, for he had none:
Yet I not doing this, the Fool had born
My Head, as I do his.
Bel. What haſt thou done?
Gui. I am perfect what; cut off one Cloten's Head,
Son to the Queen (after his own report)
Who call'd me Traytor, Mountaineer, and ſwore
With his own hand he'd take us in,
Diſplace our heads, where (thanks to th' gods) they grow
And ſet them on Luds-Town.
Bel. We are all undone.
Gui. Why, worthy Father, what have we to loſe,
But that he ſwore to take our Lives? the Law
Protects not us, then why ſhould we be tender,
To let an arrogant piece of fleſh threat us?
Play Judge, and Executioner, all himſelf?
For we do fear no Law. What Company
Diſcover you abroad?
Bel. No ſingle Soul
Can we ſet Eye on: but in all ſafe reaſon
He muſt have ſome Attendants. Though his Honour
VVas nothing but mutation; I, and that
From one bad thing to worſe: Not Frenzy,
Not abſolute madneſs could ſo far have rav'd
To bring him here alone, although perhaps
It may be heard at Court, that ſuch as we
Cave here, haunt here, are Out-laws, and in time
May make ſome ſtronger head, the which he hearing,
(As it is like him) might break out, and ſwear
He'd fetch us in, yet is't not probable
To come alone, either ſo undertaking,
Or they ſo ſuffering: then on good ground we fear,
If we do fear this body hath a tail
More perilous than the head.
Arv. Let Ord'nance
Come, as the gods fore-ſay it, howſoe're
My Brother hath done well.
Bel. I had no mind
To hunt this day: The Boy Fidele's ſickneſs
Did make my way long forth.
Gui. VVith his own Sword,
Which he did wave againſt my throat, I have ta'ne
His Head from him: I'll throw't into the Creek
Behind our Rock, and let it to the Sea,
And tell the Fiſhes, he's the Queens Son, Cloten,
That's all I reak. [Exit.
Bel. I fear 'twill be reveng'd:
Woul (Polidore) thou hadſt not done't: though valour
Becomes thee well enough.
Arv. Would I had done't,
So the Revenge alone purſu'd me: Polidore,
I love thee Brotherly, but envy much
Thou haſt robb'd me of this deed: I would Revenges
That poſſible ſtrength might meet, would ſeek us through,
And put us to our anſwer.
Bel. Well, 'tis done:
We'll hunt no more to day, nor ſeek for danger
Where there's no profit. I prethee to our Rock,
You and Fidele play the Cooks: I'll ſtay
Till haſty Polidore return, and bring him
To Dinner preſently.
Arv. Poor ſick Fidele.
I'll willingly to him, to gain his colour,
I'd let a Pariſh of ſuch Clotens blood,

And

And praiſe my ſelf for Charity, [Exit.
Bel. O thou Goddeſs,
Thou divine Nature; thy ſelf thou blazon'ſt
In theſe two Princely Boyes: they are as gentle
As Zephyres blowing below the Violet,
Not wagging his ſweet Head; and yet, as rough
(Their Royal blood enchaf'd) as the rud'ſt wind,
That by the top doth take the Mountain Pine,
And make him ſtoop to th' Vail. 'Tis wonder
That an inviſible inſtinct ſhould frame them
To Royalty unlearn'd, Honour untaught,
Civility not ſeen from other: Valour,
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop
As if it had been ſow'd: yet ſtill it's ſtrange
What Clotens being here to us portends,
Or what his death will bring us.

Enter Guiderius.

Gui. Where's my Brother?
I have ſent Clotens Clot-pole down the ſtream;
In Embaſſie to his Mother; his bodies hoſtage
For his return. [Solemn Muſick.
Bel. My ingenuous Inſtrument,
(Hark Polidore) it ſounds: but what occaſion
Hath Cadwall now to give it motion? Hark.
Gui. Is he at home?
Bel. He went hence even now.
Gui. What does he mean?
Since death of my dear'ſt Mother
It did not ſpeak before. All ſolemn things
Should anſwer ſolemn Accidents. The matter?
Triumphs for nothing, and lamenting toyes,
Is jollity for Apes, and grief for Boyes.
Is Cadwall mad?

Enter Arviragus, with Imogen dead, bearing her in his Arms.

Bel. Look, here he comes,
And brings the dire occaſion in his Arms,
Of what we blame him for.
Arv. The Bird is dead
That we have made ſo much on. I had rather
Have skipt from ſixteen years of Age, to ſixty;
To have turn'd my leaping time into a Crutch,
Than have ſeen this.
Gui. Oh ſweeteſt, faireſt Lilly:
My Brother wears thee not the one half ſo well,
As when thou grew'ſt thy ſelf.
Bel. Oh Melancholly,
Who ever yet could ſound thy bottom? Find
The Ooze, to ſhew that Coaſt thy ſluggiſh care
Might eaſilieſt harbour in. Thou bleſſed thing.
Jove knows what man thou might'ſt have made: but I,
Thou dyed'ſt a more rare Boy, of Melancholly.
How found you him?
Arv. Stark, as you ſee:
Thus ſmiling as ſome Fly had tickled ſlumber,
Not as deaths dart being laugh'd at: his right Cheek
Repoſing on a Cuſhion.
Gui. Where?
Arv. O' th' Floor:
His Arms thus leagu'd, I thought he ſlept, and put
My clouted Brogues from off my Feet, whoſe rudeneſs
Anſwer'd my ſteps too loud.
Gui. Why, he but ſleeps:
If he be gone he'll make his Grave a Bed:
With Female Faieries will his Tomb be haunted,
And Worms will not come to thee.
Arv. With faireſt Flowers
Whil'ſt Summer laſts, and I live here, Fidele,
I'll ſweeten thy ſad Grave: thou ſhalt not lack
The Flower that's like thy Face. Pale-Primroſe, nor
The azur'd Hare-Bell, like thy Veins: no nor
The Leaf of Eglantine, whom not to ſlander,
Out-ſweetned not thy breath: the Raddock would
With Charitable bill (Oh bill ſore ſhaming
Thoſe rich-left-Heirs, that let their Fathers lie
Without a Monument) bring thee all this,
Yea, and furr'd Moſs beſides. When Flowers are none
To winter ground thy Coarſe——
Gui. Prethee have done,
And do not play in Wench-like words with that
Which is ſo ſerious, Let us bury him,
And not protract with admiration, what
Is now due Debt. To th' Grave.
Arv. Say, where ſhall's lay him?
Gui. By good Euriphile, our Mother.
Arv. Be't ſo:
And let us (Polidore) though now our Voices
Have got the manniſh crack, ſing him to th' ground
As once to our Mother: uſe like note, and words,
Save that Euriphile muſt be Fidele.
Gui. Cadwall,
I cannot ſing: I'll weep, and word it with thee,
For Notes of ſorrow, out of tune, are worſe
Than Prieſts, and Vanes that lie.
Arv. We'll ſpeak it then.
Bel. Great griefs I ſee Med'cine the leſs. For Cloten
Is quite forgot. He was a Queens Son, Boyes,
And though he came our Enemy, remember
He was paid for that: thou mean, and mighty rotting
Together have one duſt, yet Reverence
(That Angel of the World) doth make diſtinction
Of place 'twixt high and low. Our Foe was Princely,
And though you took his life, as being our Foe,
Yet bury him, as a Prince.
Gui. Pray thee fetch him hither,
Therſites Body is as good as Ajax,
When neither are alive.
Arv. If you'll go fetch him,
We'll ſay our Song the whil'ſt: Brother begin.
Gui. Nay Cadwall, we muſt lay his Head to th' Eaſt,
My Father hath a reaſon for't.
Arv. 'Tis true.
Gui. Come on then, and remove him.
Arv. So, begin.

SONG.

Guid. Fear no more the heat o' th' Sun,
Nor the furious Winters rages,
Thou thy Worldly task haſt done,
Home art gone, and take thy wages.
Golden Lads and Girls all muſt,
As Chimney-Sweepers come to duſt.
Arv. Fear no more the frown o' th' Great,
Thou art paſt the Tyrants ſtroke,
Care no more to cloath and eat,
To thee the Reed is as the Oak:
The Scepter, Learning, Phyſick muſt,
All follow this and come to duſt.
Gui. Fear no more the Lightning flaſh.
Arv. Nor th' all-dreaded Thunder-ſtone.
Gui. Fear no ſlander, Cenſure raſh.
Arv. Thou haſt finiſh'd Joy and Moan.
Both. All Lovers young, all Lovers muſt,
Conſign to thee, and come to duſt.
Gui. No Exorciſer harm thee,
Arv. Nor no Witchcraft charm thee.
Gui. Ghoſt unlaid forbear thee.
Arv. Nothing ill come near thee.
Both. Quiet conſummation have,
And renowned be thy Grave.

Enter Bellarius with the Body of Cloten.

Gui. We have done our obſequies:
Come lay him down.
Bel. Here's few Flowers, but about midnight more:
The herbs that have on them cold dew oth' night
Are ſtrewings fitt'ſt for Graves: upon their Faces.
You were as Flowers, now wither'd: even ſo
Theſe Herbelets ſhall, which we upon you ſtrew.
Come on away, apart upon our Knees:
The ground that gave them firſt, has them again:
Their pleaſures here are paſt, ſo are their pain. [Exeunt.

Yes, Sir, to Milford Haven, which is the way?
I thank you: by yond Buſh? pray how far thither?
'Ods pittikins: can it be ſix mile yet?
I have gone all night: 'faith, I'le lye down and ſleep.
But ſoft: no Bedfellow? Oh Gods, and Goddeſſes!
Theſe Flowers are like the pleaſures of the World;
This bloody man the care on't. I hope I dream:
For ſo I thought I was a Cave-keeper,
And Cook to honeſt Creatures. But 'tis not ſo:
'Twas but a bolt of nothing, ſhot at nothing,
Which the Brain makes of Fumes. Our very eyes,
Are ſometimes like our Judgments, blind. Good Faith
I tremble ſtill with fear: but if there be
Yet left in Heaven, as ſmall a drop of pitty
As a Wrens Eye: fear'd Gods, a part of it.
The Dream's here ſtill: even when I wake it is Without me, as within me: not imagin'd, felt.
A headleſs man? The Garments of Poſthumus?
I know the ſhape of's Leg: this is his Hand:
His Foot Mercurial: his Martial Thigh,
The Brawns of Hercules: but his Jovial Face——
Murther in Heaven? How? 'tis gone. Piſanio,
All curſes madded Hecuba gave the Greeks,
And mine to boot, be darted on thee: thou
Conſpir'd with that irregulous Devil Cloten,
Hath here cut off my Lord. To write, and read,
Be henceforth treacherous. Damn'd Piſanio
Hath with his forg'd Letters (damn'd Piſanio)
From this moſt braveſt Veſſel of the World
Struck the main top! Oh Poſthumus, alas,
Where is thy head? where's that? Aye me, I, where's that?
Piſanio might have kill'd thee at the heart,
And left his head on. How ſhould this be, Piſanio?
Tis he and Cloten. Malice and Lucre in them
Have laid this woe here. Oh 'tis pregnant, pregnant!
The Drugg he gave me, which he ſaid was precious
And Cordial to me, have I not found it
Murdr'ous to th' Senſes? that confirms it home:
This is Piſanio's deed, and Cloten: Oh!
Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood,
That we the horrider may ſeem to thoſe
Which chace to find us, Oh, my Lord! my Lord!

Enter Lucius, Captains, and a Soothſayer.

Cap. To them, the Legions garriſon'd in Gallia
After your will, have croſt the Sea, attending
You here at Milford Haven, with your Ships:
They are in readineſs.
Luc. But what from Rome?
Cap. The Senate hath ſtirr'd up the Confiners,
And Gentlemen of Italy, moſt willing Spirits,
That promiſe Noble Service: and they come
Under the Conduct of bold Jachimo,
Syenna's Brother.
Luc. When expect you them?
Cap. With the next benefit oth' wind.
Luc. This forwardneſs
Make our hopes fair. Command our preſent numbers,
Be muſtered, bid the Captains look to't. Now, Sir,
What, have you dream'd of late of this Wars purpoſe.
Sooth. Laſt night the very gods ſhew'd me a Viſion
(I faſt, and pray'd for their Intelligence) thus:
I ſaw Jove's Bird, the Roman Eagle wing'd
From the Spungy South, to this part of the Weſt,
There vaniſh'd in the Sun-beams, which portends
(Unleſs my Sins abuſe my Divination)
Succeſs to th' Roman hoſt.
Luc. Dream often ſo,
And never falſe. Soft ho, what Trunk is here?
Without his top? the ruine ſpeaks, that ſometime
It was a worthy building. How? a Page?
Or dead, or ſleeping on him? but dead rather:
For Nature doth abhor to make his bed
With the defunct, or ſleep upon the dead.
Let's ſee the Boys face.
Cap. He's alive, my Lord.
Luc. He'll then inſtruct us of his body. Young one,
Inform us of the Fortunes, for it ſeems
They crave to be demanded: who is this Thou mak'ſt thy bloody Pillow? Or who was he
That (otherwiſe the noble Nature did)
Hath alter'd that good Picture? What's thy intereſt
In this ſad wrack? How came't? Who is't?
What art thou?
Imo. I am nothing: or if not,
Nothing to be were better: This was my Maſter,
A very valiant Britain, and a good,
That here by Mountainers lies ſlain: Alas,
There are no more ſuch Maſters: I may wander
From Eaſt to Occident, cry out for Service,
Try many, all good: ſerve truly: never
Find ſuch another Maſter.
Luc. 'Lack, good youth:
Thou mov'ſt no leſs with thy complaining, than
The Maſter in bleeding: ſay his name, good Friend,
Imo. Richard du Champ: If I do lye and do,
No harm by it, though the Gods hear, I hope
They'll pardon it. Say you, Sir?
Luc. Thy name?
Imo. Fidele, Sir.
Luc. Thou do'ſt approve thy ſelf the very ſame:
Thy name well fits thy Faith, thy Faith, thy Name:
Wilt take thy change with me? I will not ſay
Thou ſhalt be ſo well maſter'd, but be ſure
No leſs belov'd. The Roman Emperours Letters
Sent by a Conſul to me, ſhould no ſooner
Than thine own worth prefer thee: Go with me.
Imo. I'le follow, Sir. But firſt an't pleaſe the gods,
I'le hide my Maſter from the Flyes as deep
As theſe poor Pickaxes can dig: and when
With wild wood-leaves and weeds I ha'ſtrew'd his grave,
And on it ſaid a Century of Prayers,
(Such as I can) twice o're, I'le weep, and ſigh,
And leaving ſo his ſervice, follow you,
So pleaſe you entertain me.
Luc. I, good youth,
And rather Father thee, than Maſter thee: My Friends,
The Boy hath taught us manly duties: Let us
Find out the prettieſt Dazied-Plot we can,
And make him with our Pikes and Partizans
A Grave: Come, Arme him: Boy, he is preferr'd
By thee, to us, and he ſhall be interr'd
As Souldiers can. Be chearful, wipe thine Eyes,
Some falls are means the happier to ariſe. [Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Cymbeline, Lords, and Piſanio.

Cym. Again: and bring we word how 'tis with her,
A Feaver with the abſence of her Son;
A madneſs, of which her life's in danger: Heavens,

How

How deeply you at once do touch me. Imogen,
The great part of my comfort, gone: My Queen
Upon a desperate bed, and in a time
When fearful Wars point at me: Her Son gone,
So needful for his present? It strikes me, me, past
The hope of comfort. But for thee, Fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure, and
Dost seem so ignorant, we'll inforce it from thee
By a sharp torture.

Pisa. Sir, my life is yours,
I humbly set it at your will: But for my Mistress,
I nothing know where she remains: why gone,
Nor when she purposes return. Beseech your Highness,
Hold me your Loyal Servant.

Lord. Good my Liege,
The day that she was missing, she was here;
I dare be bound he's true, and shall perform
All parts of his subjection loyally. For Cloten,
There wants no diligence in seeking him,
And will no doubt be found.

Cym. The time is troublesome:
We'll slip you for a season, but with jealousie
Do's yet depend.

Lord. So please your Majesty,
The Roman Legions all from Gallia drawn,
Are landed on your coast, with supply
Of Roman Gentlemen, by the Senate sent.

Cym. Now for the Counsel of my Son and Queen.
I am amaz'd with matter.

Lord. Good my Liege,
Your preparation can affront no less
Than what you hear of.
Come more, for more you're ready:
The want is, but to put these powers in motion,
That long to move.

Cym. I thank you: let's withdraw
And meet the time, as it seeks us, We fear not
What can from Italy annoy us, but
We grieve at chances here. Away. [Exeunt.

Pisa. I heard no Letter from my Master, since
I wrote him Imogen was slain. 'Tis strange:
Nor hear I from my Mistress. who did promise
To yield me often tidings. Neither know I
What is betide to Cloten, but remain
Perplext in all. The Heavens still must work:
Wherein I am false, I am honest: not true, to be true.
These present wars shall find I love my Country,
Even to the note o' th' King, or I'le fall in them:
All other doubts, by time let them be cleer'd,
Fortune brings in some Boats, that are not steer'd. [Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Bellarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Gui. The noise is round about us.

Bel. Let us from it.

Arvi. What pleasure, Sir, find we in life, to lock it
From Action, and Adventure?

Gui. Nay, what hope
Have we in hiding us? this way the Romans
Must, or for Britains slay us, or receive us
For barbarous and unnatural Revolts
During their use, and slay us after.

Bel. Sons,
We'll higher to the Mountains, there secure us.
To the King's party there's no going: newness
Of Cloten's death (we being not known, not muster'd
Among the Bands) may drive us to a render
Where we have liv'd; and so extort from's that
Which we have done, whose answer would be death
Drawn on his torture.

Gui. This is (Sir) a doubt
In such a time, nothing becoming you,
Nor satisfying us

Arvi. It is not likely,
That when they hear their Roman horses neigh,
Behold their quarter'd Fires; have both their eyes
And ears so cloyd importantly as now,
That they will waft their time upon our note,
To know from whence we are.

Bel. Oh, I am known
Of many in the Army: Many years
(Though Cloten then but young) you see, not wore him
From my remembrance. And besides, the King
Hath not deserv'd my service, nor your loves
Who find in my Exile, the want of Breeding;
The certainty of this hard life, aye hopeless
To have the courtesie your Cradle promis'd,
But to be still hot Summer's tanlings, and
The shrinking Slaves of Winter.

Gui. Than be so,
Better to cease to be. Pray, Sir, to th' Army:
I, and my Brother are not known; your self
So out of thought, and thereto so o're-grown,
Cannot be question'd.

Arvi. By this Sun that shines
I'le bither: what thing is it, that I never
Did see man dye, scarce ever look'd on blood,
But that of Coward Hares, hot Goats, and Venison?
Never bestrid a Horse save one, that had
A Rider like my self, who ne're wore Rowel,
Nor Iron on his heel? I am asham'd
To look upon the holy Sun, to have
The benefit of his blest Beams, remaining
So long a poor unknown.

Gui. By heavens I'le go,
If you will bless me, Sir, and give me leave,
I'le take the better care: but if you will not,
The hazard therefore due fall on me, by
The hands of Romans.

Arvi. So say I, Amen.

Bel. No reason I (since of your lives you set
So slight a valuation) should reserve
My crack'd one to more care. Have with you, Boys:
If in your Country wars you chance to dye,
That is my Bed too (Lads) and there I'le lye.
Lead, lead; the time seems long, their blood thinks scorn
Till it flie out, and shew them Princes born. [Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Posthumus alone.

Post. YEa bloody cloth, I'le keep thee: for I am wisht
Thou should'st be colour'd thus. You married (ones,
If each of you would take this course, how many
Must murther Wives much better than themselves
For wrying but a little? Oh Pisanio,
Every good Servants does not all Commands:
No Bond, but to do just ones. Gods, if you
Should have ta'ne vengeance on my faults, I never
Had liv'd to put on this: so had you saved
The noble Imogen to repent, and strook
Me (wretch) more worth your Vengeance. But alack
You snatch from hence for little faults; that's love
To have them fall no more: you some permit
To second ills with ills, each Elder worse,
And make them dread it, to the doers thrift,
But Imogen is your own, do your best wills,
And make me blest to obey. I am brought hither
Among th' Italian Gentry, and to fight
Against my Ladies Kingdom: 'tis enough
That (Britain) I have kill'd thy Mistress: Peace,

I'le give no wound to thee: therefore, good Heavens,
Hear patiently my purpoſe. I'le diſrobe me
Of theſe Italian weeds, and ſuit my ſelf
As do's a Britain Peazant: ſo I'le fight
Againſt the part I come with: ſo I'le die
For thee (O Imogen) even for whom my life
Is every breath, a death: and thus unknown,
Pitied, nor hated, to the face of peril
My ſelf I'le dedicate. Let me make men know
More valour in me, than my habits ſhow,
Gods, put the ſtrength o' th' Leonati in me:
To ſhame the guiſe o' th' world, I will begin,
The faſhion leſs without, and more within. [Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lucius, Jachimo, and the Roman Army at one door: and the Britain Army at another: Leonatus Poſthumus following like a poor Souldier. They march over, and go out. Then enter again in Skirmiſh Jachimo and Poſthumus: he vanquiſheth and diſarmeth Jachimo, and then leaves him.

Jac. The heavineſs and guilt within my boſom,
Takes off my manhood: I have belyed a Lady,
The Princeſs of this Country; and the air on't
Revengingly enfeebles me, or could this Carle,
A very drudge of Natures, have ſubdu'd me
In my profeſſion? Knighthoods, and Honours born
(As I wear mine) are titles but of ſcorn.
If that thy Gentry (Britain) go before
This Lowt, as he exceeds our Lords, the odds
Is, that we ſcarce are men, and you are gods. [Exit.

The Battel continues, the Britains flye, Cymbeline is taken: then enter to his reſcue, Bellarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. Sand, ſtand, we have the advantage of the ground,
The Lane is garded: Nothing routs us, but
The villany of our fears.
Gui. Arvi. Stand, ſtand and fight.

Enter Poſthumus, and ſeconds the Britains. They reſcue Cymbeline, and exeunt.

Then enter Lucius, Jachimo, and Imogen.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and ſave thy ſelf:
For Friends kill Friends, and the diſorder's ſuch
As War were hood-wink'd.
Jac. 'Tis their freſh ſupplies.
Duc. It is a day turn'd ſtrangely: or betimes
Let's re-inforce, or fly. [Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Poſthumus, and a Britain Lord.

Lor. Cam'ſt thou from where they made the ſtand?
Poſt. I did.
Though you it ſeems came from the Fliers.
Lor. I bid.
Poſt. No blame to you, Sir, for all was loſt,
But that the Heavens fought: the King himſelf
Of his wings deſtitute, the Army broken,
And but the backs of Britains ſeen; all flying
Through a ſtrait Lane, the Enemy full-hearted,
Lolling the tongue with ſlaught'ring: having work
More plentiful, than tools to do't: ſtrook down
Some mortally, ſome ſlightly touch'd, ſome falling
Merely through fear, that the ſtrait paſs was damm'd
With dead-men, hurt behind, and Cowards living
To dye with length'ned ſhame.

Lor. Where was this Lane?
Poſt. Cloſe by the battel, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf,
Which gave advantage to an ancient Souldier
(An honeſt one I warrant) who deſerv'd
So long a breeding, as his white beard came to,
In doing this for's Country. Athwart the Lane,
He, with two ſtriplings (Lads more like to run
The Country baſe, than to commit ſuch ſlaughter,
With faces fit for Masks, or rather fairer
Than thoſe for preſervation cas'd, or ſhame)
Made good the paſſage, cryed to thoſe that fled,
Our Britain's hearts die flying, not our men,
To darkneſs fleet Souls that fly backward; ſtand,
Or we are Romans, and will give you that
Like beaſts, which you ſhun beaſtly, and may ſave
But to look back in frown: Stand, ſtand. Theſe three,
Three thouſand confident, in act as many:
For three performers are the File, when all
The reſt do nothing. With this word ſtand, ſtand,
Accommodated by the Place; more Charming
With their own Nobleneſs, which could have turn'd
A Diſtaff to a Lance, gilded pale looks;
Part ſhame, part ſpirit renew'd, that ſome turn'd coward
But by example (Oh a ſin in War, Damn'd in the firſt beginners) 'gan to look
The way that they did, and to grin like Lyons
Upon the Pikes o' th' Hunters. Then began
A ſtop i' th' Chaſe; a Retire: Anon
A Rout, confuſion thick: forthwith they flie
Chickens, the way which they ſtopt Eagles: Slaves
The ſtrides the Victors made: and now our cowards
Like Fragments in hard Voyages became
The life o' th' need: having found the back door open
Of the ungarded hearts: heavens, how they wound,
Some ſlain before, ſome dying; ſome their Friends
O're-born i' th' former wave, ten chac'd by one,
Are now each one the ſlaughter-man of twenty:
Thoſe that would dye, or e're reſiſt, are grown
The mortal bugs o' th' Field.
Lord. This was a ſtrange chance:
A narrow Lane, an old man, and two Boyes.
Poſt. Nay, do not wonder at it: you are made
Rather to wonder at the things you hear,
Than to work any. Will you Rime upon't.
And vent it for a Mock'ry? Here is one:
"Two Boyes, an Old-man (twice a Boy) a Lane,
"Preſerv'd the Britains, was the Romans bane.
Lord. Nay, be not angry, Sir.
Poſt. Lack, to what end?
Who dares not ſtand his Foe, I'le be his Friend:
For if he'll do, as he is made to do,
I know he'll quickly flye my friendſhip too.
You have put me into Rime.
Lord. Farewel, you're angry. [Exit.
Poſt. Still going: this is a Lord: Oh noble miſery
To be i' th' field, and ask what news of me:
To day, how many would have given their Honours
To have ſav'd their Carkaſſes? took heel to do't,
And yet dyed too. I, in mine own woe charm'd,
Could not find death, where I did hear him groan,
Nor feel him where he ſtrook. Being an ugly Monſter,
'Tis ſtrange he hides him in freſh Cups, ſoft Beds,
Sweet words; or hath more miniſters than we
That draw his knives i' th' war. Well I will find him:
For being now a Favourer to the Britain,
No more a Britain, I have reſum'd again
The part I came in. Fight I will no more,
But yield me to the veriеſt Hind, that ſhall
Once touch my ſhoulder. Great the ſlaughter is Here made by th' Roman; great the anſwer be,
Britains muſt take. For me, my Ranſom's death,
On either ſide I come to ſpend my breath;
Which neither here I'le keep, nor bear agen,
But end it by ſome means for Imogen.

Enter

Enter two Captains, and Souldiers.

1. Great Jupiter be prais'd, Lucius is taken,
'Tis thought the old man, and his Sons, were Angels.
2. There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,
That gave th' Affront with them.
1. So 'tis reported:
But none of 'em can be found. Stand, who's there?
Post. A Roman,
Who had not now been drooping here, if seconds
Had answer'd him.
2. Lay hands on him: a Dog,
A Leg of Rome shall not return to tell
What Crows have peckt them here; he brags his service
As if he were of note: bring him to th' King.

Enter Cymbeline, Bellarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Pisanio, and Roman Captives. The Captains present Posthumus to Cymbeline, who delivers him over to a Gaoler.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Posthumus, and Gaoler.

Gao. You shall not now be stoln,
You have Locks upon you:
So graze, as you find Pasture.
2. Gao. I, or a stomach.
Post. Most welcome Bondage: for thou art a way
(I think) to liberty: yet am I better
Than one that's sick o' th' Gout, since he had rather
Groan so in perpetuity, than be cur'd
By th' sure Physician, Death; who is the Key
T' unbar these Locks. My Conscience, thou art fetter'd
More than my shanks, and wrists: you good gods give me
The penitent Instrument to pick that Bolt,
Then free for ever. Is't enough I am sorry?
So Children temporal Fathers do appease;
Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent,
I cannot do it better than in Gyves,
Desir'd, more than constrain'd, to satisfie
If of my freedom 'tis the main part, take
No stricter render of me, than my All.
I know you are more clement than vile men,
Who of their broken Debtors take a third,
A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again
On their abatement; that's not my desire.
For Imogen's dear life, take mine, and though
'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis a life, you coin'd it,
'Tween man, and man, they weigh not every stamp:
Though light, take Pieces for the figure's sake,
(You rather) mine being yours: and so great Powers,
If you will take this Audit, take this life,
And cancel those cold Bonds. Oh Imogen,
I'll speak to thee in silence.

Solemn Musick. Enter (as in an Apparition) Sicilius Leonatus, Father to Posthumus, an old man, attired like a Warriour, leading in his hand an ancient Matron (his Wife, and Mother to Posthumus) with Musick before them. Then after other Musick, follows the two young Leonati (Brothers to Posthumus) with wounds as they died in the Wars. They circle Posthumus round as he lies sleeping.

Sicil. No more thou thunder-Master
shew thy spite, on Mortal flyes:
With Mars fall out, with Juno chide, that thy Adulteries
Rates, and Revenges.
Hath my poor Boy done ought but well,
whose Face I never saw?
I dy'd whil'st in the VVomb he stay'd,
attending Natures Law.
Whose Father then (as men report, thou Orphans Father art)
Thou should'st have been, and shielded him
from this Earth-vexing smart.
Moth. Lucina lent not me her aid,
but took me in my throes,
That from me was Posthumus ript,
came crying 'mongst his Foes.
A thing of pity.
Sici. Great Nature like his Ancestry,
moulded the stuff so fair:
That he deserv'd the praise o' th' World,
as great Sicilius Heir.
1. Bro. When once he was mature for man,
in Britain where was he
That could stand up his parallel?
or fruitful object be?
In Eye of Imogen, that best could deem his dignity.
Moth. With Marriage therefore was he mockt to be exil'd, and thrown From Leonati Seat, and cast
from her his dearest one:
Sweet Imogen!
Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo,
slight thing of Italy,
To taint his nobler heart and brain,
with needless jealousie,
And to become the geek and scorn
o' th' others villany?
2. Bro. For this, from stiller seats we came,
our Parents, and us twain,
That striking in our Countries cause,
fell bravely, and were slain,
Our Fealty, and Tenantius right,
with honour to maintain.
1. Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath to Cymbeline perform'd:
Then Jupiter, thou King of gods,
why hast thou thus adjourn'd,
The Graces for her Merits due,
being all to dolours turn'd?
Sici. Thy Crystal Window ope; look out
no longer exercise
Upon a valiant Race, thy harsh,
and potent injuries:
Moth. Since (Jupiter) our Son is good,
take off his miseries.
Sicil. Peep through thy Marble Mansion, help, or we poor Ghosts will cry
To th' shining Synod of the rest, against thy Deity.
Bro. Help (Jupiter) or we appeal, and from thy justice flie.

Jupiter descends in Thunder and Lightning, sitting upon an Eagle: he throws a Thunder-bolt. The Ghosts fall on their knees.

Jup. No more you petty Spirits of Region low
Offend our hearing: hush. How dare you Ghosts
Accuse the Thunderer, whose Bolt (you know)
Sky-planted, batters all rebelling Coasts.
Poor shadows of Elizium, hence, and rest
Upon your never-withering Banks of Flowers.
Be not with mortal accidents oppress,
No care of yours it is, you know 'tis ours.
Whom best I love, I cross: to make my gift
The more delay'd delighted. Be content,
Your low-laid Son, our Godhead will uplift:
His comforts thrive, his Tryals well are spent:
Our Jovial Star reign'd at his Birth, and in
Our Temple was he married: Rise, and fade,
He shall be Lord of Lady Imogen,
And happier much by his Affliction made,

This

This tablet lay upon his breast, wherein
Our pleasure, his full Fortune, doth confine,
And so away: no farther with your dinn
Expres's Impatience, lest you stir up mine:
Mount Eagle, to my Palace Crystalline. [Ascends.

Sicil. He came in thunder, his Celestial breath
Was sulphurous to smell: the holy Eagle
Stoop'd, as to foot us: his Ascension is
More sweet than our blest fields: his Royal Bird
Prunes the immortal wing, and cloyes his Beak,
As when his god is pleas'd.

All. Thanks, Jupiter.

Sici. The Marble Pavement closes, he is enter'd
His radiant Roof: Away, and to be blest
Let us with care perform his great behest. [Vanish.

Post. Sleep, thou hast been a Grandsire, and begot
A Father to me: and thou hast created
A Mother, and two Brothers. But (oh scorn)
Gone, they went from hence so soon as they were born;
And so I am awake. Poor Wretches, that depend
On Greatness, Favour; Dream as I have done,
Wake, and find nothing. But (alas) I swerve:
Many Dream not to find, neither deserve,
And yet are steep'd in Favours; so am I
That have this Golden chance, and know not why:
What Fairies haunt this ground? a book? Oh rare one,
Be not, as is our fangled world, a Garment
Nobler than that it covers. Let thy effects
So follow, to be most unlike our Courtiers,
As good, as promise.

Reads.

When as a Lyon's whelp shall to himself unknown without seeking find, and be embrac'd by a piece of tender Air: And when from a stately Cedar shall be lopt branches, which being dead many years, shall after revive, be joynted to the old Stock, and freshly grow, then shall Posthumus and his miseries, Britain be Fortunate, and flourish in Peace and Plenty.

'Tis still a Dream: or else such stuff as Mad-men
Tongue, and brain not: either both, or nothing,
Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such
As sense cannot untie. But what it is,
The Action of my life is like it, which I'le keep
If but for sympathy.

Enter Gaoler.

Gao. Come, Sir, are you ready for death?

Post. Over-roasted rather; ready long agoe.

Gao. Hanging is the word, Sir, if you be ready for that, you are well Cook't.

Post. So if I prove a good repast to the Spectators, the dish pays the shot.

Gao. A heavy reckoning for you, Sir: but the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more Tavern Bills, which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth: you came in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink: sorry that you have payed too much, and sorry that you are payed too much: Purse and Brain, both empty: the brain the heavier, for being too light; the Purse too light, being drawn of heaviness. Oh, of this contradiction you shall now be quit: Oh the charity of a penny Cord, it sums up thousands in a trice: you have no true Debtor, and Creditor, but it: of what's past, is, and to come, the discharge: your neck (Sir) is Pen, Book, and Counters: so the Acquittance follows.

Post. I am merrier to die, than thou art to live.

Gao. Indeed, Sir, he that sleeps, feels not the Tooth-Ache: but a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a Hangman to help him to bed, I think he would change places with his Officer: for look you, Sir, you know not which way you shall go.

Post. Yes indeed do I, fellow.

Gao. Your death has eyes in's head then: I have not seen him so pictur'd: you must either be directed by some that take upon them to know, or to take upon your self that which I am sure you do not know: or lump the after-enquiry on your own peril: and how you shall speed in your journies end, I think you'll return never to tell one.

Post. I tell thee, Fellow, there are none want eyes, to direct them the way I am going, but such as wink, and will not use them.

Gao. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes, to see the way of blindness: I am sure such hanging's the way of winking.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Knock off his Manacles, bring your Prisoner to the King.

Posth. Thou bring'st good news, I am call'd to be made free.

Gao. I'le be hang'd then.

Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a Gaoler; no bolts for the dead. [Exeunt.

Gao. Unless a man would marry a Gallows, and beget young Gibbets, I never saw one so prone: yet on my conscience, there are verier Knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman: and there be some of them too that die against their wills: so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good: O there were desolation of Gaolers and Gallowses: I speak against my present profit, but my wish hath a preferment in't.

[Exit.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Cymbeline, Bellarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Pisanio, and Lords.

Cym. Stand by my side you, whom the gods have made
Preservers of my Throne: wo is my heart,
That the poor Souldier that so richly fought,
Whose rags sham'd gilded Arms, whose naked breast
Stept before Targets of proof, cannot be found:
He shall be happy that can find him, if
Our Grace can make him so.

Bel. I never saw
Such Noble fury in so poor a Thing;
Such precious deeds, in one that promis'd nought
But beggery and poor looks.

Cym. No tidings of him?

Pis. He hath been search'd among the dead, and living,
But no trace of him.

Cym. To my grief, I am
The heir of his reward, which I will add
To you (the Liver, Heart, Brain of Britain)
By whom (I grant) she lives. 'Tis now the time
To ask of whence you are. Report it.

Bellarius. Sir,
In Cambria are we born, and Gentlemen:
Further to boast, were neither true, nor modest,
Unless I add, we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees,
Arise my Knights oth' Battle, I create you
Companions to our person, and will fit you
With Dignities becoming your estates.

Enter Cornelius and Ladies.

There's business in these faces: why so sadly
Greet you our Victory? you look like the Romans,
And not o' th' Court of Britain.

Corn. Hail, great King,

To

To ſoure your happineſs, I muſt report
The Queen is dead.
Cym. Whom worſe than a Phyſician
Would this report become; but I conſider,
My Med'cine Life may be prolong'd, yet Death
Will ſeize the Doctor too. How ended ſhe?
Cor. With horrour, madly dying, like her ſelf,
Which (being cruel to the World) concluded
Moſt cruel to her ſelf. What ſhe confeſt,
I will report ſo pleaſe you, Theſe her Women
Can trip me, if I err, who with wet Cheeks
Were preſent when ſhe finiſh'd.
Cym. Prithee ſay.
Cor. Firſt, ſhe confeſt ſhe never lov'd you: only
Affected Greatneſs got by you: not you:
Married your Royalty, was Wife to your place:
Abhorr'd your perſon.
Cym. She alone knew this:
And but ſhe ſpoke it dying, I would not Believe her Lips in opening it. Proceed.
Corn. Your Daughter, whom ſhe bore in hand to love
With ſuch integrity, ſhe did confeſs
Was a Scorpion to her ſight, whoſe life
(But that her flight prevented it) ſhe had
Tane off by poiſon.
Cym. O moſt delicate Fiend!
Who is't can read a Woman? is there more?
Corn. More, Sir, and worſe. She did confeſs ſhe had
For you a mortal Mineral, which being took,
Should by the minute feed on life, and lingring,
By inches waſte you. In which time, ſhe purpos'd
By watching, weeping, tendance, kiſſing, to
O'recome you with her ſhew: yes and in time
(When ſhe had fitted you with her craft, to work
Her Son into th'adoption of the Crown:
But failing of her end by his ſtrange abſence,
Grew ſhameleſs deſperate, open'd (in deſpight
Of Heaven, and men) her purpoſes: repented
The evils ſhe hatch'd, were not effected: ſo
Deſpairing, died.
Cym. Heard you all this, her Women?
Lady. We did, ſo pleaſe your Highneſs.
Cym. Mine Eyes
Were not in fault, for ſhe was beautiful:
Mine Ears that heard her flattery, nor my heart,
That thought her like her ſeeming. It had been vitious
To have miſtruſted her: yet (Oh my Daughter)
That it was folly in me, thou maiſt ſay,
And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all.

Enter Lucius, Jachimo, and other Roman Priſoners, Leonatus behind, and Imogen.

Thou com'ſt not Caius now for Tribute, that
The Britains have rac'd out, though with the loſs
Of many a bold one: whoſe Kinſmen have made ſuit
That their good Souls may be appeas'd, with ſlaughter
Of you their Captives, which our ſelf have granted,
So think of your Eſtate.
Luc. Conſider, Sir, the chance of War the day
Was yours by accident: had it gone with us,
We ſhould not when the blood was cool, have threatned
Our Priſoners with the Sword. But ſince the gods
Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives
May be call'd ranſome, let it come: ſufficeth,
A Roman, with a Romans heart can ſuffer:
Auguſtus lives to think on't: and ſo much
For my peculiar care. This one thing only
I will entreat, my Boy (a Britain born)
Let him be ranſom'd: never Maſter had
A Page ſo kind, ſo duteous, diligent,
So tender over his occaſions, true,
So feat, ſo Nurſe-like: let his vertue join
With my requeſt, which I'll make bold, your Highneſs
Cannot deny: he hath done no Britain harm,
Though he have ſerv'd a Roman. Save him (Sir)
And ſpare no blood beſide.
Cym. I have ſurely ſeen him:
His favour is familiar to me: Boy,
Thou haſt look'd thy ſelf into my grace,
And art mine own. I know not why, wherefore,
To ſay, live Boy: ne're thank thy Maſter, live;
And ask of Cymbeline what Boon thou wilt,
Fitting my bounty, and thy ſtate, I'll give it:
Yea, though thou do demand a Priſoner,
The Nobleſt tane.
Imo. I humbly thank your Highneſs.
Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good Lad,
And yet I know thou wilt.
Imo. No, no, alack,
There's other work in hand: I ſee a thing
Bitter to me as Death: your Life, good Maſter,
Muſt ſhuffle for it ſelf.
Luc. The Boy diſdains me,
He leaves me, ſcorns me: briefly die their joyes,
That place them on the truth of Girls, and Boyes.
VVhy ſtands he ſo perplext?
Cym. VVhat would'ſt thou Boy?
I love thee more, and more: think more and more
VVhat's beſt to ask. Know'ſt him thou look'ſt on? ſpeak,
VVilt have him live? Is he thy Kin? thy Friend?
Imo. He is a Roman, no more Kin to me,
Than I to your Highneſs, who being born your Vaſſal
Am ſomething nearer.
Cym. VVherefore ey'ſt thou him ſo?
Imo. I'll tell you (Sir) in private, if you pleaſe
To give me hearing.
Cym. I, with all my heart:
And lend my beſt attention. VVhat's thy name?
Imo. Fidele, Sir.
Cym. Thou'rt my good Youth, my Page,
I'll be thy Maſter: walk with me: ſpeak freely.
Bel. Is not this Boy reviv'd from Death?
Arv. One ſand another
Not more reſembles that ſweet Roſie Lad:
VVho dyed, and was Fidele: what think you?
Gui. The ſame dead thing alive.
Bel. Peace, peace, ſee further; he Eyes us not, forbear,
Creatures may be alike: were't he, I am ſure
He would have ſpoke to us.
Gui. But we ſee him dead.
Bel. Be ſilent: let's ſee further.
Piſa. It is my Miſtriſs:
Since ſhe is living, let the time run on,
To good, or bad.
Cym. Come, ſtand thou by our ſide.
Make thy demand aloud. Sir, ſtep you forth,
Give anſwer to this Boy, and do it freely,
Or by your Greatneſs, and the grace of it
(VVhich is our honour) bitter torture ſhall
VVinnow the truth from falſhood. On, ſpeak to him.
Imo. My Boon is, that this Gentleman may render
Of whom he had this Ring.
Poſt. VVhat's that to him:
Cym. That Diamond upon your Finger, ſay
How came it yours?
Jach. Thou'lt torture me to leave unſpoken, that
VVhich to be ſpoke wou'd torture thee.
Cym. How? me?
Jach. I am glad to be conſtrain'd to utter that VVhich torments me to conceal. By Villany
I got this Ring: 'twas Leonatus Jewel,
VVhom thou did'ſt baniſh: and,
VVhich more may grieve thee,
As it doth me, a Nobler Sir ne're liv'd
'Twixt Sky and ground. VVilt thou hear more, my Lord?
Cym. All that belongs to this.
Jach. That Paragon, thy Daughter,

For whom my heart drops bloud, and my falſe ſpirits
Quail to remember. Give me leave, I faint.
Cym. My Daughter, what of her? Renew thy ſtrength,
I had rather thou ſhoul'ſt live, while Nature will,
Than die ere I hear more: ſtrive man, and ſpeak.
Iach. Upon a time, unhappy was the Clock
That ſtrook the hour: it was in Rome, accurſt
The Manſion where: 'twas at a Feaſt, oh would
Our Viands had been poiſon'd (or at leaſt
Thoſe which I heav'd to head:) the good Poſthumus, (VVhat ſhould I ſay? he was too good to be
VVhere ill men were, and was the beſt of all
Among'ſt the rar'ſt of good ones) ſitting ſadly,
Hearing us praiſe our Loves of Italy
For Beauty, that made barren the ſwell'd boaſt
Of him that beſt could ſpeak: for Feature, laming
The Shrine of Venus, or ſtraight-pight Minerva,
Poſtures, beyond brief Nature. For Condition,
A ſhop of the qualities, that Man
Loves VVoman for, beſides that hook of VViving,
Fairneſs, which ſtrikes the Eye.
Cym. I ſtand on fire. Come to the matter.
Iach. All too ſoon I ſhall,
Unleſs thou would'ſt grieve quickly. This Poſthumus,
Moſt like a Noble Lord, in love, and one
That had a Royal Lover, took his hint,
And (not diſpraiſing whom we prais'd, therein
He was as calm as vertue) he began
His Miſtriſs Picture, which by his tongue, being made,
And then a mind put in't, either our brags
VVere crack'd of Kitchin-Trulls, or his Deſcription
Prov'd us unſpeaking Sots.
Cym. Nay, nay, to th' purpoſe.
Iach. Your Daughters Chaſtity, (there it begins)
He ſpake of her, as Dian had hot Dreams,
And ſhe alone were cold: VVhereat, I wretch
Made ſcruple of his praiſe, and wag'd with him
Pieces of Gold, 'gainſt this, which then he wore
Upon his honour'd Finger; to attain
In ſuit the place of's Bed, and win this Ring
By hers, and mine Adultery: he (true Knight)
No leſſer of her honour confident
Than I did truly find her, ſtakes this Ring,
And would ſo, had it been a Carbuncle
Of Phœbus VVheel; and might ſo ſafely, had it
Been all the worth of's Car. Away to Britain
Poſt I in this deſign: well may you (Sir)
Remember me at Court, where I was taught
Of your chaſt Daughter, the wide difference
'Twixt Amorous, and Villanous. Being thus quench'd
Of hope, not longing; mine Italian brain,
'Gan in your duller Britain operate
Moſt vilely: for my vantage excellent.
And to be brief, my practice ſo prevail'd
That I return'd with ſimular proof enough,
To make the Noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his belief in her Renown,
With Tokens thus, and thus; averring notes
Of Chamber Hanging, Pictures, this her Bracelet
(Oh cunning how I got it) nay ſome marks
Of ſecret on her perſon, that he could not
But think her bond of Chaſtity quite crack'd,
I having tane the forfeit, whereupon,
Me thinks I ſee him now.
Poſt. I, ſo thou do'ſt,
Italian fiend. Aye me, moſt credulous Fool,
Egregious Murtherer, Thief, any thing
That's due to all the Villains paſt, in being
To come. Oh give me Cord, Knife, or Poiſon,
Some upright Juſticer. Thou King, ſend out
For tortures ingenious: it is I
That all th' abhorred things o' th' Earth amend
By being worſe than they. I am Poſthumus,
That kill'd thy Daughter: Villain-like, I lie,
That caus'd a leſſer Villain than my ſelf,
A ſacrilegious Thief to do't. The Temple
Of Vertue was ſhe: yea, and ſhe her ſelf.
Spit, and throw ſtones, caſt myre upon me, ſet
The Dogs o' th' ſtreet to bait me: every Villain
Be call'd Poſthumus Leonatus, and
Be Villany leſs than 'twas. Oh Imogen!
My Queen, my Life, my Wife: oh Imogen,
Imogen, Imogen.
Imo. Peace, my Lord, hear, hear.
Poſt. Shall's have a Play of this?
Thou ſcornful Page, there lie thy part,
Piſa. Oh Gentleman, help,
Mine and your Miſtriſs: Oh, my Lord Poſthumus,
You ne're kill'd Imogen till now: help, help,
Mine honour'd Lady.
Cym. Does the World go round?
Poſt. How comes theſe ſtaggers on me?
Piſa. Wake my Miſtriſs.
Cym. If this be ſo, the gods do mean to ſtrike me
To death with mortal joy.
Piſa. How fares my Miſtriſs.
Imo. Oh get thee from my ſight,
Thou gav'ſt me poiſon: dangerous Fellow hence,
Breath not where Princes are.
Cym. The tune of Imogen.
Piſa. Lady, the gods throw ſtones of ſulphur on me, if
That Box I gave you, was not thought by me
A pretious thing, I had it from the Queen.
Cym. New matter ſtill.
Imo. It poyſon'd me.
Corn. Oh gods!
I left out one thing which the Queen confeſt,
Which muſt approve thee honeſt. If Piſanio
Have (ſaid ſhe) given his Miſtriſs that Confection
Which I gave him for Cordial, ſhe is ſerv'd,
As I would ſerve a Rat.
Cym. What's this, Cornelius?
Corn. The Queen (Sir) very oft importun'd me
To temper poiſons for her, ſtill pretending
The ſatisfaction of her knowledge, only
In killing Creatures vile, as Cats and Dogs
Of no eſteem, I dreading, that her purpoſe
Was of more danger, did compound for her
A certain ſtuff, which being tane, would ſeize
The preſent power of life, but in ſhort time,
All Offices of Nature ſhould again
Do their due Functions. Have you tane of it?
Imo. Moſt like I did, for I was dead.
Bel. My Boyes, there was our errour.
Gui. This is ſure Fidele.
Imo. Why did you throw your wedded Lady fro you?
Think that you are upon a Rock, and now
Throw me again.
Poſt. Hang there like Fruit, my Soul,
Till the Tree die.
Cym. How now, my fleſh? my Child?
What, mak'ſt thou me a dullard in this Act?
Wilt thou not ſpeak to me?
Imo. Your bleſſing, Sir.
Bel. Though you did love this youth, I blame you not,
You had a motive for't.
Cym. My tears that fall
Prove Holy-water on thee; Imogen,
Thy Mother's dead.
Imo. I am ſorry for't, my Lord.
Cym. Oh, ſhe was naught; and long of her it was
That we meet here ſo ſtrangely: but her Son
Is gone, we know not how, nor where.
Piſa. My Lord,
Now fear is from me, I'll ſpeak truth. Lord Cloten,
Upon my Ladies miſſing, came to me
With his Sword drawn, foam'd at the mouth, and ſwore
If I diſcover'd not which way ſhe was gone,

It

It was my inſtant death. By accident
I had a feigned Letter of my Maſters
Then in my pocket, which directed him
To ſeek her on the Mountains near to Milford,
Where in a frenzy, in my Maſters Garments
(Which he inforc'd from me) away he poſts
VVith unchaſt purpoſe, and with Oath to violate
My Ladies honour, what became of him,
I further know not.
Gui. Let me end the Story: I ſlew him the
Cym. Marry, the gods forefend.
I would not thy good deeds ſhould from my Lips
Pluck a hard ſentence: prithee valiant youth
Deny't again.
Gui. I have ſpoke it, and I did it.
Cym. He was a Prince.
Gui. A moſt incivil one. The wrongs he did me
VVere nothing Prince-like; for he did provoke me
VVith Language that would make me ſpurn the Sea,
If it could ſo roar to me. I cut off's Head,
And am right glad he is not ſtanding here
To tell this tale of mine.
Cym. I am ſorry for thee:
By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and muſt
Endure our Law: thou'rt dead.
Imo. That headleſs man I thought had been my Lord.
Cym. Bind the Offender,
And take him from our preſence.
Bel. Stay, Sir King.
This man is better than the man he ſlew,
As well deſcended as thy ſelf, and hath
More of thee merited, than a Band of Clotens
Had ever ſcar for. Let his Arms alone,
They were not born for bondage.
Cym. VVhy old Souldier,
VVilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for
By taſting of our wrath? how of deſcent
As good as we?
Arv. In that he ſpake too far.
Cym. And thou ſhalt die for't.
Bel. VVe will die all three,
But I will prove that two on's are as good
As I have given out him. My Sons, I muſt
For mine own part, unfold a dangerous Speech,
Though haply well for you.
Arv. Your danger's ours.
Gui. And our good his.
Bel. Have at it then, by leave
Thou hadſt (great King) a Subject, who
VVas call'd Bellarius.
Cym. VVhat of him? he is a baniſh'd Traytor.
Bel. He it is that hath
Aſſum'd this Age: indeed a baniſh'd man,
I know how, a Traytor.
Cym. Take him hence,
The whole VVorld ſhall not ſave him.
Bel. Not too hot;
Firſt pay me for the Nurſing of thy Sons,
And let it be confiſcate all, ſo ſoon
As I have receiv'd it.
Cym. Nurſing of my Sons?
Bel. I am too blunt, and ſawcy: here's my Knee:
Ere I ariſe, I will prefer my Sons,
Then ſpare not the old Father. Mighty Sir,
Theſe two young Gentlemen that call me Father,
And think they are my Sons, are none of mine,
They are the Iſſue of your Loyns, My Liege,
And bloud of your begetting.
Cym. How? my Iſſue.
Bel. So ſure as you, your Fathers: I (old Morgan)
Am that Bellarius, whom you ſometime baniſh'd:
Your pleaſure was my near offence, my puniſhment
It ſelf, and all my Treaſon that I ſuffer'd,
VVas all the harm I did. Theſe gentle Princes
(For ſuch, and ſo they are) theſe twenty years
Have I train'd up; thoſe Arts they have, as I
Could put into them. My breeding was (Sir)
As your Highneſs knows, their Nurſe Euriphile
(Whom for the Theft I wedded) ſtole theſe Children
Upon my Baniſhment: I mov'd her to't,
Having receiv'd the puniſhment before
For that which I did then. Beaten for Loyalty,
Excited me to Treaſon. Their dear loſs,
The more of you 'twas felt, the more it ſhap'd
Unto my end of ſtealing them. But gracious Sir,
Here are your Sons again: and I muſt loſe
Two of the ſweet'ſt Companions in the World.
The benediction of theſe covering Heavens
Fall on their Heads like dew, for they are worthy
To in-lay Heavens with Stars.
Cym. Thou weep'ſt, and ſpeak'ſt:
The Service that you three have done, is more
Unlike, than this thou tell'ſt. I loſt my Children,
If theſe be they, I know not how to wiſh
A pair of worthier Sons.
Bel. Be pleas'd a while:
This Gentleman, whom I call Polidore,
Moſt worthy Prince, as yours, is true Guiderius:
This Gentleman, my Cadwall, Arviragus.
Your younger Princely Son, he Sir, was lapt
In a moſt curious Mantle, wrought by th' hand
Of his Queen Mother, which for more probation
I can with eaſe produce.
Cym. Guiderius had
Upon his Neck a Mole, a ſanguine Star,
It was a mark of wonder.
Bel. This is he,
Who hath upon him ſtill that natural ſtamp:
It was wiſe Natures end, in the donation
To be his Evidence now.
Cym. Oh, what am I
A Mother to the birth of three? Ne're Mother
Rejoyc'd deliverance more; Bleſt, pray you be,
That after this ſtrange ſtarting from your Orbs,
You may reign in them now: Oh Imogen,
Thou haſt loſt by this a Kingdom.
Imo. No, my Lord:
I have got two Worlds by't. Oh my gentle Brothers,
Have we thus met? Oh never ſay hereafter
But I am trueſt Speaker. You call'd me Brother
When I was but your Siſter: I you Brother,
When we were ſo indeed.
Cym. Did you ere meet?
Arv. I, my good Lord.
Gui. And at firſt meeting lov'd,
Continu'd ſo, until we thought he died.
Corn. By the Queens Dram ſhe ſwallow'd.
Cym. O rare inſtinct!
When ſhall I hear all through? this fierce abridgment
Hath to it Circumſtantial branches, which Diſtinction ſhould be rich in. Where? how liv'd you?
And when came you to ſerve our Roman Captive?
How parted with your Brother? How firſt met them?
Why fled you from the Court? And whether theſe?
And your three motives to the Battle; with
I know not how much more ſhould be demanded,
And all the other by-dependances
From chance to chance? But not the time, nor place
Will ſerve our long Interrogatories. See,
Poſthumus Anchors upon Imogen;
And ſhe (like harmleſs lightning) throws her Eye
On him: her Brothers, Me: her Maſter hitting
Each object with a Joy: the Counter-change
Is ſeverally in all. Let's quit this ground,
And ſmoak the Temple with our Sacrifices.
Thou art my Brother, ſo we'll hold thee ever.
Imo. You are my Mother too, and did relieve me:
To ſee this gracious ſeaſon!

Cym.

Cym. All ore joy'd
Save these in Bonds, let them be joyful too,
For they shall tast our Comfort.
Imo. My good Master, I will yet do you service.
Luc. Happy be you.
Cym. The forlorn Souldier that so nobly fought
He would have well becom'd this place, and grac'd
The thankings of a King,
Post. I am, Sir,
The Souldier that did Company these three
In poor beseeming: 'twas a fitment for
The purpose I then follow'd. That I was he,
Speak, Iachimo, I had you down and might
Have made your finish.
Iach. I am down again:
But now my heavy Conscience sinks my knee,
As then your force did. Take that Life, beseech you,
Which I so often owe: but your Ring first,
And here your Bracelet of the truest Princess
That ever swore her Faith.
Post. Kneel not to me:
The power that I have on you is to spare you:
The malice towards you, to forgive you. Live
And deal with others better.
Cym. Nobly doom'd:
We'll learn our Freeness of a Son in-Law:
Pardon's the word to all.
Arv. You holp us, Sir,
As you did mean indeed to be our Brother,
Joy'd are we, that you are.
Post. Your Servant, Princes. Good my Lord of Rome
Call forth your Sooth-sayer: As I slept, me thought
Great Jupiter upon his Eagle back'd
Appear'd to me, with other sprightly shews
Of mine own Kindred. When I wak'd, I found
This Label on my bosome: whose containing
Is so from sense in hardness, that I can Make no Collection of it. Let him shew
His skill in the construction.
Luc. Philarmonus.
Sooth. Here, my good Lord.
Luc. Read, and declare the meaning.

Reads.

When as a Lyon's Whelp, shall to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embrac'd by a piece of tender Air: and when from a Stately Cedar shall be lopt branches, which being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old Stock, and freshly grow, then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in Peace, and Plenty.

Thou, Leonatus, art the Lyon's Whelp,
The fit and apt Construction of thy name
Being Leonatus, doth import so much:
The piece of tender Air, thy virtuous Daughter,
Which we call Mollis Aer, and Mollis Aer
We t[illegible] Mulier: which Mulier I divine
Is th[illegible] constant Wife, who even now
Answ[illegible]he Letter of the Oracle,
Unknown to you unsought, were clipt about
With this most tender Air.
Cym. This hath some seeming.
Sooth. The lofty Cedar, Royal Cymbeline,
Personates thee: And thy lopt Branches, point
Thy two Sons forth: who by Bellarius stoln
For many years thought dead, are now reviv'd
To the Majestick Cedar join'd; whose issue
Promises Britain, Peace and Plenty.
Cym. Well,
My Peace we will begin: And Caius Lucius,
Although the Victor, we submit to Cæsar,
And to the Roman Empire; promising
To pay our wonted Tribute, from the which
We were disswaded by our wicked Queen,
Whom Heavens in justice both on her, and hers,
Have laid most heavy hand.
Sooth. The Fingers of the Powers above, do tune
The Harmony of this Peace: the Vision
Which I made known to Lucius e're the stroke
Of this yet scarce-cold-Battel, at this instant
Is full accomplish'd. For the Roman Eagle
From South to West, on Wing soaring aloft
Lessen'd her self, and in the Beams o' th' Sun
So vanish'd; which fore-shew'd our Princely Eagle
Th' Imperial Cæsar, should again unite
His favour, with the Radiant Cymbeline,
Which shines here in the West.
Cym. Laud we the gods,
And let our crooked Smoaks climb to their Nostrils
From our blest Altars. Publish we this peace
To all our Subjects. Set we forward: let
A Roman, and a Brittish Ensign wave
Friendly together; so through Lud's Town march,
And in the Temple of great Jupiter
Our Peace we'll ratifie. Seal it with Feasts.
Set on there: Never was a War did cease
(E're bloudy hands were wash'd) with such a Peace. [Ex

Enter Gower.

TO ſing a Song that old was ſung,
From aſhes ancient Gower is come,
Aſſuming mans infirmities,
To glad your Ear and pleaſe your Eyes;
It hath been ſung at Feſtivals,
On Ember Eves, and Holy-Dayes,
And Lords and Ladies in their lives,
Have read it for reſtoratives.
The purchace is to make men glorious.
Et bonum quo Antiquius, eo melius.
If you, born in theſe latter times,
When Wits more ripe, accept my Rhimes;
And that to hear an old man ſing,
May to your wiſhes pleaſure bring:
I life would wiſh, and that I might
Waſte it for you like Taper-light.
This Antioch, then, Antiochus the great,
Built up this City for his chiefeſt ſeat;
The faireſt in all Syria.
I tell you what mine Authors ſay:
This King unto him took a Peer,
Who died, and left a Female Heir,
So buckſome, blithe, and full of face:
As Heaven had lent her all his grace:
With whom the Father liking took,
And her to incest did provoke.
Bad Child, worſe Father, to entice his own.
To evil ſhould be done by none:
But cuſtom, what they did begin,
Was with long uſe, counted no ſin.
The beauty of this ſinful Dame,
Made many Princes thither frame,
To ſeek her as a Bed-fellow,
In marriage pleaſures, Play-fellow:
Which to prevent, he made a Law,
To keep her ſtill, and men in awe,
That who ſo askt her for his Wife,
His Riddle told not, loſt his life:
So for her many a wight did die,
As yon grim looks do teſtifie.
What enſues to the judgment of your Eye,
I give my cauſe, who beſt can teſtifie. [Exit.

Enter Antiochus, Prince Pericles, and Followers.

Ant. Young Prince of Tyre, you have at large receiv'd
The danger of the task you undertake.
Per. I have (Antiochus) and with a Soul emboldned
With the glory of her praiſe, think death no hazard,
In this enterprize.
Ant. Muſick bring in our Daughter, clothed like a Bride
For embracements, even of Jove himſelf;
At whoſe conception, till Lucina reign'd,
Nature this dowry gave, to glad her preſence,
The Senate Houſe of Planets all did ſit,
To knit in her their beſt perfections.

Enter Antiochus Daughter.

Per. See where ſhe comes, apparell'd like the Spring,
Graces her Subjects, and her thoughts the King,
Of every vertue gives renown to men:
Her Face the Book of praiſes, where is read.
Nothing but curious pleaſures as from thence,
Sorrow were ever rackt, and teſty wrath
Could never be her mild Companion.
You gods that made me man, and ſway in love,
That have inflam'd deſire within my Breſt,
To taſte the fruit of yon celeſtial Tree,
(Or die in the adventure) be my helps,
As I am Son and Servant to your will,
To compaſs ſuch a bondleſs happineſs.
Ant. Prince Pericles.
Per. That would be Son to great Antiochus.
Ant. Before thee ſtands this fair Heſperides,
With golden fruit, but dangerous to be toucht:
For Death like Dragons here affright thee hard?
Her Face like Heaven enticeth thee to view
Her countleſs glory, which deſert muſt gain:
And which without deſert, becauſe thine Eye
Preſumes to reach, all the whole heap muſt die,
Yon ſometimes famous Princes like thy ſelf
Drawn by report, adventurous by deſire,
Tell thee with ſpeechleſs tongues, and ſemblance pale,
That without covering ſave yon field of Stars,
Here they ſtand Martyrs ſlain in Cupids Wars:
And with dead Cheeks adviſe thee to deſiſt,
For going on Deaths Net, whom none reſiſt.
Per. Antiochus I thank thee, who hath taught
My frail mortality to know it ſelf,
And by thoſe fearful objects to prepare
This Body, like to them, to what I muſt:
For Death remembred, ſhould be like a Mirrour,
Who tells us, life's but breath, to truſt in errour:
I'll make my will then, and as ſick men do,
Who know the World, ſee Heaven, but feeling woe,
Gripe not at Earthly Joys, as erſt they did.
So I bequeath a happy peace to you
And all good men, as every Prince ſhould do,
My riches to the Earth from whence they came:
But my unſpotted fire of Love to you,
Thus ready for the way of Life or Death,
I wait the ſharpeſt blow (Antiochus)
Scorning advice. Read the concluſion then.
Ant. Which read and not expounded, 'tis decreed
As theſe before thou thy ſelf ſhalt bleed.
Daugh. Of all ſaid yet, thou prove proſperous,
Of all ſaid yet, I wiſh Thee happineſs.
Per. Like a bold Champion I aſſume the Liſts,
Nor ask advice of any other thought,
But faithfulneſs and courage.

The Riddle.

I am no Viper, yet I feed
On Mothers fleſh which did me breed:
I ſought a Husband, in which labour,
I found that kindneſs in a Father.
He's Father, Son, and Husband mild,
I Mother, Wife, and yet his Child.
How they may be, and yet in two,
As you will live, reſolve it you.

Sharp Phyſick is the laſt? but O you Powers!
That gives Heaven countleſs Eyes to view mens acts
Why could they not their ſights perpetually?
If this be true, which makes me pale to read it,
Fair glaſs of light, I loved you, and could ſtill,
Were not this glorious Casket ſtor'd with ill:
But I muſt tell you, now my thoughts revolt,
For he's no man on whom perfections wait;
That knowing ſin within, will touch the Gate:
You are a fair Viol, and your ſenſe the ſtrings,
Who finger'd to make man his lawful muſick,

Would

Would draw Heaven down, and all the gods to hearken,
But being plaid upon before your time,
Hell only danceth at ſo harſh a chime:
Good ſooth I care not for you.
Ant. Prince Pericles, touch not upon thy Life,
For that's an Article within our Law,
As dangerous as the reſt: your times expir'd,
Either expound now, or receive your ſentence.
Per. Great King,
Few love to hear the ſins they love to act,
'Twould braid your ſelf too near for me to tell it:
Who hath a Book of all that Monarchs do,
He's more ſecure to keep it ſhut, than ſhewn:
For Vice repeated, is like the wandring Wind,
Blows duſt in others Eyes, to ſpread it ſelf;
And yet the end of all is bought thus dear,
The breath is gone, and the ſore Eyes ſee clear.
To ſtop the air would hurt them, the blind Mole caſt
Copt Hills toward Heaven, to tell the Earth is throng'd
By mans oppreſſion, and the poor Worm doth die for't.
Kings are Earths Gods: in Vice their Law's their will,
And if Jove ſtray, who dares ſay, Jove doth ill.
It is enough you know it, and 'tis fit;
What being more known, grows worſe to ſmother it.
All love the Womb that there being bred,
Then give my tongue like leave to love my Head.
Ant. Heaven that I had it; he has found the meaning,
But I will gloze with him. Young Prince of Tyre,
Though by the tenour of our ſtrict Edict,
Your Expoſition miſ-interpreting,
We might proceed to cancel off your days;
Yet hope, ſucceeding from ſo fair a Tree,
As your fair ſelf, doth tune us otherwiſe:
Forty days longer we do reſpite you,
If by which time our ſecret be undone,
This mercy ſhews, we'll joy in ſuch a Son:
And until then, your entertain ſhall be
As doth befit our honour, and your worth. [Exit.

Manet Pericles ſolus.

Per. How courteſie would ſeem to cover ſin,
When what is done is like an Hypocrite,
The which is good in nothing but in ſight,
If it be true that I interpret falſe,
Then were it certain you were not ſo bad,
As with the foul Inceſt to abuſe your Soul:
Where now you're both a Father and a Son,
By your untimely claſpings with your Child,
(Which pleaſures fits an Husband, not a Father)
And ſhe an eater of her Mothers fleſh,
By the defiling of her Parents Bed,
And both like Serpents are, who though they feed
On ſweeteſt Flowers, yet they poiſon breed.
Antioch farewel, for wiſdom ſees, thoſe men
Bluſh not in actions blacker than the night,
Will ſhew no courſe to keep them from the light:
One ſin (I know) another doth provoke;
Murder's as near to luſt, as flame to ſmoak.
Poyſon and Treaſon are the hands of ſin,
I, and the Targets to put off the ſhame;
Then leaſt my life be cropt to keep you clear,
By flight I'll ſhun the danger which I fear. [Exit.

Enter Antiochus.

Ant. He hath found the meaning,
For which we mean to have his Head,
He muſt not live to trumpet forth my infamy,
Nor tell the World Antiochus doth ſin
In ſuch a loathed manner.
And therefore inſtantly this Prince muſt die,
For by his fall my honour muſt keep high.
Who attends us here?

Enter Thaliard.

Thal. Doth your Highneſs call?
Ant. Thaliard, you are of our Chamber,
And our mind partakes her private actions
To your ſecreſy; and for your faithfulneſs
We will advance you, Thaliard.
Behold, here's poiſon and here's gold,
We hate the Prince of Tyre, and thou muſt kill him.
It fits thee not to ask the reaſon why:
Becauſe we bid it: ſay, is it done?
Thal. My Lord, 'tis done.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Ant. Enough. Let your breath cool your ſelf, telling your haſte.
Meſ. My Lord, Prince Pericles is fled.
Ant. As thou wilt live, flie after; and as an Arrow, ſhot from a well experient Archer, hits the mark his Eye doth level at: ſo do thou never return, unleſs thou ſay, Prince Pericles is dead.
Th. My Lord, if I can get him within my Piſtols length, I'll make him ſure enough: ſo farewel to your Highneſs.
Ant. Thaliard adieu, till Pericles be dead,
My heart can lend no ſuccour to my head. [Exit.

Enter Pericles, Hellicanus, with other Lords.

Per. Let none diſturb us:
Why ſhould this change of thoughts,
The ſad Companion dull-ey'd melancholy,
By me ſo us'd, a gueſt as not an hour,
In the days glorious walk or peaceful night,
The Tomb where grief ſhould ſleep, can breed me quiet,
Here pleaſures court mine Eyes, and mine Eyes ſhun them,
And danger which I fear'd, is at Antioch,
Whoſe arm ſeems far too ſhort to hit me here,
Yet neither pleaſures art can joy my ſpirits,
Nor yet the others diſtance comfort me:
Then it is thus, that paſſions of the mind,
That have their firſt conception by miſ-dread,
Have after nouriſhment and life by care;
And what was firſt but fear, what might be done,
Grows elder now, and cares it be not done.
And ſo 'tis with me, the great Antiochus,
'Gainſt whom I am too little to contend,
Since he's ſo great, can make his will his act,
Will think me ſpeaking, though I ſwear to ſilence,
Nor boots it me to ſay I honour,
If he ſuſpect I may diſhonour him.
And what may make him bluſh in being known,
He'll ſtop the courſe by which it might be known,
With hoſtile Forces he'll ore-ſpread the Land,
And with the ſtint of War will look ſo huge,
Amazement ſhall drive courage from the ſtate:
Our men be vanquiſh'd, ere they do reſiſt,
And ſubjects puniſht, that never thought offence,
Which care of them, not pitty of my ſelf,
Who once no more but as the tops of Trees,
Which fence the roots they grow by, and defend them,
Make both my body pine, and Soul to languiſh,
And puniſh that before that he would puniſh.
1 Lord. Joy and all comfort in your ſacred Breaſt.
2 Lord. And keep your mind till ye return to us peaceful and comfortable.
Hell. Peace, peace, and give experience tongue:
They do abuſe the King that flatter him,
For flattery is the Bellows blows up ſin,
The thing the which is flattered, but a ſpark,
To which that ſpark gives heart and ſtronger glowing;
Whereas reproof obedient and in order,
Fits Kings as they are men, for they may err,

When Signior Sooth here doth proclaim Peace,
He flatters you, makes War upon your Life.
Prince, pardon me, or ſtrike me if you pleaſe,
I cannot be much lower than my Knees.
Per. All leave us elſe: but let your cares ore-look
What ſhipping, and what ladings in our Haven,
And then return to us: Hellicanus thou haſt
Mov'd us: what ſeeſt thou in our looks:
Hell. An angry brow, dread Lord.
Per. If there be ſuch a Dart in Princes frowns,
How durſt thy tongue move anger to our Face?
Hell. How dares the Planets look up unto Heaven,
From whence they have their nouriſhment?
Per. Thou know'ſt I have power to take thy life from thee.
Hell. I have ground the Axe my ſelf,
Do you but ſtrike the blow.
Per. Riſe, prithee riſe, ſit down, thou art no flatterer,
I thank thee for it, and Heaven forbid,
That Kings ſhould let their Ears hear their faults hid.
Fit Councellor, and ſervant for a Prince,
Who by thy wiſdom makes a Prince thy Servant,
What would'ſt thou have me do:
Hell. To bear with patience ſuch griefs,
As you your ſelf do lay upon your ſelf.
Per. Thou ſpeak'ſt like a Phyſician, Hellicanus,
That miniſters a potion unto me,
That thou would'ſt tremble to receive thy ſelf.
Attend me then; I went to Antioch,
Whereas thou know'ſt (againſt the Face of Death)
I ſought the purchace of a glorious Beauty,
From whence an Iſſue I might propagate,
Are Arms to Princes, and bring joys to Subjects.
Her Face was to mine Eye beyond all wonder,
The reſt (hark in thine Ear) as black as inceſt,
Which by my knowledge found, the ſinful Father,
Seem'd not to ſtrike, but ſmooth: But thou know'ſt this,
'Tis time to fear, when Tyrants ſeem to kiſs.
Which fear ſo grew in me, I hither fled,
Under the covering of a careful night,
VVho ſeem'd my good Protector: and being here,
Bethought what was paſt, what might ſuccend;
I knew him tyrannous, and Tyrants fears
Decreaſe not, but grow faſter than the years:
And ſhould he think, as no doubt he doth,
That I ſhould open to the liſtening Air,
How many worthy Princes bloud were ſhed,
To keep his Bed of blackneſs unlaid ope,
To lop that doubt, he'll fill this Land with arms,
And make pretence of wrong that I have done him,
VVhen all for mine, if I may call offence,
Muſt feel VVars blow, who fears not innocence:
VVhich love to all, of which thy ſelf art one,
VVho now reproved'ſt me for it.
Hell. Alas, Sir.
Per. Drew ſleep out of my Eyes, loud from my Cheeks,
Muſings into my mind, with a thouſand doubts
How I might ſtop this tempeſt ere it came,
And finding little comfort to relieve them,
I thought it Princely Charity to grieve for them.
Hell. VVell, my Lord, ſince you have given me leave to (ſpeak,
Freely will I ſpeak. Antiochus you fear,
And juſtly too I think you fear the Tyrant,
VVho either by publick VVar or private Treaſon,
VVill take away your life: therefore, my Lord, go travel for a while, till that his rage and anger be forgot; or till the Deſtinies do cut the thred of his life: your Rule direct to any, if unto me, day ſerves not light more faithful than I'll be.
Per. I do not doubt thy Faith,
But ſhould he wrong my liberties in my abſence?
Hell. VVe'll mingle our blouds together in the Earth,
From whence we had our being, and our birth.
Per. Tyre, I now look from thee then, and to Tharſus
Intend my travel, where I'll hear from thee;
And by whoſe Letters I'll diſpoſe my ſelf,
The care I had and have of Subjects good,
On thee I lay, whoſe wiſdoms ſtrength can bear it,
I'll take thy word for Faith, not ask thine Oath,
Who ſhuns not to break one, will ſure crack both:
But in our Orbs we live ſo round and ſafe,
That time of both this truth ſhall ne're convince,
Thou ſheweſt a Subjects ſhine, I a true Prince.

Enter Thaliard ſolus.

Thal. So, this is Tyre, and this is the Court, here muſt I kill King Pericles, and if I do it not, I am ſure to be hang'd at home: it is dangerous.
Well, I perceive he was a wiſe Fellow, and had good diſcretion, that being bid to ask what he would of the King, deſired he might know none of his ſecrets. Now do I ſee he had ſome reaſon for it: for if a King bid a man be a Villain, he is bound by the Indenture of his Oath to be one.
Huſht, here come the Lords of Tyre.

Enter Hellicanus, Eſcanes, with other Lords of Tyre.

Hell. You ſhall not need my Fellow Peers of Tyre, further to queſtion me of your Kings departure. His ſealed Commiſſion left in truſt with me, doth ſpeak ſufficiently, he's gone to travel.
Thal. How, the King gone?
Hell. If further yet you will be ſatisfied, why (as it were unlicens'd of your loves) he would depart? I'll give ſome light unto you: Being at Antioch.
Thal. What from Antioch?
Hell. Royal Antiochus (on what cauſe I know not) took ſome diſpleaſure at him, at leaſt he judged ſo: and doubting that he had erred or ſinned, to ſhew his ſorrow, he would correct himſelf; ſo puts himſelf unto the Shipmans toyl, with whom each minute threatens Life or Death.
Thal. Well, I perceive I ſhall not be hanged now, although I would; but ſince he's gone, the Kings Seas muſt pleaſe: he ſcapt the Land, to periſh at the Sea: I'll preſent my ſelf, Peace to the Lords of Tyre.
Hell. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is welcome.
Thal. From him I come with meſſage unto Princely Pericles; but ſince my landing I have underſtood, your Lord hath betook himſelf to unknown Travels, my meſſage muſt return from whence it came.
Hell. We have no reaſon to deſire it, commended to our Maſter, not to us; yet ere you ſhall depart, this we deſire as Friends to Antioch, we may Feaſt in Tyre. [Exeunt.

Enter Cleon the Governour of Tharſus, with his Wife and others.

Cleon. My Dionyſia, ſhall we reſt us here,
And by relating tales of others griefs,
See if 'twill teach us to forget our own?
Dion. That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it,
For who digs Hills becauſe they do aſpire,
Throws down one Mountain to caſt up a higher:
O my diſtreſſed Lord, even ſuch our griefs are,
Here they are but felt, and ſeen with miſchiefs Eyes,
But like to groves being topt, they higher riſe.
Cleon. O Dionyſia,
Who wanteth food, and will not ſay he wants it,
Or can conceal his hunger till he famiſh?
Our tongues and ſorrows do ſound deep:
Our woes into the air, our Eyes to weep,
Till tongues fetch breath that may proclaim
Them louder, that if Heaven ſlumber, while
Their Creatures want, they may awake
Their helpers to comfort them.
I'll then diſcourſe our woes felt ſeveral years,

And

And wanting breath to ſpeak, help me with tears.
Dion. I'll do my beſt, Sir,
Cle. This Tharſus, ore which I have the Government,
A City, on whom plenty held full hand,
For riches ſtrew'd her ſelf even in the ſtreets,
Whoſe Towers bore heads ſo high, they kiſt the Clouds,
And ſtrangers ne're beheld, but wonder'd at,
Whoſe men and dames ſo jetted and adorn'd,
Like one anothers Glaſs to trim them by:
Their Tables were ſtor'd full, to glad the ſight,
And not ſo much to feed on, as delight,
All poverty was ſcorn'd, and pride ſo great,
The name of help grew odious to repeat.
Dion. Oh 'tis true.
Cleon. But ſee what Heaven can do by this our change:
Theſe mouths, who but of late, Earth, Sea, and Air,
Were all too little to content and pleaſe,
Although they gave their Creatures in abundance:
As Houſes are defil'd for want of uſe,
They are now ſtarv'd for want of exerciſe;
Thoſe pallats, who, not yet to ſavers younger,
Muſt have inventions to delight the taſte,
Would now be glad of Bread, and beg for it:
Theſe Mothers who to nouzle up their Babes,
Thought nought too curious, are ready now
To eat thoſe little darlings whom they loved,
So ſharp are hungers teeth, that Man and Wife,
Draw Lots who firſt ſhall die to lengthen Life.
Here ſtands a Lord, and there a Lady weeping,
Here many ſink, yet thoſe which ſee them fall,
Have ſcarce ſtrength left to give them burial.
Is not this true?
Dion. Our Cheeks and hollow Eyes do witneſs it.
Cleon. O let thoſe Cities that of plenties Cup,
And her proſperities ſo largely taſt,
With their ſuperfluous Riots hear theſe tears,
The miſery of Tharſus may be theirs.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. VVhere's the Lord Governour?
Cleon. Here, ſpeak out thy ſorrows, which thou bring'ſt in haſt, for comfort is too far for us to expect.
Lord. VVe have deſcried upon our neighbouring ſhore,
A portly ſail of Ships make hitherward.
Cleon. I thought as much.
One ſorrow never comes but brings an Heir,
That may ſucceed as his inheritour:
And ſo in ours; ſome neighbouring Nation,
Taking advantage of our miſery,
That ſtuft the hollow Veſſels with their power,
To beat us down, the which are down already,
And make a conqueſt of unhappy me,
VVhereas no glory is got to overcome.
Lord. That's the leaſt fear.
For by the ſemblance of their Flags diſplaid, they bring us Peace, and come to us as Favourers, not as Foes.
Cleon. Thou ſpeak'ſt like Hymns untutor'd to repeat,
Who makes the faireſt ſhew, means moſt deceit.
But bring they what they will, and what they can,
VVhat need we fear, the grounds the loweſt,
And we are half way there: Go tell their General we attend him here, to know for what he comes, and whence he comes, and what he craves.
Lord. I go, my Lord.
Cleon. Welcome is peace, if he on peace conſiſt;
If Wars, we are unable to reſiſt.

Enter Pericles with Attendants.

Per. Lord Governour, for ſo we hear you are,
Let not our Ships and number of our men,
Be like a Beacon fired, to amaze your Eyes,
We have heard your miſeries as far as Tyre,
And ſeen the deſolation of your ſtreets;
Nor come we to add ſorrow to your tears,
But to releaſe them of their heavy load,
And theſe our Ships, you happily may think
Are like the Trojan Horſe, was ſtuft within,
With bloudy Veins expecting overthrow,
Are ſtor'd with Corn, to make your needy Bread,
And give them life, whom hunger ſtarv'd half dead.
Omnes. The gods of Greece protect you,
And we'll pray for you.
Per. Ariſe, I pray you, ariſe; we do not look for reverence, but for love, and harbourage for our ſelf, our Ships, and men.
Cleon. The which when any ſhall not gratifie,
Or pay you with unthankfulneſs in thought,
Be it our VVives, our Children or our ſelves,
The Curſe of Heaven and Men ſucceed their evils:
Till when, the which (I hope) ſhall ne're be ſeen,
Your Grace is welcome to our Town and us.
Per. VVhich welcome we'll accept, Feaſt here a while,
Until our Stars that frown, lend us a ſmile. [Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Gower.

Gower. HEre have you ſeen a mighty King,
His Child, I wis, to inceſt bring:
A better Prince and benign Lord,
That will prove awful both in deed and word.
Be quiet then, as men ſhould be,
Till he hath paſt neceſſity:
I'll ſhew you thoſe in troubles reign,
Loſing a myte, a Mountain gain:
The good in converſation,
To whom I give my benizon.
Is ſtill at Tharſus, where each man
Thinks all is writ he ſpoken can:
And to remember what he does,
Build his Statue to make him glorious:
But tidings to the contrary,
Are brought t' your Eyes, what need ſpeak I.

Dumb ſhow.

Enter at one Door Pericles talking with Cleon, all the Train with them. Enter at another Door, a Gentleman with a Letter to Pericles; Pericles ſhews the Letter to Cleon, Pericles gives the Meſſenger a reward, and Knights him. [Exit Pericles at one Door, and Cleon at another.

Good Hellican that ſtaid at home,
Not to eat honey like a Drone,
From others labours; for though he ſtrive
To killen bad, keep good alive:
And to fulfil his Princes deſire,
Sav'd one of all that haps in Tyre:
How Thaliard came full bent with ſin,
And had intent to murder him;
And that in Tharſus was not beſt,
Longer for him to make his reſt:
He doing ſo, put forth to Seas,
Where when men bin, there's ſeldome eaſe,
For now the Wind begins to blow,
Thunder above, and deeps below,
Makes ſuch unquiet, that the ſhip
Should houſe him ſafe, is wrackt and ſplit,
And he (good Prince) having all loſt,
By Waves, from Coaſt to Coaſt is toſt:
All periſhen of man, of pelf.
Ne ought eſcapen'd but himſelf;
Till fortune tired with doing bad,

Threw him aſhore to give him glad:
And here he comes; what ſhall be next,
Pardon old Gower, thus long's the Text.

Enter Pericles wet.

Per. Yet ceaſe your ire, you angry Stars of Heaven,
Wind, Rain, and Thunder: Remember earthly man
Is but a ſubſtance that muſt yield to you:
And I (as fits my nature) do obey you.
Alas, the Seas hath caſt me on the Rocks,
Waſht me from ſhore to ſhore, and left my breath
Nothing to think on, but enſuing Death:
Let it ſuffice the greatneſs of your powers,
To have bereft a Prince of all his fortunes,
And having thrown him from your watry grave,
Here to have Death in peace, is all he'll crave.

Enter three Fiſhermen.

1. What, to pelch?
2. Ha, come and bring away the Nets,
1. What patch-breech, I ſay.
3. What ſay you, Maſter?
1. Look how thou ſtirreſt now,
Come away, or I'le fetch thee with a wannion.
3. Faith, Maſter, I am thinking of the poor men
That were caſt away before us, even now.
1. Alas, poor Souls, it grieved my heart to hear
What pittiful cries they made to us, to help them,
When (welladay) we could ſcarcely help our ſelves.
3. Nay, Maſter, ſaid not I as much,
VVhen I ſaw the Porpas how he bounc'd and tumbled?
They ſay, they are half fiſh, half fleſh:
A plague on them, they ne're come but I look to be waſht.
Maſter, I marvel how the fiſhes live in the Sea?
1. VVhy as men do a Land,
The great ones eat up the little ones:
I can compare our rich Miſers, to nothing ſo fitly
As to a VVhale; he plaies and tumbles,
Driving the poor Fry before him,
And at laſt devours them all at a mouthful.
Such VVhales have I heard on a'th land,
VVho never leave gaping, till they ſwallowed
The whole Pariſh, Church, Steeple, Bells and all.
Per. A pretty Moral.
3. But, Maſter, if I had been the Sexton;
I would have been that day in the Belfrey.
2. VVhy, man?
3. Becauſe he ſhould have ſwallowed me too,
And when I had been in his belly,
I would have kept ſuch a jangling of the bells,
That he ſhould never have left,
Till he caſt bells, Steeple, Church and Pariſh up again:
But if the good King Symonides were of my mind,
Per. Symonides?
3. VVe would purge the Land of theſe Drones,
That rob the Bee of her honney.
Per. How from the fenny ſubject of the Sea
Theſe fiſhers tell the infirmities of men,
And from their watry Empire recollect,
All that may men approve, or men detect.
Peace be at your labour, honeſt fiſhermen.
2. Honeſt, good fellow, what's that, if it be a day fits you,
Search out of the Kalender, and no body look after it?
Per. Y'may ſee the Sea hath caſt me upon your coaſt.
2. VVhat a drunken knave was the Sea,
To caſt thee in our way.
Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind,
In that vaſt Tennis-Court, hath made the Ball
For them to play upon, intreats you pitty him:
He asks of you, that never us'd to beg.
1. No, friend, cannot you beg?
Here's them in our Country of Greece,
Get more with begging, than we can do with working.
2. Canſt thou catch any Fiſhes then?
Per. I never practis'd it.
2. Nay then thou wilt ſtarve ſure; for here's nothing to be got now-a daies, unleſs thou canſt fiſh for't.
Per. VVhat I have been, I have forgot to know;
But what I am, want teaches me to think on:
A man throng'd up with cold, my veins are chill,
And have no more of life, than may ſuffice
To give my tongue that heat to ask your help:
VVhich if you ſhall refuſe, when I am dead,
For that I am a man, pray ſee me buried.
1. Die ke-tha, now gods forbid, I have a gown here, come put it on, keep thee warm: now afore me a handſome fellow: Come, thou ſhalt go home, and we'll have fleſh for all day, fiſh for faſting days and more; or Puddings and Flap-jacks, and thou ſhalt be welcom.
Per. I thank you, Sir.
2. Hark you, my friend, You ſaid you could not beg.
Per. I did but crave.
2. But crave? then I'le turn craver too,
And ſo I ſhall ſcape whipping.
Per. VVhy, are all your beggers whipt then?
2. Oh not all, my friend, not all: for if all your beggers were whipt, I would wiſh no better office, than to be Beadle. But, Maſter, I'le go draw the Net.
Per. How well this honeſt mirth becomes their labour?
1. Hark you, Sir, do you know where ye are?
Per. Not well.
1. I tell you, this is called Pantapolis,
And our King, the good Symonides.
Per. The good King Symonides, do you call him?
1. I Sir, and he deſerves ſo to be call'd,
For his peaceable reign, and good government.
Per. He is a happy King, ſince he gains from
His Subjects, the name of good, by his government.
How far is his Court diſtant from this ſhore?
1. Marry, Sir, half a daies journey: and I'le tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and to morrow is her birth-day, and there are Princes and Knights come from all parts of the world, to Juſt and Turney for her love.
Per. VVere my fortunes equal to my deſires,
I could wiſh to make one there.
2. Oh Sir, things muſt be as they may: and what a man Cannot get, he may lawfully deal for his wives Soul.

Enter the two Fiſher-men, drawing up a Net.

2. Help, Maſter, help, here's a fiſh hangs in the Net, like a poor mans right in the law, 'twill hardly come out. Ha bots on't, 'tis come at laſt, and 'tis turned to a ruſty Armor.
Per. An Armor, friends, I pray you let me ſee it.
Thanks, Fortune, yet that after all croſſes,
Thou giveſt me ſomewhat to repair my ſelf:
And though it was mine own, part of mine heritage,
VVhich my dead father did bequeath to me,
VVith this ſtrict charge, even as he left his life:
Keep it, my Pericles, it hath been a ſhield
'Twixt me and Death; and pointed to this Brayſe:
For that it ſaved me; keep it in like neceſſity:
The which the gods protect thee, Fame may defend thee.
It kept where I kept, I ſo dearly loved it,
Till the rough Seas (that ſpares not any man)
Took it in rage, though calm'd hath given 't again:
I thank thee for't, my ſhipwrack now's no ill,
Since I have here my Fathers gift in's will.
1. VVat mean you, Sir?
Per. To beg of you (kind friends) this coat of worth,
For it was ſometime Target to a King,
I know it by this mark: he lov'd me dearly,
And for this ſake, I wiſh the having of it:
And that you'd guide me to your Soveraigns Court,
VVhere with it I may appear a Gentleman:
And if that ever my low fortune's better,

I'le

I'le pay your bounties; till then reſt your debter.
1. Why, wilt thou turney for the Lady?
Per. I'le ſhew the vertue I have born in Arms.
1. Why, take it, and the gods give thee good on't.
2. But hark you, my friend, 'twas we that made up this garment through the rough ſeams of the waters: there are certain condolements, certain vails; I hope, Sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had them.
Per. Believe it I will:
By your furtherance I am cloathed in Steel,
And ſpight of all the rupture of the Sea,
This Jewel holds his building on my Arm:
Unto thy value I will mount my ſelf.
Upon a Courſer, whoſe delightful ſteps,
Shall make the gazer joy to ſee him tread:
Only (my friend) I yet am unprovided of a pair of Baſes.
2. We'll ſure provide, thou ſhalt have
My beſt gown to make thee a pair;
And I'le bring thee to the Court my ſelf.
Per. Then honour be but a Goal to my will,
This day I'le riſe, or elſe add ill to ill.

Enter Symonides with Attendants, and Thaiſa.

Are the Knights ready to begin the Triumph?
1. Lord. They are, my Liege, and ſtay your coming,
To preſent themſelves.
King. Return them; we are ready, and our Daughter
In honour of whoſe birth, theſe triumphs are, (here,
Sits here like beauties child, whom Nature gat,
For men to ſee, and ſeeing wonder at.
Thai. It pleaſeth you (my royal father) to expreſs
My commendations great, whoſe merit's leſs.
King. It's fit it ſhould be ſo; for Princes are
A model which Heaven makes like it ſelf:
As Jewels loſe their glory, if neglected,
So Princes their Renowns, if not reſpected.
'Tis now your honour (Daughter) to entertain
The labour of each Knight, in his device.
Thai. Which to preſerve mine honour, I'le perform.
The firſt Knight paſſes by.
King. Who is the firſt that doth prefer himſelf?
Thai. A Knight of Sparta (my renowned Father)
And the device he bears upon his ſhield,
Is a black Æthiop reaching at the Sun;
The word, Lux tua vita mihi.
King. He loves you well, that holds his life of you.
The ſecond Knight.
Who is the ſecond, that preſents himſelf?
Thai. A Prince of Macedon (my royal Father)
And the device he bears upon his Shield,
Is an armed Knight, that's conquer'd by a Lady.
The Motto thus in Spaniſh, Pues Per dolera kee per forſa.
The third Knight.
King. And what's the third?
Thai. The third of Antioch; and his device
A wreath of Chivalry: the word, Me Pompey provexit apex.
The fourth Knight.
King. What is the fourth?
Thai. A burning Torch that's turned upſide down;
The word, Qui me alit me extinguit.
King. Which ſhews that beauty hath his power and will,
Which can as well enflame, as it can kill.
The fifth Knight.
Thai. The fifth, an hand environed with clouds,
Holding out gold, that's by the touch-ſtone tri'd:
The Motto thus, Sic ſpectanda fides.
The ſixth Knight.
King. And what's the ſixth and laſt, the which the Knight himſelf with ſuch a graceful courteſie deliver'd?
Thai. He ſeems to be a ſtranger: but his preſent is
A withered Branch, that's only green at top;
The Motto, In hac ſpe vivo.
King. A pretty moral; from the dejected ſtate wherein he is, he hopes by you his fortunes yet may flouriſh.
1. Lord. He had need mean better than his outward ſhew can any way ſpeak in his juſt commend: For by his ruſty outſide, he appears to have practiſed more the Whip-ſtock, than the Lance.
2. Lord. He well may be a ſtranger, for he comes to an honour'd triumph ſtrangely furniſht.
3. Lord. And on ſet purpoſe let his armour ruſt
Until this day, to ſcowre it in the duſt.
King. Opinion's but a fool, that makes us ſcan
The outward habit by the inward man.
But ſtay, the Knights are coming,
We will withdraw into the Gallery.
Great ſhouts, and all cry, The mean Knight.

Enter the King and Knights from Tilting.

King. Knights, to ſay you're welcom, were ſuperfluous.
To place upon the volum of your deeds,
As in a Title page, your worth in armes,
Were more than you expect, or more than's fit,
Since every worth in ſhew commends it ſelf:
Prepare for mirth, for mirth comes at a feaſt.
You are Princes, and my gueſts.
Thai. But you, my Knight and gueſt.
To whom this wreath of Victory I give,
And Crown you King of this days happineſs.
Per. 'Tis more by fortune (Lady) than by merit.
King. Call it by what you will, the day is yours,
And here, I hope, is none that envies it:
In framing an Artiſt, art hath thus decreed,
To make ſome good, but others to exceed,
And you her labour'd Scholar: come, Queen oth' Feaſt,
For (Daughter) ſo you are, here take your place:
Martial the reſt, as they deſerve their grace.
Knights. We are honoured much by good Symonides.
King. Your preſence glads our days, honour we love,
For who hates honour, hates the gods above.
Marſh. Sir, yonder is your place.
Per. Some other is more fit.
1. Knight. Contend not, Sir, for we are Gentlemen,
That neither in our hearts, nor outward Eyes,
Envy the great, nor do the low deſpiſe.
Per. You are right courteous Knights.
King. Sit, ſit, ſit.
By Jove (I wonder) that is King of thoughts,
Theſe Cates reſiſt me, he not thought upon.
Thai. By Juno (that is Queen of Marriage)
All Viands that I eat do ſeem unſavoury,
Wiſhing him my meat: ſure he's a gallant Gentleman.
King. He's but a country gentleman: has done no more
Than other Knights have done, has broken a ſtaff,
Or ſo; let it paſs.
Thai. To me he ſeems a Diamond to Glaſs.
Per. Yon King's to me, like to my Father's picture,
Which tells me in that glory once he was,
And Princes ſat like ſtars about his Throne,
And he the Sun, for them to reverence;
None that beheld him, but like leſſer lights,
Did vail their Crowns to his ſupremacy;
Where now his Son, like a Glo-worm in the Night,
The which hath fire in darkneſs, none in Light:
Whereby I ſee that Time's the King of men,
For he's their Parents, and he is their grave.
And gives them what he will, not what they crave.
King. What, are you merry, Knights?
Knights. Who can be other in this royal preſence?
King. Here, with a cup that's ſtirr'd unto the brim,
As you do love, fill to your Miſtreſs lips,
We drink this health to you.
Knights. We thank your Grace.
King. Yet pauſe a while,
Yon Knight doth ſit too melancholy,

As

As if the entertainment in our Court,
Had not a ſhew might counteravil his worth:
Note it not you, Thaiſa;
Thai. What is't to me, my Father?
King. O, attend, my Daughter,
Princes in this, ſhould live like gods above,
Who freely give to every one that come to honour them:
And Princes not doing ſo, are like to Gnats,
Which make a ſound, but kill'd are wondred at:
Therefore to make his entrance now more ſweet,
Here ſay we drink this ſtanding bowl of Wine to him.
Thai. Alas, my Father, it befits not me,
Unto a ſtranger Knight to be ſo bold,
He may my proffer take for an offence,
Since Men take Womens gifts for Impudence.
King. How? do as I bid you, or you'll move me elſe.
Thai. Now by the Gods, he could not pleaſe me better.
King. And furthermore tell him,
We deſire to know of him,
Of whence he is, his Name and Parentage.
Thai. The King my Father (Sir) hath drunk to you.
Per. I thank him.
Thai Wiſhing it ſo much bloud unto your life.
Per. I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely.
Thai. And further he deſires to know of you,
Of whence you are, your Name and Parentage.
Per. A Gentleman of Tyre, my name Pericles,
My education been in Arts and Armes,
Who looking for adventures in the world,
Was by the rough Seas reft of ſhips and men,
And after ſhip-wrack, driven upon this ſhore.
Thai. He thanks your Grace; names himſelf Pericles,
A Geneleman of Tyre, who only by misfortune of the ſeas,
Bereft of ſhips and men, caſt on the ſhore.
King. Now by the gods, I pitty his misfortune,
And will awake him from his Melancholy.
Come, Gentlemen, we ſit too long on trifles,
And waſte the time, which looks for other revels.
Even in your armours as you are addreſt,
Will very well become a Souldiers dance:
I will not have excuſe, with ſaying that
Loud Muſick is too harſh for Ladies heads,
Since they love men in Armes, as well as beds.
[They Dance.
So, this was well ask'd, 'twas well perform'd,
Come, Sir, here's a Lady that wants breathing too:
And I have heard, you Knights of Tyre,
Are excellent in making Ladies trip,
And that their meaſures are as excellent.
Per. In thoſe that practiſe them, they are (my Lord.)
King. Oh that's as much, as you would be deny'd
Of your fair courteſie, unclaſp, unclaſp.
[They Dance.
Thanks, Gentlemen, to all; all have done well,
But you the beſt: Pages and lights, to conduct
Theſe Knights unto their ſeveral Lodgings:
Yours, Sir, we have given order to be next our own.
Per. I am at your Graces pleaſure.
King. Princes, it is too late to talk of love,
And that's the mark I know you level at:
Therefore each one betake him to his reſt,
To morrow, all for ſpeeding do their beſt.

Enter Hellicanus, and Eſcanes.

Hell. No, Eſcanes, know this of me,
Antiochus from inceſt liv'd not free:
For which, the moſt high gods not minding
Longer to with-hold the vengeance that
They had in ſtore, due to his hainous
Capital offence; even in the height and pride
Of all his glory, when he was ſeated in
A Chariot of an ineſtimable value, and his Daughter
With him; a fire from Heaven came and ſhrivel'd
Up thoſe bodies, even to loathing, for they ſo ſtunk
That all thoſe eyes ador'd them, ere their fall,
Scorn now their hand ſhould give them burial.
Eſcanes. It was very ſtrange.
Hell. And yet but juſtice;
For though this King were great,
His greatneſs was no guard to bare Heavens ſhaft,
By ſin had his reward.
Eſcanes. 'Tis very true.

Enter two or three Lords.

1. Lord. See, not a man in private conference,
Or counſel, hath reſpect with him but he.
2. Lord. It ſhall no longer grieve without reproof.
3. Lord. And curſt be he that will not ſecond it.
1. Lord. Follow me then: Lord Hellicane, a word.
Hell. With me? and welcom, happy day, my Lords.
1. Lord. Know that our griefs are riſen to the top,
And now at length they over-flow their banks.
Hell. Your griefs, for what?
Wrong not your Prince you love.
1. Lord. Wrong not your ſelf then, noble Hellican,
But if the Prince do live, let us ſalute him,
Or know what ground's made happy by his breath:
If in the world he live, we'll ſeek him out:
If in his grave he reſt, we'll find him there,
And be reſolv'd, he lives to govern us:
Or dead, give's cauſe to mourn his Funeral,
And leave us to our free Election.
2. Lor. Whoſe death indeed, the ſtrongeſt in our cenſure,
And knowing this Kingdom is without a head,
Like goodly buildings left without a Roof,
Soon fall to ruine: your noble ſelf,
That beſt knows how to rule, and how to reign,
We thus ſubmit unto our Soveraign.
Omnes. Live, noble Hellican.
Hell. Try honours cauſe; forbear your ſuffrages:
If that you love Prince Pericles, forbear:
(Take I your wiſh, I leap into the Seas,
Where's hourly trouble, for a minutes eaſe)
A twelve month longer, let me entreat you
To forbear the abſence of your King;
If in which time expir'd, he not return,
I ſhall with aged patience bear your yoke.
But if I cannot win you to this love,
Go ſearch like Nobles, like noble Subjects,
And in your ſearch, ſpend your adventurous worth,
Whom if you find, and win unto return,
You ſhall like Diamonds ſit about his Crown.
1. Lord. To wiſdom, he's a fool that will not yield,
And ſince Lord Hellican enjoyneth us,
We with our travels will endeavor.
Hell. Then you love us, we you, and we'll claſp hands,
When Peers thus knit, a Kingdom ever ſtands. [Exit.

Enter the King reading of a Letter, at one door, and the Knights meet him.

1. Knight. Good morrow to the good Symonides.
King. Knights, from my Daughter this I let you know,
That for this twelve-month, ſhe'll not undertake
A married life: her reaſon to her ſelf is only known,
Which yet from her by no means can I get.
2. Knight. May we not get acceſs to her (my Lord).
King. Faith, by no means, ſhe hath ſo ſtrictly
Ty'd her to her Chamber, that 'tis impoſſible:
One twelve Moons more ſhe'll wear Diana's livery:
This by the eye of Cynthia hath ſhe vowed,
And on her Virgin honour will not break.
3. King. Loth to bid farewel, we take our leaves. [Exit.
King. So, they are well diſpatcht,
Now to my daughters Letter; ſhe tells me here,
She'll wed the ſtranger Knight,

Or

Or never more to view nor day nor light.
'Tis well, Mistris, your choice agrees with mine,
I like that well: nay how absolute she's in't,
Not minding whether I dislike or no.
Well, I do commend her choice, and will no longer
Have it be delayed: soft, here he comes,
I must dissemble it.

Enter Pericles.

Per. All fortune to the good Symonides.
King. To you as much: Sir, I am beholding to you,
For your sweet musick this last night:
I do protest, my ears were never better fed
With such delightful pleasing harmony.
Per. It is your Grace's pleasure to commend,
Not my desert.
King. Sir, you are Musicks master.
Per. The worst of all her Scholars (my good Lord)
King. Let me ask you one thing.
What do you think of my Daughter, Sir?
Per. A most virtuous Princess.
King. And she's fair too, is she not?
Per. As a fair day in Summer: wondrous fair.
King. Sir, my Daughter thinks very well of you,
I, so well, that you must be her Master,
And she will be your Scholar; therefore look to it.
Per. I am unworthy to be her Schoolmaster.
King. She thinks not so, peruse this writing else.
Per. What's here, a Letter,
That she loves the Knight of Tyre?
'Tis the King's subtilty to have my life:
Oh seek not to intrap me, gracious Lord,
A stranger and distressed Gentleman,
That never aim'd so high to love your Daughter,
But bent all offices to honour her.
King. Thou hast bewitcht my Daughter,
And thou art a Villain.
Per. By the gods I have not; never did thought
Of mine levy offence; nor never did my actions
Yet commence a deed might gain her love,
Or your displeasure.
King. Traitor, thou lyest.
Per. Traitor!
King. I, Traitor.
Per. Even in his throat, unless it be a King,
That calls me Traitor, I return the lye.
King. Now by the gods I do applaud his courage.
Per. My actions are as noble as my thoughts,
That never relisht of a base descent:
I came unto the Court for honours cause,
And not be a Rebel to her state:
And he that other wise accounts of me,
This Sword shall prove, he's honour's enemy.
King. No? here comes my Daughter, she can witness it.

Enter Thaisa.

Per. Then as you are as virtuous, as fair,
Resolve your angry Father, if my tongue
Did e're solicite, or my hand subscribe
To any syllable that made love to you?
Tha. Why, Sir, if you had, who takes offence,
At that would make me glad?
King. Yea, mistris, are you so peremptory?
I am glad of it withal my heart, [Aside.
I'le tame you, I'le bring you in subjection.
Will you, not having my consent,
Bestow your love and your affections
Upon a stranger? who, for ought I know, [Aside.
May be (nor can I think the contrary)
As great in blood as I my self.
Therefore hear you, Mistress, either frame
Your will to mine; and you, Sir, hear you,
Either be rul'd by me, or I'le make you——
Man and Wife; nay, come, your hands
And lips must seal it too: and being joyn'd,
I'le thus your hopes destroy, and for further grief,
God give you joy; what, are you both pleased?
Tha. Yes, if you love me, Sir.
Per. Even as my life, or blood that fosters it.
King. What, are you both agreed?
Amb. Yes, if it please your Majesty.
King. It pleaseth me so well, that I will see you wed,
And then with what haste you can, get you to bed.

Enter Gower.

Now ysleep slaked hath the rout,
No din but snores about the House,
Made louder by the ore-fed beast,
Of this most pompous marriage feast:
The Cat with eyne of burning coal,
Now couches from the Mouses hole;
And Cricket Sing at the Ovens mouth,
Are the blither for their drouth:
Hymen hath brought the Bride to bed,
Where by the loss of Maidenhead,
A Babe is moulded, by attent,
And time that is so briefly spent,
With your fine fancies quaintly eath,
What's dumb in shew, I'll plain with speech.

Enter Pericles and Symonides at one door with Attendants, a Messenger meets them, kneels, and gives Pericles a Letter, Pericles shews is Symonides, the Lords kneel to him; then enter Thaisa with child, with Lychorida a Nurse, the King shews her the Letter, she rejoyces: she and Pericles take leave of her Father, and depart.

By many a dearn and painful perch
Of Pericles, the carefull search,
By the four opposing Coignes,
Which the World together joynes,
Is made with all due diligence,
That horse and sail, and high expence,
Can steed the quest at last from Tyre,
Fame answering the most strange enquire,
To th' Court of King Symonides,
Are Letters brought, the tenour these:
Antiochus and his Daughter's dead,
The men of Tyrus, on the head
Of Helicanus would set on
The Crown of Tyre, but he will none:
The mutiny he there hastes t'oppress,
Sayes to them, if King Pericles
Come not home in twice six Moons,
He, obedient to their dooms,
Will take the Crown: the summ of this Brought hither to Pentapolis,
Irony shed the Regions round,
And every one with claps can sound,
Our heir apparent is a King!
Who dream't? who thought of such a thing?
Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre,
His Queen with child; makes her desire,
Which who shall cross along to go,
Omit we all their dole and woe:
Lychorida her Nurse she takes,
And so to Sea; their vessel shakes
On Neptunes billow, half the flood
Hath their Keel cut: but fortune mov'd,
Varies again, the grisly North
Disgorges such a tempest forth,
That as a Duck for life that dives,
So up and down the poor ship dives:
The Lady shreeks, and well a near,
Doth fall in travel with her fear:

And

And what enſues in this ſelf ſtorm,
Shall fox it ſelf, it ſelf perform:
I will relate, Action may
Conveniently the reſt convey;
Which might not? what by me is told,
In your imagination hold:
This Stage, the Ship, upon whoſe Deck
The Seas toſt Pericles appears to ſpeak.

Enter Pericles on Shipboard.

Per. The God of this great vaſt, rebuke theſe ſurges
Which waſh both Heaven and Hell, and thou that haſt
Upon the winds command, bind them in Braſs,
Having call'd them from the deep, O ſtill
Thy dearning dreadful thunders; daily quench
Thy nimble ſulphurous flaſhes: O how, Lychorida?
How does my Queen? then ſtorm venomouſly,
Wilt thou ſpit all thy ſelf? the Seamans whiſtle
Is a whiſper in the ears of Death,
Unheard Lychorida? Lucina, oh!
Divineſt Patroneſs, and my Wife, gentle
To thoſe that cry by night, convey thy Deity
Aboard our dancing Boat, make ſwift the pangs
Of my Queen travels. Now, Lychorida.

Enter Lychorida.

Lychor. Here is a thing too young for ſuch a place,
Who if it had conceit, would dye, as I am like to do:
Take in your arms this piece of your dead Quene.
Per. How? how, Lychorida?
Lychor. Patience, good Sir, do not aſſiſt the ſtorm,
Here's all that is left living of our Queen;
A little Daughter, for the ſake of it
Be manly, and take comfort.
Per. Oh you gods!
Why do you make us love your goodly gifts,
And ſnatch them ſtraight away?
We here below, recal not what we give,
And we therein may uſe honour with you.
Lychor. Patience, good Sir, even for this charge.
Per. Now mild may be thy life,
For a more bluſterous birth had never Babe:
Quiet and gentle thy conditions;
For thou art the rudeſt welcom to this world,
That ever was Prince's Child: happy that follows,
Thou haſt as chiding a Nativity,
As Fire, Air, Water, Earth, and Heaven can make,
To harold thee from the womb:
Even at the firſt, thy loſs is more than can
Thy portage quit, with all thou canſt find here:
Now the good gods throw their beſt eyes upon it.

Enter two Saylors.

1. Sayl. What courage, Sir? God ſave you.
Per. Courage enough, I do not fear the flaw,
It hath done to me the worſt: yet for the love
Of this poor Infant, this freſh new Sea-farer,
I would it would be quiet.
1. Sayl. Slack the bolins there; thou wilt not, wilt thou blow and ſplit thy ſelf.
2. Sayl. But Sea-room, and the brine and cloudy billow kiſs the Moon, I care not.
1. Sayl. Sir, your Queen muſt over board,
The Sea works high, the wind is loud,
And will not lie till the Ship be cleared of the dead.
Per. That's your ſuperſtition.
1. Pardon us, ſir, with us at Sea it ſtill hath been obſerved,
And we are ſtrong in Eaſtern, therefore briefly yield her.
Per. As you think meet,
For ſhe muſt o're-board ſtraight,
Moſt wretched Queen.
Lychorida. Here ſhe lies, Sir.
Per. A terrible Child-bed haſt thou had (my Dear)
No light, no fire, the unfriendly Elements
Forgot thee utterly, nor have I time
To bring thee hallowed to thy grave, but ſtraight
Muſt caſt thee ſcarcely Coffin'd, in oar,
Where for a Monument upon thy bones.
The air remaining lamps, the belching Whale,
And humming water muſt o'rewhelm thy Corps,
Lying with ſimple ſhells: Oh, Lychorida,
Bid Neſtor bring me Spices, Ink and Paper,
My Casket and my Jewels, and bid Nicander
Bring me the Sattin Coffin: lay the Babe
Upon the Pillow; hie thee, whiles I ſay
A Prieſtly farewel to her: ſuddenly, woman.
2. Sayl. Sir, we have a Cheſt beneath the hatches,
Caulkt and bitumed ready.
Per. I thank thee: Mariner, ſay, what Coaſt is this?
2. Sayl. We are near Tharſus.
Per. Thither, gentle Mariner,
Alter thy courſe for Tyre: when canſt thou reach it?
2. Sayl. By break of day, if the wind ceaſe.
Per. O make for Tharſus,
There will I viſit Cleon, for the Babe
Cannot hold out to Tyrus; there I'le leave it
At careful nurſing: go thy ways, good Mariner,
I'le bring the body preſently. [Exit.

Enter Lord Cerymon with a Servant.

Cer. Phylemon, hoa.

Enter Philemon.

Phil. Doth my Lord call?
Cer. Get fire and meat for theſe poor men,
It hath been a turbulent and ſtormy night.
Ser. I have been in many: but ſuch a night as this,
Till now, I ne're endured.
Cer. Your Maſter will be dead ere you return,
There's nothing can be miniſtred to nature,
That can recover him: give this to the Pothecary,
And tell me how it works.

Enter two Gentlemen.

1. Gent. Good morrow.
2. Gent. Good morrow to your Lordſhip.
Cer. Gentlemen, why do you ſtir ſo early?
1. Gent. Sir, our lodging ſtanding bleak upon the Sea,
Shook as if the Earth did quake:
The very principles did ſeem to rend and all to topple,
Pure ſurprize and fear made me to leave the Houſe.
2. Gent. That is the cauſe we trouble you ſo early,
'Tis not our Husbandry.
Cer. O you ſay well,
1. Gent. But I much marvel that your Lordſhip
Having rich attire about you, ſhould at theſe early hours
Shake off the golden ſlumber of repoſe; 'tis moſt ſtrange,
Nature ſhould be ſo converſant with pain,
Being thereto not compelled.
Cer. I hold it ever Virtue and Cunning.
Were endowments greater, than Nobleneſs and Riches;
Careleſs heirs may the two latter darken and expend;
But immortality attends the former,
Making a Man a God:
'Tis known, I ever have ſtudied Phyſick,
Through which ſecret Art, by turning o're Authority,
I have together with my practice, made familiar
To me and to my aid, the beſt infuſions that dwell
In vegetives, in Metals, Stones: and can ſpeak of the Diſturbances that Nature works, and of her cures;
Which doth give me a more content
In courſe of true delight

Than

Than to be thirſty after tottering Honour,
Or tye my pleaſure up in ſilken Bags,
To pleaſe the Fool and Death.
2. Gent. Your honour hath through Epheſus,
Poured forth your charity, and hundred call themſelves
Your Creatures; who by you have been reſtored,
And not your knowledge, your perſonal pain,
But even your purſe ſtill open, hath built Lord Cerimon
Such ſtrong renown, as never ſhall decay.

Enter two or three with a Cheſt.

Ser. So, lift there.
Cer. What's that?
Ser. Sir, even now did the Sea toſs up upon our ſhore
This Cheſt; 'tis of ſome wrack.
Cer. Set it down, let us look upon it.
2. Gent. 'Tis like a Coffin, Sir.
Cer. What e're it be, 'tis wondrous heavy;
Wrench it open ſtraight:
If the Seas ſtomach be o're-charg'd with gold,
'Tis a good conſtraint of Fortune it belches upon us.
2. Gent. 'Tis ſo, my Lord.
Cer. How cloſe 'tis caulkt and bottom'd, did the Sea caſt it up?
Ser. I never ſaw ſo huge a billow, Sir, as toſt it upon ſhore.
Cer. Wrench it open; it ſmells moſt ſweſence.
2. Gent. A delicate Odour.
Cer. As ever hit my noſtril: ſo, up with it.
Oh you moſt potent gods! what's here, a Coarſe?
1. Gent. Moſt ſtrange.
Cer. Shrowded in cloth of ſtate, balm'd and entreaſured
With full bags of Spices, a Paſs port to Apollo,
Perfect me in the Characters.

Here I give to underſtand,
If e're this Coffin drive a land;
I King Pericles have loſt
This Queen, worth all our mundane coſt:
Who finds her, give her burying,
She was the Daughter of a King.
Beſides this treaſure for a fee,
The gods requite his Charity.

If thou liveſt Pericles, thou haſt a heart
That even cracks for woe: this chanc'd to night.
2. Gent. Moſt likely, Sir.
Cer. Nay certainly to night.
For look how freſh ſhe looks,
They were too rough, that threw her in the Sea.
Make a fire within, fetch hither all my boxes in my Cloſet,
Death may uſurp on Nature many hours,
And yet the fire of life kindle again the o're-preſt Spirits.
I heard of an Egyptian that had nine hours been dead,
Who was by good appliance recovered.

Enter one with Napkins and Fire.

VVell ſaid, well ſaid, the fire and cloaths,
The rough and woful Muſick that we have,
Cauſe it to ſound I beſeech you:
The Vial once more; how thou ſtirreſt, thou block?
The Muſick there: I pray you give her air;
Gentlemen, this Queen will live,
Nature awakes a warm breath out of her;
She hath not been entranc'd above five hours,
See how ſhe gins to blow into lifes flower again.
1. Gen. The heavens through you, encreaſe our wonder,
And ſets up your fame for ever.
Cer. She is alive, behold her eye-lids,
Caſes to thoſe heavenly Jewels which Pericles hath loſt,
Begin to part their fringes of bright gold,
The Diamonds of a moſt praiſed water doth appear,
To make the world twice rich, live, and make us weep,
To hear your fate, fair creature, rare as you ſeem to be.
[She moves.
Thai. O dear Diana, where am I? where's my Lord?
VVhat VVorld is this?
2. Gent. Is not this ſtrange?
1. Gent. Moſt rare.
Cer. Huſh (my gentle neighbour) lend me your hands,
To the next Chamber bear her, get linnen;
Now this matter muſt be lookt to, for the relapſe
Is mortal: come, come, and, Eſculapius, guide us.
They carry her away. [Exeunt omnes.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Pericles at Tharſus, with Cleon and Dionyſia.

Per. MOſt honoured Cleon, I muſt needs be gone,
My twelve months are expir'd, and Tyre ſtands
In a peace: you and your Lady take from my heart
All thankfulneſs. The gods make up the reſt upon you.
Cle. Your ſhakes of fortune, though they hate you
Mortally, yet glance full wondringly on us.
Dion. O your ſweet Queen!
That the ſtrict fates had pleaſed
You had brought her hither
To have bleſt mine eyes with her.
Per. We cannot but obey the powers above us;
Could I rage and roar as doth the Sea ſhe lies in,
Yet the end muſt be as 'tis: my gentle Babe Marina,
Whom (for ſhe was born at Sea) I have named ſo,
Here, I charge your Charity withal; leaving her
The infant of your care, beſeeching you to give her
Princely training, that ſhe may be manner'd as ſhe is born.
Cleon. Fear not (my Lady) but think your Grace,
That fed my Country with your Corn; for which,
The Peoples prayers daily fall upon you, muſt in your Child
Be thought on, if neglect ſhould therein make me vile,
The common body that's by you reliev'd,
Would force me to my Duty; but if to that,
My nature need a ſpur, the gods revenge it
Upon me and mine, to the end of generation.
Per. I believe you, your honour and your goodneſs,
Teach me toot without your vows, till ſhe be married,
Madam, by bright Diana, whom we honour,
All unſiſter'd ſhall this heir of mine remain,
Though I ſhew will in't: ſo I take my leave:
Good Madam, make me bleſſed, in your care
In bringing up my Child.
Dion. I have one my ſelf, who ſhall not be more dear to my reſpect than yours, my Lord.
Per. Madam, my thanks and prayers.
Cleon. We'll bring your Grace to the edge of the ſhore, then give you up to the masked Neptune, and the gentleſt winds of Heaven.
Per. I will embrace your offer, come, deareſt Madam:
O no tears, Lychorida, no tears; look to your little Miſtris on whoſe Grace you may depend hereafter: come, my Lord.

Enter Cerymon, and Thaiſa.

Cer. Madam, this Letter, and ſome certain Jewels,
Lay with you in your Coffer,
Which are at your command:
Know you the Character?
Thai. It is my Lord's; that I was ſhipt at Sea, I well remember, even on my eaning time: but whether there delivered, by the holy gods, I cannot rightly ſay: but ſince ſince King Pericles, my wedded Lord, I ne're ſhall ſee again, a veſtal Livery will I take me to, and never more have joy.

Cer. Madam, if this you purpoſe as ye ſpeak,
Diana's Temple is not diſtant far,
Where you may abide till your date expire,
Moreover if you pleaſe, a Neece of mine,
Shall there attend you.

Tha. My recompence is thanks, that's all,
Yet my good will is great, though the gift ſmall. [Exit.

Enter Gower.

Gower. Imagine Pericles arriv'd at Tyre,
Welcom'd and ſetled to his own deſire;
His woful Queen we leave at Epheſus,
Unto Diana, there's a Votareſs.
Now to Marina bend your mind,
Whom our faſt growing ſcene muſt find
At Tharſus, and by Cleon train'd
In Muſicks Letters, who hath gain'd
Of education all the grace,
Which makes high both the art and place
Of general wonder: but alack,
That monſter Envy oft the wrack
Of earned praiſe, Marina's life
Seek to take off by Treaſon's Knife,
And in this kind, our Cleon hath
One Daughter and a full grown Wench,
Even ripe for Marriage ſight: this Maid
Hight Philoten: and it is ſaid
For certain in our ſtory, ſhe
Would ever with Marina be,
Be't when they weav'd the ſleded ſilk,
With fingers long, ſmall, white as milk,
Or when ſhe would with ſharp Needle wound
The Cambrick, which ſhe made more ſound
By hurting it, or when to th' Lute
She ſung, and made the night Bed mute,
That ſtill records within one, or when
She would with rich and conſtant Pen,
Vail to her Miſtreſs Dion ſtill,
This Philoten contends in skill
With abſolute Marina: ſo
The Dove of Paphos might with the Crow
Vy Feathers white. Marina gets
All praiſes, which are paid as Debts,
And not as given, this ſo darks
In Philoten all graceful marks,
That Cleon's Wife with Envy rare,
A preſent Murderer do's prepare
For good Marina, that her Daughter
Might ſtand Peerleſs by this ſlaughter.
The ſooner her vile thoughts to ſtead,
Lychorida our Nurſe is dead,
And curſed Dionyſia hath
The pregnant inſtrument of wrath
Preſt for this blow, the unborn event,
I do commend to your content,
Only I carried winged Time,
Poſt on the lame feet of my rhime,
Which never could I ſo convey,
Unleſs your thoughts went on my way.
Dionyſia doth appear,
With Leonine a Murderer. [Exit.

Enter Dionyſia, and Leonine.

Dion. Thy Oath remember, thou haſt ſworn to do it, 'tis but a blow, which never ſhall be known, thou canſt not do a thing in the World ſo ſoon, to yield thee ſo much profit, let not Conſcience which is but cold, inflaming thy love boſome, enflame too nicely; nor let pitty, which even Women have caſt off, melt thee, but be a Souldier to thy purpoſe.

Leon. I will do't, but yet ſhe is a goodly Creature.

Dion. The fitter then the gods ſhould have her.
Here ſhe comes weeping for her only Miſtreſs Death:
Thou art reſolv'd?

Leon. I am reſolv'd.

Enter Marina with a Basket of Flowers.

Mar. No: I will rob Tellus of her Weed, to ſtrew thy Grave with Flowers: the yellows, blews, the purple Violets and Marigolds, ſhall as a Carpet hang upon thy Grave, while Summer dayes doth laſt. Aye me; poor Maid, born in a tempeſt, when my Mother di'd: this World to me is like a laſting ſtorm, hurrying me from my Friends.

Dion. How now, Marina? why de' ye weep alone?
How chance my Daughter is not with you?
Do not conſume your blood with ſorrowing,
You have a Nurſe of me. Lord? how your favour's
Chang'd, with this unprofitable woe:
Come give me your Flowers, ere the Sea mar it,
Walk with Leonine, the air is quick there,
And it pierces and ſharpens the ſtomach;
Come, Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with her.

Mar. No I pray you, I'll not bereave you of your Servant.

Dion. Come, come, I love the King your Father, and your Self, with more than Foreign heart; we every day expect him here, when he ſhall come and find our Paragon, to all reports thus blaſted. He will repent the breadth of his great Voyage, blame both my Lord and me, that we have taken no care to your beſt courſes. Go I pray you, walk and be cheerful once again; reſerve that excellent complexion, which did ſteal the Eyes of young and old. Care not for me, I can go home alone.

Mar. Well, I will go, but yet I have no deſire to it.

Dion. Come, come, I know 'tis good for you:
Walk half an hour, Leonine, at the leaſt.
Remember what I have ſaid.

Leon. I warrant you, Madam.

Dion. I'll leave you, my ſweet Lady, for a while: pray walk ſoftly, do not heat your blood: What, I muſt have a care of you.

Mar. My thanks, ſweet Madam. Is the Wind Weſterly that blows?

Leon. South-Weſt.

Mar. When I was born, the Wind was North.

Leon. Was't ſo?

Mar. My Father, as Nurſe ſaith, did never fear, but cryed good Seamen to the Sailers, galling his Kingly Hands, hailing Ropes, and claſping to the Maſt, endured a Sea that almoſt burſt the Deck.

Leon. When was this?

Mar. When I was Born, never was Waves nor Wind more violent, and from the Ladder tackle, waſhes off a Canvas Climer, ha, ſaith one, wilt out? and with a dropping induſtry they skip from ſtern to ſtern: the Boat-ſwain whiſtles, and the Maſter calls and trebbles their confuſion.

Leon. Come, ſay your Prayers.

Mar. What mean you?

Leon. If you require a little ſpace for Prayer, I grant it, pray, but be not tedious, for the gods are quick of Ear, and I am ſworn to do my work with haſte.

Mar. Why, will you kill me?

Leon. To ſatisfie my Lady.

Mar. Why would ſhe have me kill'd now? as I can remember by my troth, I never did hurt her in all my Life, I never ſpake bad word, nor did ill turn to any living Creature: believe me now, I never kill'd a Mouſe, nor hurt a Fly. I trod upon a Worm once againſt my will, but I wept for it. How have I offended, wherein my my Death might yield her any profit, or my Life imply her any danger?

Leon. My Commiſſion is not to reaſon of the deed, but do't.

Mar. You will not do't for all the world, I hope: you are well favoured, and your looks fore-ſhew you have a very gentle heart, I ſaw you lately when you caught hurt in parting two that fought: good ſooth, it ſhewed well in you, do ſo now, your Lady ſeeks my life, come you between, and ſave poor me the weaker.

Leon. I am ſworn, and will diſpatch.

Enter Pirates.

Pirat. 1. Hold, Villain.

Pirat. 2. A prize, a prize.

Pirat. 3. Half part, mates, half part. Come, let's have her aboard ſudainly. [Exeunt.

Enter Leonine.

Leon. Theſe roguing Thieves ſerve the great Pirate Valdes, and they have ſeized Marina, let her go, there's no hope ſhe will return: I'll ſwear ſhe's dead, and thrown into the Sea, but I'll ſee further, perhaps they will but pleaſe themſelves upon her,
Not carry her aboard, if ſhe remain,
Whom they have raviſht, muſt by me be ſlain.

Enter Pander, Boult and Bawd.

Pander. Boult.

Boult. Sir.

Pander. Search the Market narrowly, Metalline is full of Gallants, we loſt too much Money this Mart, by being too Wenchleſs.

Bawd. We were never ſo much out of Creatures, we have but poor three, and they can do no more than they can do, and they with continual action, are even as good as rotten.

Pander. Therefore let's have freſh ones what e'er we pay for them, if there be not a conſcience to be us'd in every trade, we ſhall never proſper.

Bawd. Thou ſay'ſt true, 'tis not our bringing up of poor baſtards, as I think, I brought ſome eleven.

Boult. I too eleven, and brought them down again, But ſhall I ſearch the Market?

Bawd. What elſe, Man? The ſtuff we have, a ſtrong wind will blow it to pieces, they are ſo pitifully ſodden.

Pander. Thou ſay'ſt true, there's two unwholeſome in conſcience, the poor Tranſilvanian is dead that lay with the little Baggage.

Boult. I, ſhe quickly poupt him, ſhe made him roaſt-meat for worms, but I'll go ſearch the Market. [Exit.

Pander. Three or four thouſand Chickens were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and ſo give over.

Bawd. Why, to give over, I pray you? Is it a ſhame to get when we are old?

Pand. Oh our credit comes not in like the commodity, nor the Commodity wages not with the dan[illegible]: Therefore, if in our youths we could pick up ſome pretty eſtate, 'twere not amiſs to keep our door hatch'd; beſides the ſore terms we ſtand upon with the gods, will be ſtrong with us for giving o're.

Bawd. Come, other ſorts offend as well as we.

Pand. As well as we, I, and better too, we offend worſe neither is our profeſſion any Trade, it's no calling: But here comes Boult.

Enter Boult with Pirates, and Marina.

Boult. Come your ways, my Maſters,
You ſay ſhe's a Virgin?

Sayl. O Sir, we doubt it not.

Boult. Maſter, I have gone through for this piece you ſee, if you like her, ſo; if not, I have loſt my earneſt.

Bawd. Boult, has ſhe any qualities?

Boult. She has a good Face, ſpeaks well, and hath excellent good Cloaths: There's no farther neceſſity of qualities can make her be refuſed.

Bawd. What's her price, Boult?

Boult. I cannot be bated one doit of a thouſand pieces.

Pand. Well, follow me, my Maſters, you ſhall have your money preſently: Wife, take her in, inſtruct her what ſhe has to do, that ſhe may not be raw in her entertainment.

Bawd. Boult, take you the marks of her, the colour of her hair, complexion, height, age, with warrant of her Virginity, and cry: He that will give moſt ſhall have her firſt. Such a Maiden head were no cheap thing; if Men were as they have been: Get teis done as I command you.

Boult. Performance ſhall follow.

Mar. Alack, that Leonine was ſo ſlack, ſo ſlow:
He ſhould have ſtruck, not ſpoke;
Or that theſe Pirates, not enough barbarous,
Had not o're-board thrown me, for to ſeek my Mother.

Bawd. Why weep you, pretty one?

Mar. That I am pretty.

Bawd. Come, the gods have done their part in you.

Mar. I accuſe them not.

Bawd. You are light into my hands,
Where you are like to live.

Mar. The more's my fault to ſcape his hands,
Where I was like to dye.

Bawd. I, and you ſhall live in pleaſure.

Mar. No.

Bawd. Yes indeed ſhall you, and taſte Gentlemen of all faſhions. You ſhall fare well; you ſhall have the difference of all complexions: what de'ye ſtop your ears?

Mar. Are you a Woman?

Bawd. What would you have me to be, if I be not a Woman?

Mar. An honeſt Woman, or not a Woman.

Bawd. Marry whip thee, Goſling: I think I ſhall have ſomething to do with you. Come, y'are a young fooliſh Sapling, and muſt be bowed as I would have ye.

Mar. The gods defend me.

Bawd. If it pleaſe the gods to defend you by Men, then Men muſt comfort you, Men muſt feed you, Men muſt ſtir you up: Boult's return'd.

Enter Boult.

Now, Sir, haſt thou cry'd her through the Market?

Boult. I have cry'd her almoſt to the number of her hairs, I have drawn her picture with my voice.

Bawd. And prithee tell me, how doſt thou find the inclination of the people, eſpecially of the younger ſort?

Boult. Faith they liſtned to me, as they would have hearkened to their Fathers Teſtament. There was a Spaniards mouth ſo watered, that he went to bed to her very deſcription.

Bawd. We ſhall have him here to morrow with his beſt Ruff on.

Boult. To night, to night, but, Miſtreſs, do you know the French Knight that cowres i'th' Hams?

Bawd. Who, Monſieur Verollus?

Boult. I, he offered to cut a Caper at the proclamation, but he made a groan at it, and ſwore he would ſee her to morrow.

Bawd. VVell, well, as for him, he brought his diſeaſe hither, here he doth but repair it, I know he will come in our ſhadow, to ſcatter his Crowns in the Sun.

Boult. VVell, if we had of every Nation a Traveller, we ſhould lodge them with this Sign.

Bawd. Pray you, come hither a while, you have Fortunes coming upon you, mark me, you muſt ſeem to do that fearfully, which you commit willingly, deſpiſe proſit, where you have moſt gain, to weep that you live as you do, makes pitty in your lovers ſeldom, but that pitty begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a meer profit.

Mar. I underſtand you not.

Boult. O take her home, miſtris, take her home, theſe bluſhes of hers muſt be quencht with ſome preſent practice.

Bawd. Thou ſayeſt true i'faith, ſo they muſt, for your Bride goes to that with ſhame, which is her way to go with warrant.

Boult. Faith ſome do, and ſome do not, but Miſtris, if I have bargain'd for the joynt.

Bawd. Thou maiſt cut a morſel off the ſpit.

Boult. I may ſo.

Bawd. Who ſhould deny it?
Come young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boult. I by my faith, they ſhall not be changed yet.

Bawd. Boult. Spend thou that in the Town, report what a ſojourner we have, you'll loſe nothing by cuſtome. When nature framed this piece, ſhe meant thee a good turn, therefore ſay what a parragon ſhe is, and thou haſt the harveſt out of thine own report.

Boult. I warrant you miſtris, thunder ſhall not ſo awake the beds of Eels, as my giving out of her beauty ſtirs up the lewdly enclined, I'le bring home ſome to night.

Bawd. Come your ways, follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives ſharp, or waters deep,
Unti'd I ſtill my Virgin knot will keep.
Diana aid my purpoſe.

Bawd. What have we to do with Diana? pray you go with us. [Exeunt.

Enter Cleon and Dionyſia.

Dion. Why are you fooliſh, can it be undone?

Cleon. O Dionyſia, ſuch a piece of ſlaughter,
The Sun and Moon ne're look'd upon.

Dion. I think you'll turn a Child again.

Cleon. Were I chief Lord of all this ſpacious world, I'd give it to undo the deed. O Lady, much leſs in blood than vertue, yet a Princeſs to equal any ſingle Crown of the Earth, in the juſtice of compare, O villain, Leonine, whom thou haſt poiſoned too, if thou had'ſt drunk to him, it had been a kindneſs becoming well thy face, what canſt thou ſay, when Noble Pericles ſhall demand his Child?

Dion. That ſhe is dead. Nurſes are not the fates to foſter it, nor ever to preſerve, ſhe di'd at night, I'le ſay ſo, who can croſs it, unleſs you play the Innocent, and for an honeſt attribute, cry out ſhe di'd by foul play.

Cleon. O go to, well, well, of all the faults beneath the Heavens, the gods do like this worſt.

Dion. Be one of thoſe that thinks the pretty wrens of Tharſus will fly hence, and open this to Pericles; I do ſhame to think of what a Noble ſtrain you are, and of how coward a Spirit.

Cleon. To ſuch proceeding, who ever but his approbation added, though not his whole conſent, he did not flow from honourable courſes.

Dion. Be it ſo then, yet none doth know but you how ſhe came dead, nor none can know, Leonine being gone. She did diſdain my Child, and ſtood between her and her fortunes: none would look on her, but caſt their gazes on Marina's face, whilſt ours was blurred at, and held a Mawkin, not worth the time of day. It pierc'd me thorow, and though you call my courſe unnatural, you not your child well loving, yet I find it greets me as an enterprize of kindneſs perform'd to your ſole Daughter.

Cleon. Heavens forgive it.

Dion. And as for Pericles, what ſhould he ſay? we wept after her hearſe, and yet we mourn: her monument almoſt finiſhed, and her Epitaph in glittering golden characters, expreſs a general praiſe to her, and care in us, at whoſe expence 'tis done.

Cleon. Thou art like the Harpie,
Which to betray, doſt with thy Angels face,
Seize with thine Eagles talents.

Dion. You are like one, that ſuperſtitiouſly
Doth ſwear to th' gods, that Winter kills the flies,
But yet I know, you'll do as I adviſe. [Exit.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Gower.

Thus time we waſte, and longeſt leagues make ſhort,
Sail ſeas in Cockles, have and wiſh but for't
Making to take our imagination,
From bourn to bourn, Region to Region.
By you being Pard'ned, we commit no crime
To uſe one Language, in each ſeveral clime,
Where our ſcenes ſeem to live. I do beſeech you
To learn of me, who ſtands in gaps to teach you
The ſtages of our ſtory, Pericles
Is now again thwarting the wayward ſeas;
(Attended on by many a Lord and Knight)
To ſee his Daughter, all his lives delight.
Old Hellicanus goes along behind,
Is left to govern it: you bear in mind
Old Eſcanes, whom Hellicanus late
Advanc'd in time to great and high eſtate.
Well ſailing ſhips, and bounteous winds have brought
This King to Tharſus, think this Pilate thought,
So with his ſteerage, ſhall your thoughts grone
To fetch his Daughter home, who firſt is gone;
Like motes and ſhadows ſee them move a while,
Your ears unto your Eyes I'le reconcile.

Enter Pericles at one door with all his train, Cleon and Dionyſia at the other, Cleon ſhewes Pericles the Tomb, whereat Pericles makes lamentation, puts on Sackcloth, and in a mighty paſſion departs.

Gower. See how belief may ſuffer by foul ſhow,
This borrowed paſſion ſtands for true old woe:
And Pericles in ſorrow all devour'd,
With ſighs ſhot through, and biggeſt tears o're-ſhowr'd,
Leaves Tharſus, and again imbarks, he ſwears
Never to waſh his face, nor cut his hairs,
He put on Sack cloth and to Sea he bears,
A tempeſt which his mortal Veſſel tears.
And yet he rides it out. Now take we our way
To the Epitaph for Marina, writ by Dionyſia.

The faireſt, ſweeteſt, and beſt lies here,
Who withered in her ſpring of year:
She was of Tyrus the King's Daughter,
On whom foul Death hath made this ſlaughter:
Marina was ſhe call'd, and at her birth,
That is, being proud, ſwallow'd ſome part of th'earth:
Therefore the Earth fearing to be o'reflow'd,
Hath Thetis birth-child on the Heavens beſtow'd.
Wherefore ſhe does and ſwears ſhe'll never ſtint,
Make raging Battry upon ſhores of flint.

No vizor does become black villany,
So well as ſoft and tender flattery.
Let Pericles believe his Daughter's dead,
And bear his courſes to be ordered
By Lady Fortune, while our ſtear muſt play
His Daughter woe and heavy well a-day,
In her unholy ſervice: Patience then,
And think you now are all in Metaline.

Enter

Enter two Gentlemen.

1. Gent. Did you ever hear the like?
2. Gent. No, nor never ſhall do in ſuch a place as this, ſhe being once gone.
1. Gent. But to have Divinity preacht there, did you ever dream of ſuch a thing?
2. Gent. No, no, come, I am for no more Bawdy houſes, ſhall we go hear the Veſtals ſing?
1. Gent. I'le do any thing now that is virtuous, but I am out of the road of rutting for ever. [Exeunt.

Enter the three Bawds.

Pand. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her ſhe had ne're come here.

Bawd. Fie, fie upon her, ſhe is able to freeze the god Priapus, and undoe a whole generation, we muſt either get her raviſht, or be rid of her, when ſhe ſhould do for Clyents her fitment, and do me the kindneſs of our profeſſion, ſhe has me her quirks, her reaſons, her maſter-reaſons, her prayers, her knees, that ſhe would make a Puritane of the Devil, if he ſhould cheapen a kiſs of her.

Boult. Faith I muſt raviſh her, or ſhe'll diſfurniſh us of all our Cavaliers, and make all our Swearers Prieſts.

Pand. Now the pox upon her green ſickneſs for me.

Bawd. Faith there's no way to be rid of it, but by the way to the pox. Here comes the Lord Lyſimachus diſguiſed.

Boul. We ſhould have both Lord and Lown, if the peeviſh Baggage would but give way to Cuſtomers.

Enter Lyſimachus.

Lyſ. How now, how a dozen of virginities?

Bawd. Now the gods bleſs your Honour.

Boul. I am glad to ſee your Honour in good health.

Lyſ. You may ſo, 'tis the better for you, that your reſorters ſtand upon ſound Legs, how now? wholſome impunity have you, that a man may deal withal, and defie the Surgeon?

Bawd. We have one here, Sir, if ſhe would——
But there never came her like in Metaline.

Lyſ. If ſhe'd do the deeds of darkneſs, thou would'ſt ſay.

Bawd. Your honour knows what 'tis to ſay well enough.

Lyſ. Well, call forth, call forth.

Boult. For Fleſh and Blood, Sir, white and red, you ſhall ſee a Roſe, and ſhe were a Roſe indeed, if ſhe had but——

Lyſ. What prethee?

Boult. O Sir, I can be modeſt.

Lyſ. That dignifies the renown of a Bawd, no leſs than it gives a good report to a number to be chaſte.

Enter Marina.

Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the ſtalk,
Never pluckt yet I can aſſure you.
Is ſhe not a fair creature?

Lyſ. Faith ſhe would ſerve after a long voyage at Sea,
Well, there's for you, leave us.

Bawd. I beſeech your honour give me leave a word,
And I'le have done preſently.

Lyſ. I beſeech you do.

Bawd. Firſt, I would have you note, this is an honourable man.

Mar. I deſire to find him ſo, that I may worthily note him.

Bawd. Next, he's the Governor of this Country, and a man whom I am bound to.

Mar. If he govern the Country, you are bound to him indeed, but how honourable he is in that, I know not.

Bawd. Pray you without any more virginal fencing will you uſe him kindly? he will line your Apron with Gold.

Mar. What he will do graciouſly, I will thankfully receive.

Lyſ. Have you done?

Bawd. My Lord, ſhe's not pac't yet, you muſt take ſome pains to work her to your mannage, come, we will leave his Honour and her together.

[Exit Bawd.

Lyſ. Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, Sir?

Lyſ. Why, I cannot name't but I ſhall offend.

Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade, pleaſe you to name it.

Lyſ. How long have you been of this profeſſion?

Mar. E're ſince I can remember.

Lyſ. Did you go to't ſo young, were you a gameſter at five, or at ſeven?

Mar. Earlier too, Sir, if now I be one.

Lyſ. Why the houſe you dwell in, proclaims you to be a creature of ſale.

Mar. Do you know this houſe to be a place of ſuch reſort, and will come into it? I hear ſay you are of honourable parts, and the Governor of this place.

Lyſ. Why? hath your principal made known unto you, who I am?

Mar. Who is my principal?

Lyſ. Why your herb woman, ſhe that ſets ſeeds and roots of ſhame and iniquity. O you have heard ſome thing of my power, and ſo ſtand aloft for more ſerious wooing, but I proteſt to thee, pretty one, my Authority ſhall not ſee thee, or elſe look friendly upon thee; come bring me to ſome private place, come, come.

Mar. If you were born to honour, ſhew it now, if put upon you, make the judgement good, that thought you worthy of it.

Lyſ. How's this? how's this? ſome more, be ſage.

Mar. For me that am a maid, though moſt ungentle Fortune have plac'd me in this Stie, where ſince I came, diſeaſes have been ſold dearer than Phyſick, O that the gods would ſet me free from this unhallow'd place, though they did change me to the meaneſt bird that flies i' th' purer air.

Lyſ. I did not think thou could'ſt have ſpoke ſo well, I ne're dream'd thou could'ſt; had I brought hither a corrupted mind, thy ſpeech had altered it, hold, here's gold for thee, perſevere in that clear way thou goeſt, and the gods ſtrengthen thee.

Mar. The good gods perſerve you.

Lyſ. For my part, I came with no ill intent, for to me the very doors and windows ſavour vilely, fare thee well, thou art a piece of vertue, and I doubt not but thy training hath been Noble, hold, here's more gold for thee, a curſe upon him, die he like a thief that robs thee of thy goodneſs, if thou doſt hear from me, it ſhall be for thy good.

Boult. I beſeech your honour, one piece for me.

Lyſ. Avant thou damn'd door-keeper, your Houſe but for this Virgin that doth prop it, would ſink and overwhelm you. Away.

Boult. How's this? We muſt take another courſe with you? If your peeviſh chaſtity, which is not worth a breakfaſt in the cheapeſt Country under the coap, ſhall undo a whole houſehold, let me be gelded like a ſpaniel, come your ways.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. I muſt have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman ſhall execute it, come your way, we'll have no more Gentlemen driven away, come your wayes, I ſay.

Enter Bawds.

Bawd. How now, what's the matter?

Boult. Worſe and worſe, Miſtris, ſhe hath here ſpoken holy words to the Lord Lyſimachus.

Bawd. O abominable.

Boult. He makes our profeſſion as it were to ſtink before the face of the gods.

Bawd. Marry hang her up for ever.

Boult. The Nobleman would have dealt with her like a Nobleman, and ſhe ſent him away as cold as a Snow-ball, ſaying his prayers too.

Bawd. Boult. Take her away, uſe her at thy pleaſure, crack the glaſs of her virginity, and make the reſt malleable.

Boult. And if ſhe were a thornier piece of ground than ſhe is, ſhe ſhall be ploughed.

Mar. Hark, hark, you gods.

Bawd. She conjures, away with her, would ſhe had never come within my doors, Marry hang you, ſhe's born to undo us, will you not go the way of women-kind? Marry come up my diſh of chaſtity, with roſemary and bayſe. [Exit.

Boult. Come, miſtris, come your ways with me.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. To take from you the Jewel you hold ſo dear.

Mar. Prithee tell me one thing firſt.

Boult. Come now, your one thing?

Mar. What can'ſt thou wiſh thine Enemy to be?

Boult. Why I could wiſh him to be my Maſter, or rather my Miſtris.

Mar. Neither of theſe are ſo bad as thou art, ſince they do better thee in their command; thou hold'ſt a place, for which the painedſt fiend in Hell would not in Reputation change: thou art the damned doorkeeper to every cuſherel that comes enquiring for his Tib; to the cholerick fiſting of every Rogue, thy Ear is liable, thy food is ſuch as hath been belch'd on by infectious lungs.

Boult. What would you have me do? go to the wars, would you, where a man may ſerve ſeven years for the loſs of a Leg, and have not money enough in the end to buy him a wooden one?

Mar. Do any thing but this thou doſt, empty old receptacles, or common-ſhores of filth; ſerve by Indenture to the common hangman, any of theſe ways are yet better than this: for what thou profeſſeſt, a Baboon, could he ſpeak, would own a name too dear: Oh, that the gods would ſafely deliver me from this place: here, here's gold for thee, if that thy Maſter would gain by me, proclaim that I can ſing, weave, ſow, and dance, with other vertues, which I'le keep from boaſt, and will undertake all theſe to teach. I doubt not but this populous City will yield many Scholars.

Boult. But can you teach all this you ſpeak of?

Mar. Prove that I cannot, take me home again, and proſtitute me to the baſeſt groom that doth frequent your Houſe.

Boult. Well, I will ſee what I can do for thee: If I can place thee, I will.

Mar. But amongſt honeſt women.

Boult. Faith my acquaintance lies little among them: but ſince my Maſter and Miſtris have bought you, there's no going but by their conſent: therefore I will make them acquainted with your purpoſe, and I doubt not but I ſhall find them tractable enough. Come, I'le do for thee what I can, come your ways. [Exeunt.

Enter Gower.

Marina thus the Brothel ſcapes, and chances
Into an honeſt houſe, our ſtory ſaies:
She ſings like one immortal, and ſhe dances
As goddeſs-like to her admired laies:
Deep Clerks ſhe dumbs, and with her needle compoſes
Natures own ſhape, of bud, bird, branch or berry,
That even her art, ſiſters the natural Roſes,
Her Incle, Silk, Twine, with the rubied Cherry,
That pupils lacks ſhe none of noble race,
Who pour their bounty on her, and her gain
She gives the curſed Bawd. Leave we her place,
And to her Father turn our thoughts again,
Where we left him at Sea, tumbled and toſt,
And driven before the wind, he is arriv'd
Here where his Daughter dwells, and on this Coaſt,
Suppoſe him now at Anchor: the City ſtriv'd
God Neptune's annual feaſt to keep, from whence
Lyſimachus our Tyrian ſhip eſpies,
His banners ſable, trim'd with rich expence,
And to him in his Barge with fervour hyes,
In your ſuppoſing, once more put your ſight
On heavy Pericles, think this his Bark,
Where what is done in action (more of might Shall be diſcovered) pleaſe you ſit and hark. [Exit.

Enter Hellicanus, to him two Saylors.

1. Sayl. Where is the Lord Hellicanus? he can reſolve you. O here he is, Sir, there is a Barge put off from Metaline, and in it is Lyſimachus the Governor, who craves to come aboard, what is your will?

Hell. That he have his, call up ſome Gentlemen.

2. Sayl. Ho, Gentlemen, my Lord calls.

Enter two or three Gentlemen.

Hell. Gentlemen, there is ſome of worth would come aboard, I pray thee greet them fairly.

Enter Lyſimachus.

1. Sayl. Sir, this is the man that can in ought you would, reſolve you.

Lyſi. Hail, reverent Sir, the gods preſerve you.

Hell. And you to out-live the Age I am, and die as I would do.

Lyſi. You wiſh me well; being on ſhore, honouring of Neptune's triumphs, ſeeing this goodly veſſel ride before us, I made to it, to know of whence you are.

Hell. Firſt, what is your place?

Lyſi. I am the Governor of this place you lie before.

Hell. Sir, our veſſel's of Tyre, in it the King, a man, who for this three months hath not ſpoken to any one, nor taken ſuſtenance, but to prolong his grief.

Lyſi. Upon what ground is his diſtemperance?

Hell. It would be too tedious to repeat, but the main grief ſprings from the loſs of a beloved Daughter, and a wife.

Lyſi. May we not ſee him?

Hell. You may, but bootleſs is your ſight, he will not ſpeak to any.

Lyſi. Let me obtain my wiſh.

Hell. Behold him, this was a goodly perſon, till the diſaſter that one mortal wight drove him to this.

Lyſi. Sir King, all hail, the gods preſerve you, hail, Royal Sir.

Hell. It is in vain, he will not ſpeak to you.

Lord. Sir, we have a maid in Metaline, I durſt wager would win ſome words from him.

Lyſi. 'Tis well bethought, ſhe queſtionleſs with her ſweet harmony, and other choſen attractions, would allure and make a battery through his defended parts, which now are mid way ſtopt, ſhe is all happy, as the faireſt of all, and her fellow maids, now upon the levie ſhelter that abutts againſt the Iſland ſide.

Hell. Sure all effectleſs, yet nothing wee'l omit that bears recoveries name. But ſince your kindneſs we have ſtretcht thus far, let us beſeech you, that for our gold we may may have proviſion, wherein we are not deſtitute for want, but weary for the ſtaleneſs.

Lyſ. O, Sir, a courteſie, which if we ſhould deny, the moſt juſt God for every graff would ſend a Caterpillar, and ſo inflict our Province: yet once more let me entreat to know at large the cauſe of your Kings ſorrow.

Hell. Sir, Sir, I will recount it to you; but ſee, I am prevented.

Enter Marina.

Lyſ. O here's the Lady that I ſent for.
VVelcom, fair one: Is't not a goodly preſent?

Hell. She's a gallant Lady.

Lyſ. She's ſuch a one, that were I well aſſur'd,
Came of a gentle kind and noble ſtock,
I'd wiſh no better choice, and think me rarely wed.
Fair and all goodneſs that conſiſts in beauty,
Expect even here, where is a kingly patient,
If that thy proſperous and artificial fate
Can draw him but to anſwer thee in ought,
Thy ſacred Phyſick ſhall receive ſuch pay,
As thy deſires can wiſh.

Mar. Sir, I will uſe my uttermoſt skill in his recovery, provided that none but I and my companion maid be ſuffered to come near him.

Lyſ. Come, let us leave her, and the gods make her proſperous. [The Song.

Lyſ. Markt he your Muſick:

Mar. No, nor lookt on us.

Lyſ. See, ſhe will ſpeak to him.

Mar. Hail, Sir, my Lord, lend ear.

Per. Hum, ha.

Mar. I am a maid, my Lord, that nere before invited eyes, but have been gazed on like a Comet: ſhe ſpeaks, my Lord, that may be, hath endured a grief might equal yours, if both were juſtly weighed, though wayward fortune did maligne my ſtate, my derivation was from anceſtors who ſtood equivalent with mighty Kings, but time hath rooted out my parentage, and to the worſe and aukward caſualties, bound me in ſervitude, I will deſiſt, but there is ſomething glows upon my cheek, and whiſpers in mine ear, Go not till he ſpeak.

Per. My fortunes, parentage, good parentage to equal mine: was it not thus, what ſay you?

Mar. I ſaid, my Lord, if you did know my parentage, you would not do me violence.

Per. I do think ſo, pray you turn your Eyes upon me, y'are like ſome thing that, what Countrey-women hear of theſe ſhews?

Mar. No, nor of any ſhews, yet I was mortally brought forth, and am no other than I appear.

Per. I am great with woe, and ſhall deliver weeping: my deareſt wife was like this maid, and ſuch a one my Daughter might have been: my Queens ſquare brows, her ſtature to an Inch, as wand-like ſtraight, as Silver voyc'd, her Eyes as Jewel-like, and caſt as richly, in pace another Juno. VVho ſtarves the ears ſhe feeds, and makes them hungry, the more ſhe gives them ſpeech; where do you live?

Mar. VVhere I am but a ſtranger, from the deck you may diſcern the place.

Per. VVhere were you bred? And how atchiev'd you theſe endowments which you make more rich to owe?

Mar. If I ſhould tell my hiſtory, it would ſeem like lies diſdain'd in the reporting.

Per. Prithee ſpeak, falſeneſs cannot come from thee, for thou lookeſt modeſt as Juſtice, and thou ſeem'ſt a Pallas for the crowned truth to dwell in, I will believe thee, and make my ſenſes credit thy relation, to points that ſeem impoſſible, for thou look'ſt like one I loved indeed; what were thy Friends? Did'ſt thou not ſtay when I did puſh thee back: which was when I perceived thee that thou cam'ſt from good deſcent.

Mar. So indeed I did.

Per. Report thy parentage, I think thou ſaid'ſt thou had'ſt been toſt from wrong to injury, and that thou thought'ſt thy griefs might equal mine, if both were opened.

Mar. Some ſuch thing I ſaid, and ſaid no more, but what my thoughts did warrant me was likely.

Per. Tell thy ſtory, if thine conſidered prove the thouſand part of my endurance, thou art a man, and I have ſuffered like a girle, yet thou do'ſt look like patience, gazing on Kings graves, and ſmiling extremity out of act, what were thy Friends? how loſt thou thy name, my moſt kind virgin? recount I do beſeech thee, Come ſit by me.

Mar. My name is Marina.

Per. Oh I am mockt, and thou by ſome incenſed god ſent hither to make the world to laugh at me.

Mar. Patience, good Sir, or here I'le ceaſe.

Per. Nay I'le be patient, thou little know'ſt how thou doeſt ſtartle me to call thy ſelf Marina.

Mar. The name was given me by one that had ſome power, my Father and a King.

Per. How, a Kings Daughter, and call'd Marina?

Mar. You ſaid you would believe me, but not to be a trouble of your peace, I will end here.

Per. But are you Fleſh and Blood?
Have you a working pulſe, and are no Fairy?
Motion? well, ſpeak on, where were you born?
And wherefore call'd Marina?

Mar. Call'd Marina, for I was born at Sea.

Per. At Sea? who was thy Mother?

Mar. My Mother was the Daughter of a King, who died the minute I was born, as my good Nurſe Lychorida hath oft delivered weeping.

Per. O ſtop there a little, this is the rareſt Dream
That ere dull ſleep did mock ſad Fools withal,
This cannot be my Daughter; buried! well, where were you bred? I'le hear you more to the bottom of your ſtory and never interrupt you.

Mar. You ſcorn, believe me 'twere beſt I did give ore.

Per. I will believe you by the ſyllable of what you ſhall deliver, yet give me leave, how came you in theſe parts? where were you bred?

Mar. The King my Father did in Tharſus leave me.
Till cruel Cleon with his wicked Wife,
Did ſeek to murther me: and having wooed a Villain
To attempt it, who having drawn to do't,
A crew of Pyrats came and reſcued me,
Brought me to Metaline.
But, good ſir, whither will you have me? why do you weep?
It may be you think me an impoſtor, no, good faith. I am the daughter to King Pericles, if good King Pericles be.

Per. Hoe, Hellicanus?

Hell. Calls my Lord?

Per. Thou art a grave and noble Counſellor,
Moſt wiſe in general, tell me if thou can'ſt, what this maid is,
Or what is like to be, that thus hath made me weep?

Hell. I know not, but here's the Regent, Sir, of Metaline, ſpeaks nobly of her.

Lyſ. She never would tell her parentage.
Being demanded that, ſhe would ſit ſtill and weep.

Per. Oh Hellicanus, ſtrike me, honoured, Sir, give me a gaſh, put me to preſent pain, leſt this great Sea of joyes ruſhing upon me, ore-bear the ſhores of my mortality, and drown me with their ſweetneſs: Oh come hither.
Thou that beget'ſt him that did thee beget,
Thou that waſt born at Sea, buried at Tharſus,
And found at Sea again: O Hellicanus,
Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods, as loud
As Thunder threatens us; This is Marina.

What was thy Mothers name? tell me but that,
For truth can never be confirm'd enough,
Though doubts did ever sleep.

Mar. First, Sir, I pray what is your Title?

Per. I am Pericles of Tyre, but tell me now my Drown'd Queens name, as in the rest you said, Thou hast been god-like perfect, the Heir of Kingdoms, And another like to Pericles thy Father.

Mar. Is it not more to be your Daughter, than to say, my Mothers name is Thaisa? Thaisa was my Mother, who did end the minute I began.

Per. Now blessing on thee, rise, thou art my Child. Give me fresh Garments, mine own Hellicanus, she is not dead at Tharsus, as she should have been by savage Cleon, she shall tell thee all, when thou shalt kneel, and justifie in knowledge, she is thy very Princess; who is this?

Hell. Sir, 'tis the Governour of Metaline, who hearing of your melancholy, did come to see you.

Per. I embrace you; give me my Robes; I am wild in my beholding. Oh Heaven bless my Girl. But hark, what Musicks this, Hellicanus? my Marina, Tell him ore point by point, for yet he seems to doat, How sure you are my Daughter; but where's this musick?

Hell. My Lord, I hear none.

Per. None? the musick of the sphears, list, my Marina.

Lys. It is not good to cross him, give him way.

Per. Rarest sounds, do ye not hear?

Lys. Musick, my Lord, I hear.

Per. Most Heavenly Musick,
It nips me unto listning, and thick slumber
Hangs upon mine Eyes, let me rest,

Lys. A Pillow for his Head, so leave him all.
Well my Companion Friends, if this but answer to my just belief, I'll well remember you.

Actus Quintus.

Diana.

Diana. MY Temple stands in Ephesus, Hie thee thither, and do upon mine Altar Sacrifice. There when my Maiden Priests are met together, before all the people reveal how thou at Sea did'st lose thy Wife, to mourn thy Crosses with thy Daughters call, and give them repetition to the like: or perform my bidding, or thou livest in woe: do't, and happy by my Silver Bow; awake and tell thy Dream.

Per. Celestial Dian, Goddess Argentine,
I will obey thee: Hellicanus.

Per. My purpose was for Tharsus, there to strike
The inhospitable Cleon, but I am for other service first,
Toward Ephesus turn our blown Sails,
Eftsoons I'll tell why, shall we refresh us, Sir, upon your shore, and give you gold for such provision as our intents will need.

Lys. Sir, with all my heart, and when you come ashore, I have another sleight.

Per. You shall prevail, were it to woe my Daughter, for it seems you have been noble towards her.

Lys. Sir, lend me your Arm.

Per. Come, my Marina. [Exeunt.

Enter Gower.

Now our sands are almost run,
More a little, and then dun.
This my last boon give me,
For such kindness must relieve me:
That you aptly will suppose,
What pageantry, what feats, what shows.
What Minstrelsie, what pretty din,
The Regent made in Metalin,
To greet the King; so he thrived,
That he is promised to be Wived
To fair Marina, but in no wise,
Till he had done his sacrifice,
As Dian bad, whereto being bound,
The interim pray, you all confound.
In fether'd briefness sails are fill'd,
And wishes fall out as their will'd.
At Ephesus the Temple see,
Our King, and all his Company.
That he can hither come so soon,
Is by your fancies thankful doom. [Exit.

Enter Pericles, Lysimachus, Hellicanus, Marina, and others.

Per. Hail Dian, to perform thy just command,
I here confess my self the King of Tyre.
Who frighted from my Country, did wed at Pentapolis, the fair Thaisa, at Sea in Childbed died she, but brought forth a Maid Child called Marina, who, O Goddess, wears yet thy silver Livery, she at Tharsus was nurst with Cleon, who at fourteen years he sought to murder, but her better stars brought her to Metaline, 'gainst whose shore riding, her fortunes brought the Maid aboard to us, where by her own most clear remembrance, she made known her self my Daughter.

Tha. Voice and Favour, you are, you are, O Royal Pericles.

Per. What means the Woman? she dies, help, Gentlemen.

Cer. Sir, if you have told Diana's Altar true, this is your Wife.

Per. Reverend appearer, no, I threw her over-board with these very Arms.

Cer. Upon this Coast, I warrant you.

Per. 'Tis most certain.

Cer. Look to the Lady. O she's but overjoy'd. Early in blust'ring morn this Lady was thrown upon this shore. I opened the Coffin, found these rich Jewels, recovered her, and placed her here in Diana's Temple.

Per. May we see them?

Cer. Great Sir, they shall be brought you to my House, whither I invite you, look, Thaisa is recovered.

Tha. O let me look if he be none of mine, my sanctity will to my sence bend no licentious Ear, but curb it spight of seeing: O my Lord, are you not Pericles? like him you speak, like him you are: did you not name a Tempest, a Birth, and Death?

Per. The Voice of dead Thaisa.

Tha. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead and drown'd.

Per. Immortal Dian!

Tha. Now I know you better, when we with tears parted Pentapolis, the King, my Father, gave you such a Ring.

Per. This, this, no more, you gods, your present kindness makes my past miseries sport, you shall do well, that on the touching of her Lips I may melt, and no more be seen; O come, be buried a second time within these Arms.

Mar. My heart leaps to be gone into my Mothers Bosome.

Per. Look who kneels here, flesh of thy flesh, Thaisa, thy burden at the Sea, and call'd Marina, for she was yielded there.

Tha. Blest, and mine own.

Hell. Hail, Madam, and my Queen.

Tha. I know you not.

Per. You have heard me say when I did fly from Tyre, I left behind an ancient substitute; can you remember what I call'd the man, I have nam'd him oft.

Tha. 'Twas Hellicanus then.

Per.

Per. Still confirmation, embrace him dear Thaisa, this is he, now do I long to hear how you were found? how possibly preserved? and who to thank (besides the gods) for this great miracle?

Tha. Lord Cerimon, my Lord, this man through whom the gods have shewn their power, that can from first to last resolve you.

Per. Reverend Sir, the gods can have no mortal Officer more like a god than you, will you deliver how this dead Queen re-lives?

Cer. I will, my Lord, beseech you first go with me unto my House, where shall be shewn you all was found with her; how she came plac'd here in the Temple, no needful thing omitted.

Per. Pure Dian bless thee for thy Vision, I will offer night oblations to thee; Thaisa, this Prince, the fair betrothed of your Daughter, shall marry at Pentapolis, and now this Ornament that makes me look dismal, will I clip to form, and what this fourteen Years no Razor toucht, to grace thy marriage day, I'll beautify.

Tha. Lord Cerimon hath Letters of good credit, Sir, my Father's dead.

Per. Heavens make a Star of him, yet here, my Queen, we'll celebrate their Nuptials, and our selves will in that Kingdom spend our following dayes; our Son and Daughter shall in Tyrus reign.

Lord Cerimon, we do our longing stay,
To hear the rest untold, Sir, lead's the way.

[Exeunt omnes.

Enter Gower.

In Antiochus and his Daughter, you have heard
Of monstrous lust, the due and just reward:
In Pericles his Queen and Daughter seen,
Although assail'd with Fortunes fierce and keen,
Vertue preferred from fell destructions blast,
Led on by Heaven, and crown'd with joy at last.
In Hellicanus may you well descry,
A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty:
In reverend Cerimon there well appears,
The worth that learned charity aye wears.
For wicked Cleon and his Wife, when Fame
Had spread their cursed deed, and honour'd name
Of Pericles, to rage the City turn,
That him and his, they in his Palace burn:
The gods for murder seemed so content,
To punish, although not done, but meant.
So on your patiences ever more attending,
New joy wait on you, here our Play hath ending.

The Scene London.

Enter old Flowerdale and his Brother.

Fath. BRother, from Venice, being thus disguis'd,
I come to prove the humours of my Son:
How hath he born himself since my departure,
I leaving you his Patron and his Guide?

Unc. I faith, Brother, so, as you will grieve to hear,
And I almost asham'd to report it.

Fath. Why how is't, Brother? What doth he spend
Beyond the allowance I left him?

Unc. How! beyond that? and far more: why, your exhibition is nothing, he hath spent that, and since hath borrowed, protested with Oaths, alledged Kindred to wring money from me, by the love I bore his Father, by the Fortunes might fall upon himself, to furnish his wants: that done, I have had since, his Bond, his Friend and Friends Bond, although I know that he spends is yours; yet it grieves me to see the unbridled wildness that reigns over him.

Fath. Brother, what is the manner of his life? how is the name of his offences? if they do not relliſh altogether of damnation, his youth may priviledge his wantonness: I my self ran an unbridled course till thirty, nay almost till forty; well, you see how I am: for Vice once looked into with the Eyes of discretion, and well ballanced with the weights of reason, the course past, seems so abominable, that the Landlord of himself, which is the heart of his Body, will rather intomb himself in the Earth, or seek a new Tenant to remain in him, which once fetled, how much better are they that in their Youth have known all these Vices, and left it, than those that knew little, and in their Age run into it? Believe me, Brother, they that die most Vertuous, have in their youth lived most Vicious; and none knows the danger of the fire more than he that falls into it: But say, how is the course of his Life? let's hear his particulars.

Unc. Why I'll tell you, Brother, he is a continual Swearer, and a breaker of his Oaths, which is bad.

Fath. I grant indeed to swear is bad, but not in keeping those Oaths is better: for who will set by a bad thing? Nay by my Faith, I hold this rather a Vertue than a Vice. Well, I pray proceed.

Unc. He is a mighty Brawler, and comes commonly by the worst.

Fath. By my Faith this is none of the worst neither, for if he brawl and be beaten for it, it will in time make him shun it: For what brings a man or child, more to vertue than correction? What reigns over him else?

Unc. He is a great Drinker, and one that will forget himself.

Fath. O best of all, Vice should be forgotten: let him drink on, so he drink not Churches. Nay and this be the worst, I hold it rather happiness in him, than any iniquity. Hath he any more attendants?

Unc. Brother, he is one that will borrow of any man.

Fath. Why you see so doth the Sea, it borrows of all the small Currents in the World to encrease himself.

Unc. I, but the Sea pays it again, and so will never your Son.

Fath. No more would the Sea neither, if it were as dry as my Son.

Unc. Then, Brother, I see you rather like these Vices in your Son, than any way condemn them.

Fath. Nay mistake me not, Brother, for though I slur them over now, as things slight and nothing, his crimes being in the Bud, it would gall my heart, they should ever reign in him.

Flow. Ho? who's within ho?
[Flowerdale knocks within.

Unc. That's your Son, he is come to borrow more money.

Fath. For God's sake give it out I am dead,
See how he'll take it.
Say I have brought you news from his Father.
I have here drawn a formal Will, as it were from my self,
Which I'll deliver him.

Unc. Go to, Brother, no more: I will.

Flow. Uncle, where are you, Uncle? [within.

Unc. Let my Cousin in there.

Fath. I am a Saylor come from Venice, and my name is Christopher.

Enter

Enter Flowerdale.

Flow. By the Lord, in truth, Uncle.

Unc. In truth would a ſerv'd, Couſin, without the Lord.

Flow. By your leave, Uncle, the Lord is the Lord of truth. A couple of Raſcals at the Gate, ſet upon me for my Purſe.

Unc. You never come, but you bring a brawl in your mouth.

Flow. By my truth, Uncle, you muſt needs lend me ten pound.

Unc. Give my Couſin ſome ſmall Beer here.

Flow. Nay look you, you turn it to a jeſt now, by this light, I ſhould ride to Croydon Fair, to meet Sir Lancelot Spurcock, I ſhould have his Daughter Luce, and for Scurvy ten pound, a man ſhall loſe nine hundred threeſcore and odd pounds, and a daily Friend beſide, by this hand, Uncle, 'tis true.

Unc. Why, any thing is true for ought I know.

Flow. To ſee now: why you ſhall have my Bond, Uncle, or Tom Whites, James Brocks: or Nick Halls, as good Rapier and Dagger men, as any be in England; let's be damn'd if we do not pay you, the worſt of us all will not damn our ſelves for ten pound. A Pox of ten pound.

Unc. Couſin, this is not the firſt time I have believ'd you.

Flow. Why truſt me now, you know not what may fall: If one thing were but true, I would not greatly care, I ſhould not need ten pound, but when a man cannot be believ'd, there's it.

Unc. Why what is it, Couſin?

Flow. Marry this, Uncle, can you tell me if the Katern Hue be come home or no?

Unc. I marry is't?

Flow. By God I thank you for that news. What is't in the Pool can you tell?

Unc. It is; what of that?

Flow. What? why then I have ſix pieces of Velvet ſent me, I'll give you a piece, Uncle: for thus ſaid the Letter, a piece of Aſh-colour, a three-pil'd black, a colour'd, deroy, a Crimſon, a ſad Green, and a Purple: yes i'faith.

Unc. From whom ſhould you receive this?

Flow. From who? why from my Father? with commendations to you, Uncle, and thus he writes: I know, ſaith he, thou haſt much troubled thy kind Uncle, whom God willing at my return I will ſee amply ſatisfied; Amply, I remember was the very word; ſo God help me.

Unc. Have you the Letter here?

Flow. Yes, I have the Letter here, here is the Letter: no, yes, no, let me ſee, what Breeches wore I on Saturday: let me ſee, a Tueſday, my Calymanka, a Wedneſday, my Peach-colour Sattin, a Thurſday my Vellure, a Friday my Calymanka again, a Saturday, let me ſee, a Saturday, for in thoſe Breeches I wore a Saturday is the Letter: O my riding Breeches, Uncle, thoſe that you thought had been Velvet, in thoſe very Breeches is the Letter.

Unc. When ſhould it be dated?

Flow. Marry Didiſſimo terſios Septembris, no, no, tridiſſimo tertios Octobris, 1 Octobris, ſo it is.

Unc. Dicditimo terſios Octobris: and here receive I a Letter that your Father died in June: how ſay you, Keſter?

Fath. Yes truly, Sir, your Father is dead, theſe hands of mine holp to winde him.

Flow. Dead?

Fath. I, Sir, dead.

Flow. 'Sbloud, how ſhould my Father come dead?

Fath. I'faith Sir, according to the old Proverb,
The Child was born, and cryed, became man,
After fell ſick, and died.

Unc. Nay, Couſin, do not take it ſo heavily.

Flow. Nay I cannot weep you extempory, marry ſome two or three days hence, I ſhall weep without any ſtint ance. But I hope he died in good memory.

Fath. Very well, Sir, and ſet down every thing in good order, and the Katherine and Hue you talkt of, I came over in; and I ſaw all the Bills of Lading, and the Velvet that you talkt of, there is no ſuch aboard.

Flow. By God I aſſure you, then there is Knavery abroad.

Fath. I'll be ſworn of that: there's Knavery abroad, although there were never a piece of Velvet in Venice.

Flow. I hope he died in good Eſtate.

Fath. To the report of the World he did, and made his Will, of which I am an unworthy bearer.

Flow. His Will, have you his Will?

Fath. Yes, Sir, and in the preſence of your Uncle, I was willed to deliver it.

Unc. I hope, Couſin, now God hath bleſſed you with wealth, you will not be unmindful of me.

Flow. I'll do reaſon, Uncle; yet i'faith I take the denial of this ten pound very hardly.

Unc. Nay, I deny'd you not.

Flow. By God you deny'd me directly.

Unc. I'll be judg'd by this good-fellow.

Fath. Not directly, Sir.

Flow. Why he ſaid he would lend me none, and that had wont to be a direct denial, if the old phraſe hold: Well, Uncle, come we'll fall to the Legacies, In the name of God, Amen.

Item, I bequeath to my Brother Flowerdale, three hundred pounds, to pay ſuch trivial Debts as I owe in London.

Item, To my Son Mat. Flowerdale, I bequeath two Bail of falſe Dice, Videlicet, high men and low men, fullomes, ſtop cater traies, and other bones of function.

Flow. 'Sbloud what doth he mean by this?

Unc. Proceed, Couſin.

Flow. Theſe Precepts I leave him, let him borrow of his Oath, for of his word no body will truſt him. Let him by no means marry an honeſt Woman, for the other will keep her ſelf. Let him ſteal as much as he can, that a guilty Conſcience may bring him to his deſtinate repentance, I think he means hanging. And this were his laſt Will and Teſtament, the Devil ſtood laughing at his beds feet while he made it. 'Sbloud, what doth he think to ſop of his Poſterity with Paradoxes.

Fath. This he made, Sir, with his own hands.

Flow. I, well, nay come, good Uncle, let me have this ten pound, imagine you have loſt it, or rob'd of it, or miſreckon'd your ſelf ſo much: any way to make it come eaſily off, good Uncle.

Unc. Not a penny.

Fath. I'faith lend it him, Sir, I my ſelf have an Eſtate in the City worth twenty pound, all that I'll ingage for him, he ſaith it concerns him in a Marriage.

Flow. I marry doth it, this is a Fellow of ſome ſenſe, this: come, good Uncle.

Unc. Will you give your word for it, Keſter?

Fath. I will, Sir, willingly.

Unc. Well, Couſin, come to me ſome hour hence, you ſhall have it ready.

Flow. Shall I not fail?

Unc. You ſhall not, come or ſend.

Flow. Nay I'll come my ſelf.

Fath. By my troth, would I were your worſhips man.

Flow. What? would'ſt thou ſerve?

Fath. Very willingly, Sir.

Flow. Why I'll tell thee what thou ſhalt do, thou ſaiſt thou haſt twenty pound, go into Burchin-Lane, put thy ſelf into Cloaths, thou ſhalt ride with me to Croyden Fair.

Fath. I thank you, Sir, I will attend you.

Flow. Well, Uncle, you will not fail me an hour hence.

Unc. I will not, Couſin.

Flow.

Flow. What's thy name, Keſter?
Fath. I, Sir.
Flow. Well, provide thy ſelf: Uncle, farewel till anon.
[Exit Flowerdale.
Unc. Brother, how do you like your Son?
Fath. I'faith Brother, like a mad unbridled Colt,
Or as a Hawk, that never ſtoop'd to lure:
The one muſt be tamed with an Iron bit,
The other muſt be watch'd, or ſtill ſhe is wild,
Such is my Son, a while let him be ſo;
For counſel ſtill is follies deadly Foe.
I'll ſerve his youth, for youth muſt have his courſe,
For being reſtrain'd, it makes him ten times worſe:
His pride, his riot, all that may be nam'd,
Time may recal, and all his madneſs tam'd.

Enter Sir Lancelot, Maſter Weathercock, Daffidill, Artichoak, Luce, and Frank.

Lanc. Sirrah Artichoak, get you home before,
And as you proved your ſelf a Calf in buying,
Drive home your fellow Calves that you have bought.
Art. Yes forſooth, ſhall not my Fellow Daffidill go along with me.
Lanc. No, Sir, no, I muſt have one to wait on me.
Art. Daffidill, farewell, good fellow Daffidill,
You may ſee, Miſtreſs, I am ſet up by the halves,
Inſtead of waiting on you, I am ſent to drive home Calves.
Lanc. I'faith Frank, I muſt turn away this Daffidill,
He's grown a very fooliſh ſawcy Fellow.
Fran. Indeed-law, Father, he was ſo ſince I had him:
Before he was wiſe enough for a fooliſh Serving-man.
Wea. But what ſay you to me, Sir Lancelot?
Lanc. O, about my Daughters, well, I will go forward,
Here's two of them, God ſave them: but the third,
O ſhe's a ſtranger in her courſe of life,
She hath refuſed you, Maſter Weathercock,
Wea. I by the Rood, Sir Lancelot, that ſhe hath, but had ſhe try'd me, ſhe ſhould have found a man of me indeed.
Lanc. Nay be not angry, Sir, at her denial, ſhe hath refus'd ſeven of the worſhipfull'ſt and worthieſt Houſe-Keepers this day in Kent: Indeed ſhe will not marry I ſuppoſe.
Wea. The more Fool ſhe.
Lanc. What is it folly to love Charity?
Wea. No, miſtake me not, Sir Lancelot,
But 'tis an old Proverb, and you know it well,
That Women dying Maids, lead Apes in Hell.
Lanc. That's a fooliſh Proverb and a falſe.
Wea. By the Maſs, I think it be, and therefore let it go:
But who ſhall marry with Miſtreſs Frances?
Franc. By my troth they are talking of marrying me, Siſter.
Luce. Peace, let them talk:
Fools may have leave to prattle as they walk.
Daff. Senteſſes ſtill, ſweet Miſtreſs,
You have a Wit, and it were your Alablaſter.
Luce. I'faith and thy tongue trips trench-more.
Lanc. No of my Knighthood, not a ſuter yet:
Alas God help her, ſilly Girl, a Fool, a very Fool:
But there's the other black-brows a ſhrew'd Girl,
She hath wit at will, and ſuters two or three:
Sir Arthur Greenſheld one, a gallant Knight,
A valiant Souldier, but his power but poor.
Then there's young Oliver, the Devonſhire Lad,
A wary Fellow, marry full of wit,
And rich by the Rood, but there's a third all air,
Light as a Feather, changing as the wind:
Young Flowerdale.
Wea. O he, Sir, he's a deſperate Dick indeed.
Bar him your Houſe.
Lanc. Fie, not ſo, he's of good Parentage.
Wea. By my fay and ſo he is, and a proper man.
Lanc. I proper enough, had he good qualities.
Wea. I marry, there's the point, Sir Lancelot:
For there's an old ſaying,
Be he rich, or be he poor,
Be he high, or be he low:
Be he born in Barn or Hall,
'Tis manners makes the man and all.
Lanc. You are in the right, Maſter Weathercock.

Enter Monſieur Civet.

Civet. Soul, I think I am ſure croſſed, or witcht with an Owl, I have haunted them, Inn after Inn, Booth after Booth, yet cannot find them; ha, yonder they are, that's ſhe, I hope to God 'tis ſhe, nay I know 'tis ſhe now, for ſhe treads her Shoe a little awry.
Lanc. Where is this Inn? we are paſt it, Daffidill.
Daff. The good ſign is here, Sir, but the black Gate is before.
Civet. Save you, Sir, I pray may I borrow a piece of a word with you?
Daff. No pieces, Sir.
Civ. Why then the whole.
I pray, Sir, what may yonder Gentlewomen be?
Daff. They may be Ladies, Sir, if the deſtinies and mortality work.
Civ. What's her name, Sir.
Daff. Miſtreſs Frances Spurcock, Sir Lancelot Spurcock's Daughter.
Civ. Is ſhe a Maid, Sir?
Daff. You may ask Pluto, and Dame Proſerpine that: I would be loth to be rideld, Sir.
Civ. Is ſhe married I mean, Sir?
Daff. The Fates know not yet what Shoe-maker ſhall make her Wedding Shoes.
Civ. I pray where Inn you Sir? I would be very glad to beſtow the Wine of that Gentlewoman.
Daff. At the George, Sir.
Civ. God ſave you, Sir.
Daff. I pray your Name, Sir?
Civ. My Name is Maſter Civet, Sir.
Daff. A ſweet Name, God be with you, good Maſter Civet. [Exit Civet.
Lanc. A, have we ſpi'd you ſtout St. George?
For all your Dragon, you had beſt ſell's good Wine:
That needs no Ivy-buſh: well, we'll not ſit by it,
As you do on your Horſe, this room ſhall ſerve:
Drawer, let me have Sack for us old men:
For theſe Girls and Knaves ſmall VVines are beſt.
A Pint of Sack, no more.
Draw. A Quart of Sack in the three Tuns,
Lanc. A Pint, draw but a Pint, Daffidill,
Call for VVine to make your ſelves drink.
Fran. And a Cup of ſmall Beer, and a Cake, good Daffidill.

Enter young Flowerdale.

Flow. How now, ſie, ſit in the open Room, now good Sir Lancelot, and my kind Friend, worſhipful Maſter Weathercock, VVhat at your Pint, a Quart for ſhame.
Lanc. Nay Royſter, by your leave we will away.
Flow. Come, give's ſome Muſick, we'll go Dance,
Be gone, Sir Lancelot, what, and fair day too?
Lanc. 'Twere foully done, to dance within the Fair.
Flow. Nay if you ſay ſo, faireſt of all Fairs, then I'll not dance, a Pox upon my Taylor, he hath ſpoil'd me a Peach-colour Sattin Sute, cut upon Cloth of Silver, but if ever the Raſcal ſerve me ſuch another trick, I'll give him leave, i'faith, to put me in the Calender of Fools, and you, and you, Sir Lancelot; and Maſter Weathercock, my Goldſmith too on t'other ſide, I beſpoke thee, Luce, a Carkenet of gold, and thought thou ſhould'ſt a had it for a Fairing, and the Rogue puts me in rerages for for Orient Pearl: but thou ſhalt have it by Sunday Night, VVench.

Enter the Drawer.

Draw. Sir, here is one that hath ſent you a Pottle of Rheniſh Wine, brewed with Roſe-Water.

Flow. To me?

Draw. No, Sir, to the Knight; and deſires his more acquaintance.

Lanc. To me? what's he that proves ſo kind?

Daff. I have a trick to know his name, Sir, he hath a months mind here to Miſtreſs Frances, his name is Maſter Civet.

Lanc. Call him in, Daffidill.

Flow. O, I know him, Sir, he is a Fool, but reaſonable rich, his Father was one of theſe Leaſe-mongers, theſe Corn-mongers, theſe Money-mongers, but he never had the wit to be a Whore-monger.

Enter Maſter Civet.

Lanc. I promiſe you, Sir, you are at too much charge.

Civ. The charge is ſmall charge, Sir, I thank God my Father left me wherewithal, if it pleaſe you, Sir, I have a great mind to this Gentlewoman here, in the way of marriage.

Lanc. I thank you, Sir: pleaſe you to come to Lewſome, to my poor Houſe, you ſhall be kindly welcome: I knew your Father, he was a wary Husband: to pay here, Drawer.

Draw. All is paid, Sir: this Gentleman hath paid all.

Lanc. I'faith you do us wrong,
But we ſhall live to make amends ere long:
Maſter Flowerdale, is that your Man?

Flow. Yes Faith, a good old Knave.

Lanc. Nay then I think you will turn wiſe,
Now you take ſuch a Servant:
Come, you'll ride with us to Lewſome, let's away,
'Tis ſcarce two hours to the end of day. [Exeunt.

Enter Sir Arthur Greenſhood, Oliver, Lieutenant and Souldiers.

Arth. Lieutenant, lead your Souldiers to the Ships,
There let them have their Coats, at their arrival
They ſhall have pay: farewel, look to your charge.

Soul. I, we are now ſent away, and cannot ſo much as ſpeak with our Friends.

Oli. No man what ere you uſed a zutch a faſhion, thick you cannot take your leave of your vreens.

Arth. Fellow, no more, Lieutenant lead them off.

Soul. Well, if I have not my pay and my Cloaths,
I'll venture a running away, though I hang for't.

Arth. Away ſirrah, charm your tongue.
[Exeunt Souldiers.

Oli. Bin you a preſſer, Sir?

Arth. I am a Commander, Sir, under the King.

Oli. Sfoot man, and you be nere zutch a Commander, Shud a ſpoke with my vreens before I chid a gone, ſo ſhud.

Arth. Content your ſelf man, my Authority will ſtretch to preſs ſo good a man as you.

Oli. Preſs me? I devy, preſs Scoundrels, and thy Meſſels: preſs me, chee ſcorns thee i'faith: For ſeeſt thee, here's a worſhipful Knight knows, cham not to be preſſed by thee.

Enter Sir Lancelot, Weathercock, young Flowerdale, old Flowerdale, Luce, Frank.

Lanc. Sir Arthur, welcome to Lewſome, welcome by my troth, What's the matter man, why are you vext?

Oli. Why man he would preſs me.

Lanc. O fie, Sir Arthur, preſs him?
He is a man of reckoning.

Wea. I that he is, Sir Arthur, he hath the nobles,
The golden ruddocks he.

Arth. The fitter for the Wars:
And were he not in favour
With your Worſhips, he ſhould ſee,
That I have power to preſs ſo good as he.

Oli. Chill ſtand to the trial, ſo chill.

Flow. I marry ſhall he, preſs Cloth and Karſy,
White-Pot and drowſen Broth: tut, tut, he cannot.

Oli. Well, Sir, though you ſee vlouten Cloth and Karſy, chee a zeen zutch a Karſy-Coat wear out the Town ſick a zilken Jacket, as thick a one you wear.

Flow. Well ſed vlitan vlattan.

Oli. A and well ſed Cocknell, and Boe-Bell too: what doeſt think cham aveard of thy Zilken-Coat, no fer vere thee.

Lanc. Nay come no more, be all Lovers and Friends.

Wea. I 'tis beſt ſo, good Maſter Oliver.

Flow. Is your name Maſter Oliver, I pray you?

Oli. What tit and be tit, and grieve you.

Flow. No, but I'd gladly know if a man might not have a Fooliſh Plot out of Maſter Oliver to work upon.

Oli. Work thy Plots upon me, ſtand a ſide, work thy Fooliſh Plots upon me, chill ſo uſe thee, thou wert never ſo uſed ſince thy Dam bound thy Head, work upon me?

Flow. Let him come, let him come.

Oli. Zyrrha, Zyrrha, if it were not for ſhame, chee would a given thee zutch a whiſter poop under the Ear, chee would have made thee a vanged another at my feet: ſtand a ſide let me looſe, cham all of a vlaming Fire-brand, ſtand aſide.

Flow. Well I forbear you for your Friends ſake.

Oli. A vig for all my vreens, do'ſt thou tell me of my vreens?

Lanc. No more, good Maſter Oliver, no more, Sir Arthur. And Maiden, here in the ſight of all your Suters, every man of worth, I'll tell you whom I faineſt would prefer to the hard bargain of your Marriage Bed: ſhall I be plain among you, Gentlemen?

Arth. I, Sir, 'tis beſt.

Lanc. Then, Sir, firſt to you, I do confeſs you a moſt gallant Knight, a worthy Souldier, and honeſt man: but honeſty maintains a French-hood, goes very ſeldome in a Chain of Gold, keeps a ſmall train of Servants: hath few Friends: and for this wild Oats here, young Flowerdale, I will not judge, God can work Miracles, but he were better make a hundred new, than thee a thrifty and an honeſt one.

Wea. Believe me he hath hit you there, he hath touched you to the quick, that he hath.

Flow. Woodcock a my ſide, why, Maſter Weathercock, you know I am honeſt, howſoever trifles.

Wea. Now by my troth, I know no otherwiſe,
O, your old Mother was a Dame indeed:
Heaven hath her Soul, and my VVives too, I truſt:
And your good Father, honeſt Gentleman,
He is gone a Journey as I hear, far hence.

Flow. I God be praiſed, he is far enough,
He is gone a Pilgrimage to Paradiſe.
And left me to cut a Caper againſt care,
Luce look on me that am as light air.

Luce. I'faith I like not ſhadows, bubbles, broth,
I hate a light a love, as I hate death.

Lanc. Girl, hold thee there:
Look on this Devonſhire Lad:
Fat, fair, and lovely, both in purſe and perſon.

Oli. VVell, Sir, cham as the Lord hath made me, You know me well ivin, cha have three ſcore pack of Karſay, and Blackem Hall, and chief credit beſide, and my Fortunes may be ſo good as an others, zo it may.

Lance. 'Tis you I love, whatſoever others ſay.

Arth.

Arth. Thanks, faireſt.
Flow. VVhat, would'ſt thou have me quarrel with him?
Fath. Do but ſay he ſhall hear from you.
Lan. Yet, Gentlemen, howſoever I prefer this Devonſhire Suitor, I'll enforce no love, my Daughter ſhall have her liberty to chooſe whom ſhe likes beſt: In your Love-ſuit proceed. Not all of you but only one muſt ſpeed.
Wea. You have ſaid well: Indeed right well.

Enter Artichoak.

Arti. Miſtreſs, here's one would ſpeak with you, my fellow Daffidill hath him in the Cellar already he knows him, he met him at Croydon Fair.
Lance. O I remember, a little Man.
Arti. I, a very little Man.
Lance. And yet a proper Man.
Arti. A very proper, very little Man.
Lance. His name is Monſieur Civet.
Arti. The ſame, Sir.
Lance. Come, Gentlemen, if other Suitors come,
My fooliſh Daughter will be fitted too:
But Delia my Saint, no Man dare move,
[Exeunt all but Young Flowerdale and Oliver, and Old Flowerdale.
Flow. Hark you, Sir, a word.
Oli. What ha an you ſay to me now?
Flow. Ye ſhall hear from me, and that very ſhortly.
Oli. Is that all, vare thee well, chee vere thee not a vig. [Exit Oliver.
Flow. What if he ſhould come more? I am fairly dreſt.
Fath. I do not mean that you ſhall meet with him,
But preſently we'll go and draw a Will:
Where we'll ſet down Land, that we never ſaw,
And we will have it of ſo large a Sum,
Sir Lancelot ſhall intreat you take his Daughter:
This being formed, give it Maſter Weathercock,
And make Sir Lancelot's Daughter Heir of all:
And make him ſwear never to ſhew the Will
To any one, until that you be dead.
This done, the fooliſh Changling Weathercock,
Will ſtraight diſcourſe unto Sir Lancelot,
The Form and Tenor of your Teſtament,
Nor ſtand to pauſe of it, be rul'd by me:
What will enſue, that ſhall you quickly ſee.
Flow. Come let's about it; if that a Will, ſweet Kit,
Can get the Wench, I ſhall renown thy Wit. [Exeunt.

Enter Daffidil.

Daff. Miſtreſs, ſtill froward?
No kind looks unto your Daffidil, now by the gods.
Luce. Away my fooliſh Knave, let my hand go.
Daff. There's your hand, but this ſhall go with me:
My heart is thine, this is my True Loves Fee.
Luce. I'll have your Coat ſtript o're your Ears for this,
You ſawcy Raſcal.

Enter Lancelot and Weathercock.

Lance. How now, Maid, what is the news with you?
Luce. Your Man is ſomething ſawcy. [Exit Luce.
Lance. Go to, Sirrah, I'll talk with you anon.
Daff. Sir, I am a Man to be talked withal,
I am no Horſe, I trow:
I know my ſtrength then no more than ſo.
Wea. A by the matkins, good Sir Lancelot, I ſaw him the other day hold up the Bucklers, like an Hercules,
I faith God-a-mercy, Lad, I like thee well.
La. I, I, like him well, go Sirrah, fetch me a cup of wine,
That e're I part with Maſter Weathercock,
We may drink down our farewel in French Wine.
Wea. I thank you, Sir, I thank you, friendly Knight,
I'll come and viſit you, by the Mouſe-foot I will:
In the mean time, take heed of cutting Flowerdale.
He is a deſperate Dick, I warrant you.
Lance. He is, he is: Fill, Daffidil, fill me ſome wine,
Ha, what wears he on his arm?
My Daughter Luces Bracelet, I, 'tis the ſame:
Ha to you, Maſter Weathercock.
Wea. I thank you, Sir: Here, Daffidil, an honeſt fellow and a tall thou art: Well: I'll take my leave, good night, and I hope to have you and all your Daughters at my poor houſe, in good ſooth I muſt.
Lance. Thanks, Maſter Weathercock, I ſhall be bold to trouble you be ſure.
Wea. And welcom, heartily farewel. [Exit Weath.
Lance. Sirrah, I ſaw my Daughters wrong, and withal her Bracelet on your arm; off with it: and with it my Livery too: have I care to ſee my Daughter matched with men of worſhip, and are you grown ſo bold? Go, Sirrah, from my houſe, or I'll whip you hence.
Daff. I'll not be whipt, Sir, there's your Livery,
This is a Serving mans reward, what care I,
I have means to truſt to, I ſcorn ſervice I.
[Exit Daffidil.
Lance. I a luſty Knave, but I muſt let him go.
Our Servants muſt be taught what they ſhould know.

Enter Sir Arthur and Luce.

Luce. Sir, as I am a Maid, I do affect you above any Suitor that I have, although that Souldiers ſcarce know how to love.
Arth. I am a Souldier, and a Gentleman
Knows what belongs to VVar, what to a Lady:
What man offends me, that my Sword ſhall right:
What woman loves me, I am her faithful Knight.
Luce. I neither doubt your Valour nor your Love, but there be ſome that bear a Souldiers form, that ſwear by him they never think upon, go ſwaggering up and down from houſe to houſe, crying, God pays: And—— Arth. I faith, Lady, I'll deſcry you ſuch a man,
Of them there be many which you have ſpoke of,
That bear the name and ſhape of Souldiers,
Yet, God knows, very ſeldome ſaw the War:
That haunt your Taverns and your Ordinaries,
Your Ale-houſes ſometimes, for all a-like
To uphold the bruitiſh humour of their minds,
Being marked down, for the bondmen of deſpair:
Their mirth begins in wine, but ends in blood,
Their drink is clear, but their conceits are mud.
Luce. Yet theſe are great Gentlemen Souldiers.
Arth. No they are wretched ſlaves,
Whoſe deſperate lives doth bring them timeleſs graves.
Luce. Both for your ſelf, and for your form of life,
If I may chooſe, I'll be a Souldiers Wife.

Enter Sir Lancelot and Oliver.

Oli. And tut truſt to it, ſo then.
Lance. Aſſure your ſelf,
You ſhall be married with all ſpeed we may:
One day ſhall ſerve for Frances and for Luce.
Oli. Why che wood vain know the time, for providing VVedding Raiments.
Lance. VVhy no more but this, firſt get your aſſurance made touching my Daughters Joynture, that diſpatched, we will in two days make proviſion.
Ol. Why man, chil have the writings made by to morrow.
Lance. To morrow be it then, let's meet at the King's Head in Fiſh ſtreet.
Oli. No, fie man, no, let's meet at the Roſe at Temple-Bar, that will be nearer your Counſellor and mine.
Lance. At the Roſe be it then, the hour nine,
He that comes laſt forfeits a Pint of wine.
Oli. A Pint is no payment,
Let it be a whole Quart, or nothing.

Enter

Enter Artichoak.

Arti. Maſter, here is a man would ſpeak with Maſter Oliver, he comes from young Maſter Flowerdale.

Oli. Why chil ſpeak with him, chil ſpeak with him.

Lance. Nay, Son Oliver, I'le ſurely ſee,
What young Flowerdale hath ſent to you.
I pray God it be no quarrel.

Oli. Why man, if he quarrel with me, chil give him his hands full.

Fath. God ſave you, good Sir Lancelot.

Lance. Welcom, honeſt friend.

Enter old Flowerdale.

Fath. To you and yours my Maſter wiſheth health,
But unto you, Sir, this, and this he ſends:
There is the length, Sir, of his rapier,
And in that paper ſhall you know his mind.

Oli. Here, chil meet him my friend, chil meet him.

Lance. Meet him, you ſhall not meet the Ruffin, fie.

Oli. And I do not meet him, chil give you leave to call Me Cut, where is't, ſirrha? where is't? where is't?

Fath. The Letter ſhows both time and place,
And if you be a man, then keep your word.

Lan. Sir, he ſhall not keep his word, he ſhall not meet.

Fath. Why let him chooſe, he'll be the better known
For a baſe Raſcal, and reputed ſo.

Oli. Zirrah, zirrah: and 'twere not an old fellow, and ſent after an errant, chid give thee ſomething, but chud be no mony: But hold thee, for I ſee thou art ſomewhat teſtorn, hold thee, there's vorty ſhillings, bring thy Maſter a veeld, chil give the vorty more, look thou bring him, chil mall him tell him, chil mar his dancing treſſels, chil uſe him, he was nere ſo uſed ſince his dam bound his head, chil make him for capering any more chy vor thee.

Fath. You ſeem a man, ſtout and reſolute,
And I will ſo report, what ere befall.

Lance. And fall out ill, aſſure thy Maſter this,
I'le make him fly the Land, or uſe him worſe.

Fath. My Maſter, Sir, deſerves not this of you,
And that you'll ſhortly find.

Lan. Thy Maſter is an unthrift, you a knave,
And I'le attach you firſt, next clap him up:
Or have him bound unto his good behaviour.

Oliver. I wood you were a ſprite if you do him any harm for this: And you do, chil nere ſee you, nor any of yours, while chil have Eyes open: what do you think, chil be abaffelled up and down the town for a meſſel, and a ſcoundrel, no chy bor you: zirrha chil come, zay no more, chil come tell him.

Fath. Well, Sir, my Maſter deſerves not this of you,
And that you'll ſhortly find. [Exit.

Oli. No matter, he's an unthrift, I defie him.

Lan. No, gentle Son, let me know the place.

Oli. Now chye vor you.

Lan. Let me ſee the Note.

Oli. Nay, chil watch you for zutch a trick.
But if chee meet him, zo, if not, zo: chil make him know me, or chil know why I ſhall not, chil vare the worſe.

Lan. What will you then neglect my Daughters love?
Venture your ſtate and hers, for a looſe brawl?

Oli. Why man, chil not kill him, marry chil veze him too, and again; and zo God be with you vather.
What, man, we ſhall meet to morrow. [Exit.

Lan. Who would have thought he had bin ſo deſperate.
Come forth my honeſt Servant Artichoak,

Enter Artichoak.

Arti. Now, what's the matter? ſome brawl toward, I warrant you.

Lan. Go get me thy Sword bright ſcowred, thy buckler mended, O for that knave, that villain Daffidill would have done good ſervice. But to thee.

Arti. I, this is the tricks of all you Gentlemen, when you ſtand in need of a good fellow. O for that Daffidill, O where is he? but if you be angry, and it be but for the wagging of a ſtraw, then out a doors with the knave, turn the coat over his Ears. This is the humour of you all.

Lan. O for that knave, that luſty Daffidill.

Arti. Why there 'tis now: our years wages and our vails will ſcarce pay for broken Swords and bucklers that we uſe in our quarrels. But I'le not fight if Daffidill be a tother ſide, that's flat.

Lan. 'Tis no ſuch matter, man, get weapons ready, and be at London ere the break of day: watch near the lodging of the Devon-ſhire Youth, but be unſeen: and as he goes out, as he will go out, and that very early without doubt.

Arti. What, would you have me draw upon him,
As he goes in the ſtreet?

Lance. Not for a world, man, into the fields. For to the field he goes, there to meet the deſperate Flowerdale: Take thou the part of Oliver my Son, for he ſhall be my Son, and marry Luce: Do'ſt underſtand me, knave?

Arti. I, Sir, I do underſtand you, but my young Miſtris might be better provided in matching with my fellow Daffidill.

Lan. No more; Daffidill is a knave.
That Daffidill is a moſt notorious knave. [Exit.

Enter Weathercock.

Maſter Weathercock, you come in happy time, The deſperate Flowerdale hath writ a Challenge: And who think you muſt anſwer it, but the Devonſhire man, my Son Oliver.

Wea. Marry I am ſorry for it, good Sir Lancelot,
But if you will be rul'd by me, we'll ſtay the fury.

Lance. As how I pray?

Wea. Marry I'le tell you, by promiſing young Flowerdale the red lipped Luce.

Lan. I'le rather follow her unto her grave.

Wea. I, Sir Lancelot, I would have thought ſo too, but you and I have been deceived in him, come read this Will, or Deed, or what you call it, I know not: Come, come, your Spectacles I pray.

Lan. Nay I thank God, I ſee very well.

Wea. Marry God bleſs your Eyes, mine have been dim almoſt this thirty years.

Lance. Ha, what is this? what is this?

Wea. Nay there is true love indeed, he gave it to me but this very morn, and bad me keep it unſeen from any one, good youth, to ſee how men may be deceived.

Lan. Paſſion of me, what a wretch am I to hate this loving youth, he hath made me, together with my Luce he loves ſo dear, Executors of all his wealth.

Wea. All, all, good man, he hath given you all.

Lan. Three ſhips now in the Straits, and home ward bound,
Two Lordſhips of two hundred pound a year:
The one in Wales, the other in Gloſter-ſhire:
Debts and accounts are thirty thouſand pound,
Plate, Money, Jewels, ſixteen thouſand more,
Two houſen furniſhed well in Cole-man ſtreet:
Beſide whatſoever his Uncle leaves to him,
Being of great demeans and wealth at Peckham.

Wea. How like you this good Knight? How like you this?

Lan. I have done him wrong.
But now I'le make amends,
The Devonſhire man ſhall whiſtle for a wife,
He marry Luce! Luce ſhall be Flowerdale's.

Wea. Why that is friendly ſaid, let's ride to London and prevent their match, by promiſing your Daughter to that lovely Lad.

Lanc. We'll ride to London, or it ſhall not need,
We'll croſs to Dedford ſtrand, and take a Boat:
Where be theſe Knaves? what Artichoak, what Fop?

Enter Artichoak.

Art. Here be the very Knaves, but not the merry Knaves.

Lanc. Here take my Cloak, I'll have a walk to Dedford.

Art. Sir, we have been ſcouring of our Swords and Bucklers for your defence.

Lanc. Defence me no defence, let your Swords ruſt, I'll have no fighting: I, let blows alone, bid Delia ſee all things be in readineſs againſt the Wedding, we'll have two at once, and that will ſave charges, Maſter Weathercock.

Art. Well we will do it, Sir. [Exeunt.

Enter Civet, Frank, and Delia.

Civ. By my troth this is good luck, I thank God for this. In good ſooth I have even my hearts deſire: Siſter Delia, now I may boldly call you ſo, for your Father hath frank and freely given me his Daughter Franck.

Fran. I by my troth, Tom, thou haſt my good will too, for I thank God I longed for a Husband, and would I might never ſtir, for one his name was Tom.

Delia. Why, Siſter, now you have your wiſh.

Civ. You ſay very true, Siſter Delia, and I prethee call me nothing but Tom: and I'll call thee ſweet heart, and Frank: will it not do well, Siſter Delia?

Delia. It will do very well with both of you.

Fran. But Tom, muſt I go as I do now when I am married?

Civ. No Franck, I'll have thee go like a Citizen
In a garded Gown, and a French-Hood.

Fran. By my troth that will be excellent indeed.

Delia. Brother, maintain your Wife to your Eſtate,
Apparel you your ſelf like to your Father:
And let her go like to your ancient Mother,
He ſparing got his wealth, left it to you,
Brother take heed of Pride, ſome bids thrift adieu.

Civ. So as my Father and my Mother went, that's a Jeſt indeed, why ſhe went in a fringed Gown, a ſingle Ruff, and a white Cap. And my Father in a Mocado Coat, a pair of red Sattin Sleeves, and a Canvis back.

Delia. And yet his wealth was all as much as yours.

Civ. My Eſtate, my Eſtate, I thank God, is forty pound a year in good Leaſes and Tenements, beſides twenty mark a year at Cuckolds-Haven, and that comes to us all by inheritance.

Delia. That may indeed, 'tis very fitly plied,
I know not how it comes, but ſo it falls out
That thoſe whoſe Fathers have died wondrous rich,
And took no pleaſure but to gather wealth,
Thinking of little that they leave behind:
For them they hope, will be of their like mind.
But falls out contrary, forty years ſparing
Is ſcarce three ſeven years ſpending, never caring
What will enſue, when all their Coin is gone,
And all too late, then Thrift is thought upon:
Oft have I heard, that Pride and Riot kiſt,
And then repentance cries, for had I wiſt.

Civ. You ſay well, Siſter Delia, you ſay well: but I mean to live within my bounds: for look you, I have ſet down my reſt thus far, but to maintain my Wife in her French Hood, and her Coach, keep a couple of Geldings, and a brace of Gray-hounds, and this is all I'll do.

Delia. And you'll do this with forty pound a year?

Civ. I, and a better penny, Siſter.

Fran. Siſter, you forget that at Cuckolds Haven.

Civ. By my troth well remembred, Franck,
I'll give thee that to buy thee Pins.

Delia. Keep you the reſt for points, alas the day,
Fools ſhall have wealth, though all the World ſay nay:
Come, Brother, will you in, Dinner ſtays for us.

Civ. I, good Siſter, with all my heart.

Fran. I by my troth, Tom, for I have a good ſtomach.

Civ. And I the like, ſweet Franck, no Siſter,
Do not think I'll go beyond my bounds.

Delia. God grant you may not. [Exeunt.

Enter young Flowerdale and his Father, with ſoils in their hands.

Flow. Sirrah Kit, tarry thou there, I have ſpied Sir Lancelot, and old Weathercock coming this way, they are hard at hand, I will by no means be ſpoken withal.

Fath. I'll warrant you, go get you in.

Enter Lancelot and Weathercock.

Lanc. Now, my honeſt Friend, thou doſt belong to Maſter Flowerdale?

Fath. I do, Sir.

Lanc. Is he within, my good Fellow?

Fath. No, Sir, he is not within.

Lanc. I prethee if he be within, let me ſpeak with him.

Fath. Sir, to tell you true, my Maſter is within, but indeed would not be ſpoke withal: there be ſome terms that ſtands upon his reputation, therefore he will not admit any conference till he hath ſhook them off.

Lanc. I prithee tell him his very good Friend Sir Lancelot Spurcock intreats to ſpeak with him.

Fath. By my troth, Sir, if you come to take up the matter between my Maſter and the Devonſhire man, you do but beguile your hopes, and loſe your labour.

Lanc. Honeſt Friend, I have not any ſuch thing to him, I come to ſpeak with him about other matters.

Fath. For my Maſter, Sir, hath ſet down his reſolution, either to redeem his honour, or leave his life behind him.

Lanc. My Friend, I do not know any quarrel touching thy Maſter or any other perſon, my buſineſs is of a different nature to him, and I prithee ſo tell him.

Fath. For howſoever the Devonſhire man is,
My Maſters mind is bloudy: that's a round O,
And therefore, Sir, intreaties are but vain:

Lanc. I have no ſuch thing to him, I tell thee once again.

Fath. I will then ſo ſignifie to him. [Exit Father.

Lanc. A Sirrah, I ſee this matter is hotly carried.
But I'll labour to diſſwade him from it.

Enter Flowerdale.

Good morrow Maſter Flowerdale.

Flow. Good morrow, good Sir Lancelot,
Good morrow, Maſter Weathercock;
By my troth, Gentlemen, I have been reading over
Nick Machiavel, I find him
Good to be known, not to be followed:
A peſtilent humane Fellow, I have made
Certain Annotations of him ſuch as they be:
And how is't, Sir Lancelot? ha? how is't?
A mad World, men cannot live quiet in it.

Lanc. Maſter Flowerdale, I do underſtand there is ſome jar between the Devonſhire man and you.

Fath. They, Sir? they are good Friends as can be.

Flow. Who Maſter Oliver and I? as good Friends as can be.

Lanc. It is a kind of ſafety in you to deny it, and a generous ſilence, which too few are indued withal: But, Sir, ſuch a thing I hear, and I could wiſh it otherwiſe.

Flow. No ſuch thing, Sir Lancelot, a my reputation, as I am an honeſt man.

Lanc. Now I do believe you then, if you do
Ingage your reputation there is none.

Flow.

Flow. Nay I do not ingage my reputation there is not,
You shall not bind me to any condition of hardness:
But if there be any thing between us, then there is,
If there be not, then there is not: be, or be not, all is one.
Lance. I do perceive by this, that there is something between you, and I am very sorry for it.
Flow. You may be deceived, Sir Lancelot, the Italian
Hath a pretty saying, Questo? I have forgot it too,
'Tis out of my head, but in my translation
Ist hold thus, thou hast a friend, keep him; If a foe trip him.
Lan. Come, I do see by this there is somewhat between you,
And before God I could wish it otherwise.
Flow. Well what is between us, can hardly be altered:
Sir Lancelot, I am to ride forth to morrow,
That way which I must ride, no man must deny
Me the Sun, I would not by any particular man,
Be denied common and general passage. If any one
Saith, Flowerdale, thou passest not this way:
My answer is, I must either on or return,
But return is not my word, I must on:
If I cannot, then make my way, nature
Hath done the last for me, and there's the fine.
Lan. Mr. Flowerdale, every man hath one tongue,
And two Ears, nature in her building,
Is a most curious work-master.
Flow. That is as much as to say, a man should hear more
Than he should speak.
Lan. You say true, and indeed I have heard more,
Than at this time I will speak.
Flow. You say well,
Lan. Slanders are more common then troths Master Flowerdale, but proof is the rule for both.
Flow. You say true, what do you call him
Hath it there in his third canton?
Lan. I have heard you have been wild: I have believ'd it.
Flow. 'Twas fit, 'twas necessary.
Lance. But I have seen somewhat of late in you,
That hath confirmed in me an opinion of
Goodness toward you.
Flow. I'Faith Sir, I am sure I never did you harm:
Some good I have done, either to you or yours,
I am sure you know not, neither is it my will you should.
Lance. I, your Will, Sir.
Flow. I my will, Sir: 'sfoot do you know ought of my Will,
Begod and you do, Sir, I am abused.
Lan. Go, Mr. Flowerdale, what I know, I know:
And know you thus much out of my knowledge,
That I truly love you. For my Daughter,
She's yours. And if you like a marriage better
Than a brawl, all quirks of reputation set aside, go with me presently: And where you should fight a bloody battle, you shall be married to a lovely Lady.
Flow. Nay but, Sir Lancelot?
Lan. If you will not imbrace my offer, yet assure your self thus much, I will have order to hinder your encounter.
Flow. Nay but hear me, Sir Lancelot.
Lance. Nay stand not you upon imputative honor,
'Tis meerly unsound, unprofitable, and idle
Inferences: your business is to wed my Daughter, therefore give me your present word to do it, I'le go and provide the maid, therefore give me your present resolution, either now or never.
Flow. Will you so put me to it?
Lance. I a fore God, either take me now, or take me never.
Else what I thought should be our match, shall be our parting,
So fare you well for ever.
Flow. Stay: fall out, what may fall, my love
Is above all: I will come.
Lance. I expect you, and so fare you well.
[Exit Sir Lancelot.
Fath. Now, Sir, how shall we do for wedding apparel?
Flow. By the Mass that's true: now help Kit,
The marriage ended, we'll make amends for all.
Fath. Well, no more, prepare you for your Bride,
We will not want for cloaths, what so ere betide.
Flow. And thou shalt see, when once I have my Dower,
In mirth we'll spend,
Full many a merry hour:
As for this wench, I not regard a pin,
It is her gold must bring my pleasures in.
Fath. Is't possible, he hath his second living,
Forsaking God, himself to the Devil giving:
But that I knew his Mother firm and chast,
My heart would say, my head she had disgrac't:
Else would I swear, he never was my Son,
But her fair mind so foul a deed did shun.

Enter Uncle.

Unc. How, now, Brother, how do you find your Son?
Fath. O Brother, heedless as a libertine,
Even grown a Master in the School of Vice,
One that doth nothing, but invent deceit:
For all the day he humours up and down,
How he the next day might deceive his friend,
He thinks of nothing but the present time:
For one grost ready down, he'll pay a shilling,
But then the lender must needs stay for it.
When I was young, I had the scope of youth,
Both wild, and wanton, careless and desperate:
But such mad strains, as he's possest withal,
I thought it wonder for to dream upon.
Unc. I told you so, but you would not believe it.
Fath. Well I have found it, but one thing comforts me;
Brother, to morrow he's to be married
To beauteous Luce, Sir Lancelot Spurcock's Daughter.
Unc. Is't possible?
Fath. 'Tis true, and thus I mean to curb him,
This day, Brother, I will you shall arrest him:
If any thing will tame him, it must be that,
For he is rank in mischief, chained to a life,
That will increase his shame, and kill his wife.
Unc. What arrest him on his wedding day?
That were unchristian, and an unhumane part:
How many couple even for that very day,
Have purchast seven years sorrow afterward?
Forbear him then to day, do it to morrow,
And this day mingle not his joy with sorrow.
Fath. Brother, I'le have it done this very day,
And in the view of all, as he comes from Church:
Do but observe the course that he will take,
Upon my life he will forswear the debt:
And for we'll have the summ shall not be slight,
Say that he owes you near three thousand pound:
Good Brother, let it be done immediately.
Unc. Well, seeing you will have it so,
Brother I'le do't, and straight provide the Sheriff.
Fath. So Brother, by this means shall we perceive
What Sir Lancelot in this pinch will do:
And how his wife doth stand affected to him,
Her love will then be tried to the uttermost:
And all the rest of them. Brother, what I will do,
Shall harm him much, and much avail him too. [Exit.
Oli. Cham ashured thick be the place, that the scoundrel
Appointed to meet me, if a come, zo: if a come not, zo.
And che war avise, he would make a Coystrel an us,
Ched vese him, and che vang him in hand, che would
Hoyst him, and give it him too and again, zo chud:
Who been a there, Sir Arthur, chil stay aside.
Ar. I have dog'd the Devon-shire man into the field,
For fear of any harm that should befal him:
I had an inckling of that yesternight,
That Flowerdale and he should meet this morning:
Though of my Soul, Oliver fears him not,
Yet for I'd see fair play on either side,
Made me to come, to see their valours tri'd.
Good morrow to Master Oliver.

Oli. God and good morrow.
Arth. What, Maſter Oliver, are you angry?
Oli. What an it be, tyt an grieven you?
Arth. Not me at all, Sir, but I imagine
By your being here thus armed,
You ſtay for ſome that you ſhould fight withal.
Oli. Why and he do, che would not dezire you to take his part.
Arth. No by my troth, I think you need it not,
For he you look for, I think means not to come.
Oli. No, and che war aſhure of that, ched aveſe him in another place.

Enter Daffidil.

Daff. O, Sir Arthur, Maſter Oliver, aye me,
Your Love, and yours, and mine, ſweet Miſtreſs Luce
This morning is married to young Flowerdale.
Arth. Married to Flowerdale! 'tis impoſſible.
Oli. Married, man? che hope thou doſt but jeſt:
To make an a volowten merriment of it.
Daff. O 'tis too true, here comes his Uncle.

Enter Flowerdale, Sheriff, Officers.

Unc. Good morrow, Sir Arthur, good morrow, Maſter Oliver.
Oli. God and good morn, Mr. Flowerdale, Ipray tellen us, is your Scoundrel Kinſman married?
Ar. Mr. Oliver, call him what you will, but he is married
To Sir Lancelot's Daughter here.
Unc. Sir Arthur, unto her?
Oli. I, ha the old vellow zerved me thick a trick?
Why man, he was a promiſe, chil chud a had her,
Is a zitch a vox, chill look to his water che vor him.
Unc. The muſick plays; they are coming from the Church.
Sheriff, do your office: Fellows, ſtand ſtoutly to it.

Enter all to the Wedding.

Oli. God give you joy, as the old zaid Proverb is, and ſome zorrow among. You met us well, did you not?
Lance. Nay, be not angry, Sir, the fault is in me,
I have done all the wrong, kept him from coming to the field to you, as I might, Sir, for I am a Juſtice, and ſworn to keep the peace.
Wea. I marry is he, Sir, a very Juſtice, and ſworn to keep the peace, you muſt not diſturb the Weddings.
Lan. Nay, never frown nor ſtorm, Sir, if you do,
I'll have an order taken for you.
Oli. Well, well, chill be quiet.
Wea. Mr. Flowerdale, Sir Lancelot, look you, who here is? M. Flowerdale.
Lance. M. Flowerdale, welcome with all my heart.
Flow. Uncle, this is ſhe i'faith: Maſter Under-ſheriff, Arreſt me? At whoſe ſuit? Draw, Kit.
Unc. At my Suit, Sir.
Lan. Why, what's the matter, Mr. Flowerdale?
Unc. This is the matter, Sir, this unthrift here,
Hath cozend you, and hath had of me,
In ſeveral Summs three thouſand pound.
Flow. Why, Uncle, Uncle.
Unc. Couſin, Couſin, you have Uncled me,
And if you be not ſtaid, you'll prove
A Cozener unto all that know you.
Lance. Why, Sir, ſuppoſe he be to you in debt
Ten thouſand pound, his State to me appears,
To be at leaſt three thouſand by the year.
Unc. O, Sir, I was too late informed of that plot,
How that he went about to cozen you:
And form'd a Will, and ſent it to your good
Friend there, Maſter Weathercock, in which was Nothing true, but brags and lies.
Lanc. Ha, hath he not ſuch Lordſhips,
Lands, and Ships?
Unc. Not worth a Groat, not worth a Half-penny he.
Lance. I pray tell us true, be plain, young Flowerdale.
Flow. My Uncle here's mad,
And diſpoſed to do me wrong,
But here's my man an honeſt Fellow
By the Lord, and of good credit, knows all is true.
Fath. Not I, Sir, I am too old to lie, I rather know
You forg'd a Will, where every line you writ,
You ſtudied where to quote your Lands might lie.
Wea. And I prithee where be thy honeſt Friends?
Fath. Iſaith no where, Sir, for he hath none at all.
Wea. Benedicity, we are o're-reach'd, I believe.
Lanc. I am cozen'd, and my hopefull'ſt Child undone.
Flow. You are not cozen'd, nor is ſhe undone,
They ſlander me, by this Light, they ſlander me:
Look you, my Uncle here's an Uſurer, & would undo me,
But I'll ſtand in Law, do you but bail me, you ſhall do no more:
You Brother Civet, and Maſter Weathercock, do but
Bayl me, and let me have my marriage money
Paid me, and we'll ride down,
And there your own Eyes ſhall ſee,
How my poor Tenants there will welcome me.
You ſhall but bayl me, you ſhall do no more,
And you, greedy Gnat, their bayl will ſerve.
Unc. I, Sir, I'll ask no better bayl.
Lan. No, Sir, you ſhall not take my bayl, nor his,
Nor my Son Civets, I'll not be cheated, I,
Sheriff, take your priſoner, I'll not deal with him:
Let's Uncle make falſe Dice with his falſe bones,
I will not have to do with him:
Mock'd, gull'd, and wrong'd.
Come, Girl, though it be late, it falls out well,
Thou ſhalt not live with him in Beggars Hell.
Luc. He is my Husband, and high Heaven doth know,
With what unwillingneſs I went to Church,
But you enforced me, you compelled me to it:
The holy Church-man pronounc'd theſe words but now,
I muſt not leave my Husband in diſtreſs:
Now I muſt comfort him, not go with you.
Lan. Comfort a Cozener? On my curſe forſake him?
Lu. This day you cauſed me on your curſe to take him:
Do not, I pray, my grieved Soul oppreſs,
God knows my heart doth bleed at his diſtreſs.
Lan. O Maſter Weathercock, I muſt confeſs I forc'd her to this match. Led with opinion his falſe Will was true.
Wea. Ah, he hath over-reached me too.
Lan. She might have liv'd like Delia, in a happy Virgins ſtate.
Delia. Father, be patient, ſorrow comes too late.
Lance. And on her Knees ſhe begg'd and did intreat,
If ſhe muſt needs taſte a ſad marriage life,
She crav'd to be Sir Arthur Greenſhield's Wife.
Arth. You have done her and me the greater wrong.
Lanc. O take her yet.
Arth. Not I.
Lanc. Or, Maſter Oliver, accept my Child, and half my wealth is yours.
Oli. No, Sir, chill break no Laws.
Luce. Never fear, ſhe will not trouble you.
Delia. Yet, Siſter, in this paſſion do not run headlong to confuſion. You may affect him, though not follow him.
Frank. Do, Siſter, hang him, let him go.
Wea. Do faith, Miſtreſs Luce, leave him.
Luce. You are three groſs fools, let me alone,
I ſwear, I'll live with him in all moan.
Oli. But an he have his legs at liberty,
Cham aveard he will never live with you.
Arth. I, but he is now in Huckſters handling for running away.
Lanc. Huſwife, you hear how you and I am wrong'd,

And if you will redreſs it yet you may:
But if you ſtand on terms to follow him,
Never come near my ſight, nor look on me,
Call me not Father, look not for a Groat,
For all the Portion I will this day give Unto thy Siſter Frances.

Fran. How ſay you to that, Tom?
I ſhall have a good deal,
Beſides I'll be a good Wife, and a good Wife
Is a good thing I can tell.

Civ. Peace, Franck, I would be ſorry to ſee thy Siſter
Caſt away, as I am a Gentleman.

Lanc. What, are you yet reſolved?

Luce. Yes, I am reſolved.

Lanc. Come then away, or now, or never come.

Luce. This way I turn, go you unto your Feaſt,
And I to weep, that am with grief oppreſt.

Lanc. For ever fly my ſight: come, Gentlemen,
Let's in, I'll help you to far better Wives than her.
Delia, upon my bleſſing talk not to her,
Baſe Baggage, in ſuch haſte to Beggery?

Unc. Sheriff, take your Priſoner to your charge.

Flow. Uncle, Be-gad you have us'd me very hardly,
By my troth, upon my Wedding-Day.

Exeunt all: Young Flowerdale, his Father, Uncle, Sheriff, and Officers.

Luce. O, Maſter Flowerdale, but hear me ſpeak,
Stay but a little while, good Maſter Sheriff,
If not for him, for my ſake pitty him:
Good Sir, ſtop not your Ears at my complaint,
My Voice grows weak, for Womens words are faint.

Flow. Look you, ſhe kneels to you.

Unc. Fair Maid, for you, I love you with my heart,
And grieve, ſweet Soul, thy Fortune is ſo bad,
That thou ſhould'ſt match with ſuch a graceleſs Youth,
Go to thy Father, think not upon him,
Whom Hell hath mark'd to be the Son of ſhame.

Luce. Impute his wildneſs, Sir, unto his youth,
And think that now is the time he doth repent:
Alas, what good or gain can you receive,
To impriſon him that nothing hath to pay?
And where nought is, the King doth loſe his due,
O pitty him as God ſhall pitty you.

Unc. Lady, I know his humours all too well,
And nothing in the World can do him good,
But miſery it ſelf to chain him with.

Luce. Say that your Debts were paid, then is he free?

Unc. I, Virgin, that being anſwered, I have done.
But to him that is all as impoſſible,
As I to ſcale the high Piramidies.
Sheriff, take your Priſoner, Maiden, fare thee well.

Luce. O go not yet, good Maſter Flowerdale:
Take my word for the Debt, my word, my Bond.

Flow. I, by God, Uncle, and my Bond too.

Luce. Alas, I ne're ought nothing but I paid it;
And I can work, alas, he can do nothing:
I have ſome Friends perhaps will pitty me,
His chiefeſt Friends do ſeek his miſery.
All that I can, or beg, get, or receive,
Shall be for you: O do not turn away:
Me thinks within a Face ſo reverent,
So well experienced in this tottering World,
Should have ſome feeling of a Maidens grief:
For my ſake, his Fathers and your Brothers ſake,
I, for your Souls ſake that doth hope for joy,
Pitty my ſtate, do not two Souls deſtroy.

Unc. Fair Maid, ſtand up, not in regard of him,
But in pitty of thy hapleſs choice,
I do releaſe him: Maſter Sheriff, I thank you:
And Officers, there is for you to drink.
Here, Maid, take this money, there is a hundred Angels;
And for I will be ſure he ſhall not have it,
Here, Keſter, take it you, and uſe it ſparingly,
But let not her have any want at all.
Dry your Eyes, Niece, do not too much lament
For him, whoſe Life hath been in riot ſpent:
If well he uſeth thee, he gets him Friends,
If ill, a ſhameful end on him depends. [Exit Uncle.

Flow. A Plague go with you for an old Fornicator:
Come, Kit, the money, come, honeſt Kit.

Fath. Nay by my Faith, Sir, you ſhall pardon me.

Flow. And why, Sir, pardon you? give me the money, you old Raſcal, or I ſhall make you.

Luce. Pray hold your hands, give it him honeſt Friend.

Fath. If you be ſo content, withal my heart.

Flow. Content, Sir, 'sblood ſhe ſhall be content
Whether ſhe will or no. A rattle-baby come to follow me?
Go, get you gone to the greaſy chuff your Father,
Bring me your Dowry, or never look on me.

Fath. Sir, ſhe hath forſook her Father, and all her Friends for you.

Flow. Hang thee, her Friends and Father altogether.

Fath. Yet part with ſomething to provide her Lodging.

Flow. Yes, I mean to part with her and you, but if I part with one Angel, hang me at a Poſt. I'll rather throw them at a caſt of Dice, as I have done a thouſand of their fellows.

Fath. Nay then I will be plain, degenerate Boy,
Thou hadſt a Father would have been aſhamed.

Flow. My Father was an Aſs, an old Aſs.

Fath. Thy Father? proud licentious Villain:
What are you at your foils? I'll foil with you.

Luce. Good Sir, forbear him.

Fath. Did not this whining Woman hang on me,
I'd teach thee what it was to abuſe thy Father:
Go hang, beg, ſtarve, Dice, Game, that when all is gone,
Thou may'ſt after deſpair and hang thy ſelf.

Luce. O do not Curſe him.

Fath. I do not Curſe him, and to pray for him were vain,
It grieves me that he bears his Fathers name.

Flow. Well, you old Raſcal, I ſhall meet with you:
Sirrah, get you gone, I will not ſtrip the Livery
Over your Ears, becauſe you paid for it:
But do not uſe my name, Sirrah,
Do you hear? Look you do not
Uſe my name, you were beſt.

Fath. Pay me the twenty pound then that I lent you,
Or give me ſecurity when I may have it.

Flow. I'll pay thee not a penny,
And for ſecurity, I'll give thee none.
Minckins, look you do not follow me, look you do not:
If you do, Beggar, I ſhall ſlit your noſe.

Luce. Alas, what ſhall I do?

Flow. Why turn Whore, that's a good trade,
And ſo perhaps I'll ſee thee now and then.
[Exit Flowerdale.

Luce. Alas-the-day that ever I was born.

Fath. Sweet Miſtreſs, do not weep, I'll ſtick to you.

Luce. Alas, my Friend, I know not what to do,
My Father and my Friends, they have deſpiſed me:
And I a wretched Maid, thus caſt away,
Knows neither where to go, nor what to ſay.

Fath. It grieves me at the Soul, to ſee her tears
Thus ſtain the Crimſon Roſes of her Cheeks:
Lady, take comfort, do not mourn in vain,
I have a little living in this Town,
The which I think comes to a hundred pound,
All that and more ſhall be at your diſpoſe;
I'll ſtrait go help you to ſome ſtrange diſguiſe,
And place you in a ſervice in this Town:
Where you ſhall know all, yet your ſelf unknown:
Come grieve no more, where no help can be had,
Weep not for him, that is more worſe than bad.

Luce. I thank you, Sir.

Enter Sir Lancelot, Maſter Weathercock and them.

Oli. Well, cha a bin zerved many a ſluttiſh trick,
But ſuch a lerripoop as thick yeh was ne're a ſarved.
Lance. Son Civet, Daughter Frances, bear with me,
You ſee how I am preſſed down with inward grief,
About that luckleſs Girl, your Siſter Luce.
But 'tis faln out with me, as with many families beſide,
They are moſt unhappy, that are moſt beloved.
Civ. Father, 'tis ſo, 'tis even ſaln our ſo,
But what remedy? ſet hand to your heart, and let it paſs,
Here is your Daughter Frances and I, and we'll not ſay,
We'll bring forth as witty Children, but as pretty
Children as ever ſhe was: tho ſhe had the prick
And praiſe for a pretty wench: But Father, done is
The mouſe, you'll come?
Lance. I, Son Civet, I'le come.
Civ. And you, Maſter Oliver?
Oli. I, for che a vext out this veaſt, chil ſee if a gan
Make a better veaſt there.
Civ. And you, Sir Arthur?
Ar. I, Sir, although my heart be full,
I'le be a partner at your wedding feaſt.
Civ. And welcom all indeed, and welcom, come, Franck, are you ready?
Fran. Jeſhue, how haſty theſe Husbands are, I pray, Father, pray to God to bleſs me.
Lance. God bleſs thee, and I do: God make thee wiſe, ſend you both joy, I wiſh it with wet Eyes.
Fran. But, Father, ſhall not my Siſter Delia go along with us? She is excellent good at Cookery, and ſuch things.
Lance. Yes marry ſhall ſhe: Delia, make you ready.
Deli. I am ready, Sir, I will firſt go to Greenwich,
From thence to my Couſin Cheſterfield, and ſo to London.
Civ. It ſhall ſuffice, good Siſter Delia, it ſhall ſuffice, but fail us not, good Siſter, give order to Cooks, and others, for I would not have my ſweet Frank to ſoil her fingers.
Fran. No by my troth not I, a Gentlewoman, and a married Gentlewoman too, to be companion to Cooks, And Kitchin-boys, not I, i'Faith, I ſcorn that.
Civ. Why, I do not mean thou ſhalt, ſweet heart, thou ſeeſt I do not go about it: well, farewel too: You Gods pitty Mr. Weathercock, we ſhall have your company too?
Wea. Withal my heart, for I love good cheer.
Civ. Well, God be with you all, come, Frank.
Fra. God be with you, Father, God be with you, Sir Arthur, Maſter Oliver, and Maſter Weathercock, Siſter, God be with you all: God be with you, Father, God be with you every one.
Wea. Why, how now, Sir Arthur, all a mort, Maſter Oliver, how now, man?
Cheerly, Sir Lancelot, and merrily ſay,
Who can hold that will away.
Lance. I, ſhe is gone indeed, poor Girl, undone,
But when theſe be ſelf-willed, Children muſt ſmart.
Ar. But, Sir, that ſhe is wronged, you are the chiefeſt cauſe, therefore 'tis reaſon you redreſs her wrong.
Wea. Indeed you muſt, Sir Lancelot, you muſt.
Lance. Muſt? who can compel me, Mr. Weathercock? I hope I may do what I liſt.
Wea. I grant you may, you may do what you liſt.
Oli. Nay, but and you be well eviſen, it were not good,
By this vrampolneſs, and vrowardneſs, to caſt away
As prety a dowſſabel, as am chould chance to ſee
In a ſummers day: chil tell you what chall do,
Chil go ſpy up and down the Town, and ſee if I
Can hear any tale or tidings of her,
And take her away from thick a meſſel, vor cham
Aſhured, heel but bring her to the ſpoil,
And ſo var you well, we ſhall meet at your Son Civets.
Lance. I thank you, Sir, I take it very kindly.
Arti. To find her out, I'le ſpend my deareſt blood.
So well I loved her, to affect her good. [Exeunt both.
Lance. O Maſter Weathercock,
What hap had I, to force my Daughter.
From Maſter Oliver, and this good Knight,
To one that hath no goodneſs in his thought?
Wea. Ill luck, but what remedy?
Lance. Yes, I have almoſt deviſed a remedy,
Young Flowerdale is ſhure a Priſoner.
Wea. Shure, nothing more ſhure.
Lance. And yet perhaps his Unkle hath releaſed him.
Wea. It may be very like, no doubt he hath.
Lance. Well if he be in Priſon, I'le have warrants
To tache my Daughter till the law be tried,
For I will ſhue him upon cozenage.
Wea. Marry may you, and overthrow him too.
Lance. Nay that's not ſo; I may chance be ſcoft,
And ſentence paſt with him.
Wea. Believe me, ſo he may, therefore take heed.
Lance. Well howſoever, yet I will have warrants,
In Priſon, or at Liberty, all's one:
You will help to ſerve them, Maſter Weathercock? [Exeunt omnes.

Enter Flowerdale.

Flo. A plague of the Devil, the Devil take the dice.
The dice, and the Devil, and his dam go together:
Of all my hundred golden angels,
I have not left me one denier:
A pox of come a five, what ſhall I do?
I can borrow no more of my credit:
There's not any of my acquaintance, man, nor boy,
But I have borrowed more or leſs of:
I would I knew where to take a good purſe,
And go clear away, by this light I'le venture for it,
Gods lid my Siſter Delia,
I'le rob her, by this hand.

Enter Delia and Artichoak.

Delia. I prethee, Artichoak, go not ſo faſt,
The weather is hot, and I am ſomething weary.
Art. Nay I warrant you, miſtreſs Delia, I'le not tire you
With leading, we'll go an extream moderate pace.
Flow. Stand, deliver your purſe.
Art. O Lord, thieves, thieves. [Exit Artichoak.
Flow. Come, come, your purſe, Lady, your purſe.
Delia. That voice I have heard often before this time,
What, Brother Flowerdale become a thief?
Flow. I, a plague on't, I thank your Father;
But Siſter, come, your money, come:
What the world muſt find me, I am born to live,
'Tis not a ſin to ſteal, when none will give.
Delia. O God, is all grace baniſht from thy heart,
Think of the ſhame that doth attend this fact.
Flow. Shame me no ſhames, come give me your purſe,
I'le bind you, Siſter, leſt I fare the worſe.
Delia. No, bind me not, hold, there is all I have,
And would that money would redeem thy ſhame.

Enter Oliver, Sir Arthur, and Artichoak.

Arti. Thieves, thieves, thieves.
Oli. Thieves, where man? why how now, miſtreſs Delia, Ha you a liked to been a robbed?
Delia. No, Maſter Oliver, 'tis Maſter Flowerdale, he did but jeſt with me.
Oliv. How, Flowerdale, that ſcoundrel? ſirrah, you meten us well, vang the that.
Flow. Well, Sir, I'le not meddle with you, becauſe I have a charge.

Delia.

Delia. Here Brother Flowerdale, I'le lend you this ſame money.

Flow. I thank you, Siſter.

Oliv. I wad you were yſplit, and you let the mezel have a penny; but ſince you cannot keep it, chil keep it my ſelf.

Art. 'Tis pity to relieve him in this ſort,
Who makes a triumphant life his daily ſport.

Delia. Brother, you ſee how all men cenſure you,
Farewel, and I pray God amend your life.

Oliv. Come, chil bring you along, and you ſafe enough
From twenty ſuch ſcoundrells as thick an one is,
Farewel and be hanged, zyrrah, as I think ſo thou
Wilt be ſhortly, come, Sir Arthur.

[Exeunt all but Flowerdale.

Flow. A plague go with you for a karſie raſcal:
This Devonſhire man I think is made all of Pork,
His hands made only for to heave up packs:
His heart as fat and big as his face,
As differing far from all brave gallant minds,
As I to ſerve the Hoggs, and drink with Hinds,
As I am very near now: well what remedy,
When money, means, and friends, do grow ſo ſmall,
Then farewel life, and there's an end of all.

[Exeunt omnes.

Enter Father, Luce like a Dutch Frow, Civet, and his wife Miſtreſs Frances.

Civ. By my troth God a mercy for this, good Chriſtopher, I thank thee for my maid, like her very well, how doſt thou like her, Frances?

Fran. In good ſadneſs, Tom, very well, excellent well, She ſpeaks ſo prettily, I pray what's your name?

Luce. My name, forſooth, be called Tanikin.

Fran. By my troth a fine name: O Tanikin, you are excellent for dreſſing ones head a new faſhion.

Luce. Me ſall do every ting about da head.

Civ. What Country woman is ſhe, Keſter?

Fath. A Dutch woman, Sir.

Civ. Why then ſhe is outlandiſh, is ſhe not?

Fath. I, Sir, ſhe is.

Fran. O then thou canſt tell how to help me to cheeks and Ears?

Luce. Yes, miſtreſs, very vell.

Fath. Cheeks and ears, why, miſtreſs Frances, want you cheeks and ears? methinks you have very fair ones.

Fran. Thou art a Fool inded, Tom, thou knoweſt what I mean.

Civ. I, I, Keſter, 'tis ſuch as they wear a their heads, I prethee, Kit, have her in, and ſhew her my houſe.

Fath. I will, Sir, come Tanikin.

Fran. O Tom, you have not buſſed me to day, Tom.

Civ. No Frances, we muſt not kiſs afore folks,
God ſave my Franck,

Enter Delia, and Artichoak.

See yonder, my Siſter Delia is come, welcome, good Siſter.

Fran. Welcome, good Siſter, how do you like the tire of my head?

Delia. Very well, Siſter.

Civ. I am glad you're come, Siſter Delia, to give order for Supper, they will be here ſoon.

Arti. I, but if good luck had not ſerved, ſhe had Not been here now, filching Flowerdale had like
To pepper'd us, but for maſter Oliver, we had been robbed.

Delia. Peace, ſirrah, no more.

Fath. Robbed! by whom?

Arti. Marry by none but by Flowerdale, he is turned thief.

Civ. By my faith, but that is not well, but God be praiſed For your eſcape, will you draw near, Siſter?

Fath. Sirrah, come hither, would Flowerdale, he that was my maſter, a robbed you, I prethee tell me true?

Arti. Yes i'Faith, even that Flowerdale, that was thy maſter.

Fath. Hold thee, there is a French Crown, and ſpeak no more of this.

Arti. Not I, not a word, now do I ſmell knavery:
In every purſe Flowerdale takes, he is half:
And gives me this to keep counſel, not a word I.

Fath. Why God a Mercy.

Fran. Siſter, look here, I have a new Dutch maid,
And ſhe ſpeaks ſo fine, it would do your heart good.

Civ. How do you like her, Siſter?

Del. I like your maid well.

Civ. Well, dear Siſter, will you draw near, and give directions for ſupper, gueſts will be here preſently.

Del. Yes, Brother, lead the way, I'le follow you.

[Exeunt all but Delia and Luce.

Hark you, Dutch Frow, a word.

Luce. Vat is your vill wit me?

Del. Siſter Luce, 'tis not your broken language,
Nor this ſame habit, can diſguiſe your face
From I that know you, pray tell me, what means this?

Luce. Siſter, I ſee you know me, yet be ſecret:
This borrowed ſhape that I have tane upon me,
Is but to keep my ſelf a ſpace unknown,
Both from my Father, and my neareſt friends:
Until I ſee how time will bring to paſs,
The deſperate courſe of Maſter Flowerdale.

Del. O he is worſe than bad, I prithee leave him,
And ſet not once thy heart to think on him.

Luce. Do not perſwade me once to ſuch a thought,
Imagine yet, that he is worſe than nought:
Yet one lovers time may all that ill undo,
That all his former life did run into.
Therefore, kind Siſter, do not diſcloſe my eſtate,
If e're his heart doth turn, 'tis ne're too late.

Del. Well, ſeeing no counſel can remove your mind,
I'le not diſcloſe you, that art wilful blind.

Luce. Delia. I thank you, I now muſt pleaſe her Eyes,
My Siſter Frances, neither fair nor wiſe. [Exeunt.

Enter Flowerdale Solus.

Flow. On goes he that knows no end of his journey,
I have paſſed the very utmoſt bounds of ſhifting,
I have no courſe now but to hang my ſelf:
I have lived ſince yeſterday two a clock, of a
Spice-cake I had at a burial: and for drink,
I got it at an Ale-houſe among Porters, ſuch as
Will bear out a man, if he have no mony indeed.
I mean out of their companies, for they are men
Of good carriage. Who comes here?
The two Cony-catchers, that won all my mony of me.
I'le try if they'll lend me any.

Enter Dick and Rafe.

What Mr. Richard, how do you?
How do'ſt thou, Rafe? By God, gentlemen, the world
Grows bare with me, will you do as much as lend
Me an Angel between you both, you know you
Won a hundred of me the other day.

Rafe. How, an Angel? God damn us if we loſt not every Penny within an hour after thou wert gone.

Flo. I prithee lend me ſo much as will pay for my ſupper, I'le pay you again, as I am a Gentleman.

Rafe. I'Faith, we have not a farthing, not a mite:
I wonder at it, Mr. Flowerdale,
You will ſo careleſly undo your ſelf:
Why you will loſe more money in an hour,
Than any honeſt man ſpends in a year;
For ſhame betake you to ſome honeſt Trade,
And live not thus ſo like a Vagabond. [Exeunt both.

Flow. A Vagabond indeed, more villains you:

They

They gave me counſel that firſt cozen'd me:
Thoſe Devils firſt brought me to this I am,
And being thus, the firſt that do me wrong.
Well, yet I have one Friend left in ſtore.
Not far from hence there dwells a Cokatrice,
One that I firſt put in a Sattin gown,
And not a tooth that dwells within her head,
But ſtands me at the leaſt in twenty pound:
Her will I viſit now my Coyn is gone,
And as I take it here dwells the Gentlewoman.
What ho, is Miſtris Apricock within?

Enter Ruffin.

Ruff. What ſawcy Raſcal is that which knocks ſo bold,
O, is it you, old ſpend-thrift? are you here?
One that is turned Cozener about the town:
My Miſtris ſaw you, and ſends this word by me,
Either be packing quickly from the door,
Or you ſhall have ſuch a greeting ſent you ſtraight,
As you will little like on, you had beſt be gone.
Flow. Why ſo, this is as it ſhould be, being poor,
Thus art thou ſerved by a vile painted whore.
Well, ſince thy damned crew do ſo abuſe thee,
I'le try of honeſt men, how they will uſe me.

Enter an ancient Citizen.

Sir, I beſeech you to take compaſſion of a man;
One whoſe Fortunes have been better than at this inſtant they ſeem to be: but if I might crave of you ſo much little portion, as would bring me to my friends, I would reſt thankful, until I had requited ſo great a curteſie.
Citiz. Fie, fie, young man, this courſe is very bad,
Too many ſuch have we about this City;
Yet for I have not ſeen you in this ſort,
Nor noted you to be a common beggar,
Hold, there's an Angel to bear your charges
Down, go to your friends, do not on this depend,
Such bad beginnings oft have worſer ends. [Exit Cit.
Flow. Worſer ends: nay, if it fall out
No worſe than in old Angels I care not,
Nay, now I have had ſuch a fortunate beginning,
I'le not let a ſix-penny purſe eſcape me:
By the Maſs, here comes another.

Enter a Citizens wife with a Torch before her.

God bleſs you, fair Miſtris.
Now would it pleaſe you, Gentlewoman, to look into the wants of a poor Gentleman, a younger Brother, I doubt not but God will treble reſtore it back again, one that never before this time demanded penny, half-penny, nor farthing.
Citi. Wife. Stay, Alexander, now by my troth a very proper man, and 'tis great pity: hold, my friend, there's all the money I have about me, a couple a ſhillings, and God bleſs thee.
Flow. Now God thank you, ſweet Lady: if you have any Friend, or Garden-houſe, where you may imploy a poor Gentleman as your friend, I am yours to command in all ſecret ſervice.
Citi. Wife. I thank you, good friend, I prithee let me ſee that again I gave thee, there is one of them a braſs ſhilling, give me them, and here is half a Crown in gold.
[He gives it her.
Now out upon thee, Raſcal, ſecret ſervice: what doſt thou make of me? it were a good deed to have thee whipt: now I have my money again, I'le ſee thee hanged before I give thee a penny: ſecret ſervice: on, good Alexander.
[Exeunt both.
Flow. This is villainous luck, I perceive diſhoneſty
Will not thrive: here comes more, God forgive me,
Sir Arthur, and Mr. Oliver, aforegod, I'le ſpeak to them,
God ſave you, Sir Arthur: God ſave you, Mr. Oliver.
Oli. Been you there, zirrah, come will you taken your ſelf to your tools, Coyſtrel?
Flow. Nay, Mr. Oliver, I'le not fight with you,
Alas, Sir, you know it was not my doings,
It was only a Plot to get Sir Lancelot's Daughter:
By God I never meant you harm.
Oli. And whore is the Gentlewoman thy wife, Mezel?
Whore is ſhe, Zirrah, ha?
Flow. By my troth, Mr. Oliver, ſick, very ſick;
And God is my Judge, I know not what means to make for her, good Gentlewoman.
Oli. Tell me true, is ſhe ſick? tell me true itch 'viſe thee,
Flow. Yes Faith, I tell you true: Mr. Oliver, if you would do me the ſmall kindneſs, but to lend me forty ſhillings: So God help me, I will pay you ſo ſoon as my ability ſhall make me able, as I am a Gentleman.
Oli. Well thou zaiſt thy wife is zick: hold, there's vorty ſhillings, give it to thy wife, look thou give it her, or I ſhall zo veze thee, thou wert not zo vezed this zeven year, look to it.
Arth. I'faith, Mr. Oliver, it is in vain
To give to him that never thinks of her.
Oli. Well, would che could yvind it.
Flow. I tell you true, Sir Arthur, as I am a gentleman.
Oli. Well, farewel zirrah: come, Sir Arthur.
[Exeunt both.
Flow. By the Lord, this is excellent.
Five golden Angels compaſt in an hour,
If this trade hold, I'le never ſeek a new.
Welcom, ſweet gold, and beggery adieu.

Enter Uncle and Father.

Unc. See, Keſter, if you can find the Houſe.
Flow. Who's here, my Uncle, and my man Keſter?
By the Maſs 'tis they.
How do you, Uncle, how do'ſt thou, Keſter?
By my troth, Uncle, you muſt needs lend
Me ſome money, the poor Gentlewoman
My wife, ſo God help me, is very ſick,
I was rob'd of the hundred Angels
You gave me, they are gone.
Unc. I, they are gone indeed, come, Keſter, away.
Flow. Nay, Uncle, do you hear? good Uncle.
Unc. Out Hypocrite, I will not hear thee ſpeak,
Come, leave him, Keſter.
Flow. Keſter, honeſt Keſter.
Fath. Sir, I have nought to ſay to you,
Open the door to my kin, thou had'ſt beſt
Lockt faſt, for there's a falſe knave without.
Flow. You are an old lying Raſcal,
So you are. [Exeunt both.

Enter Luce.

Luce. Vat is de matter, Vat be you, yonker?
Flow. By this light a Dutch Frow, they ſay they are call'd kind, by this light I'le try her.
Luce. Vat be you, yonker, why do you not ſpeak?
Flow. By my troth, ſweet heart, a poor Gentleman that would deſire of you, if it ſtand with your liking, the bounty of your purſe.

Enter Father.

Luce. O here God, ſo young an Armine.
Flow. Armine, ſweet-heart, I know not what you mean by that, but I am almoſt a beggar.
Luce. Are you not a married man, vere been your Vife?
Here is all I have, take dis.
Flow. What gold, young Frow? this is brave.
Fath. If he have any grace, he'll now repent.
Luce. Why ſpeak you not, vere be your vife?

Flow.

Flow. Dead, dead, ſhe's dead, 'tis ſhe hath undone me? Spent me all I had, and kept Raſcals under my Noſe to brave me.

Luce. Did you uſe her vell?

Flow. Uſe her, there's never a Gentlewoman in England could be better uſed than I did her; I could but Coach her; her Diet ſtood me in forty pound a month, but ſhe is dead and in her Grave, my cares are buried.

Luce. Indeed dat vas not ſcone.

Fath. He is turned more Devil than he was before.

Flow. Thou do'ſt belong to Maſter Civet here, do'ſt thou not?

Luce. Yes, me do.

Flow. Why there's it, there's not a handful of Plate
But belongs to me, God's my Judge:
If I had ſuch a Wench as thou art,
There's never a man in England would make more
Of her, than I would do, ſo ſhe had any ſtock.
[They call within.
O why Tanikin.

Luce. Stay, one doth call, I ſhall come by and by again.

Flow. By this hand, this Dutch wench is in love with me,
Were it not admiral to make her ſteal
All Civet's Plate, and run away.

Fath. 'Twere beaſtly. O Maſter Flowerdale,
Have you no fear of God, nor Conſcience:
What do you mean, by this vile courſe you take?

Flow. What do I mean? why, to live, that I mean.

Fath. To live in this ſort, fie upon the courſe,
Your Life doth ſhow, you are a very Coward.

Flow. A Coward, I pray in what?

Fath. Why you will borrow ſix-pence of a Boy.

Flow. 'S nails, is there ſuch a Cowardice in that? I dare borrow it of a Man, I, and of the talleſt Man in England, if he will lend it me: Let me borrow it how I can, and let them come by it how they dare. And it is well known, I might ride out a hundred times if I would, ſo I might.

Fath. It was not want of will, but Cowardice,
There is none that lends to you, but know they gain:
And what is that but only ſtealth in you?
Delia might hang you now, did not her heart
Take pitty of you for her Siſters ſake.
Go get you hence, leſt lingering here you ſtay,
You fall into their hands you look not for.

Flow. I'll tarry here, till the Dutch Frow
Comes, if all the Devils in Hell were here. [Exit Father.

Enter Sir Lancelot, Maſter Weathercock, and Artichoak.

Lanc. Where is the Door? are we not paſt it, Artichoak?

Art. By th' Maſs here's one,
I'll ask him, do you hear, Sir?
What, are you ſo proud? do you hear, which is the way
To Maſter Civet's Houſe? what, will you not ſpeak?
O me, this is filching Flowerdale.

Lanc. O wonderful, is this lewd Villain here?
O you cheating Rogue, you Cut-Purſe, Cony-Catcher,
What Ditch, you Villain, is my Daughters Grave?
A cozening Raſcal, that muſt make a Will,
Take on him that ſtrict habit, very that:
When he ſhould turn to Angel, a dying grace,
I'll Father-in Law you, Sir, I'll make a Will:
Speak, Villain, where's my Daughter?
Poyſoned, I warrant you, or knocked a the Head:
And to abuſe good Maſter Weathercock, with
His forged Will, and Maſter Weathercock,
To make my grounded reſolution,
Then to abuſe the Devonſhire Gentleman:
Go, away with him to Priſon.

Flow. Wherefore to Priſon? Sir, I will not go.

Enter Maſter Civet, his Wife, Oliver, Sir Arthur, Father, Uncle, and Delia.

Lanc. O here's his Uncle,
Welcome, Gentlemen, welcome all:
Such a Cozener, Gentlemen, a Murderer too
For any thing I know, my Daughter is miſſing,
Hath been looked for, cannot be found, a vild upon thee.

Unc. He is my Kinſman, although his life be vile,
Therefore, in Gods name, do with him what you will.

Lanc. Marry to Priſon.

Flow. Wherefore to Priſon, ſnick-up? I owe you nothing.

Lanc. Bring forth my Daughter then, away with him.

Flow. Go ſeek your Daughter, what do you lay to my charge?

Lanc. Suſpition of murder, go, away with him.

Flow. Murder your Dogs, I murder your Daughter?
Come, Uncle, I know you'll Bail me.

Unc. Not I, were there no more,
Than I the Jaylor, thou the Priſoner.

Lanc. Go, away with him.

Enter Luce like a Frow.

Luce. O my Life, where will you ha de Man?
Vat ha de yonker done?

Wen. Woman, he hath kill'd his Wife.

Luce. His Wife, dat is not good, dat is not ſeen.

Lanc. Hang not upon him, Huſwife, if you do I'll lay you by him.

Luce. Have me no, and or way do you have him,
He tell me dat he love me heartily.

Fran. Lead away my Maid to Priſon, why, Tom, will you ſuffer that?

Civ. No, by your leave, Father, ſhe is no Vagrant:
She is my Wives Chamber-maid, and as true as the Skin between any mans Brows here.

Lanc. Go to, you'r both Fools:
Son Civet, of my Life this is a Plot,
Some ſtragling counterfeit profer'd to you:
No doubt to rob you of your Plate and Jewels:
I'll have you led away to Priſon, Trull.

Luce. I am no Trull, neither Outlandiſh Frow,
Nor he, nor I ſhall to the Priſon go:
Know you me now? nay never ſtand amazed.
Father, I know I have offended you,
And though that duty wills me bend my Knees
To you in duty and obedience;
Yet this wayes do I turn, and to him yield
My love, my duty, and my humbleneſs.

Lanc. Baſtard in nature, kneel to ſuch a Slave?

Luce. O Maſter Flowerdale, if too much grief
Have not ſtopt up the Organs of your Voice,
Then ſpeak to her that is thy faithful Wife,
Or doth contempt of me thus tie thy tongue:
Turn not away, I am no Æthiop,
No wanton Creſſed, nor a changing Hellen:
But rather one made wretched by thy loſs.
What turn'ſt thou ſtill from me? O then
I gueſs the woful'ſt among hapleſs men.

Flow. I am indeed, Wife, wonder among Wives!
Thy Chaſtity and Vertue hath infuſed
Another Soul in me, red with defame,
For in my bluſhing Cheeks is ſeen my ſhame.

Lanc. Out Hypocrite, I charge thee truſt him not.

Luce. Not truſt him, by the hopes after bliſs,
I know no ſorrow can be compar'd to his.

Lanc. Well, ſince thou wert ordain'd to Beggery,
Follow thy Fortune, I defy thee.

Oli. Ywood che were ſo well ydouſſed as was ever white Cloth in tocking mill, an che ha not made me weep.

Fath. If he hath any grace he'll now repent.

Arth.

Arth. It moves my heart.
Wea. By my troth I muſt weep, I cannot chooſe.
Unc. None but a beaſt would ſuch a maid miſuſe.
Flow. Content thy ſelf, I hope to win his favour,
And to redeem my reputation loſt:
And, Gentlemen, believe me, I beſeech you,
I hope your Eyes ſhall behold ſuch change,
As ſhall deceive your expectation.
Oli. I would che were ſplit now, but che believe him.
Lanc. How, believe him.
Wea. By the Matkins, I do.
Lan. What do you think that e're he will have grace?
Wea. By my Faith it will go hard.
Oli. Well, che vor ye he is changed: and, Mr. Flowerdale, in hope you been ſo, hold there's vorty pound toward your zetting up: what be not aſhamed, vang it man, vang it, be a good Husband, loven to your Wife: and you ſhall not want for vorty more, I che vor thee.
Arth. My means are little, but if you'll follow me,
I will inſtruct you in my ableſt power:
But to your Wife I give this Diamond,
And prove true Diamond fair in all your life.
Flow. Thanks, good Sir Arthur: Mr. Oliver,
You being my Enemy, and grown ſo kind,
Binds me in all endeavour to reſtore.
Oli. What, reſtore me no reſtorings, man,
I have vorty pound more here, vang it:
Zouth chil devie London elſe: what, do not think me
A Mezel or a Scoundrel, to throw away my Money? che have an hundred pound more to pace of any good ſpotation: I hope your under and your Uncle will vollow my zamples.
Unc. You have gueſt right of me, if he leave off this courſe of life, he ſhall be mine Heir.
Lan. But he ſhall never get a groat of me;
A Cozener, a Deceiver, one that kill'd his painful
Father, honeſt Gentleman, that paſſed the fearful
Danger of the Sea, to get him living and maintain him brave.
Wea. What hath he kill'd his Father?
Lance. I, Sir, with conceit of his vile courſes.
Fath. Sir, you are miſinformed.
Lan. Why, thou old knave, thou told'ſt me ſo thy ſelf.
Fath. I wrong'd him then:
And toward my Maſter's Stock,
There's twenty Nobles for to make amends.
Flow. No Keſter, I have troubled thee, and wrong'd thee more,
What thou in love gives, I in love reſtore.
Fran. Ha, ha, Siſter, there you plaid bo-peep with Tom, what ſhall I give her toward houſhold?
Siſter Delia, ſhall I give her my Fan?
Del. You were beſt ask your Husband.
Fra. Shall I, Tom?
Civ. I, do, Frank, I'le buy thee a new one, with a longer handle.
Fran. A ruſſet one, Tom.
Civ. I with ruſſet Feathers.
Fran. Here, Siſter, there's my Fan toward houſhold, to keep you warm.
Luce. I thank you, Siſter.
Weath. Why this is well, and toward fair Luces Stock, here's forty ſhillings: and forty good ſhillings more, I'le give her, marry. Come Sir Lancelot, I muſt have you Friends.
Lance. Not I, all this is counterfeit,
He will conſume it, were it a Million.
Fath. Sir, what is your Daughters dower worth?
Lance. Had ſhe been married to an honeſt man,
It had been better than a thouſand pound.
Fath. Pay it him, and I'le give you my bond,
To make her joynture better worth than three.
Lanc. Your bond, Sir! why what are you?
Fath. One whoſe word in London though I ſay it,
Will paſs there for as much as yours.
Lan. Wert not thou late that unthrifts ſerving-man?
Fath. Look on me better, now my ſcar is off:
Nere muſe man at this metamorphoſie.
Lance. Maſter Flowerdale.
Flow. My Father, O I ſhame to look on him.
Pardon, dear Father, the follies that are paſt.
Fath. Son, Son, I do, and joy at this thy change,
And applaud thy Fortune in this vertuous Maid,
Whom Heaven hath ſent to thee to ſave thy Soul.
Luce. This addeth joy to joy, high Heaven be prais'd.
Weat. Mr. Flowerdale, welcom from Death, good Mr. Flowerdale.
'Twas ſaid ſo here, 'twas ſaid ſo here good Faith.
Fath. I caus'd that rumour to be ſpread my ſelf,
Becauſe I'd ſee the humours of my Son,
Which to relate the circumſtance is needleſs:
And Sirrah, ſee you run no more in to that ſame diſeaſe:
For he that's once cured of that maladie,
Of Riot, Swearing, Drunkenneſs, and Pride,
And falls again into the like diſtreſs,
That fever is deadly, doth till Death endure:
Such men die mad as of a calenture.
Flow. Heaven helping me, I'le hate the courſe as Hell.
Unc. Say it, and do it Couſin, all is well.
Lan. Well, being in hope you'll prove an honeſt man,
I take you to my favour. Brother Flowerdale,
Welcom with all my heart: I ſee your care
Hath brought theſe acts to this concluſion,
And I am glad of it, come let's in and feaſt.
Oli. Nay zoft you a while, you promiſed to make
Sir Arthur and me amends, here is your wiſeſt
Daughter, ſee which an's ſhe'll have.
Lan. A Gods name, you have my good will, get hers.
Oli. How ſay you then Damſel, tyters hate?
Deli. I, Sir, am yours.
Oli. Why, then ſend for a Vicar, and chil have it
Diſpatched in a trice, ſo chil.
Del. Pardon me, Sir, I mean I am yours,
In Love, in Duty, and affection.
But not to love as Wife, ſhall nere be ſaid,
Delia was buried, married, but a Maid.
Arth. Do not condemn your ſelf for ever,
Vertuous fair, you were born to love.
Oliver. Why you ſay true, Sir Arthur, ſhe was ybore to it,
So well as her Mother: but I pray you ſhew us
Some zamples or reaſons why you will not marry?
Del. No that I do condemn a married life,
For 'tis no doubt a ſanctimonious thing:
But for the care and croſſes of a Wife,
The trouble in this World that Children bring,
My vow is in Heaven in Earth to live alone,
Husbands howſoever good, I will have none.
Oli. Why then, chil live a Batchelor too,
Che zet not a vig by a Wife, if a Wife zet not a vig
By me: Come, ſhall's go to dinner?
Fath. To morrow I crave your companies in Mark-lane:
To night we'll frolick in Mr. Civet's Houſe,
And to each health drink down a full Carouſe

A Post.
Messengers.
Ushers and Servants.
Lieutenant of the Tower.
Two Citizens.
Two Merchants.

Enter three Smiths, Hodge, and two other, old Cromwell's men.

Hodge. COme, Masters, I think it be past five a Clock, Is it not time we were at work? My old Master he'll be stirring anon.

1. I cannot tell whether my old Master will be stirring or no: but I am sure I can hardly take my Afternoons nap, for my young Master Thomas, he keeps such a quile in his study, with the Sun, and the Moon, and the seven Stars, that I do verily think he'll read out his Wits.

Hodge. He skill of the Stars?
There's Goodman Car of Fulham,
He that carried us to the strong Ale, where Goody Trundel
Had her Maid got with Child: O, he knows the Stars,
He'll tickle you Charles's Wain in nine degrees:
That same man will tell Goody Trundel
When her Ale shall miscarry, only by the Stars.

2. I, that's a great Virtue indeed, I think Thomas
Be no Body in comparison to him.

1. Well, Masters, come, shall we to our Hammers?

Hodge. I, content; first let's take our Mornings Draught, and then to work roundly.

2. I, agreed, go in, Hodge. [Exeunt omnes.

Enter young Cromwell.

Crom. Good Morrow, Morn, I do salute thy brightness,
The night seems tedious to my troubled Soul:
Whose black obscurity binds in my mind
A thousand sundry cogitations:
And now Aurora with a lively die,
Adds comfort to my spirit that mounts on high.
Too high indeed, my state being so mean:
My study like a mineral of Gold,
Makes my heart proud, wherein my hope's inroll'd;
My Books are all the wealth I do possess,
And unto them I have ingag'd my heart;
O, Learning, how divine thou seem'st to me!
Within whose Arms is all felicity.
Peace with your Hammers, leave your knocking there,
[Here within they must beat with their Hammers.
You do disturb my study and my rest;
Leave off, I say, you mad me with the noise.

Enter

Enter Hodge, and the two Men.

Hodge. Why, how now, Master Thomas, how now;
Will you not let us work for you?
Crom. You fret my heart, with making of this noise.
Hodge. How, fret your heart? I but, Thomas, you'll Fret your Fathers Purse if you lett us from working.
2. I, this 'tis for him to make him a Gentleman:
Shall we leave work for your musing? that's well i'faith;
But here comes my old Master now.

Enter old Cromwell.

Old Crom. You idle Knaves,
What are you loytring now?
No Hammers walking, and my work to do?
What, not a heat among your work to day?
Hodge. Marry, Sir, your Son Thomas will not let us work at all.
Old Crom. Why Knave I say,
Have I thus cark'd and car'd,
And all to keep thee like a Gentleman,
And dost thou lett my Servants at their work;
That sweat for thee, Knave? labour thus for thee?
Crom. Father, their Hammers do offend my Study.
Old Crom. Out of my Doors, Knave, if thou lik'st it not:
I cry you mercy, are your Ears so fine?
I tell thee, Knave, these get when I do sleep;
I will not have my Anvil stand for thee.
Crom. There's money, Father, I will pay your men.
[He throws Money among them.
Old Crom. Have I thus brought thee up unto my cost,
In hope that one day thou would'st relieve my Age,
And art thou now so lavish of thy Coin,
To scatter it among these idle Knaves?
Crom. Father, be patient, and content your self,
The time will come I shall hold gold as trash:
And here I speak with a presaging Soul,
To build a Palace where now this Cottage stands,
As fine as is King Henry's House at Sheen.
Old Crom. You build a House?
You Knave, you'll be a Beggar;
Now afore God all is but cast away
That is bestowed upon this thriftless Lad,
Well, had I bound him to some honest Trade,
This had not been; but it was his Mother's doing,
To send him to the University:
How? build a House where now this Cottage stands,
As fair as that at Sheen? he shall not hear me,
A good Boy Tom, I con thee thank, Tom,
Well said Tom, Grammarcies Tom:
In to your work, Knaves; hence saucy Boy.
[Exeunt all but young Cromwell.
Crom. Why should my Birth
Keep down my mounting spirit?
Are not all Creatures subject unto time?
To time, who doth abuse the World,
And fills it full of hodge podge Bastardy;
There's Legions now of Beggars on the Earth,
That their original did spring from Kings,
And many Monarchs now, whose Fathers were
The riff-raff of their Age; for time and fortune
Wears out a noble train to Beggery;
And from the Dunghill minions do advance
To state: and mark, in this admiring World
This is but course, which in the name of Fate
Is seen as often as it whirls about:
The River Thames that by our Door doth pass,
His first beginning is but small and shallow,
Yet keeping on his course grows to a Sea.
And likewise Wolsey, the wonder of our Age,
His Birth as mean as mine, a Butchers Son;
Now who within this Land a greater man?
Then, Cromwell, cheer thee up, and tell thy Soul,
That thou may'st live to flourish and controul.

Enter old Cromwell.

Old Crom. Tom Cromwell, what Tom I say.
Crom. Do you call, Sir?
Old Crom. Here is Master Bowser come to know if you have dispatch'd his Petition for the Lords of the Council, or no.
Crom. Father, I have, please you to call him in.
Old Crom. That's well said, Tom, a good Lad, Tom.

Enter Master Bowser.

Bow. Now, Master Cromwell, have you dispatch'd this Petition?
Crom. I have, Sir, here it is, please you peruse it.
Bow. It shall not need, we'll read it as we go by Water.
And, Master Cromwell, I have made a motion
May do you good, and if you like of it.
Our Secretary at Antwerp, Sir, is dead,
And the Merchants there have sent to me,
For to provide a man fit for the place:
Now I do know none fitter than your self,
If with your liking it stand, Master Cromwell.
Crom. With all my heart, Sir, and I much am bound,
In love and duty for your kindness shown.
Old Crom. Body of me, Tom,
Make haste, lest some Body
Get between thee and home, Tom.
I thank you, good Master Bowser,
I thank you for my Boy,
I thank you always, I thank you most heartily, Sir:
Ho, a Cup of Beer here for Master Bowser.
Bow. It shall not need, Sir: Master Cromwell, will you go?
Crom. I will attend you, Sir.
Old Crom. Farewel, Tom, God bless thee, Tom,
God speed thee, good Tom. [Exeunt omnes.

Enter Bagot a Broker solus.

Bag. I hope this day is fatal unto some,
And by their loss must Bagot seek to gain.
This is the Lodging of Master Friskibal,
A liberal Merchant, and a Florentine,
To whom Banister owes a thousand pound,
A Merchant-Bankrupt, whose Father was my Master.
What do I care for pity or regard,
He once was wealthy, but he now is faln,
And this morning have I got him arrested
At the suit of Master Friskibal,
And by this means shall I be sure of Coin,
For doing this same good to him unknown:
And in good time, see where the Merchant comes.

Enter Friskiball.

Good Morrow to kind Master Friskiball.
Fris. Good Morrow to your self, good Master Bagot,
And whats the news your are so early stirring?
It is for gain, I make no doubt of that.
Bag. It is for the love, Sir, that I bear to you.
When did you see your Debtor Banister?
Fris. I promise you, I have not seen the man
This two months day, his poverty is such,
As I do think he shames to see his Friends.
Bag. Why then assure your self to see him straight,
For at your Suit I have arrested him,
And here they will be with him presently.
Fris. Arrest him at my Suit? you were to blame,
I know the mans misfortunes to be such,
As he's not able for to pay the Debt,

And

And were it known to ſome, he were undone.
Bag. This is your pitiful heart to think it ſo,
But you are much deceiv'd in Baniſter:
Why, ſuch as he will break for faſhion ſake,
And unto thoſe they owe a thouſand pound,
Pay ſcarce a hundred: O, Sir, beware of him,
The man is lewdly given to Dice and Drabs,
Spends all he hath in Harlots companies,
It is no mercy for to pity him:
I ſpeak the truth of him, for nothing elſe,
But for the kindneſs that I bear to you.
Friſ. If it be ſo, he hath deceiv'd me much,
And to deal ſtrictly with ſuch a one as he,
Better ſevere than too much lenity:
But here is Maſter Baniſter himſelf,
And with him, as I take't, the Officers.

Enter Baniſter, his Wife, and two Officers.

Ban. O Maſter Friskibal, you have undone me:
My ſtate was well nigh overthrown before,
Now altogether down-caſt by your means.
Mrs. Ban. O, Mr. Friskibal
Pity my Husband's caſe,
He is a man hath liv'd as well as any,
Till envious Fortune, and the ravenous Sea
Did rob, diſrobe, and ſpoil us of our own.
Friſ. Miſtreſs Baniſter, I envy not your Husband,
Nor willingly would I have us'd him thus:
But that I hear he is ſo lewdly given,
Haunts wicked Company, and hath enough
To pay his debts, yet will not be known thereof.
Ban. This is that damned Broker, that ſame Bagot,
Whom I have often from my Trencher fed:
Ingrateful villain for to uſe me thus.
Bag. What I have ſaid to him is nought but truth.
Mrs. Ban. What thou haſt ſaid
Springs from an envious heart.
A Cannibal that doth eat men alive:
But here upon my knee believe me, Sir,
And what I ſpeak, ſo help me God, is true,
We ſcarce have meat to feed our little Babes:
Moſt of our Plate is in that Broker's hand,
Which had we money to defray our debts,
O think, we would not bide that penury:
Be merciful, kind Maſter Friskibal;
My Husband, Children, and my ſelf will eat
But one meal a day, the other will we keep and ſell.
Friſ. Go to, I ſee thou art an envious man:
Good Miſtris Baniſter, kneel not to me,
I pray riſe up, you ſhall have your deſire.
Hold officers; be gone, there's for your pains,
You know you owe to me a thouſand pound,
Here take my hand, if e're God make you able,
And place you in your former ſtate again,
Pay me: but if ſtill your Fortune frown,
Upon my Faith I'le never ask you Crown:
I never yet did wrong to men in thrall,
For God doth know what to my ſelf may fall.
Ban. This unexpected favour undeſerv'd,
Doth make my heart bleed inwardly with joy:
Nere may ought proſper with me is my own,
If I forget this kindneſs you have ſhown.
Mrs. Ban. My Children in their Prayers both night and (day,
For your good Fortune and ſucceſs ſhall pray.
Friſ. I thank you both, I pray go dine with me,
Within theſe three dayes, if God give me leave,
I will to Florence to my native home.
Bagot, hold, there's a Portage to drink,
Although you ill deſerved it by your merit;
Give not ſuch cruel ſcope unto your heart;
Be ſure the ill you do will be requited:
Remember what I ſay, Bagot, farewel.
Come, Maſter Baniſter, you ſhall with me,
My fare's but ſimple, but welcome heartily.
[Exeunt all but Bagot.
Bag. A plague go with you,
Would you had eat your laſt,
Is this the thanks I have for all my pains?
Confuſion light upon you all for me:
Where he had wont to give a ſcore of Crowns,
Doth he now foiſt me with a Portague:
Well, I will be revenged upon this Baniſter.
I'le to his Creditors, buy all the debts he owes,
As ſeeming that I do it for good will,
I am ſure to have them at an eaſie rate;
And when 'tis done, in Chriſtendom he ſtays not,
But I'le make his heart t'ake with ſorrow,
And if that Baniſter become my debter,
By Heaven and Earth I'le make his plague the greater.
[Exit Bagot.

Enter Chorus.

Cho. Now Gentlemen imagine
That young Cromwell is in Antwerp,
Ledger for the Engliſh Merchants:
And Baniſter to ſhun this Bagots hate,
Hearing that he hath got ſome of his debts,
Is fled to Antwerp, with his Wife and Children,
Which Bagot hearing, is gone after them:
And thither ſends his bills of debt before,
To be revenged on wretched Baniſter,
What doth fall out, with patience ſit and ſee,
A juſt requital of falſe treacherie. [Exit.

Enter Cromwell in his ſtudy, with bags of money before him, caſting of account.

Crom. Thus far my reckoning doth go ſtraight and even,
But, Cromwell, this ſame plodding fits not thee;
Thy mind is altogether ſet on travel,
And not to live thus cloyſtered, like a Nun;
It is not this ſame traſh, that I regard.
Experience is the Jewel of my heart.

Enter a Poſt.

Poſt. I pray, Sir, are you ready to diſpatch me?
Crom. Yes, here's thoſe ſumms of money you muſt carry.
You go ſo far as Frankford, do you not?
Poſt. I do, Sir.
Crom. Well, prithee make all the haſt thou can'ſt,
For there be certain Engliſh Gentlemen
Are bound for Venice, and may happily want,
And if that you ſhould linger by the way:
But in hope that you will make good ſpeed,
There's two Angels to buy you ſpurs and wands.
Poſt. I thank you, Sir, this will add wings indeed.
Crom. Gold is of power to make an Eagle ſpeed.

Enter Miſtris Baniſter.

What Gentlewoman is this, that grieves ſo much?
It ſeems ſhe doth addreſs her ſelf to me.
Mrs. Ban. God ſave you, Sir, pray is your name Maſter Cromwell?
Crom. My name is Thomas Cromwell, Gentlewoman.
Mrs. Ban. Know you not one Bagot, Sir, that's come to Antwerp?
Crom. No, truſt me, I never ſaw the man,
But here are bills of debt I have received
Againſt one Baniſter a Merchant fallen into decay.
Mrs. Ban. Into decay indeed, long of that wretch:
I am the Wife to wofull Baniſter,
And by that bloody villain am purſu'd,
From London, here to Antwerp:
My Husband he is in the Governors hands,

And God of Heaven knows how he'll deal with him,
Now, Sir, your heart is framed of milder temper,
Be merciful to a diſtreſſed Soul,
And God no doubt will treble bleſs your gain.
Crom. Good Miſtris Baniſter, what I can, I will,
In any thing that lies within my power.
Mrs. Ban. O ſpeak to Bagot, that ſame wicked wretch,
An Angels voice may move a damned Devil.
Crom. Why is he come to Antwerp, as you hear?
Mrs. Ban. I heard he landed ſome two hours ſince.
Crom. Well, Miſtris Baniſter, aſſure your ſelf,
I'le ſpeak to Bagot in your own behalf,
And win him t'all the pitty that I can:
Mean time, to comfort you, in your diſtreſs,
Receive theſe Angels to relieve your need,
And be aſſured, that what I can effect,
To do you good, no way I will neglect. (heart,
Mrs. Ban. That mighty God that knows each mortals
Keep you from trouble, ſorrow, grief and ſmart.
[Exit Miſtris Baniſter.
Crom. Thanks, courteous Woman,
For thy hearty Prayer;
It grieves my Soul to ſee her miſery,
But we that live under the work of fate,
May hope the beſt, yet know not to what ſtate
Our ſtars and deſtinies have us aſſign'd,
Fickle is Fortune, and her face is blind.

Enter Bagot Solus.

Bag. So all goes well, it is as I would have it,
Baniſter, he is with the Governor:
And ſhortly ſhall have gives upon his heels.
It glads my heart to think upon the ſlave;
I hope to have his body rot in Priſon,
And after here, his Wife to hang her ſelf,
And all his Children die for want of food.
The Jewels I have brought to Antwerp,
Are reckon'd to be worth five thouſand pound,
Which ſcarcely ſtood me in three hundred pound;
I bought them at an eaſie kind of rate,
I care not which way they came by them
That ſold them me, it comes not near my heart;
And leſt they ſhould be ſtoln, as ſure they are,
I thought it meet to ſell them here in Antwerp,
And ſo have left them in the Governour's hand,
Who offers me within two hundred pound
Of all my price: but now no more of that,
I muſt go ſee and if my Bills be ſafe,
The which I ſent to Maſter Cromwell,
That if the wind ſhould keep me on the Sea,
He might arreſt him here before I came:
And in good time, ſee where he is: God ſave you, Sir.
Crom. And you, pray, pardon me, I know you not.
Bag. It may be ſo, Sir, but my name is Bagot,
The man that ſent to you the Bills of debt.
Crom. O, the man that purſues Baniſter,
Here are the Bills of debt you ſent to me:
As for the man, you know beſt where he is;
It is reported y'are a ſtrict bearer,
A mind that will not ſtoop to any pity;
An Eye that knows not how to ſhed a tear,
A hand that's always open for reward:
But, Maſter Bagot, would you be ruled by me,
You ſhould turn all theſe to the contrary;
Your heart ſhould ſtill have feeling of remorſe,
Your mind, according to your ſtate, be liberal
To thoſe that ſtand in need, and in diſtreſs;
Your hand to help them that do ſtand in want,
Rather than with your poiſe to hold them down,
For every ill turn ſhow your ſelf more kind,
Thus ſhould I do, pardon, I ſpeak my mind.
Bag. I, Sir, you ſpeak to hear what I would ſay,
But you muſt live I know, as well as I:
I know this place to be Extortion,
And 'tis not for a man to keep ſafe here,
But he muſt lye, cog, with his deareſt Friend;
And as for pitty, ſcorn it, hate all Conſcience:
But yet I do commend your wit in this,
To make a ſhow, of what I hope you are not,
But I commend you, and 'tis well done:
This is the only way to bring your gain.
Crom. My gain? I had rather chain me to an Oar,
And like a ſlave there toil out all my life,
Before I'de live ſo baſe a ſlave as thou.
I, like an Hypocrite, to make a ſhow
Of ſeeming virtue, and a Devil within?
No Bagot, if thy Conſcience were as clear,
Poor Baniſter ne're had been troubled here.
Bag. Nay, good Maſter Cromwell, be not angry, Sir,
I know full well that you are no ſuch man,
But if your Conſcience were as white as Snow,
It will be thought that you are otherwiſe.
Crom. Will it be thought I am otherwiſe?
Let them that think ſo, know they are deceiv'd;
Shall Cromwell live to have his Faith miſconſter'd?
Antwerp, for all the wealth within thy Town,
I will not ſtay here full two hours longer:
As good luck ſerves, my accounts are all made even,
Therefore I'le ſtraight unto the Treaſurer:
Bagot, I know you'll to the Governour,
Commend me to him, ſay I am bound to travel,
To ſee the fruitful parts of Italy;
And as you ever bore a Chriſtian mind,
Let Baniſter ſome favour of you find.
Bag. For your ſake, Sir, I'le help him all I can,
To ſtarve his heart out e're he gets a groat;
So, Maſter Cromwell, do I take my leave,
For I muſt ſtraight unto the Governour.
[Exit Bagot.
Crom. Farewel, Sir, pray you remember what I ſaid:
No, Cromwell, no, thy heart was ne're ſo baſe,
To live by falſhood, or by brokery;
But 't falls out well, I little it repent,
Hereafter, time in travel ſhall be ſpent.

Enter Hodge, his Father's man.

Hodge. Your Son Thomas, quoth you, I have been Thomaſt; I had thought it had been no ſuch matter to a gone by water; for at Putney I'le go you to Pariſh-Garden for two pence, ſit as ſtill as may be, without any wagging or joulting in my gutts, in a little Boat too: here we were ſcarce ſome four mile in the great green Water, but I thinking to go to my afternoone unchines, as 't was my manner at home, but I felt a kind of riſing in my gutts: at laſt one a the Sailers ſpying of me, be a good cheer ſayes he, ſet down thy victuals, and up with it, thou haſt nothing but an Eel in thy belly: Well, to't went I, to my victuals went the Sailers, and thinking me to be a man of better experience than any in the ſhip, asked me what Wood the ſhip was made of: they all ſwore I told them as right as if I had been acquainted with the Carpenter that made it; at laſt we grew near Land, and I grew villanous hungry, went to my bagg, the Devil a bit there was, the Sailers had tickled me; yet I cannot blame them, it was a part of kindneſs, for I in kindneſs told them what Wood the ſhip was made of, and they in kindneſs eat up my victuals, as indeed one good turn asketh another: well, would I, could I, find my Maſter Thomas in this Dutch Town, he might put ſome Engliſh Beer into my belly. (come:
Crom. What, Hodge, my Father's man, by my hand wel-
How doth my Father? what's the news at home?
Hodge. Maſter Thomas, O God, Maſter Thomas, your hand, glove and all, this is to give you to underſtanding that your Father is in health, and Alice Downing here hath ſent you a Nutmeg, and Beſs Make water a race of Ginger, my fellow Will and Tom hath between them ſent you

you a dozen of Points, and goodman Toll, of the Goat, a pair of Mittons, my Self came in Perſon, and this is all the news.

Crom. Gramarcy, good Hodge, and thou art welcom to me,
But in as ill a time thou comeſt as may be;
For I am travelling into Italy.
What ſay'ſt thou, Hodge, will thou bear me company?

Hodge. Will I bear thee company, Tom? what tell'ſt me of Italy? were it to the fartheſt part of Flanders, I would go with thee, Tom; I am thine in all weal and woe, thy own to command; what, Tom, I have paſſed the rigorous waves of Neptune's blaſts, I tell you, Thomas, I have been in danger of the Flouds, and when I have ſeen Boreas begin to play the Ruffin with us, then would I down a my knees, and call upon Vulcan.

Crom. And why upon him?

Hodge. Becauſe, as this ſame fellow Neptune is God of the Seas, ſo Vulcan is Lord over the Smiths, and therefore I being a Smith, thought his Godhead would have ſome care yet of me.

Crom. A good conceit: but tell me, haſt thou din'd yet?

Hodge. Thomas, to ſpeak the truth, not a bit yet, I.

Crom. Come, go with me, thou ſhalt have cheer good ſtore:
And farewel, Antwerp, if I come no more.

Hodge. I follow thee, ſweet Tom, I follow thee.

[Exeunt ambo.

Enter the Governour of the Engliſh Houſe, Bagot, Baniſter, his Wife, and two Officers.

Gover. Is Cromwell gone then? ſay you, Mr. Bagot,
What diſlike, I pray? what was the cauſe?

Bag. To tell you true, a wild brain of his own,
Such youth as they cannot ſee when they are well:
He is all bent to travel, that's his reaſon,
And doth not love to eat his Bread at home.

Gov. Well, good Fortune with him, if the man be gone.
We hardly ſhall find ſuch a man as he,
To fit our turns, his dealings were ſo honeſt.
But now, Sir, for your Jewels that I have,
What do you ſay? what, will you take my price?

Bag. O, Sir, you offer too much under foot.

Gov. 'Tis but two hundred pound between us, man,
What's that in payment of five thouſand pound?

Bag. Two hundred pound, birlady, Sir, 'tis great,
Before I got ſo much it made me ſweat.

Gov. Well, Maſter Bagot, I'le proffer you fairly,
You ſee this Merchant, Maſter Baniſter,
Is going now to Priſon at your ſute:
His ſubſtance all is gone, what would you have?
Yet in regard I knew the man of wealth,
Never diſhoneſt dealing, but ſuch miſhaps
Hath faln on him, may light on me or you:
There is two hundred pound between us,
We will divide the ſame, I'le give you one,
On that condition you will ſet him free:
His ſtate is nothing, that you ſee your ſelf,
And where nought is, the King muſt loſe his right.

Bag. Sir, Sir, you ſpeak out of your love,
'Tis fooliſh love, Sir, ſure to pitty him:
Therefore content your ſelf, this is my mind,
To do him good I will not bait a penny.

Ban. This is my comfort, though thou do'ſt no good,
A mighty ebbe follows a mighty flood.

Mrs. Ban. O thou baſe wretch, whom we have foſtered,
Even as a Serpent for to poyſon us,
If God did ever right a Womans wrong,
To that ſame God I bend and bow my heart,
To let his heavy wrath fall on thy head,
By whom my hopes and joyes are butchered.

Bag. Alas, fond woman, I prethee pray thy worſt.
The Fox fares better ſtill when he is curſt.

Enter Maſter Bowſer a Merchant.

Gov. Maſter Bowſer! you're welcom, Sir, from England,
What's the beſt news? how do all our Friends?

Bow. They are all well, and do commend them to you:
There's Letters from your Brother and your Son:
So, fare you well, Sir, I muſt take my leave,
My haſte and buſineſs doth require ſo.

Gov. Before you dine, Sir? what, go you out of town?

Bow. I'faith unleſs I hear ſome news in Town,
I muſt away, there is no remedy.

Gov. Maſter Bowſer, what is your buſineſs, may I know it?

Bow. You may, Sir, and ſo ſhall all the City.
The King of late hath had his treaſury robb'd,
And of the choiceſt Jewels that he had:
The value of them was ſeven thouſand pounds,
The fellow that did ſteal theſe Jewels is hanged,
And did confeſs that for three hundred pound,
He ſold them to one Bagot dwelling in London:
Now Bagot's fled, and as we hear, to Antwerp,
And hither am I come to ſeek him out,
And they that firſt can tell me of his news,
Shall have a hundred pound for their reward.

Ban. How juſt is God to right the innocent?

Gov. Maſter Bowſer, you come in happy time,
Here is the villain Bagot that you ſeek,
And all thoſe Jewels have I in my hands:
Officers, look to him, hold him faſt.

Bagot. The Devil ought me a ſhame, and now he hath paid it.

Bow. Is this that Bagot? fellows, bear him hence,
We will not now ſtand for his reply;
Lade him with Irons, we will have him tri'd
In England where his villanies are known.

Bag. Miſchief, confuſion, light upon you all,
O hang me, drown me, let me kill my ſelf,
Let go my armes, let me run quick to Hell.

Bow. Away, bear him away, ſtop the ſlaves mouth.

[They carry him away.

Mrs. Ban. Thy works are infinite, great God of Heaven.

Gov. I heard this Bagot was a wealthy fellow.

Bow. He was indeed, for when his goods were ſeized,
Of Jewels, Coyn, and Plate within his Houſe,
Was found the value of five thouſand pound,
His furniture fully worth half ſo much,
Which being all ſtrain'd for the King,
He Frankly gave it to the Antwerp Merchants,
And they again, out of their bounteous mind,
Have to a Brother of their Company,
A man decay'd by Fortune of the Seas,
Given Bagot's wealth, to ſet him up again,
And keep it for him, his name is Baniſter.

Gov. Maſter Bowſer, with this happy news,
You have revived two from the gates of Death,
This is that Baniſter, and this his Wife.

Bow. Sir, I am glad my Fortune is ſo good,
To bring ſuch tidings as may comfort you.

Ban. You have given life unto a man deem'd dead,
For by theſe news my life is newly bred.

Mrs. Ban. Thanks to my God, next to my Soveraign King;
And laſt to you that theſe good news do bring.

Gov. The hundred pound I muſt receive, as due
For finding Bagot, I freely give to you.

Bow. And, Maſter Baniſter, if ſo you pleaſe,
I'le bear you Company, when you croſs the Seas.

Ban. If it pleaſe you, Sir, my Company is but mean,
Stands with your liking, I'le wait on you.

Gov. I am glad that all things do accord ſo well:
Come, Maſter Bowſer, let us to dinner:
And, Miſtreſs Baniſter, be merry, Woman,

Come, after ſorrow now let's cheer your Spirit,
Knaves have their due, and you but what you merit.
[Exeunt omnes.

Enter Cromwell and Hodge in their Shirts, and without Hats.

Hodge. Call ye this ſeeing of faſhions?
Marry would I had ſtaid at Putney ſtill,
O, Maſter Thomas, we are ſpoiled, we are gone.
Crom. Content thee, man, this is but Fortune.
Hodge. Fortune, a plague of this Fortune, it makes me go wet-ſhod, the Rogues would not leave me a ſhooe to my feet: for my Hoſe, they ſcorned them with their heels: but for my Doublet and Hat, O Lord, they embraced me, and unlaced me, and took away my cloaths, and ſo diſgraced me.
Crom. Well, Hodge, what remedy?
What ſhift ſhall we make now?
Hodge. Nay I know not, for begging I am naught, for ſtealing worſe: by my troth I muſt even fall to my old trade, to the Hammer and the Horſe-heels again: but now the worſt is, I am not acquainted with the humour of the Horſes in this country; whether they are not coltiſh, given much to kicking, or no, for when I have one Leg in my hand, if he ſhould up and lay tother on me chops, I were gone, there lay I, there lay Hodge.
Crom. Hodge, I believe thou muſt work for us both.
Hod. O, Maſter Thomas, have not I told you of this? have not I many a time and often ſaid, Tom, or Maſter Thomas, learn to make a Horſe-ſhooe, it will be your own another day: this was not regarded. Hark you, Thomas, what do you call the fellows that rob'd us?
Crom. The Bandetti.
Hod. The Bandetti, do you call them? I know not what they are called here, but I am ſure we call them plain Thieves in England: O, Tom, that we were now at Putney, at the Ale there.
Crom. Content thee, man, here ſet up theſe two Bills,
And let us keep our ſtanding on the Bridge:
The faſhion of this Country is ſuch,
If any ſtranger be oppreſſed with want,
To write the manner of his miſery,
And ſuch as are diſpos'd to ſuccour him,
Will do it, what, haſt thou ſet them up?
Hod. I they're up, God ſend ſome to read them,
And not only to read them, but alſo to look on us:
And not altogether look on us,
But to relieve us, O cold, cold, cold.
[One ſtands at one end, and one at tother.

Enter Friskiball the Merchant, and reads the Bills.

Friſ. What's here? two Engliſhmen rob'd by the Bandetti,
One of them ſeems to be a Gentleman:
'Tis pitty that his Fortune was ſo hard,
To fall into the deſperate hands of thieves.
I'le queſtion him, of what eſtate he is;
God ſave you, Sir, are you an Engliſhman?
Crom. I am, Sir, a diſtreſſed Engliſhman.
Friſ. And what are you, my Friend.
Hodge. Who I, Sir, by my troth I do not know my ſelf, what I am now, but, Sir, I was a Smith, Sir, a poor Farrier of Putney, that's my Maſter, Sir, yonder, I was robbed for his ſake, Sir.
Friſ. I ſee you have been met by the Bandetti,
And therefore need not ask how you came thus:
But Friskiball, why do'ſt thou queſtion them
Of their eſtate, and not relieve their need?
Sir, the coyn I have about me is not much:
There's ſixteen Duckets for to cloath your ſelves,
There's ſixteen more to buy your diet with,
And there's ſixteen to pay for your Horſe-hire:
'Tis all the wealth, you ſee, my purſe poſſeſſes;
But if you pleaſe for to enquire me out,
You ſhall not want for ought that I can do,
My name is Friskiball, a Florence Merchant:
A man that always loved your Nation.
Crom. This unexpected favour at your hands,
Which God doth know, if ever I ſhall requite it,
Neceſſity makes me to take your bounty,
And for your gold can yield you nought but thanks,
Your Charity hath help'd me from deſpair;
Your name ſhall ſtill be in my hearty Prayer.
Friſ. It is not worth ſuch thanks, come to my houſe,
Your want ſhall better be reliev'd than thus.
Crom. I pray excuſe me, this ſhall well ſuffice,
To bear my charges to Bononia,
Whereas a noble Earl is much diſtreſſed:
An Engliſhman, Ruſſel the Earl of Bedford
Is by the French King ſold unto his Death,
It may fall out, that I may do him good:
To ſave his life, I'le hazard my heart Blood:
Therefore, kind Sir, thanks for your liberal gift,
I muſt be gone to aid him, there's no ſhift.
Friſ. I'le be no hinderer to ſo good an act,
Heaven proſper you, in that you go about:
If Fortune bring you this way back again,
Pray let me ſee you: ſo I take my leave,
All good a man can wiſh, I do bequeath. [Exit Friſkib.
Crom. All good that God doth ſend, light on your head,
There's few ſuch men within our Climate bred.
How ſay you now, Hodge, is not this good Fortune?
Hodg. How ſay you, I'll tell you what, Maſter Thomas,
If all men be of this Gentlemans mind,
Let's keep our ſtandings upon this Bridge,
We ſhall get more here, with begging in one day,
Than I ſhall with making Horſeſhooes in a whole year.
Crom. No, Hodge, we muſt be gone unto Bononia,
There to relieve the noble Earl of Bedford:
Where if I fall not in my policy,
I ſhall deceive their ſubtle treachery.
Hodge. Nay, I'le follow you, God bleſs us from the thieving Bandetti again. [Exeunt.

Enter Bedford and his Hoſt.

Bed. Am I betray'd, was Bedford born to die,
By ſuch baſe ſlaves, in ſuch a place as this?
Have I eſcap'd ſo many times in France,
So many Battels have I over-paſſed,
And made the French ſtir, when they heard my name:
And am I now betraid unto my Death?
Some of their hearts blood firſt ſhall pay for it.
Hoſt. They do deſire, my Lord, to ſpeak with you.
Bed. The traitors do deſire to have my blood,
But by my Birth, my Honour, and my Name;
By all my hopes, my Life ſhall coſt them dear.
Open the door, I'le venture out upon them,
And if I muſt die, then I'le die with Honour.
Hoſt. Alas, my Lord, that is a deſperate courſe,
They have begirt you, round about the Houſe:
Their meaning is to take you Priſoner,
And ſo to ſend your body unto France.
Bed. Firſt ſhall the Ocean be as dry as ſand,
Before alive they ſend me unto France:
I'le have my body firſt bored like a Sieve,
And die as Hector, 'gainſt the Mermydons,
E're France ſhall boaſt, Bedford's their Priſoner,
Treacherous France, that 'gainſt the Law of Arms,
Hath here betraid thy Enemy to Death:
But be aſſured, my blood ſhall be revenged
Upon the beſt lives that remain in France:
Stand back, or elſe thou run'ſt upon thy Death.

Enter

Enter Servant.

Meſ. Pardon, my Lord, I come to tell your honour,
That they have hired a Neapolitan,
Who by his Oratory, hath promiſed them
Without the ſhedding of one drop of Blood,
Into their hands, ſafe to deliver you,
And therefore craves, none but himſelf may enter,
And a poor ſwain that attends on him. [Exit Servant.
Bed. A Neopolitan? bid him come in,
Were he as cunning in his Eloquence,
As Cicero the famous man of Rome,
His words would be as chaff againſt the wind.
Sweet tongu'd Ulyſſes, that made Ajax mad,
Were he and his tongue in this ſpeaker's head,
Alive he wins me not; then 'tis no conqueſt.

Enter Cromwell like a Neapolitan, and Hodge with him.

Crom. Sir, are you the Maſter of the Houſe?
Hoſt. I am, Sir.
Crom. By this ſame token you muſt leave this place,
And leave none but the Earl and I together,
And this my Peaſant here to tend on us.
Hoſt. With all my heart, God grant you do ſome good.
[Exit Hoſt. Cromwell ſhuts the door.
Bed. Now, Sir, what's your will with me?
Crom. Intends your Honour not to yield your ſelf?
Bed. No good man gooſe, not while my ſword doth laſt;
Is this your eloquence for to perſwade me?
Crom. My Lord, my eloquence is for to ſave you;
I am not, as you judge, a Neopolitan,
But Cromwell your ſervant, and an Engliſhman.
Bed. How? Cromwell? not my Farrier's Son?
Crom. The ſame, Sir, and am come to ſuccour you.
Hodge. Yes faith, ſir, and I am Hodge, your poor Smith;
Many a time and oft have I ſhooed your Dapper Gray.
Bed. And what avails it me, that thou art here?
Crom. It may avail, if you'll be rul'd by me;
My Lord, you know the men of Mantua,
And theſe Bononians are at deadly ſtrife,
And they, my Lord, both love and honour you;
Could you but get out of the Mantua port,
Then were you ſafe, deſpight of all their force.
Bed. Tut, man, thou talk'ſt of things impoſſible;
Do'ſt thou not ſee, that we are round beſet,
How then is't poſſible we ſhould eſcape?
Crom. By force we cannot, but by policie:
Put on the apparel here that Hodge doth wear,
And give him yours: the States they know you not,
For as I think, they never ſaw your face,
And at a watch-word muſt I call them in,
And will deſire, that we two ſafe may paſs
To Mantua, where I'le ſay my buſineſs lies;
How doth your honour like of this advice?
Bed. O, wondrous good: But wilt thou venture, Hodge.
Hod. Will I? O noble Lord, I do accord, in any thing I can;
And do agree, to ſet thee free, do Fortune what ſhe can.
Bed. Come then, let's change our apparel ſtraight.
Crom. Go, Hodge, make haſte, leſt they chance to call.
Hod. I warrant you I'le fit him with a Sute.
[Exeunt Earl and Hodge.
Crom. Heavens grant this policy doth take ſucceſs,
And that the Earl may ſafely ſcape away.
And yet it grieves me for this ſimple wretch,
For fear they ſhould offer him violence;
But of two Evils 'tis beſt to ſhun the greateſt,
And better is it that he live in thrall,
Than ſuch a noble Earl as he ſhould fall.
Their ſtubborn hearts, it may be will relent;
Since he is gone, to whom their hate is bent.
My Lord, have you diſpatched?

Enter Bedford like the Clown, and Hodge in his Cloak and his Hat.

Bed. How doſt thou like us, Cromwell, is it well?
Crom. O, my good Lord, excellent: Hodge, how do'ſt feel thy ſelf?
Hodge. How do I feel my ſelf? why, as a Noble man ſhould do.
O how I feel Honour come creeping on,
My Nobility is wonderful melancholy:
Is it not moſt Gentleman like to be melancholy?
Crom. Yes, Hodge; now go ſit down in thy ſtudy,
And take ſtate upon thee.
Hodge. I warrant you, my Lord, let me alone to take ſtate upon me: but hark, my Lord, do you feel nothing bite about you?
Bed. No, truſt me, Hodge.
Hod. I, they know they want their old paſture; 'tis a ſtrange thing of this vermin, they dare not meddle with Nobility.
Crom. Go take thy place, Hodge, I will call them in.

Hodge ſits in the ſtudy, and Cromwell calls in the States.

All is done, enter and if you pleaſe.

Enter the States, and Officers with Halberts.

Gov. What, have you won him? will he yield himſelf?
Crom. I have, an't pleaſe you, and the quiet Earl
Doth yield himſelf to be diſpoſed by you.
Gov. Give him the money that we promis'd him:
So let him go, whither he pleaſe himſelf.
Crom. My buſineſs, Sir, lies unto Mantua;
Pleaſe you to give me ſafe conduct thither.
Gov. Go, and conduct him to the Mantua Port,
And ſee him ſafe delivered preſently.
[Exeunt Cromwell, and Bedford.
Go draw the curtains, let us ſee the Earl:
O, he is writing, ſtand apart a while.
Hod. Fellow William, I am not as I have been; I went from you a Smith, I write to you as a Lord: I am at this preſent writing, among the Polonian Caſiges. I do commend my Lordſhip to Raphe and to Roger, to Bridget and to Dority, and ſo to all the youth of Putney.
Gov. Sure theſe are the names of Engliſh Noblemen,
Some of his ſpecial Friends, to whom he writes:
But ſtay, he doth addreſs himſelf to ſing.
[Here he ſings a Song.
My Lord, I am glad you are ſo Frolick and ſo blithe;
Believe me, Noble Lord, if you knew all,
You'd change your merry vein to ſudden ſorrow.
Hodge. I change my merry vein? no, thou Bononian, no;
I am a Lord, and therefore let me go;
And do defie thee and thy Caſiges:
Therefore ſtand off, and come not near my Honour.
Gov. My Lord, this jeſting cannot ſerve your turn.
Hodge. Do'ſt think, thou black Bononian beaſt,
That I do flout, do gibe, or jeſt:
No, no, thou Bear-pot, know that I,
A Noble Earl, a Lord par-dy.
Gov. What means this Trumpet's ſound?
[A Trumpet ſounds; Enter a Meſſenger.
Cit. One come from the States of Mantua.
Gov. What, would you with us, ſpeak, thou man of Mantua?
Meſſ. Men of Bononia, this my meſſage is,
To let you know the Noble Earl of Bedford
Is ſafe within the Town of Mantua,
And wills you ſend the peaſant that you have,

Who hath deceived your expectation;
Or elſe the States of Mantua have vowed,
They will recal the truce that they have made,
And not a man ſhall ſtir from forth your Town,
That ſhall return unleſs you ſend him back.
Gov. O this misfortune, how it mads my heart?
The Neopolitan hath beguiled us all.
Hence with this Fool, what ſhall we do with him,
The Earl being gone? a plague upon it all.
Hod. No I'le aſſure you, I am no Earl, but a Smith, Sir,
One Hodge, a Smith at Putney, Sir:
One that hath gulled you, that hath bored you, Sir.
Gov. Away with him, take hence the Fool you came for.
Hod. I, Sir, and I'le leave the greater Fool with you.
Meſ. Farewel, Bononians. Come, Friend, along with me.
Hod. No, Friend, afore, my Lordſhip will follow thee. [Exit.
Gov. Well, Mantua, ſince by thee the Earl is loſt,
Within few dayes I hope to ſee thee croſt. [Ex. om.

Enter Chorus.

Cho. Thus far you ſee how Cromwell's fortune paſſed.
The Earl of Bedford being ſafe in Mantua,
Deſires Cromwell's company into France,
To make requital for his courteſie:
But Cromwell doth deny the Earl his ſuit,
And tells him that thoſe parts he meant to ſee,
He had not yet ſet footing on the Land,
And ſo directly takes his way to Spain:
The Earl to France, and ſo they both do part.
Now let your thoughts as ſwift as is the wind,
Skip ſome few years, that Cromwell ſpent in travel:
And now imagine him to be in England,
Servant unto the Maſter of the Rolls:
Where in ſhort time he there began to flouriſh,
An hour ſhall ſhow you what few years did cheriſh. [Exit.

The Muſick plays, they bring out the banquet. Enter Sir Chriſtopher Hales, Cromwell, and two Servants.

Hales. Come, Sirs, be careful of your Maſters credit;
And as our bounty now exceeds the figure
Of common entertainment, ſo do you
With looks as free as is your Maſters Soul,
Give formal welcom to the thronged tables,
That ſhall receive the Cardinals followers,
And the attendants of the great Lord Chancellor.
But all my care, Cromwell, depends on thee:
Thou art a man differing from vulgar form,
And by how much thy Spirit is rankt 'bove theſe,
In rules of Art, by ſo much it ſhines brighter by travel,
Whoſe obſervance pleads his merit,
In a moſt learned, yet unaffecting Spirit.
Good Cromwell, caſt an Eye of fair regard
'Bout all my Houſe, and what this ruder fleſh,
Through ignorance, or wine, do miſcreate,
Salve thou with courteſie: if welcom want,
Full bowles, and ample banquets will ſeem ſcant.
Crom. Sir, whatſoever lies in me.
Aſſure you I will ſhew my utmoſt duty. [Exit Crom.
Hales. About it then, the Lords will ſtraight be here:
Cromwell, thou haſt thoſe parts would rather ſute
The ſervice of the ſtate than of my Houſe:
I look upon thee with a loving Eye,
That one day will prefer thy deſtiny.

Enter Meſſenger.

Meſſ. Sir, the Lords be at hand.
Hales. They are welcom, bid Cromwell ſtraight attend us,
And look you all thing be in perfect readineſs.

The Muſick playes. Enter Cardinal Wolſey, Sir Thomas Moore and Gardiner.

Wol. O, Sir Chriſtopher, you are too liberal: what, a banquet too?
Hales. My Lords, if words could ſhow the ample welcome, that my free heart affords you, I could then become a prater: but I now muſt deal like a feaſt Politician with your Lordſhips, defer your welcom till the banquet end, that it may then ſalve our defect of fare:
Yet welcom now, and all that tend on you.
Wol. Thanks to the kind Maſter of the Rolls.
Come and ſit down, ſit down, Sir Thomas Moore:
'Tis ſtrange, how that we and the Spaniard differ,
Their dinner is our banquet, after dinner,
And they are men of active diſpoſition:
This I gather, that by their ſparing Meat,
Their bodies are more fitter for the Wars:
And if that famine chance to pinch their maws,
Being us'd to faſt, it breeds leſs pain.
Hal. Fill me ſome wine: I'le anſwer Cardinal Wolſey:
My Lord, we Engliſh-men are of more freer Souls,
Than hunger-ſtarv'd, and ill-complexion'd 'Spaniards;
They that are rich in Spain, ſpare belly food,
To deck their backs with an Italian hood,
And Silks of Civil: and the pooreſt Snake,
That feeds on Lemmons, Pilchers, and ne're heated
His pallet with ſweet Fleſh, will bear a caſe
More fat and gallant than his ſtarved face:
Pride, the Inquiſition, and this belly-evil,
Are in my judgement Spains three headed Devil.
Mo. Indeed it is a plague unto their Nation,
Who ſtagger after in blind imitation.
Hal. My Lords, with welcom, I preſent your Lordſhips a ſolemn health.
Mo. I love health well, but when as healths do bring
Pain to the head, and bodies ſurfeiting:
Then ceaſe I healths: nay ſpill not, Friend,
For though the drops be ſmall,
Yet have they force, to force men to the wall.
Wol. Sir Chriſtopher, is that your man? (guiſt,
Hal And like your Grace, he is a Scholar, and a Lin-
One that hath travelled many parts of Chriſtendom, my Lord.
Wol. My Friend, come nearer, have you been a traveller?
Crom. My Lord, I have added to my knowledge, the Low Countryes,
France, Spain, Germany, and Italy:
And though ſmall gain of profit I did find,
Yet did it pleaſe my Eye, content my mind.
Wol. What do you think of the ſeveral States;
And Princes Courts as you have travelled?
Crom. My Lord, no Court with England may compare,
Neither for State, nor civil Government:
Luſt dwells in France, in Italy, and Spain,
From the poor peaſant, to the Princes train,
In Germany, and Holland, Riot ſerves,
And he that moſt can drink, moſt he deſerves;
England I praiſe not: for I here was born,
But that ſhe laugheth the others unto ſcorn.
Wol. My Lord, there dwells within that Spirit,
More than can be diſcern'd by outward Eye;
Sir Chriſtopher, will you part with your man?
Hal. I have ſought to proffer him to your Lordſhip,
And now I ſee he hath preferr'd himſelf?
Wel. What is thy name?
Crom. Cromwell, my Lord.
Wol. Then, Cromwell, here we make thee Sollicitor of our cauſes, and neareſt next our ſelf: Gardiner, give you kind welcome to the man.
[Gardiner embraces him.

Moor. My Lord, you are a royal Winner,
Hath got a man, beſides your bounteous Dinner,
Well, Knight, pray we come no more:
If we come often, thou maiſt ſhut thy Door.
Wol. Sir Chriſtopher, had'ſt thou given me
Half thy Lands, thou couldeſt not have pleaſed me
So much as with this man of thine,
My infant thoughts do ſpell:
Shortly his Fortune ſhall be lifted higher,
True induſtry doth kindle Houours fire,
And ſo, kind Maſter of the Rolls, farewel.
Hal. Cromwell, farewell.
Crom. Cromwell takes his leave of you
That ne're will leave to love, and honour you. [Exeunt.

Enter Chorus.

[The Muſick playes as they go out.

Cho. Now Cromwells higheſt Fortunes do begin.
Wolſey that lov'd him, as he did his life:
Committed all his treaſure to his hands,
Wolſey is dead, and Gardiner his man
Is now Created Biſhop of Wincheſter:
Pardon if we omit all Wolſey's Life,
Becauſe our Play depends on Cromwells Death,
Now ſit and ſee his higheſt ſtate of all;
His height of riſing and his ſudden fall:
Pardon the errors are already paſt,
And live in hope the beſt doth come at laſt:
My hope upon your favour doth depend,
And look to have your liking ere the end. [Exit.

Enter Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter, the Dukes of Norfolk, and of Suffolk, Sir Thomas Moor, Sir Chriſtopher Hales, and Cromwell.

Nor. Maſter Cromwell, ſince Cardinal Wolſey's Death,
His Majeſty is given to underſtand,
There's certain Bills and Writings in your hand,
That much concern the ſtate of England:
My Lord of Wincheſter, is it not ſo?
Gar. My Lord of Norfolk, we two were whilome Fellows,
And Maſter Cromwell, though our Maſters love,
Did bind us, while his love was to the King,
It is no boot now to deny thoſe things,
Which may be prejudicial to the State:
And though that God hath rais'd my fortune higher,
Than any way I looked for, or deſerv'd,
Yet my life, no longer with me dwell,
Than I prove true unto my Sovereign.
Suff. What ſay you, Maſter Cromwell? have you thoſe Writings, I, or no?
Crom. Here are the Writings, and upon my Knees,
I give them up unto the worthy Dukes,
Of Suffolk, and of Norfolk: he was my Maſter,
And each vertuous part
That lived in him, I tender'd with my heart,
But what his head complotted 'gainſt the State,
My Countries love, commands me that to hate.
His ſudden Death, I grieve for, not his fall,
Becauſe he ſought to work my Countries thrall.
Suff. Cromwell, the King ſhall hear of this thy duty;
Whom I aſſure my ſelf, will well reward thee:
My Lord, let's go unto his Majeſty,
And ſhow thoſe Writings which he longs to ſee.
[Exeunt Norfolk and Suffolk.

Enter Bedford haſtily.

Bed. How now, whoſe this, Cromwell?
By my Soul, welcome to England:
Thou once did'ſt ſave my life, did'ſt thou not, Cromwell?
Crom. If I did ſo, 'tis greater glory
For me that you remember it,
Than for my ſelf vainly to report it.
Bed. Well, Cromwell, now is the time,
I ſhall commend thee to my Sovereign:
Cheer up thy ſelf, for I will raiſe thy State,
A Ruſſel yet was never found ingrate. [Exit.
Hal. O how uncertain is the wheel of State,
Who lately greater than the Cardinal,
For fear, and love: and now who lower lies?
Gay honours are but Fortunes flatteries,
And whom this day, Pride and Promotion ſwells,
To Morrow Envy and Ambition quells.
Moor. Who ſees the Cob-web intangle the poor Fly,
May boldly ſay the wretche's Death is nigh.
Gar. I know his ſtate, and proud ambition,
Were too too violent to laſt over-long.
Hal. Who ſoars too near the Sun, with golden VVings,
Melts them, to ruine his own fortune brings.

Enter the Duke of Suffolk.

Suf. Cromwell, kneel down in King Henry's name,
Ariſe, Sir Thomas Cromwell, thus begins thy fame.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk.

Norf. Cromwell, The Majeſty of England,
For the good liking, he conceives of thee,
Makes thee Maſter of the Jewel Houſe,
Chief Secretary to himſelf, and withal,
Creates thee one of his Highneſs's Privy Council.

Enter the Earl of Bedford.

Bed. VVhere is Sir Thomas Cromwell? is he Knighted?
Suff. He is, my Lord.
Bed. Then, to add Honour to his Name,
The King creates him Lord Keeper of his Privy Seal,
And Maſter of the Rolls;
VVhich you, Sir Chriſtopher, do now enjoy;
The King determines higher place for you.
Crom. My Lords, theſe honours are too high for my deſert.
Moor. O content thee, man, who would not chuſe it?
Yet thou art wiſe, in ſeeming to refuſe it.
Gard. Here's Honours, Titles and Promotions;
I fear this climbing, will have a ſudden fall.
Norf. Then come, my Lords, let's altogether bring
This new-made Counſellor to England's King.
[Exeunt all but Gardiner.
Gard. But Gardiner means his glory ſhall be dim'd:
Shall Cromwell live a greater man than I?
My Envy with his Honour now is bred,
I hope to ſhorten Cromwell by the Head. [Exit.

Enter Friskiball very poor.

Friſ. O Friskiball, what ſhall become of thee?
VVhere ſhalt thou go, or which way ſhalt thou turn?
Fortune that turns her too unconſtant VVheel,
Hath turn'd thy wealth and riches in the Sea,
All parts abroad where-ever I have been,
Grows weary of me, and denies me ſuccour;
My Debtors they, that ſhould relieve my want,
Forſwear my money, ſay they owe me none:
They know my ſtate too mean, to bear out Law;
And here in London, where I oft have been,
And have done good to many a wretched man,
And now moſt wretched here, deſpis'd my ſelf;
In vain it is more of their hearts to try;
Be patient therefore, lay thee down and die.
[He lies down.

Enter

Enter Goodman Seely, and his Wife Joan.

Seely. Come Joan, come, let's see what he'll do for us now? I wis we have done for him, when many a time and often he might have gone a hungry to Bed.

Wife. Alas man, now he is made a Lord, he'll never look upon us; he'll fulfill the old Proverb, Set Beggars a Horse-back, and they'll ride: a, well a day for my Cow; such as he hath made us come behind-hand, we had never pawn'd our Cow else to pay our Rent.

Seely. Well Joan, he'll come this way: and by God's Dickers I'll tell him roundly of it, and if he were ten Lords: a shall know that I had not my Cheese and my Bacon for nothing.

Wife. Do you remember Husband, how he would mouch upon my Cheese-Cakes, he hath forgot this now, but now we'll remember him.

Seely, I, we shall have now three flaps with a Fox Tail: but i'faith I'll gibber a joint, but I'll tell him his own: stay, who comes here? O, stand up, here he comes, stand up.

Enter Hodge very fine, with a Tip-staff, Cromwell, the Mace carried before him; Norfolk, and Suffolk, and Attendants.

Hodge. Come, away with these Beggars here,
Rise up, Sirrah; Come out, good people;
Run before there ho.
[Friskiball riseth, and stands a far-off.

Seely. I, we are kicked away now, we come for our own; the time hath been, he would a looked more Friendly upon us: And you, Hodge, we know you well enough, though you are so fine.

Crom. Come hither, Sirrah: stay, what men are these?
My honest Host of Hounslow, and his Wife;
I owe thee money, Father, do I not?

Seely. I, by the body of me, dost thou; would thou wouldest pay me, good four pound it is, I have a the Post at home.

Crom. I know 'tis true; Sirrah, give him ten Angels,
And look your Wife and you do stay to Dinner:
And while you live, I freely give to you,
Four pound a Year, for the four pound I ought you.

Seely. Art not changed, art old Tom still?
Now God bless thee, good Lord Tom:
Home Joan, home; I'll dine with my Lord Tom to day,
And thou shalt come next Week.
Fetch my Cow; home Joan, home.

Wife. Now God bless thee, my good Lord Tom;
I'll fetch my Cow presently.

Enter Gardiner.

Crom. Sirrah, go to yon stranger, tell him I desire him stay to Dinner: I must speak with him.

Gard. My Lord of Norfolk, see you this same Bubble? That same puff; but mark the end, my Lord, mark the end.

Norf. I promise you, I like not something he hath done; But let that pass: the King doth love him well.

Crom. Good Morrow to my Lord of Winchester:
I know you bear me hard, about the Abbey Lands.

Gard. Have I not reason, when Religion is wronged?
You had no colour for what you have done.

Crom. Yes, the abolishing of Antichrist,
And of his Popish order for our Realm:
I am no Enemy to Religion,
But what is done, it is for England's good:
What did they serve for, but to feed a sort
Of lazy Abbots, and of full-fed Fryers?
They neither plow, nor sow, and yet they reap
The fat of all the Land, and suck the poor:
Look what was theirs, is in King Henry's hands,
His wealth before lay in the Abbey Lands.

Gard. Indeed these things you have alledg'd, my Lord,
When, God doth know, the infant yet unborn,
Will Curse the time, the Abbies were pull'd down:
I pray now where is Hospitality?
Where now may poor distressed people go,
For to relieve their need, or rest their bones,
When weary travel doth oppress their limbs?
And where religious men should take them in,
Shall now be kept back by a Mastive Dog:
And thousand thousand ——

Nor. O my Lord, no more: things past redress,
'Tis bootless to complain.

Crom. What shall we to the Convocation-House?

Nor. We'll follow you, my Lord, pray lead the way.

Enter old Cromwell, like a Farmer.

Old Crom. How? one Cromwell
Made Lord Keeper since I left Putney,
And dwelt in Yorkshire? I never heard better news:
I'll see that Cromwell, or it shall go hard.

Crom. My aged Father! state set aside:
Father, on my Knee I crave your blessing:
One of my Servants go and have him in,
At better leisure will we talk with him.

Old Crom. Now if I die, how happy were the day,
To see this comfort rains forth showers of joy.
[Exit old Cromwell.

Nor. This duty in him shows a kind of grace.

Crom. Go on before, for time draws on apace.
[Exeunt all but Friskiball.

Fris. I wonder what this Lord would have with me,
His man so strictly gave me charge to stay:
I never did offend him to my knowledge:
Well, good or bad, I mean to bide it all,
Worse than I am, now never can befal.

Enter Banister and his Wife.

Ban. Come, Wife, I take it be almost Dinner time,
For Mr. Newton, and Mr. Crosby sent to me
Last Night, they would come Dine with me,
And take their Bond in: I pray thee hie thee home,
And see that all things be in readiness.

Mrs. Ban. They shall be welcom, Husband, I'll go before,
But is not that man Master Friskiball?
[She runs and embraces him.

Ban. O Heavens! it is kind Master Friskiball:
Say, Sir, what hap hath brought you to this pass?

Fris. The same that brought you to your misery.

Ban. Why would you not acquaint me with your state?
Is Banister your poor Friend forgot?
Whose goods, whose love, whose life and all is yours.

Fris. I thought your usage would be as the rest,
That had more kindness at my hands than you,
Yet look'd ascance when as they saw me poor.

Mrs. Ban. If Banister would bear so base a heart,
I never would look my Husband in the Face,
But hate him as I would a Cockatrice.

Ban. And well thou mightest, should Banister deal so,
Since that I saw you, Sir, my state is mended:
And for the thousand pound I owe to you,
I have it ready for you, Sir, at home:
And though I grieve your fortune is so bad:
Yet that my hap's to help you makes me glad:
And now, Sir, will it please you walk with me.

Fris. Not yet I cannot, for the Lord Chancellor,
Hath here commanded me to wait on him,
For what I know not, pray God it be for good.

Ban. Never make doubt of that, I'll warrant you,
He is as kind a noble Gentleman,
As ever did possess the place he hath.

Mrs.

Mrs. Ban. Sir, my Brother is his Steward, if you pleaſe,
We'll go along and bear you Company:
I know we ſhall not want for welcome there?
Friſ. Withal my heart: but what's become of Bagot?
Ban. He is hanged for buying Jewels of the Kings.
Friſ. A juſt reward for one ſo impious,
The time draws on, Sir, will you go along.
Ban. I'll follow you, kind Maſter Friskiball.
[Exeunt omnes.

Enter two Merchants.

1. Now, Maſter Crosby, I ſee you have a care
To keep your word, in payment of your money.
2. By my Faith I have reaſon upon a Bond,
Three thouſand pounds is too much to forfeit,
Yet I doubt not, Maſter Baniſter.
1. By my Faith your ſumm is more than mine,
And yet I am not much behind you too,
Conſidering that to day I paid at Court.
2. Maſſe, and well remembred:
What's the reaſon the Lord Cromwell's men
Wear ſuch long Skirts upon their Coats?
They reach down to their very Hams.
1. I will reſolve you, Sir, and thus it is;
The Biſhop of Winchester, that loves not Cromwell,
As great men are envied as well as leſs,
A while a go there was a jar between them,
And it was brought to my Lord Cromwell's Ear,
That Biſhop Gardiner would ſit on his Skirts,
Upon which word he made his men long blue Coats,
And in the Court wore one of them himſelf:
And meeting with the Biſhop, quoth he, my Lord,
Here's Skirts enough now for your Grace to ſit on:
Which vexed the Biſhop to the very heart;
This is the reaſon why they wear long Coats.
2. 'Tis always ſeen, and mark it for a rule,
That one great man will envy ſtill another:
But 'tis a thing that nothing concerns me:
What, ſhall we now to Maſter Baniſter's?
1. I, come, we'll pay him royally for our Dinner. [Ex.

Enter the Uſher and the [illegible]wer, the meat goes over the Stage.

Uſher. Uncover there, Gentlemen.

Enter Cromwell, Bedford, Suffolk, Old Cromwell, Friskiball, Goodman Seely, and Attendants.

Crom. My noble Lords of Suffolk and Bedford,
Your Honours welcome to poor Cromwell's Houſe:
Where is my Father? nay, be covered, Father,
Although that duty to theſe noble men doth challenge it,
Yet I'll make bold with them.
Your Head doth bear the Calender of care:
What? Cromwell covered, and his Father bare?
It muſt not be. Now, Sir, to you;
Is not your name Friskiball? and a Florentine.
Friſ. My name was Friskiball, till cruel fate,
Did rob me of my name, and of my ſtate.
Crom. What Fortune brought you to this Countrey now?
Friſ. All other parts hath left me ſuccourleſs,
Save only this, becauſe of Debts I have
I hope to gain, for to relieve my want.
Crom. Did you not once upon your Florence Bridge,
Help a diſtreſſed man, robb'd by the Bandetti,
His name was Cromwell?
Friſ. I never made my brain
A Calender of any good I did,
I always lov'd this Nation with my heart.
Crom. I am that Cromwell that you there reliev'd,
Sixteen Duckets you gave me for to cloath me,
Sixteen to bear my charges by the way,
And ſixteen more I had for my Horſe hire,
There be thoſe ſeveral ſums juſtly return'd:
Yet it injuſtice were, that ſerving at my need,
For to repay them without intereſt:
Therefore receive of me theſe four ſeveral Bags;
In each of them there is four hundred Mark,
And bring to me the names of all your Debtors,
And if they will not ſee you paid, I will.
O God forbid, that I ſhould ſee him fall,
That helpt me in my greateſt need of all.
Here ſtands my Father that firſt gave me life,
Alas, what duty is too much for him?
This man in time of need did ſave my Life,
And therefore cannot do too much for him.
By this old man I oftentimes was fed,
Elſe might I have gone ſupperleſs to Bed.
Such kindneſs have I had of theſe three men,
That Cromwell no way can repay agen,
Now in to Dinner, for we ſtay too long,
And to good ſtomachs is no greater wrong.
[Exeunt omnes.

Enter Gardiner in his Study, and his man.

Gard. Sirrah, where be thoſe men I caus'd to ſtay?
Ser. They do attend your pleaſure, Sir, within.
Gard. Bid them come hither, and ſtay you without,
For by thoſe men the Fox of this ſame Land,
That makes a Gooſe of better than himſelf,
Muſt worried be unto his lateſt home,
Or Gardiner will fail in his intent.
As for the Dukes of Suffolk and of Norfolk,
Whom I have ſent for to come ſpeak with me;
Howſoever outwardly they ſhadow it,
Yet in their hearts I know they love him not;
As for the Earl of Bedford, he is but one,
And dares not gain-ſay what we do ſet down.

Enter the two Witneſſes.

Now, my Friends, you know I ſav'd your lives,
When by the Law you had deſerved Death;
And then you promiſed me upon your Oaths,
To venture both your lives to do me good.
Both Wit. We ſwore no more than that we will perform.
Gard. I take your words, and that which you muſt do,
Is ſervice for your God, and for your King;
To root a Rebel from this flouriſhing Land,
One that's an Enemy unto the Church:
And therefore muſt you take your ſolemn Oaths,
That you heard Cromwell, the Lord Chancellor,
Did wiſh a Dagger at King Henry's Heart:
Fear not to ſwear it, for I heard him ſpeak it;
Therefore we'll ſhield you from enſuing harms.
2. Wit. If you will warrant us the deed is good,
We'll undertake it.
Gard. Kneel down, and I will here abſolve you both;
This Crucifix I lay upon your Heads,
And ſprinkle Holy-water on your brows:
The deed is meritorious that you do,
And by it ſhall you purchaſe Grace from Heaven.
1. Now Sir we'll undertake it, by our Souls.
2. For Cromwell never loved none of our ſort.
Gard. I know he doth not, and for both of you,
I will prefer you to ſome place of worth;
Now get you in, until I call for you,
For preſently the Dukes mean to be here. [Exeunt Wit.
Cromwell, ſit faſt, thy time's not long to reign;
The Abbies that were pull'd down by thy means,
Is now a mean for me to pull thee down:
Thy pride alſo thy own head lights upon,

Enter

For thou art he hath chang'd Religion:
But now no more, for here the Dukes are come.

Enter Suffolk, Norfolk, and the Earl of Bedford.

Suff. Good even to my Lord Bishop.
Norf. How fares my Lord? what, are you all alone?
Gard. No, not alone, my Lords, my mind is troubled:
I know your honours muse wherefore I sent,
And in such haste: What came you from the King?
Norf. We did, and left none but Lord Cromwell with him.
Gard. O what a dangerous time is this we live in?
There's Thomas Wolsey, he's already gone,
And Thomas Moor, he followed after him:
Another Thomas yet there doth remain,
That is far worse than either of those twain;
And if with speed, my Lords, we not pursue it,
I fear the King and all the Land will rue it.
Bed. Another Thomas? pray God it be not Cromwell.
Gard. My Lord of Bedford, it is that Traytor Cromwell.
Bed. Is Cromwell false? my heart will never think it.
Suff. My Lord of Wincheſter, what likelihood,
Or proof have you of this his treachery.
Gard. My Lord, too much, call in the men within.

Enter the Witnesses.

These men, my Lord, upon their Oaths affirm,
That they did hear Lord Cromwell in his Garden,
Wished a Dagger sticking at the Heart
Of our King Henry, what is this but Treason?
Bed. If it be so, my heart doth bleed with sorrow.
Suff. How say you, Friends; what, did you hear these words?
1. Wit. We did, an't like your grace.
Norf. In what place was Lord Cromwell when he spake them?
2. Wit. In his Garden; where we did attend a Suit,
Which we had waited for two years and more.
Suff. How long is't since you heard him speak these words?
2. Wit. Some half a year since.
Bed. How chance that you conceal'd it all this time?
1. Wit. His Greatness made us fear, that was the cause.
Gard. I, I, his Greatness, that's the cause indeed;
And to make his Treason here more manifest,
He calls his Servants to him round about,
Tells them of Wolsey's Life, and of his fall,
Sayes that himself hath many Enemies,
And gives to some of them a Park, or Mannor,
To others Leases, Lands to other some:
What need he do this in his prime of life,
An if he were not fearful of his death?
Suff. My Lord, these likelihoods are very great.
Bed. Pardon me, Lords, for I must needs depart;
Their proofs are great, but greater is my heart.
[Exit Bedford.
Norf. My Friends, take heed
Of that which you have said;
Your Souls must answer what your tongues report:
Therefore take heed, be wary what you do.
2. Wit. My Lord, we speak no more but truth.
Norf. Let them depart, my Lord of Wincheſter;
Let these men be close kept
Until the day of tryal.
Gard. They shall, my Lord; ho, take in these two men.
[Exeunt Witnesses.
My Lords, if Cromwell have a publick Tryal,
That which we do, is void, by his denial;
You know the King will credit none but him.
Norf. 'Tis true, he rules the King even as he pleases.
Suff. How shall we do for to attach him then?
Gard. Marry, my Lords, thus,
By an Act he made himself,
With an intent to intrap some of our lives,
And this it is: If any Counsellor
Be convicted of High Treason,
He shall be executed without a publick Tryal.
This Act, my Lords, he caus'd the King to make.
Suff. A did indeed, and I remember it,
And now it is like to fall upon himself.
Norf. Let us not slack it, 'tis for Englands good,
We must be wary, else he'll go beyond us.
Gar. Well hath your Grace said, my Lord of Norfolk,
Therefore, let us presently to Lambeth,
Thither comes Cromwell, from the Court to night,
Let us arrest him, send him to the Tower.
And in the Morning, cut off the Traytors Head.
Norf. Come then about it, let us guard the Town,
This is the day that Cromwell must go down.
Gar. Along my Lords, well, Cromwell is half dead,
He shak'd my heart, but I will shave his Head. [Exeunt.

Enter Bedford solus.

Bed. My Soul is like a Water troubled,
And Gardiner is the man that makes it so;
O Cromwell, I do fear thy end is near:
Yet I'll prevent their malice if I can,
And in good time, see where the man doth come,
Who little knows how near's his day of doom.

Enter Cromwell with his Train, Bedford makes as though he would speak to him: he goes on.

Crom. You'r well encountred, my good Lord of Bedford,
Pray Pardon me, I am sent for to th' King,
And do not know the business yet my self,
So fare you well, for I must needs be gone.
[Exit all the Train.
Bed. You must, well, what remedy?
I fear too soon you must be gone indeed,
The King hath business, but little do'st thou know,
Whose busie for thy life: thou think'st not so.

Enter Cromwell and the Train again.

Crom. The second time well met my Lord of Bedford:
I am very sorry that my haste is such,
Lord Marques Dorset being sick to Death,
I must receive of him the Privy Seal
At Lambeth, soon my Lord, we'll talk our fill.
[Exit the Train.
Bed. How smooth and easie is the way to Death.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My Lord, the Dukes of Norfolk and of Suffolk,
Accompanied with the Bishop of Wincheſter,
Intreats you to come presently to Lambeth,
On earnest matters that concerns the State.
Bed. To Lambeth, so: go fetch me Pen and Ink,
I and Lord Cromwell there shall talk enough:
I, and our last, I fear, and if he come.
[He writes a Letter.
Here, take this Letter, and bear it to Lord Cromwell,
Bid him read it, say it concerns him near,
Away, be gone, make all the haste you can,
To Lambeth do I go, a woful man. [Exit.

Enter Cromwell and his Train.

Crom. Is the Barge ready? I will straight to Lambeth,
And if this one dayes business, once were past,

I'd

I'd take my eaſe to morrow after trouble,
How now my Friend, would'ſt thou ſpeak with me?
[The Meſſenger brings the Letter, he puts it in his pocket.
Meſ. Sir, here's a Letter from my Lord of Bedford.
Crom. O good my Friend, commend me to thy Lord,
Hold, take thoſe Angels, drink them for thy pains.
Meſ. He doth deſire your Grace to read it,
Becauſe he ſayes it doth concern you near.
Crom. Bid him aſſure himſelf of that, farewel,
To morrow, tell him, he ſhall hear from me,
Set on before there, and away to Lambeth.
[Exeunt omnes.

Enter Winchester, Suffolk, Norfolk, Bedford, Serjeant at Arms, the Herald, and Halberts.

Gar. Halberts ſtand cloſe unto the Water ſide,
Serjeant at Arms, be bold in your Office,
Herald, deliver your Proclamation.
Her. This is to give notice to all the Kings Subjects,
The late Lord Cromwell, Lord Chancellor of England,
Vicar general over the Realm,
Him to hold and eſteem as a Traitor,
Againſt the Crown and dignity of England.
So God ſave the King.
Gar. Amen.
Bed. Amen, and root thee from the Land,
For whil'ſt thou liveſt, truth cannot ſtand.
Nor. Make a lane there, the Traitor is at hand,
Keep back Cromwell's men:
Drown them if they come on. Serjeant, your Office?

Enter Cromwell, they make a lane with their Halberts.

Crom. What means my Lord of Norfolk by theſe words?
Sirs, come along.
Gar. Kill them, if they come on.
Ser. Lord Cromwell, in King Henries name,
I do arreſt your honour of high Treaſon.
Crom. Serjeant, me of Treaſon?
[Cromwell's men offer to draw.
Suff. Kill them, if they draw a Sword.
Crom. Hold, I charge you, as you love me, draw not a Sword,
Who dares accuſe Cromwell of Treaſon now?
Gar. This is no place to reckon up your crime,
Your Dove-like looks were view'd with Serpents Eyes.
Crom. With ſerpents Eyes indeed, by thine they were,
But, Gardiner, do thy worſt, I fear thee not,
My Faith compar'd with thine, as much ſhall paſs,
As doth the Diamond excell the glaſs:
Attach'd of Treaſon, no accuſers by,
Indeed what tongue dares ſpeak ſo foul a lie?
Nor. My Lord, my Lord, matters are too well known,
And is it time the King had note thereof.
Crom. The King, let me go to him face to face,
No better Trial I deſire than that,
Let him but ſay, that Cromwell's Faith was feign'd,
Then let my Honour, and my Name be ſtain'd;
If ever my heart againſt the King was ſet,
O let my Soul in judgement anſwer it:
Then if my Faith's confirmed with his reaſon,
'Gainſt whom hath Cromwell then committed treaſon?
Suf. My Lord, your matter ſhall be tried,
Mean time with patience content your ſelf.
Crom. Perforce I muſt with patience be content:
O dear Friend Bedford, doſt thou ſtand ſo near?
Cromwell rejoyceth, one Friend ſheds a tear:
And whither is't? which way muſt Cromwell now?
Gar. My Lord, you muſt unto the Tower:
Lieutenant, take him to your charge.
Crom. Well, where you pleaſe, yet before I part,
Let me confer a little with my men.
Gar. As you go by Water ſo you ſhall.
Crom. I have ſome buſineſs preſent to impart.
Nor. You may not ſtay, Lieutenant, take your charge.
Crom. Well, well, my Lord, your ſecond Gardiners text.
Norfolk, farewel, thy turn will be the next.
[Exit Cromwell and the Lieutenant.
Gar. His guilty conſcience makes him rave, my Lord.
Nor. I, let him talk, his time is ſhort enough.
Gar. My Lord of Bedford, come, you weep for him,
That would not ſhed a tear for you.
Bed. It grieves me for to ſee his ſudden fall.
Gar. Such ſucceſs wiſh I unto Traitors all. [Exeunt.

Enter two Citizens.

1. Why? can this news be true? is't poſſible?
The great Lord Cromwell arreſted upon high Treaſon,
I hardly will believe it can be ſo.
2. It is too true, Sir, would it were otherwiſe,
Condition I ſpent half the wealth I have;
I was at Lambeth, ſaw him there arreſted,
And afterward committed to the Tower.
1. What was't for Treaſon that he was committed?
2. Kind Noble Gentleman: I may rue the time;
All that I have, I did enjoy by him,
And if he die, then all my ſtate is gone.
1. It may be hoped that he ſhall not die,
Becauſe the King did favour him ſo much.
2. O Sir, you are deceived in thinking ſo:
The grace and favour he had with the King,
Hath caus'd him have ſo many Enemies:
He that in Court ſecure will keep himſelf,
Muſt not be great, for then he is envied at.
The Shrub is ſafe, when as the Cedar ſhakes,
For where the King doth love above compare,
Of others they as much more envied are.
1. 'Tis pity that this noble man ſhould fall,
He did ſo many charitable deeds.
2. 'Tis true, and yet you ſee in each eſtate,
There's none ſo good, but ſome one doth him hate,
And they before would ſmile him in the face,
Will be the formoſt to do him diſgrace:
What, will you go along unto the Court?
1. I care not if I do, and hear the news,
How men will judge what ſhall become of him.
2. Some men will ſpeak hardly, ſome will ſpeak in pity,
Go you to the Court. I'le go into the City,
There I am ſure to hear more news than you.
1. Why then ſoon will we meet again. [Exeunt.

Enter Cromwell in the Tower.

Crom. Now, Cromwell, haſt thou time to meditate,
And think upon thy ſtate, and of the time:
Thy honours came unſought, I, and unlook'd for,
They fall as ſudden, and unlook'd for too:
What glory was in England that I had not?
Who in this Land commanded more than Cromwell?
Except the King, who greater than my ſelf?
But now I ſee what after ages ſhall,
The greater men, more ſudden is their fall.
And now I do remember, the Earl of Bedford
Was very deſirous for to ſpeak to me:
And afterward ſent unto me a Letter,
The which I think I have ſtill in my Pocket,
Now may I read it, for I now have leiſure,
And this I take it is. [He reads the Letter.

My Lord, come not this night to Lambeth,
For if you do, your ſtate is overthrown.
And much I doubt your life, and if you come:
Then if you love your ſelf, ſtay where you are.

O God,

O God, had I but read this Letter,
Then had I been free from the Lions Paw:
Deferring this to read until to Morrow,
I ſpurn'd at joy, and did embrace my ſorrow.

Enter the Lieutenant of the Tower and Officers.

Now, Maſter Lieutenant, when's this day of Death?
Lieu. Alas, my Lord, would I might never ſee it:
Here are the Dukes of Suffolk and of Norfolk,
Wincheſter, Bedford, and Sir Richard Ratcliff,
With others, but why they come I know not.
Crom. No matter wherefore, Cromwell is prepar'd,
For Gardiner has my life and ſtate inſnar'd:
Bid them come in, or you ſhall do them wrong,
For here ſtands he, whom ſome think lives too long,
Learning kills Learning, and, inſtead of Ink
To dip his Pen, Cromwell's heart blood doth drink.

Enter all the Nobles.

Norf. Good morrow, Cromwell, what, alone ſo ſad?
Crom. One good among you, none of you are bad:
For my part, it beſt fits me be alone,
Sadneſs with me, not I with any one.
What, is the King acquainted with my cauſe?
Norf. We have, and he hath anſwered us, my Lord.
Crom. How ſhall I come to ſpeak with him my ſelf.
Gard. The King is ſo advertiſed of your guilt,
He will by no means admit you to his preſence.
Crom. No way admit me, am I ſo ſoon forgot?
Did he but yeſterday embrace my neck,
And ſaid that Cromwell was even half himſelf,
And are his Princely ears ſo much bewitched
With ſcandalous ignominy, and ſlanderous ſpeeches,
That now he doth deny to look on me?
Well, my Lord of Wincheſter, no doubt but you
Are much in favour with his Majeſty,
Will you bear a Letter from me to his Grace?
Gar. Pardon me, I'le bear no Traitors Letters.
Crom. Ha, will you do this kindneſs then?
Tell him by word of mouth what I ſhall ſay to you.
Gard. That will I.
Crom. But on your honour will you?
Gard. I, on my honour.
Crom. Bear witneſs, Lords.
Tell him, when he hath known you,
And try'd your Faith but half ſo much as mine,
He'll find you to be the falſeſt hearted man
In England: Pray tell him this.
Bed. Be patient, good my Lord, in theſe extremities.
Crom. My kind and honourable Lord of Bedford,
I know your honour always lov'd me well,
But, pardon me, this ſtill ſhall be my theam,
Gardiner is the cauſe makes Cromwell ſo extream:
Sir Ralph Sadler, pray a word with you;
You were my man, and all that you poſſeſs
Came by my means, to requite all this,
Will you take this Letter here of me,
And give it with your own hands to the King.
Sad. I kiſs your hand, and never will I reſt,
E're to the King this be delivered. [Exit Sadler.
Crom. Why yet Cromwell hath one Friend in ſtore.
Gard. But all the haſte he makes ſhall be but vain;
Here's a diſcharge for your Priſoner,
To ſee him executed preſently:
My Lord, you hear the tenor of your life.
Crom. I do embrace it, welcome my laſt date,
And of this gliſtering world I take laſt leave;
And, Noble Lords, I take my leave of you:
As willingly I go to meet with Death,
As Gardiner did pronounce it with his breath;
From Treaſon is my heart as white as Snow,
My Death only procured by my Foe:
I pray commend me to my Soveraign King,
And tell him in what ſort his Cromwell dy'd,
To loſe his Head before his cauſe was try'd:
But let his Grace, when he ſhall hear my name,
Say only this, Gardiner procur'd the ſame.

Enter young Cromwell.

Lieu. Here is your Son come to take his leave.
Crom. To take his leave?
Come hither, Harry Cromwell;
Mark, Boy, the laſt words that I ſpeak to thee;
Flatter not Fortune, neither fawn upon her;
Gape not for ſtate, yet loſe no ſpark of honour;
Ambition, like the plague ſee thou eſchew it;
I die for Treaſon, Boy, and never knew it;
Yet let thy Faith as ſpotleſs be as mine,
And Cromwell's virtues in thy face ſhall ſhine:
Come, go along and ſee me leave my breath,
And I'le leave thee upon the floor of Death.
Son. O Father, I ſhall die to ſee that wound,
Your blood being ſpilt will make my heart to ſound.
Crom. How, Boy, not look upon the Axe?
How ſhall I do then to have my head ſtrook off?
Come on, my Child, and ſee the end of all,
And after ſay that Gardiner was my fall.
Gard. My Lord, you ſpeak it of an envious heart,
I have done no more than Law and Equity.
Bed. O, my good Lord of Wincheſter, forbear;
It would better ſeemed you to been abſent,
Than with your words diſturb a dying man.
Crom. Who me, my Lord? no: he diſturbs not me,
My mind he ſtirrs not, though his mighty ſhock
Hath brought moe Peers heads down to the block.
Farewel, my Boy, all Cromwell can bequeath,
My hearty bleſſing, ſo I take my leave.
Hang. I am your death's man, pray my Lord, forgive me.
Crom. Even with my Soul, why man thou art my Doctor,
And bring'ſt me precious Phyſick for my Soul;
My Lord of Bedford, I deſire of you,
Before my Death a corporal embrace.
[Bedford comes to him, Cromwell embraces him.
Farewel, great Lord, my love I do commend:
My heart to you, my Soul to Heaven I ſend;
This is my joy, that e're my body fleet,
Your honour'd arms is my true winding ſheet;
Farewel, dear Bedford, my peace is made in Heaven;
Thus falls great Cromwell a poor ell in length,
To riſe to unmeaſur'd height, wing'd with new ſtrength.
The lands of Worms, which dying men diſcover.
My Soul is ſhrin'd with heaven's celeſtial cover.
[Exeunt Cromwell and the Officers, and others.
Bed. Well, Farewel Cromwell, the trueſt Friend
That ever Bedford ſhall poſſeſs again,
Well, Lords, I fear when this man is Dead,
You'll wiſh in vain that Cromwell had a head.

Enter one with Cromwell's Head.

Offi. Here is the Head of the deceaſed Cromwell.
Bed. Pray thee go hence, and bear his head away,
Unto his Body, inter them both in Clay.

Enter Sir Ralph Sadler.

Sad. How now my Lords, what is Lord Cromwell dead?
Bed. Lord Cromwell's body now doth want a head.
Sad. O God, a little ſpeed had ſav'd his life,
Here is a kind Reprieve come from the King,
To bring him ſtraight unto his Majeſty.
Suff. I, I, Sir Ralph, Reprieves come now too late.
Gar. My conſcience now tells me this deed was ill,
Would Chriſt that Cromwell were alive again.
Nor. Come let us to the King, whom well I know,
Will grieve for Cromwell, that his Death was ſo.
[Exeunt omnes.

THE PROLOGUE.

THE doubtful Title (Gentlemen) prefixt
Upon the Argument we have in hand,
May breed ſuſpence, and wrongfully diſturb
The peaceful quiet of your ſetled thoughts:
To ſtop which ſcruple, let this brief ſuffice;
It is no pamper'd Glutton we preſent,
Nor aged Counſellor to youthful ſin;
But one, whoſe vertue ſhone above the reſt,

A valiant Martyr, and a vertuous Peer,
In whoſe true Faith and Loyalty expreſt
Unto his Sovereign, and his Countries weal:
We ſtrive to pay that tribute of our love
Your favours merit: Let fair truth be grac'd,
Since forg'd invention former time defac'd.

Sheriff. MY Lords I charge ye in his Highneſs name, to keep the Peace, you and your followers.

Her. Good Maſter Sheriff, look unto your ſelf.

Pow. Do ſo, for we have other buſineſs.

[Proffer to fight again.

Sher. Will ye diſturb the Judges, and the Aſſize? Hear the King's Proclamation, ye were beſt.

Pow. Hold then, let's hear it.

Her. But be brief, ye were beſt.

Bail. O yes.

Davy. Coſſone, make ſhorter O, or ſhall mar your Yes.

Bail. O yes.

Owen. What, has her nothing to ſay, but O yes?

Bail. O yes.

Davy. O nay, py coſs plut, down with her, down with her. A Powis, a Powis.

Gough. A Herbert, a Herbert, and down with Powis.

[Helter skelter again.

Sher. Hold in the King's name, hold.

Owen. Down with a Kanaves name, down.

[In this fight the Bailiff is knock'd down, and the Sheriff and the other run away.

Her. Powis, I think thy welſh and thou do ſmart.

Pow. Herbert, I think my Sword came near thy heart.

Her. Thy hearts beſt bloud ſhall pay the loſs of mine.

Gough. A Herbert, a Herbert.

Davy. A Powis, a Powis.

As they are fighting, Enter the Mayor of Hereford, his Officers and Townſmen with Clubs.

May. My Lords, as you are Liegemen to the Crown,
True Noblemen, and Subjects to the King,
Attend his Highneſs Proclamation,
Commanded by the Judges of Aſſize,
For keeping Peace at this Aſſembly.

Her. Good Maſter Mayor of Hereford, be brief.

May. Serjeant, without the Ceremonies of O yes,
Pronounce aloud the Proclamation.

Ser. The Kings Juſtices, perceiving what publick miſchief may enſue this private quarrel: in his Majeſties name, do ſtraightly charge and command all perſons, of what degree ſoever, to depart this City of Hereford, except ſuch as are bound to give attendance at this Aſſize, and that no man preſume to wear any Weapon, eſpecially Welſh-Hooks, Forreſt Bills.

Owen. Haw? No pill nor Wells hoog? ha?

May. Peace, and hear the Proclamation.

Ser. And that the Lord Powis do preſently diſperſe and diſcharge his Retinue, and depart the City in the Kings Peace, he and his Followers, on pain of Impriſonment.

Davy. Haw? pud her Lord Powis in Priſon? A Powis A Powis. Coſſoon, her will live and tye with her Lord.

Gough. A Herbert, a Herbert.

In this fight the Lord Herbert is wounded, and falls to the ground, the Mayor and his Company cry for Clubs: Powis runs away, Gough and Herberts Faction are buſy about him. Enter the two Judges, the Sheriff, and his Bailiffs afore them, &c.

1. Jud. Where's the Lord Herbert? Is he hurt or ſlain?

Sher. He's here, my Lord.

2. Jud. How fares his Lordſhip, Friends?

Gough. Mortally wounded, ſpeechleſs, he cannot live.

1. Jud. Convey him hence, let not his wounds take air,
And get him dreſt with expedition.

[Exit L. Herbert and Gough.

Maſter Mayor of Hereford, Maſter Sheriff o' th' Shire,
Commit Lord Powis to ſafe Cuſtody,
To anſwer the diſturbance of the Peace,
Lord Herberts peril, and his high contempt
Of us, and you the Kings Commiſſioners,
See it be done with care and diligence.

Sher. Pleaſe it your Lordſhip, my Lord Powis is gone paſt all recovery.

2. Jud. Yet let ſearch be made,
To apprehend his Followers that are left.

Sher. There are ſome of them: Sirs, lay hold of them.

Owen. Of us? and why? what has her done I pray you?

Sher. Diſarm them, Bailiffs.

May. Officers aſſiſt.

Davy. Hear you, Lord Shudge, what reſſon for this?

Owen. Coſſoon, pe puſe for fighting for our Lord?

1. Jud. Away with them.

Davy. Harg you, my Lord.

Owen. Gough my Lord Herberts man's a ſmitten Kanave.

Davy. Ice live and tye in good quarrel.

Owen. Pray you do ſhuſtice, let awl be Priſon.

Davy. Priſon, no,
Lord Shudge, I wool give you Pale, good Surety.

2. Jud. What Bail? what Sureties?

Davy. Her Cozen ap Rice, ap Evan, ap Moriee, ap Morgan, ap Llnellyn, ap Madoc, ap Meredith, ap Griffin, ap Davy, ap Owen, ap Shinken Shones.

2. Jud. Two of the moſt ſufficient are enow.

Sher. And't pleaſe your Lordſhip theſe are all but one.

1. Jud. To Jayl with them, and the Lord Herberts men,
We'll talk with them, when the Aſſize is done. [Exeunt.
Riotous, audacious, and unruly Grooms,
Muſt we be forced to come from the Bench,
To quiet Brawls, which every Conſtable
In other civil places can ſuppreſs?

2. Jud. What was the quarrel that caus'd all this ſtir?

Sher. About Religion as I heard, my Lord.
Lord Powis's detracted from the power of Rome,
Affirming Wickliff's Doctrine to be true,
And Romes erroneous: hot reply was made
By the Lord Herbert, they were Traytors all
That would maintain it. Powis anſwered,
They were as true, as noble, and as wiſe
As he, that would defend it with their lives,
He nam'd for inſtance Sir John Oldcaſtle
The Lord Cobham: Herbert replied again,
He, thou, and all are Traytors that ſo hold.
The lye was given, the ſeveral Factions drawn,
And ſo enrag'd, that we could not appeaſe it.

1. Jud. This caſe concerns the Kings Prerogative,
And 'tis dangerous to the State and Common-wealth.
Gentlemen, Juſtices, Maſter Mayor, and Maſter Sheriff,
It doth behove us all, and each of us
In general and particular, to have care
For the ſuppreſſing of all mutinies,
And all Aſſemblies, except Souldiers muſters,

For

For the Kings preparation into France.
We hear of ſecret Conventicles made,
And there is doubt of ſome Conſpiracies,
Which may break out into rebellious arms
When the King's gone, perchance before he go:
Note as an inſtance, this one perillous fray,
What Factions might have grown on either part,
To the deſtruction of the King and Realm:
Yet, in my Conſcience, Sir John Oldcaſtle's
Innocent of it, only his name was us'd.
We therefore from his Highneſs give this charge:
You Maſter Mayor, look to your Citizens,
You Maſter Sheriff, unto your Shire, and you
As Juſtices in every ones precinct
There be no meetings. When the vulgar ſort
Sit on their Ale-Bench, with their Cups and Cans,
Matters of State be not their common talk,
Nor pure Religion by their Lips prophan'd.
Let us return unto the Bench again,
And there examine further of this fray.

Enter a Bailiff and a Serjeant.

Sher. Sirs, have ye taken the Lord Powis yet?
Bail. No, nor heard of him.
Ser. No, he's gone far enough.
2. Judg. They that are left behind, ſhall anſwer all.
[Exeunt.

Enter Suffolk, Biſhop of Rocheſter, Maſter Butler, Sir John the Parſon of Wrotham.

Suf. Now, my Lord Biſhop, take free liberty
To ſpeak your mind; What is your ſuit to us?
Biſh. My noble Lord, no more than what you know,
And have been oftentimes inveſted with:
Grievous complaints have paſt between the Lips
Of envious perſons to upbraid the Clergy,
Some carping at the livings which we have;
And others ſpurning at the Ceremonies
That are of ancient cuſtom in the Church.
Amongſt the which, Lord Cobham is a chief:
What inconvenience may proceed hereof,
Both to the King, and to the Common-wealth,
May eaſily be diſcern'd, when like a frenſy
This innovation ſhall poſſeſs their minds.
Theſe upſtarts will have followers to uphold
Their damn'd opinion, more than Harry ſhall,
To undergo his quarrel 'gainſt the French.
Suf. What proof is there againſt them to be had,
That what you ſay the Law may juſtifie?
Biſh. They give themſelves the names of Proteſtants,
And meet in Fields and ſolitary Groves.
Sir John. Was ever heard (my Lord) the like till now?
That Thieves and Rebels, 'sbloud Hereticks,
Plain Hereticks, I'll ſtand to't to their teeth,
Should have to colour their vile practices,
A Title of ſuch worth, as Proteſtant?

Enter one with a Letter.

Suf. O but you muſt not ſwear, it ill becomes
One of your Coat, to rap out bloudy Oaths.
Biſh. Pardon him, good my Lord, it is his zeal,
An honeſt Country Prelate, who laments
To ſee ſuch foul diſorder in the Church.
Sir John. There's one they call him Sir John Oldcaſtle.
He has not his name for nought: for like a Caſtle
Doth he encompaſs them within his Walls,
But till that Caſtle be ſubverted quite,
We ne're ſhall be at quiet in the Realm.
Biſh. This is our Suit (my Lord) that he be tane
And brought in queſtion for his Hereſie:
Beſide, two Letters brought me out of Wales,
Wherein my Lord Hertford writes to me,
What tumult and ſedition was begun,
About the Lord Cobham, at the Sizes there,
For they had much ado to calm the rage,
And that the valiant Herbert is there ſlain.
Suf. A fire that muſt be quencht. Well, ſay no more,
The King anon goes to the Council Chamber,
There to debate of matters touching France,
As he doth paſs by, I'll inform his Grace
Concerning your Petition. Maſter Butler,
If I forget, do you remember me.
But. I will my Lord. [Offer him a Purſe.
Biſh. Not as a Recompence,
But as a Token of our love to you.
By me (my Lords) the Clergy doth preſent
This Purſe, and in't full a thouſand Angels,
Praying your Lordſhip to accept their gift.
Suf. I thank them, my Lord Biſhop, for their love,
But will not take their money, if you pleaſe
To give it to this Gentleman, you may.
Biſh. Sir, then we crave your furtherance herein.
But. The beſt I can, my Lord of Rocheſter.
Biſh. Nay, pray take it, truſt me you ſhall.
Sir John. Were ye all three upon New-Market Heath,
You ſhould not need ſtrain curt'ſie who ſhould ha't,
Sir John would quickly rid ye of that care.
Suf. The King is coming: Fear ye not, my Lord,
The very firſt thing I will break with him
Shall be about your matter.

Enter King Harry and Huntington in talk.

Har. My Lord of Suffolk,
Was it not ſaid the Clergy did refuſe
To lend us Money toward our Wars in France?
Suf. It was my Lord, but very wrongfully.
Har. I know it was: for Huntington here tells me
They have been very bountiful of late.
Suf. And ſtill they vow, my gracious Lord, to be ſo,
Hoping your Majeſty will think on them
As of your loving Subjects, and ſuppreſs
All ſuch malicious errors as begin
To ſpot their calling, and diſturb the Church.
Har. God elſe forbid: why, Suffolk,
Is there any new rupture to diſquiet them?
Suf. No new my Lord, the old is great enough,
And ſo increaſing, as if not cut down,
Will breed a ſcandal to your Royal State,
And ſet your Kingdom quickly in an uproar.
The Kentiſh Knight, Lord Cobham in deſpight
Of any Law, or ſpiritual Diſcipline,
Maintains this upſtart new Religion ſtill,
And divers great Aſſemblies by his means
And private quarrels are commenc'd abroad,
As by this Letter more at large, my Liege, is made apparent.
Har. We do find it here,
There was in Wales a certain fray of late
Between two Noblemen. But what of this?
Follows it ſtraight Lord Cobham muſt be he Did cauſe the ſame? I dare be ſworn (good Knight)
He never dreamt of any ſuch contention.
Biſh. But in his name the quarrel did begin,
About the opinion which he held, my Liege.
Har. What if it did? was either he in place
To take part with them? or abett them in it?
If brabling fellows, whoſe enkindled bloud
Seeths in their fiery Veins, will needs go fight,
Making their quarrels of ſome words that paſt
Either of you, or you, amongſt their Cups,
Is the fault yours? or are they guilty of it?
Suf. With pardon of your Highneſs, my dread Lord,
Such little ſparks neglected, may in time
Grow to a mighty flame. But that's not all,
He doth beſide maintain a ſtrange Religion,

And will not be compell'd to come to Mass.
Bishop. We do beseech you therefore, gracious Prince,
Without offence unto your Majesty,
We may be bold to use Authority.
Har. As how?
Bishop. To summon him unto the Arches,
Where such offences have their punishment.
Har. To answer personally, is that your meaning?
Bishop. It is, my Lord.
Har. How if he appeal?
Bishop. My Lord, he cannot in such a case as this.
Suf. Not where Religion is the plea, my Lord.
Har. I took it always, that our self stood on't
As a sufficient refuge: unto whom
Not any but might lawfully appeal.
But we'll not argue now upon that point.
For Sir John Oldcastle whom you accuse,
Let me intreat you to dispence a while
With your high Title of preheminence. [In scorn.
Report did never yet condemn him so,
But he hath always been reputed loyal:
And in my knowledge I can say thus much,
That he is vertuous, wise, and honourable.
If any way his Conscience be seduc'd
To waver in his Faith, I'le send for him,
And school him privately: if that serve not,
Then afterward you may proceed against him.
Butler, be you the Messenger for us,
And will him presently repair to Court. [Exeunt.
S. John. How now my Lord? why stand you discontent?
Iusooth (methinks) the King hath well decreed.
Bishop. I, I, Sir John, if he would keep his word:
But I perceive he favours him so much
As this will be to small effect, I fear.
S. John. Why then I'le tell you what y'are best to do:
If you suspect the King will be but cold
In reprehending him, send you a Process too
To serve upon him, so ye may be sure
To make him answer't, howsoever it fall,
Bishop. And well remembred, I will have it so,
A Sumner shall be sent about it straight. [Exit.
S. John. Yea, do so. In the mean space this remains
For kind Sir John of Wrotham, honest Jack.
Methinks the purse of Gold the Bishop gave
Made a good shew, it had a tempting look:
Beshrew me, but my fingers ends do itch
To be upon those golden ruddocks. Well 'tis thus;
I am not as the world doth take me for:
If ever Wolf were cloathed in sheeps coat,
Then I am he; old huddle and tweng 'ifaith:
A Priest in shew, but (in plain terms) a Thief:
Yet let me tell you too, an honest Thief;
One that will take it where it may be spar'd,
And spend it freely in good fellowship.
I have as many shapes as Proteus had,
That still when any villany is done,
There may none suspect it was Sir John.
Besides, to comfort me (for what's this life,
Except the crabbed bitterness thereof
Be sweetned now and then with Letchery?)
I have my Doll, my Concubine as 'twere,
To frolick with, a lusty bouncing girle.
But whil'st I loyter here, the Gold may scape,
And that must not be so: It is mine own.
Therefore I'le meet him on his way to Court,
And shrive him of it, there will be the sport. [Exit.

Enter four poor People, some Souldiers, some Old men.

1. God help, God help, there's Law for punishing,
But there's no Law for our necessity:
There be more stocks to set poor souldiers in,
Than there be Houses to relieve them at.
Old man. I, House-keeping decays in every place,
Even as S. Peter writ, still worse and worse.
2. Master Mayor of Rochester has given command, That none shall go abroad out of the Parish, and has set down an Order forsooth, what every poor housholder must give for our relief: where there be some sessed (I may say to you) had almost as much need to beg as we.
1. It is a hard world the while.
Old m. If a poor man ask at door for God's sake, they ask him for a licence or a certificate from a Justice.
2. Faith we have none, but what we bear upon our bodies, our maim'd limbs, God help us.
4. And yet as lame as I am, I'le with the King into France, if I can but crawl a ship board, I had rather be slain in France, than starve in England.
Old m. Ha, were I but as lusty as I was at Shrewsbury battle, I would not do as I do: but we are now come to the good Lord Cobham's house, the best man to the poor in all Kent.
4. God bless him, there be but few such.

Enter Lord Cobham with Harpool.

Cob. Thou peevish froward man, what wouldst thou have?
Har. This pride, this pride, brings all to beggery,
I serv'd your Father, and your Grandfather,
Shew me such two men now: No, no,
Your backs, your backs; the Devil and pride
Has cut the throat of all good House-keeping,
They were the best Yeomens Masters that Ever were in England.
Cob. Yea, except thou have a crew of filthy knaves
And sturdy Rogues still feeding at my Gate,
There is no hospitality with thee.
Har. They may sit at the gate well enough, but the devil of any thing you give them, except they'll eat stones.
Cob. 'Tis long then of such hungry Knaves as you:
Yea, Sir, here's your retinue, your guests be come,
They know their hours, I warrant you.
Old m. God bless your honour, God save the good Lord Cobham, and all his House.
Soul. Good your honour, bestow your blessed almes
Upon poor men.
Cob. Now, Sir, here be your alms Knights:
Now are you as safe as the Emperour.
Har. My alms Knights? Nay th'are yours:
It is a shame for you, and I'le stand to't,
Your foolish alms maintains more Vagabonds
Than all the Noblemen in Kent beside.
Out you Rogues, you Knaves, work for your livings.
Alas poor men, they may beg their hearts out,
There's no more Charity among men
Than amongst so many Mastive Dogs.
What make you here, you needy knaves?
Away, away, you Villains.
2. Soul. I beseech you, Sir, be good.
Cob. Nay, nay, they know thee well enough, I think that all the beggers in this Land are thy acquaintance: go bestow your alms, none will controll you, Sir.
Har. What should I give them? you are grown so beggarly, that you can scarce give a bit of Bread at your door: you talk of your Religion so long, that you have banished Charity from you: a man may make a Flax-shop in your Kitchin Chimnies, for any fire there is stirring.
Cob. If thou wilt give them nothing, send them hence: Let them not stand here starving in the cold.
Har. Who, I drive them hence? If I drive poor men from the door, I'le be hang'd: I know not what I may come to my self: God help ye poor knaves, ye see the World. Well, you had a Mother: O God be with thee good Lady, thy Soul's at rest: she gave more in shirts and smocks to poor Children, than you spend in your House, and yet you live a beggar too.

Cob.

Cob. Even the worſt deed that ever my Mother did, was in relieving ſuch a Fool as thou.

Har. I, I am a Fool ſtill: with all your Wit you'll die a Beggar, go too.

Cob. Go, you old Fool, give the poor people ſomething: Go in poor men into the inner Court, and take ſuch Alms as there is to be had.

Soul. God bleſs your Honour.

Har. Hang you Rogues, hang you, there's nothing but miſery amongſt you, you fear no Law, you. [Exit.

Oldm. God bleſs you good Maſter Raſe, God ſave your Life, you are good to the poor ſtill.

Enter the Lord Powis diſguiſed.

Cob. What Fellow's yonder comes along the Grove?
Few Paſſengers there be that know this way:
Me thinks he ſtops as though he ſtaid for me,
And meant to ſhrow'd himſelf among the Buſhes,
I know the Clergy hates me to the Death,
And my Religion gets me many foes:
And this may be ſome deſperate Rogue
Suborn'd to work me miſchief: as it pleaſeth God.
If he come toward me, ſure I'le ſtay his coming,
Be he but one man, whatſo'ere he be. [Lord Powis comes on.
I have been well acquainted with that face.

Pow. Well met, my honourable Lord and Friend.

Cob. You are welcome, Sir, what ere you be;
But of this ſudden, Sir, I do not know you.

Pow. I am one that wiſheth well unto your Honour,
My name is Powis, an old Friend of yours.

Cob. My honourable Lord, and worthy Friend,
What makes your Lorſhip thus alone in Kent,
And thus diſguiſed in this ſtrange attire?

Pow. My Lord, an unexpected accident
Hath at this time enforc'd me to theſe parts,
And thus it hapt. Not yet full five days ſince,
Now at the laſt aſſize at Hereford,
It chanc'd that the Lord Herbert and my ſelf,
'Mongſt other things diſcourſing at the Table,
To fall in ſpeech about ſome certain points
Of Wickliff's Doctrine 'gainſt the Papacie,
And the Religion Catholick maintain'd
Through the moſt part of Europe at this day
This wilful teſty Lord ſtuck not to ſay,
That Wickliff was a Knave, a ſchiſmatick,
His Doctrine deviliſh and Heretical:
And whatſoever he was maintain'd the ſame,
Was Traitor both to God, and to his Country.
Being moved at his peremptory ſpeech
I told him, ſome maintain'd thoſe opinions,
Men, and truer Subjects than Lord Herbert was:
And he replying in compariſons,
Your name was urg'd, my Lord, againſt this challenge,
To be a perfect favourer of the truth.
And to be ſhort, from words we fell to blows,
Our Servants, and our Tenants taking parts.
Many on both ſides hurt: and for an hour
The broil by no means could be pacified,
Until the Judges riſing from the bench,
Were in their perſons forc'd to part the fray.

Cob. I hope no man was violently ſlain.

Pow. Faith none I truſt, but the Lord Herberts ſelf,
Who is in truth ſo dangerouſly hurt,
As it is doubted he can hardly ſcape.

Cob. I am ſorry, my good Lord, of theſe ill news.

Pow. This is the cauſe that drives me into Kent,
To ſhroud my ſelf with you ſo good a Friend,
Until I hear how things do ſpeed at home.

Cob. Your Lordſhip is moſt welcome unto Cobham:
But I am very ſorry, my good Lord,
My name was brought in queſtion in this matter,
Conſidering I have many Enemies,
That threaten malice, and do lye in wait
To take the vantage of the ſmalleſt thing.
But you are welcome, and repoſe your Lordſhip,
And keep your ſelf here ſecret in my Houſe,
Until we hear how the Lord Herbert ſpeeds.

Enter Harpool.

Here comes my man: Sirrah, what news?

Har. Yonder's one Mr. Butler of the privie Chamber, is ſent unto you from the King.

Pow. Pray God the Lord Herbert be not dead, and the King hearing whither I am gone, hath ſent for me.

Cob. Comfort your ſelf, my Lord, I warrant you.

Har. Fellow, what ails thee? do'ſt thou quake? do'ſt thou ſhake? do'ſt thou tremble? ha?

Cob. Peace, you old fool: Sirrah, convey this Gentleman in the back way, and bring the other into the walk.

Har. Come, Sir, y'are welcome, if you love my Lord.

Pow. Gramercy, gentle Friend. [Exeunt.

Cob. I thought as much, that it would not be long before I heard of ſomething from the King, about this matter.

Enter Harpool with Maſter Butler.

Har. Sir, yonder my Lord walks, you ſee him;
I'le have your men into the ſeller the while.

Cob. Welcome, good Maſter Butler.

But. Thanks, my good Lord: his Majeſty doth commend his love unto your Lordſhip, and wills you to repair unto the Court.

Cob. God bleſs his highneſs, and confound his Enemies, I hope his Majeſty is well?

But. In good health, my Lord.

Cob. God long continue it: me thinks you look as though you were not well, what ails ye, Sir?

But. Faith I have had a fooliſh odde miſchance, that angers me: coming over Shooters hill, there came one to me like a Sailor, and askt me money; and whilſt I ſtaid my Horſe to draw my purſe, he takes th' advantage of a little bank, and leaps behind me, whips my purſe away, and with a ſudden jerk, I know not how, threw me at leaſt three yards out of my Saddle; I never was ſo rob'd in all my life.

Cob. I am very ſorry, Sir, for your miſchance; we will ſend our warrant forth, to ſtay ſuch ſuſpitious perſons as ſhall be found, then Mr. Butler we'll attend you.

But. I humbly thank your Lordſhip, I will attend you.

Enter the Sumner.

Sum. I have the Law to warrant what I do, and though the Lord Cobham be a Nobleman, that diſpenſes not with Law, I dare ſerve a Proceſs were he five Noble men, though we Sumners make ſometimes a mad ſlip in a corner with a pretty wench, a Sumner muſt not go always by ſeeing: a man may be content to hide his Eyes where he may feel his profit. Well, this is Lord Cobham's Houſe, if I cannot ſpeak with him, I'le clap my Citation upon's door, ſo my Lord of Rocheſter bad me; but me thinks here comes one of his men.

Har. Welcome good fellow, welcome, who would'ſt thou ſpeak with?

Sum. With my Lord Cobham I would ſpeak, if thou be one of his men.

Har. Yes, I am one of his men, but thou canſt not ſpeak with my Lord.

Sum. May I ſend to him then?

Har. I'le tell thee that, when I know thy errand,

Sum. I will not tell my errand to thee.

Har. Then keep it to thy ſelf, and walk like a Knave as thou cameſt.

Sum. I tell thee, my Lord keeps no knaves, Sirrah.

Har. Then thou ſerveſt him not, I believe. What Lord is thy Maſter?

Sum. My Lord of Rochester.

Har. In good time: and what would'ſt thou have with my Lord Cobham?

Sum. I come by vertue of a Proceſs, to cite him to appear before my Lord in the Court at Rochester.

Har. aſide. Well, God grant me patience, I could eat this Counger. My Lord is not at home, therefore it were good, Sumner, you carried your Proceſs back.

Sum. Why, if he will not be ſpoken withal, then will I leave it here, and ſee that he take knowledge of it.

Har. 'Zounds you ſlave, do you ſet up your bills here: go too, take it down again. Do'ſt thou know what thou do'ſt? Do'ſt thou know on whom thou ſerveſt a Proceſs?

Sum. Yes marry do I, on Sir John Oldcaſtle, Lord Cobham.

Har. I am glad thou knoweſt him yet: and Sirrah, do'ſt not know that the Lord Cobham is a brave Lord, that keeps good Beef and Beer in his Houſe, and every day feeds a hundred poor people at's Gate, and keeps a hundred tall fellows?

Sum. What's that to my Proceſs?

Har. Marry this, Sir, is this proceſs parchment?

Sum. Yes marry is it.

Har. And this Seal wax?

Sum. It is ſo.

Har. If this be parchment, and this wax, eat you this parchment and this wax, or I will make parchment of your skin, and beat your brains into wax. Sirrah, Sumner, diſpatch, devour, Sirrah, devour.

Sum. I am my Lord of Rochester's Sumner, I came to do my office, and thou ſhalt anſwer it.

Har. Sirrah, no railing; but betake your ſelf to your teeth, thou ſhalt eat no worſe than thou bring'ſt with thee, thou bring'ſt it for my Lord, and wilt thou bring my Lord worſe than thou wilt eat thy ſelf?

Sum. Sir, I brought it not my Lord to eat.

Har. O do you Sir me now; all's one for that, I'le make you eat it, for bringing it.

Sum. I cannot eat it.

Har. Can you not? 'sblood I'le beat you till you have a Stomach. [Beats him.

Sum. O hold, hold, good Mr. Servingman, I will eat it.

Har. Be champing, be chawing, Sir, or I'le chaw you, you Rogue, the pureſt of the Honey.

Sum. Tough wax is the pureſt Hony.

Har. O Lord, Sir, oh, oh,
Feed, feed, 'tis wholſome, Rogue, wholſome.
Cannot you like an honeſt Sumner, walk with the Devil your Brother, to fetch in your Bailiff's rents; but you muſt come to a Noble mans houſe with proceſs? If thy Seal were as broad as the Lead that covers Rocheſter Church, thou ſhould'ſt eat it.

Sum. O, I am almoſt choaked, I am almoſt choaked.

Har. Who's within there? will you ſhame my Lord, is there no Beer in the Houſe? Butler I ſay.

Enter Butler.

But. Here, here.

Har. Give him Beer. [He drinks.
There: tough old ſheepskins, bare dry meat.

Sum. O Sir, let me go no further, I'le eat my word.

Har. Yea marry, Sir, I mean ye ſhall eat more than your own word, for I'le make you eat all the words in the proceſs. Why you drab monger, cannot the ſecrets of all the wenches in a Shire ſerve your turn, but you muſt come hither with a Citation with a pox? I'le cite you.
A Cup of Sack for the Sumner.

But. Here, Sir, here.

Har. Here, ſlave, I drink to thee.

Sum. I thank you, Sir.

Har. Now if thou find'ſt thy Stomach well, becauſe thou ſhalt ſee my Lord keeps meat in's houſe, if thou wilt go in thou ſhalt have a piece of Beef to thy break-faſt.

Sum. No I am very well, good Maſter Servingman, I thank you, very well, Sir.

Har. I am glad on't, then be walking towards Rocheſter to keep your Stomach warm. And Sumner, If I do know you diſturb a good wench within this Dioceſs, if I do not make thee eat her petticoat, if there were four yards of Kentiſh cloth in't, I am a villain.

Sum. God be w'ye, Maſter Servingman. [Exit.

Har. Farewel, Sumner.

Enter Conſtable..

Con. Save you, Maſter Harpool.

Har. Welcome Conſtable, welcome Conſtable, what news with thee?

Con. And't pleaſe you, Maſter Harpool, I am to make hue and cry for a fellow with one Eye, that has rob'd two Clothiers, and am to crave your hindrance to ſearch all ſuſpected places; and they ſay there was a Woman in the Company.

Har. Haſt thou been at the Ale-houſe? haſt thou ſought there?

Con. I durſt not ſearch in my Lord Cobham's liberty, except I had ſome of his Servants for my warrant.

Har. An honeſt Conſtable, call forth him that keeps the Ale-houſe there.

Con. Ho, who's within there?

Ale-man. Who calls there? Oh is't you, Mr. Conſtable, and Mr. Harpool? y'are welcome with all my heart, what make you here ſo early this morning?

Har. Sirrah, what ſtrangers do you lodge? there is a robbery done this morning, and we are to ſearch for all ſuſpected perſons.

Ale-man. Gods bores, I am ſorry for't. I'faith, Sir, I, lodge no body, but a good honeſt Prieſt, call'd Sir John a Wrotham, and a handſome Woman that is his Neece, that he ſaies he has ſome ſuit in Law for, and as they go up and down to London, ſometimes they lye at my Houſe.

Har. What, is ſhe here in thy Houſe now?

Ale-man. She is, Sir: I promiſe you, Sir, he is a quiet man, and becauſe he will not trouble too many rooms, he makes the woman lye every night at his beds feet.

Har. Bring her forth, Conſtable, bring her forth, let's ſee her, let's ſee her.

Ale-man. Dorothy, you muſt come down to Maſter Conſtable.

Doll. Anon forſooth. [She enters.

Har. Welcome, ſweet Laſs, welcome.

Doll. I thank you, good Sir, and Maſter Conſtable alſo.

Har. A plump girle by the Maſs, a plump girle: ha, Doll, ha. Wilt thou forſake the Prieſt, and go with me, Doll?

Con. Ah! well ſaid, Maſter Harpool, you are a merry old man i'faith; you will never be old now by the mack, a pretty wench indeed.

Har. Ye old mad merry Conſtable, art thou advis'd of that? Ha, well ſaid Doll, fill ſome Ale here.

Doll aſide. Oh if I wiſt this old Prieſt would not ſtick to me, by Jove I would ingle this old ſerving-man.

Har. Oh you old mad colt, i'faith I'le ferk you: fill all the pots in the Houſe there.

Con. Oh! well ſaid, Maſter Harpool, you are heart of oak when all's done.

Har. Ha Doll, thou haſt a ſweet pair of lips by the Maſs.

Doll. Truly you are a moſt ſweet old man, as ever I ſaw; by my troth, you have a face able to make any Woman in love with you.

Har. Fill, ſweet Doll, I'le drink to thee.

Doll. I pledge you, Sir, and thank you therefore, and I pray you let it come.

Har. [Imbracing her] Doll, canſt thou love me? a mad merry Laſs, would to God I had never ſeen thee.

Doll. I warrant you, you will not out of my thoughts this twelvemonth, twelvemonth, truly you are as full of favour, as any man may be. Ah theſe ſweet gray locks, by my troth, they are moſt lovely.

Con. Cuds bores, Maſter Harpool, I'le have one buſs too.

Har. No licking for you, Conſtable, hand off, hand off.

Con. Berlady I love kiſſing as well as you.

Doll. Oh you are an odd boy, you have a wanton Eye of your own: ah you ſweet ſugar-lipt wanton, you will win as many Womens hearts as come in your Company.

Enter Prieſt.

Prieſt. Doll, come hither.

Har. Prieſt, ſhe ſhall not.

Doll. I'le come anon, ſweet love.

Prieſt. Hand off, old fornicator.

Har. Vicar, I'le ſit here in ſpight of thee, is this ſtuff for a Prieſt to carry up and down with him?

Prieſt. Sirrah, do'ſt thou not know that a good fellow parſon may have a chappel of eaſe, where his pariſh Church is far off?

Har. You Whorſon ſton'd Vicar.

Prieſt. You old ſtale Ruffin, you Lion of Cotſol.

Har. 'Zounds, Vicar, I'le geld you. [Flies upon him.

Con. Keep the Kings peace.

Doll. Murder, murder, murder!

Ale-man. Hold, as you are men, hold; for Gods ſake be quiet: put up your weapons, you draw not in my houſe.

Har. You Whorſon bawdy Prieſt.

Prieſt. You old mutton-monger.

Con. Hold, Sir John, hold.

Doll. I pray thee, ſweet heart, be quiet, I was but ſitting to drink a pot of Ale with him, even as kind a man as ever I met with.

Har. Thou art a Thief, I warrant thee.

Prieſt. Then I am but as thou haſt been in thy dayes, let's not be aſhamed of our Trade, the King has been a Thief himſelf.

Doll. Come, be quiet, haſt thou ſped?

Prieſt. I have, wench, here be crowns i'faith.

Doll. Come, let's be all Friends then.

Con. Well ſaid Miſtriſs Dorothy.

Har. Thou art the maddeſt Prieſt that ever I met with.

Prieſt. Give me thy hand, thou art as good a fellow: I am a ſinger, a drinker, a bencher, a wencher; I can ſay a Maſs, and kiſs a Laſs: Faith, I have a Parſonage, and becauſe I would not be at too much charges, this wench ſerveth me for a Sexton.

Har. Well ſaid, mad Prieſt, we'll in and be Friends.

[Exeunt.

Enter Sir Roger Acton, Maſter Bourn, Maſter Beverley, and William Murley the Brewer of Dunſtable,

Acton. Now Maſter Murley, I am well aſſur'd
You know our errant, and do like the cauſe,
Being a man affected as we are.

Mur. Marry God dild ye dainty my dear: No Maſter, good Sir Roger Acton, Maſter Bourn, and Maſter Beverley, Gentlemen and Juſtices of the Peace, no Maſter, I, but plain William Murley the Brewer of Dunſtable, your honeſt neighbour and your Friend, if ye be men of my profeſſion.

Bev. Profeſſed Friends to Wickliff; foes to Rome.

Mur. Hold by me, Lad, lean upon that ſtaff, good Maſter Beverley, all of a Houſe, ſay your mind, ſay your mind.

Acton. You know our faction now is grown ſo great
Throughout the Realm, that it begins to ſmoak
Into the Clergies Eyes, and the King's ears;
High time it is that we were drawn to head,
Our General and Officers appointed.
And wars ye wot, will ask great ſtore of Coyn,
Able to ſtrength our action with your purſe,
You are elected for a Colonel
Over a Regiment of fifteen Bands.

Mur. Fue, paltry, paltry, in and out, to and fro, be it more or leſs upon occaſion, Lord have mercy upon us, what a World is this! Sir Roger Acton, I am but a Dunſtable man, a plain Brewer, ye know: will luſty caveliering Captains (Gentlemen) come at my calling, go at my bidding? Dainty my dear, they'll do a Dog of wax, a Horſe of cheeſe, a prick and a pudding; no, no, ye muſt appoint ſome Lord or Knight at leaſt, to that place.

Bour. Why, Maſter Murley, you ſhall be a Knight:
Were you not in election to be Sheriff?
Have ye not paſt all Offices but that?
Have ye not wealth to make your Wife a Lady?
I warrant you, my Lord, our General
Beſtows that honour on you, at firſt ſight.

Mur. Marry God dild ye dainty my dear:
But tell me, who ſhall be our General.
Where's the Lord Cobham, Sir John Old caſtle,
That noble alms-giver, Houſe keeper, virtuous,
Religious Gentleman? Come to me there, boyes,
Come to me there.

Acton. Why, who but he ſhall be our General?

Mur. And ſhall he Knight me, and make me Colonel?

Act. My word for that, Sir William Murley Knight.

Mur. Fellow Sir Roger Acton Knight, all fellows I mean in Armes, how ſtrong are we? how many partners? Our Enemies beſide the King are mighty, be it more or leſs upon occaſion, reckon our force.

Act. There are of us our Friends and followers,
Three thouſand and three hundred at the leaſt:
Of Northern lads four thouſand, beſide horſe,
From Kent there comes with Sir John Oldcaſtle
Seven thouſand: then from London iſſue out,
Of Maſters, Servants, Strangers, Prentices,
Forty odd thouſand into Ficket field,
Where we appoint our ſpecial Randevouz.

Mur. Fue, paltry, paltry, in and out, to and fro, Lord have mercy upon us, what a World is this! Where's that Ficket field, Sir Roger?

Act. Behind S. Giles in the field, near Holborn.

Mur. Newgate, up Holborn, S. Giles in the field, and to Tyburn, an old ſay. For the day, for the day?

Act. On Friday next, the fourteenth day of January.

Mur. Tilly vally, truſt me never if I have any liking of that day. Fue, paltry, paltry, Friday quoth a, diſmal day, Childermas day this year was Friday.

Bev. Nay Maſter Murley, if you obſerve ſuch dayes,
We make ſome queſtion of your conſtancie,
All dayes are alike to men reſolv'd in right.

Mur. Say Amen, and ſay no more, but ſay and hold Maſter Beverley: Friday next, and Ficket field, and William Murley and his merry men ſhall be all one: I have half a ſcore jades that draw my Beer Carts, and every jade ſhall bear a knave, and every knave ſhall wear a jack, and every jack ſhall have a ſcull, and every ſcull ſhall ſhew a ſpear, and every ſpear ſhall kill a foe at Ficket field, at Ficket field: John and Tom, Dick and Hodge, Rafe and Robbin, William and George, and all my knaves ſhall fight like men, at Ficket field, on Friday next.

Bour. What ſumm of money mean you to diſburſe?

Mur. It may be modeſtly, decently, and ſoberly, and handſomely I may bring five hundred pound.

Act. Five hundred, man? five thouſand's not enough,
A hundred thouſand will not pay our men
Two month's together, either come prepar'd
Like a brave Knight, and martial Colonel,
In glittering gold, and gallant Furniture,
Bringing in Coin, a Cart-load at leaſt,
And all your followers mounted on good Horſe,
Or never come diſgraceful to us all.

Bev.

Bev. Perchance you may be choſen Treaſurer,
Ten thouſand pound's the leaſt that you can bring.
Mur. Paltry, paltry, in and out, to and fro: upon occaſion I have ten thouſand pound to ſpend, and ten too. And rather than the Biſhop ſhall have his will of me for my Conſcience, it ſhall all go. Flame and flax, flax and flame. It was got with Water and Malt, and it ſhall flye with fire and Gun-powder. Sir Roger, a Cart-load of money till the Axletree crack; my ſelf and my men in Ficket field on Friday next: remember my Knight hood and my place: there's my hand I'le be there. [Exit.
Act. See what ambition may perſwade men to,
In hope of honour he will ſpend himſelf.
Bour. I never thought a Brewer half ſo rich.
Bev. Was never bankrupt Brewer yet but one,
With uſing too much Malt, too little Water.
Act. That's no fault in Brewers now adayes:
Come, away about our buſineſs. [Exeunt.

Enter King Harry, Suffolk, Maſter Butler, Oldcaſtle kneeling to the King.

King. 'Tis not enough, Lord Cobham, to ſubmit,
You muſt forſake your groſs opinion;
The Biſhops find themſelves much injured,
And though for ſome good ſervice you have done,
We for our part are pleas'd to pardon you,
Yet they will not ſo ſoon be ſatisfied.
Cob. My gracious Lord, unto your Majeſty,
Next unto my God, I owe my life;
And what is mine, either by Natures gift,
Or Fortunes bounty, all is at your ſervice.
But for Obedience to the Pope of Rome,
I owe him none; nor ſhall his ſhaveling Prieſts
That are in England, alter my belief.
If out of holy Scripture they can prove
That I am in an error, I will yield,
And gladly take inſtruction at their hands:
But otherwiſe, I do beſeech your Grace,
My Conſcience may not be incroach'd upon.
King. We would be loth to preſs our ſubjects bodies,
Much leſs their Souls, the dear redeemed part
Of him that is the Ruler of us all:
Yet let me Counſel you, that might command;
Do not preſume to tempt them with ill words,
Nor ſuffer any meetings to be had
Within your Houſe, but to the uttermoſt
Diſperſe the flocks of this new gathering Sect.
Cob. My Liege, if any breath that dares come forth,
And ſay, my life in any of theſe points
Deſerves th' attainder of ignoble thoughts:
Here ſtand I, craving no remorſe at all,
But even the utmoſt rigour may be ſhown.
King. Let it ſuffice we know your Loyalty,
What have you there?
Cob. A Deed of Clemency,
Your highneſs pardon for Lord Powis life,
Which I did beg, and you my Noble Lord,
Of gracious favour did vouchſafe to grant.
King. But yet it is not ſigned with our hand.
Cob. Not yet, my Liege.
King. The fact you ſay was done
Not of pretenſed malice, but by chance.
Cob. Upon mine Honour ſo, no otherwiſe. [Writes.
King. There is his pardon, bid him make amends,
And cleanſe his Soul to God for his offence,
What we remit, is but the bodies ſcourge.
How now, Lord Biſhop?

Enter Biſhop.

Biſhop. Juſtice, dread Soveraign,
As thou art King, ſo grant I may have Juſtice.
King. What means this exclamation? Let us know.
Biſhop. Ah, my good Lord, the State's abus'd,
And our Decrees moſt ſhamefully prophan'd.
King. How? Or by whom?
Biſhop. Even by this Heretick,
This Jew, this Traitor to your Majeſty.
Cob. Prelate, thou lyeſt, even in thy greaſie maw,
Or whoſoever twit's me with the name
Of either Traitor, or of Heretick.
King. Forbear I ſay: and Biſhop, ſhew the cauſe
From whence this late abuſe hath been deriv'd.
Biſhop. Thus, mighty King: by general conſent
A meſſenger was ſent to cite this Lord
To make appearance in the Conſiſtory:
And coming to his Houſe, a Ruffian ſlave,
One of his daily followers, met the man,
Who knowing him to be a Parator
Aſſaults him firſt, and after in contempt
Of us, and our proceedings, makes him eat
The written Proceſs, parchment, Seal and all:
Whereby this matter neither was brought forth,
Nor we but ſcorn'd for our Authority.
King. When was this done?
Biſhop. At ſix a clock this Morning.
King. And when came you to Court?
Cob. Laſt Night, my Liege.
King. By this it ſeems he is not guilty of it,
And you have done him wrong t' accuſe him ſo.
Biſhop. But it was done, my Lord, by his appointment,
Or elſe his man durſt not have been ſo bold.
King. Or elſe you durſt be bold to interrupt
And fill our ears with frivolous complaints.
Is this the Duty you do bear to us?
Was't not ſufficient we did paſs our word
To ſend for him, but you miſdoubting it,
Or which is worſe, intending to foreſtal
Our Regal power, muſt likewiſe ſummon him?
This ſavours of Ambition, not of zeal,
And rather proves you malice his eſtate,
Than any way that he offends the Law.
Go too, we like it not: and he your Officer
Had his deſert for being inſolent,

Enter Huntington.

That was imployed ſo much amiſs herein.
So Cobham when you pleaſe, you may depart.
Cob. I humbly bid farewel unto my Liege. [Exit.
King. Farewel; what's the news by Huntington?
Hun. Sir Roger Acton, and a crew (my Lord)
Of bold ſeditious Rebels, are in Arms,
Intending reformation of Religion.
And with their Army they intend to pitch
In Ficket field, unleſs they be repuls't.
King. So near our preſence? Dare they be ſo bold?
And will proud War and eager thirſt of blood,
Whom we had thought to entertain far off,
Preſs forth upon us in our Native bounds?
Muſt we be forc'd to hanſel our ſharp blades
In England here, which we prepar'd for France?
Well, a Gods name be it. What's their Number, ſay.
Or who's the chief Commander of this Row?
Hun. Their number is not known, as yet my Lord,
But 'tis reported, Sir John Oldcaſtle
Is the chief man, on whom they do depend.
King. How? the Lord Cobham?
Hun. Yes, my gracious Lord.
Biſhop. I could have told your Majeſty as much
Before he went, but that I ſaw your Grace
Was too much blinded by his flattery.
Suff. Send poſt, my Lord, to fetch him back again.
But. Traitor unto his Country, how he ſmooth'd
And ſeem'd as innocent as Truth it ſelf?
King. I cannot think it yet he would be falſe:
But if he be, no matter, let him go,

We'll

We'll meet both him and them unto their woe.
Bish. This falls out well, and at the last I hope
To see this Heretick die in a Rope. [Exeunt.

Enter Earl of Cambridge, Lord Scroop, Gray, and Chartres the French Factor.

Scr. Once more, my Lord of Cambridge, make rehersal
How you do stand intituled to the Crown,
The deeper shall we print it in our minds
And every man the better be resolv'd,
When he perceives his quarrel to be just.
Cam. Then thus, Lord Scroop, Sir Thomas Grey,
And you, Monsieur de Chartres, Agent for the French.
This Lionel, Duke of Clarence (as I said)
Third Son of Edward (England's King) the Third,
Had Issue, Philip his sole Daughter and Heir;
Which Philip afterward was given in Marriage
To Edmund Mortimer the Earl of March,
And by him had a Son call'd Roger Mortimer;
Which Roger likewise had of his Descent,
Edmund, Roger, Ann and Elianor,
Two Daughters and two Sons, but of those, three
Dy'd without Issue: Ann, that did survive,
And now was left her Fathers only Heir,
By fortune was to marry, being too
By my Grand-father of King Edward's Line:
So of his Sir-name, I am call'd you know.
Richard Plantaginet, my Father was,
Edward the Duke of York, and Son and Heir
To Edmund Langley, Edward the third's first Son.
Scr. So that it seems your claim comes by your Wife,
As lawful Heir to Roger Mortimer,
The Son of Edmund, which did marry Philip
Daughter and Heir to Lionel Duke of Clarence.
Cam. True, for this Harry, and his Father both
Harry the first, as plainly doth appear.
Are false Intruders, and usurp the Crown.
For when young Richard was at Pomfret slain,
In him the Title of Prince Edward dy'd,
That was the eldest of King Edward's Sons:
William of Hatfield, and their second brother,
Death in his Nonage had before bereft:
So that my Wife deriv'd from Lionel,
Third Son unto King Edward, ought proceed
And take possession of the Diadem
Before this Harry, or his Father King,
Who fetch their Title but from Lancaster,
Forth of that Royal Line. And being thus
What reason is't, but she should have her right?
Scr. I am resolv'd, our enterprize is just.
Gray. Harry shall die or else resign his Crown.
Char. Perform but that, and Charles the King of France
Shall aid you Lords, not only with his Men,
But send you Money to maintain your Wars:
Five hundred thousand Crowns he bad me proffer,
If you can stop but Harry's Voyage for France.
Scr. We never had a fitter time than now,
The Realm in such division as it is.
Cam. Besides you must perswade you, there is due
Vengeance for Richard's murther, which although
It be deferr'd, yet will it fall at last,
And now as likely as another time.
Sin hath had many years to ripen in,
And now the Harvest cannot be far off,
Wherein the weeds of Usurpation
Are to be cropt and cast into the fire:
Scr. No more, Earl Cambridge, here I plight my Faith,
To set up thee and thy renowned Wife.
Gray. Gray will perform the same as he is Knight.
Chart. And to assist ye, as I said before,
Chartres doth 'gage the Honour of his King.
Scr. We lack but now Lord Cobham's fellowship,
And then our Plot were absolute indeed.
Cam. Doubt not of him, my Lord his life's pursu'd
By th' incens'd Clergy, and of late
Brought in displeasure with the King, assures
He may be quickly won unto our Faction.
Who hath the Articles were drawn at large
Of our whole purpose?
Gray. That have I, my Lord.
Cam. We should not now be far off from his House,
Our serious Conference hath beguil'd the way:
See where his Castle stands, give me the writing.
When we are come unto the speech of him,
Because we will not stand to make recount
Of that which hath been said, here he shall read
Our minds at large, and what we crave of him.

Enter Cobham.

Scr. A ready way: here comes the man himself
Booted and spurr'd, it seems he hath been riding.
Cam. Well met, Lord Cobham.
Cob. My Lord of Cambridge?
Your Honour is most welcome into Kent,
And all the rest of this fair Company.
I am new come from London, gentle Lords:
But will ye not take Cowling for your Host,
And see what entertainment it affords?
Cam. We were intended to have been your Guests:
But now this lucky meeting shall suffice
To end our business, and defer that kindness.
Cob. Business my Lord? what business should
Lett you to be merry? we have no delicates;
Yet this I'll promise you, a piece of Venison,
A Cup of Wine, and so forth, Hunters fare:
And if you please, we'll strike the Stag our selves
Shall fill our Dishes with his well-fed flesh.
Scr. That is indeed the thing we all desire.
Cob. My Lords, and you shall have your choice with me.
Cam. Nay but the Stag which we desire to strike,
Lives not in Cowling: if you will consent,
And go with us, we'll bring you to a Forrest,
Where runs a lusty Herd: among the which
There is a Stag superiour to the rest;
A stately Beast, that when his Fellows run
He leads the Race, and beats the sullen Earth,
As though he scorn'd it with his trampling Hoofs,
Aloft he bears his Head, and with his Breast
Like a huge Bulwark counter-checks the wind:
And when he standeth still, he stretcheth forth
His proud ambitious Neck, as if he meant
To wound the Firmament with forked Horns.
Cob. 'Tis pitty such a goodly Beast should die.
Cam. Not so, Sir John, for he is Tyrannous,
And gores the other Deer, and will not keep
Within the limits are appointed him.
Of late he's broke into a several,
Which doth belong to me, and there he spoils
Both Corn and Pasture, two of his wild race
Alike for stealth, and covetous incroaching,
Already are remov'd; if he were dead,
I should not only be secure from hurt,
But with his Body make a Royal Feast.
Scr. How say you then, will you first hunt with us?
Cob. Faith, Lords, I like the pastime, where's the place?
Cam. Peruse this writing, it will shew you all,
And what occasion we have for the sport. [He reads.
Cob. Call ye this Hunting, my Lords? Is this the Stag
You fain would chase, Harry our dread King?
So we may make a Banquet for the Devil?
And in the stead of wholsome meat, prepare
A Dish of Poison to confound our selves.
Cam. Why so, Lord Cobham? See you not our claim?
And how imperiously he holds the Crown?
Scr. Besides, you know your self is in disgrace,

Held

Held as a recreant, and purſu'd to Death.
This will defend you from your Enemies,
And ſtabliſh your Religion through the Land.
Cob. Notorious Treaſon! yet I will conceal [Aſide.
My ſecret thoughts to ſound the depth of it.
My Lord of Cambridge, I do ſee your claim,
And what good may redound unto the Land,
By proſecuting of this enterprize.
But where are men? where's power and furniture
To order ſuch an action? we are weak,
Harry, you know's a mighty Potentate.
Cam. Tut, we are ſtrong enough; you are belov'd,
And many will be glad to follow you,
We are the like, and ſome will follow us:
Nay, there is hope from France: here's an Amhaſſador
That promiſeth both men and money too.
The Commons likewiſe (as we hear) pretend
A ſudden tumult, we will join with them.
Cob. Some likelyhood, I muſt confeſs to ſpeed:
But how ſhall I believe this in plain truth?
You are (my Lords) ſuch men as live in Court,
And have been highly favoured of the King,
Eſpecially Lord Scroop, whom oftentimes
He maketh choice for his Bed-fellow.
And you, Lord Gray, are of his Privy-Council:
Is not this a train laid to intrap my Life?
Cam. Then periſh may my Soul: what, think you ſo?
Scr. We'll ſwear to you.
Gray Or take the Sacrament.
Cob. Nay you are Noblemen, and I imagine,
As you are honourable by Birth, and Bloud,
So you will be in heart, in thought, in word.
I crave no other teſtimony but this:
That you would all ſubſcribe, and ſet your hands
Unto this writing which you gave to me.
Cam. With all our hearts: Who hath any Pen and Ink?
Scr. My pocket ſhould have one; O, here it is.
Cam. Give it me, Lord Scroop. There is my name.
Scr. And there is my name.
Gray. And mine.
Cob. Sir, let me crave that you would likewiſe write your name with theirs, for confirmation of your Maſters words the King of France.
Char. That will I, noble Lord.
Cob. So, now this action is well knit together,
And I am for you; where's our meeting, Lords?
Cam. Here, if you pleaſe, the tenth of July next.
Cob. In Kent? agreed. Now let us in to Supper,
I hope your honours will not away to night.
Cam. Yes preſently, for I have far to ride,
About ſoliciting of other Friends.
Scr. And we would not be abſent from the Court,
Leſt thereby grow ſuſpition in the King.
Cob. Yet taſte a Cup of Wine before ye go.
Cam. Not now, my Lord, we thank you: ſo farewel. [Exit.
Cob. Farewell, my Noble Lords. My Noble Lords?
My noble Villains, baſe Conſpirators,
How can they look his Highneſs in the Face,
Whom they ſo cloſely ſtudy to betray?
But I'll not ſleep until I make it known,
This Head ſhall not be burthen'd with ſuch thoughts,
Nor in this heart will I conceal a Deed
Of ſuch impiety againſt my King.
Madam, how now?

Enter Harpool, and the reſt.

La. Cob. Y'are welcome home, my Lord:
Why ſeem ye ſo unquiet in your looks?
What hath befaln you that diſturbs your mind?
La. Pow. Bad news I am afraid touching my Husband.
Cob. Madam, not ſo: there is your Husband's pardon;
Long may ye live, each joy unto the other.
La. Pow. So great a kindneſs, as I know not how to reply, my ſenſe is quite confounded.
Cob. Let that alone: and Madam ſtay me not,
For I muſt back unto the Court again,
With all the ſpeed I can: Harpool, my Horſe.
La. Cob. So ſoon my Lord? what will you ride all night?
Cob. All night or day, it muſt be ſo ſweet Wife;
Urge me not why, or what my buſineſs is,
But get you in: Lord Powis, bear with me.
And Madam, think your welcome ne're the worſe,
My Houſe is at your uſe. Harpool, away.
Har. Shall I attend your Lordſhip to the Court?
Cob. Yea Sir, your Gelding, mount you preſently. [Exit.
La. Cob. I prithee Harpool look unto thy Lord,
I do not like this ſudden poſting back.
Pow. Some earneſt buſineſs is a-foot belike,
What ere it be, pray God be his good guide.
La. Pow. Amen, that hath ſo highly us beſted.
La Cob. Come Madam and my Lord, we'll hope the beſt,
You ſhall not into Wales till he return.
Pow. Though great occaſion be we ſhould depart, yet, Madam, will we ſtay to be reſolv'd of this unlookt for doubtful accident. [Exeunt.

Enter Murley and his men, prepared in ſome filthy Order for War.

Mur. Come my hearts of flint, modeſtly, decently, ſoberly, and handſomly; no man afore his Leader: follow your Maſter, your Captain, your Knight that ſhall be, for the honour of Meal-men, Millers, and Malt-men, Dun is the Mouſe: Dick and Tom for the credit of Dunſtable, ding down the Enemy to Morrow. Ye ſhall not come into the Field like Beggars. Where be Leonard and Lawrence my two Loaders? Lord have mercy upon us, what a World is this? I would give a couple of ſhillings for a dozen of good Feathers for ye, and forty pence for as many Scarfs to ſet you out withal. Froſt and Snow, a man has no heart to fight till he be brave.
Dick. Maſter, we are no Babes, our Town Foot-Balls can bear witneſs: this little 'parrel we have ſhall off, and we'll fight naked before we run away.
Tom. Nay, I'm of Lawrence mind for that, for he means to leave his life behind him, he and Leonard, your two Loaders are making their Wills becauſe they have Wives, now we Batchelors bid our Friends ſcramble for our Goods if we dye: but Maſter, pray let me ride upon Cut.
Mur. Meal and Salt, Wheat and Malt, Fire and Tow, Froſt and Snow, why Tom thou ſhalt. Let me ſee, here are you, William and George are with my Cart, and Robin and Hodge holding my own two Horſes; proper men, handſome men, tall men, true men.
Dick. But Maſter, Maſter, me thinks you are mad to hazard your own Perſon, and a Cart-Load of Money too.
Tom. Yea, and Maſter there's a worſe matter in't; if it be as I heard ſay, we go fight againſt all the learned Biſhops, that ſhould give us their bleſſing, and if they Curſe us, we ſhall ſpeed ne're the better.
Dick. Nay Birlady, ſome ſay the King takes their part, and Maſter dare you fight againſt the King?
Mur. Fie paltry, paltry, in and out, to and fro upon occaſion, if the King be ſo unwiſe to come there, we'll fight with him too.
Tom. What if ye ſhould kill the King?
Mur. Then we'll make another.
Dick. Is that all? do ye not ſpeak Treaſon?
Mur. If we do, who dare trip us? We come to fight for our Conſcience, and for honour: little know you what is in my Boſome, look here mad Knaves, a pair of gilt Spurs.

Tom.

Tom. A pair of Golden Spurs? Why do you not put them on your heels? Your bosome's no place for Spurs.

Mur. Be't more or less upon occasion, Lord have mercy upon us, Tom thou'rt a fool, and thou speak'st treason to Knight-hood: Dare any wear gold, or silver spurs, till he be a Knight? No, I shall be Knighted to morrow, and then they shall on: Sirs, was it ever read in the Church-book of Dunstable, that ever Malt-Man was made Knight?

Tom. No, but you are more: You are Meal-man, Malt-man, Miller, Corn-master, and all.

Dick. Yea, and half a Brewer too, and the Devil and all for wealth: You bring more money with you than all the rest.

Mur. The more's my honour, I shall be a Knight to morrow. Let me 'spose my men, Tom upon Cut, Dick upon Hob, Hodge upon Ball, Ralph upon Sorrel, and Robin upon the Fore horse.

Enter Acton, Bourn and Beverley.

Tom. Stand, who comes there?

Act. All Friends, good fellow.

Mur. Friends and Fellows indeed, Sir Roger.

Act. Why, thus you shew your self a Gentleman,
To keep your day, and come so well prepar'd.
Your Cart stands yonder guarded by your men,
VVho tell me it is loaden well with Coin,
VVhat Summ is there?

Mur. Ten thousand pound, Sir Roger, and modestly, decently, soberly, and handsomely, see what I have here against I be Knighted.

Act. Gilt Spurs? 'Tis well.

Mur. VVhere's our Army, Sir?

Act. Dispersst in sundry villages about;
Some here with us in High-gate, some at Finchley,
Totnam, Enfield, Edmunton, Newington,
Islington, Hogsdone, Pancredge, Kenzington,
Some nearer, Thames, Ratcliff, Blackwall, and Bow:
But our chief strength must be the Londoners,
VVhich, e're the Sun to morrow shine,
VVill be near fifty thousand in the field.

Mur. Marry, God dild ye, dainty my dear, but upon occasion, Sir Roger Acton, doth not the King know of it, and gather his power against us?

Act. No, he's secure at Eltham.

Mur. VVhat do the Clergy?

Act. Fear extreamly, yet prepare no force.

Mur. In and out, to and fro, bully my boykin, we shall carry the world afore us, I vow, by my worship, when I am Knighted, we'll take the King napping, if he stand on their part.

Act. This night we few in High-gate will repose,
VVith the first Cock we'll rise and arm our selves,
To be in Ficket-field by break of day,
And there expect our General.

Mur. Sir John Oldcastle, what if he comes not?

Bourn. Yet our action stands,
Sir Roger Acton may supply his place.

Mur. True, Mr. Bourn, but who shall make me Knight?

Bever. He that hath power to be our General.

Act. Talk not of trifles, come let us away,
Our friends of London long 'till it be day. [Exeunt.

Enter Priest and Doll.

Doll. By my troth, thou art as jealous a man as lives.

Priest. Canst thou blame me, Doll, thou art my Lands, my Goods, my Jewels, my Wealth, my Purse, none walks within forty miles of London, but a plies thee as truly, as the Parish does the poor man's Box.

Doll. I am as true to thee, as the stone is in the wall, and thou know'st well enough, I was in as good doing, when I came to thee, as any Wench need to be: and therefore thou hast tryed me that thou hast: and I will not be kept as I ha bin, that I will not.

Priest. Doll, if this blade hold, there's not a Pedler walks with a pack, but thou shalt as boldly choose of his Wares, as with thy ready money in a Merchants Shop, we'll have as good silver as the King Coins any.

Doll. What is all the Gold spent you took the last day from the Courtier?

Priest. 'Tis gone Doll, 'tis flown; merrily come, merrily gone; he comes a Horseback that must pay for all; we'll have as good meat as money can get, and as good Gowns as can be bought for gold, be merry Wench, the Malt-man comes on Monday.

Doll. You might have left me at Cobham, until you had been better provided for.

Priest. No, sweet Doll, no, I like not that, yon old Ruffian is not for the Priest: I do not like a new Clerk should come in the old Belfrey.

Doll. Thou art a mad Priest i'faith.

Priest. Come Doll, I'll see thee safe at some Ale house here at Cray, and the next Sheep that comes shall leave behind his Fleece. [Exeunt.

Enter the King, Suffolk, and Butler.

K. in great hast. My Lord of Suffolk, post away for life,
And let our Forces of such Horse and Foot,
As can be gathered up by any means.
Make speedy Randevouz in Tuttle-fields,
It must be done this Evening my Lord,
This night the Rebels mean to draw to Head
Near Islington, which if your speed prevent not,
If once they should unite their several Forces,
Their power is almost thought invincible,
Away, my Lord, I will be with you soon.

Suff. I go, my Sovereign, with all happy speed. [Exit.

King. Make hast, my Lord of Suffolk, as you love us.
Butler, post you to London with all speed:
Command the Mayor and Sheriffs on their Allegiance,
The City Gates be presently shut up,
And guarded with a strong sufficient Watch,
And not a man be suffered to pass,
Without a special Warrant from our self.
Command the Postern by the Tower be kept,
And Proclamation on the pain of Death,
That not a Citizen stir from his Doors,
Except such as the Mayor and Sheriffs shall choose
For their own Guard, and safety of their persons:
Butler away, have care unto my charge.

But. I go, my Sovereign.

King. Butler.

But. My Lord.

King. Go down by Greenwitch, and command a Boat,
At the Fryars-Bridge attend my coming down.

But. I will, my Lord. [Exit Butler.

King. It's time I think to look unto Rebellion,
When Acton doth expect unto his aid,
No less than fifty thousand Londoners.
Well, I'll to Westminster in this disguise,
To hear what news is stirring in these Brawls.

Enter Priest.

Priest. Stand true-man, sayes a Thief.

King. Stand Thief sayes a true man: how if a Thief?

Priest. Stand Thief too.

King. Then Thief or True-man, I must stand I see, howsoever the VVorld wags, the trade of thieving yet will never down. VVhat art thou?

Priest. A good Fellow.

King. So I am to, I see thou dost know me.

Priest. If thou be a good Fellow, play the good Fellows part, deliver thy Purse without more ado.

King. I have no money.

Priest.

Prieſt. I muſt make you find ſome before we part, if you have no money you ſhall have ware, as many ſound blows as your skin can carry.

King. Is that the plain truth?

Prieſt. Sirrah, no more ado, come, come, give me the money you have. Diſpatch, I cannot ſtand all day.

King. Well, if thou wilt needs have it, there it is: juſt the Proverb, one Thief robs another. Where the Devil are all my old Thieves? Falſtaffe that Villain is ſo fat, he cannot get on's Horſe, but methinks Poins and Peto ſhould be ſtirring hereabouts.

Prieſt. How much is there on't of thy word?

King. A hundred pound in Angels, on my word.
The time has been I would have done as much
For thee, if thou hadſt paſt this way, as I have now.

Prieſt. Sirrah, what art thou? thou ſeem'ſt a Gentleman?

King. I am no leſs, yet a poor one now, for thou haſt all my money.

Prieſt. From whence cam'ſt thou?

King. From the Court at Eltham.

Prieſt. Art thou one of the King's Servants?

King. Yes that I am, and one of his Chamber.

Prieſt. I am glad th'art no worſe: thou may'ſt the better ſpare thy money, and think thou might'ſt get a poor Thief his pardon if he ſhould have need.

King. Yes that I can

Prieſt. Wilt thou do ſo much for me, when I ſhall have occaſion?

King. Yes faith will I, ſo it be for no murther.

Prieſt. Nay, I am a pittiful Thief, all the hurt I do a man, I take but his Purſe, I'll kill no man.

King. Then of my word I'll do't.

Prieſt. Give me thy hand of the ſame.

King. There 'tis.

Prieſt. Me thinks the King ſhould be good to Thieves, becauſe he has bin a Thief himſelf, although I think now he be turned a True-man.

King. Faith I have heard indeed h'as had an ill name that way in's youth: but how canſt thou tell that he has been a Thief?

Prieſt. How? becauſe he once robb'd me before I fell to the Trade my ſelf, when that foul Villanous Guts, that led him to all that Roguery, was in's Company there, that Falſtaffe.

King aſide. Well, if he did rob thee then, thou art but even with him now I'll be ſworn: Thou knoweſt not the King now I think, if thou ſaweſt him?

Prieſt. Not I, i'faith.

King aſide. So it ſhould ſeem.

Prieſt. Well, if old King Harry had liv'd, this King that is now, had made thieving the beſt trade in England.

King. Why ſo?

Prieſt. Becauſe he was the chief Warden of our Company, it's pitty that e're he ſhould have been a King, he was ſo brave a Thief. But Sirrah, wilt remember my Pardon if need be?

King. Yes Faith will I.

Prieſt. Wilt thou? well then, becauſe thou ſhalt go ſafe, for thou may'ſt hap (being ſo early) be met with again, before thou come to Southwark, if any man when he ſhould bid thee good morrow, bid thee ſtand, ſay thou but Sir John, and they will let thee paſs.

King. Is that the word? then let me alone.

Prieſt. Nay Sirrah, becauſe I think indeed I ſhall have ſome occaſion to uſe thee, and as thou com'ſt oft this way, I may light on thee another time not knowing thee, here I'll break this Angel, take thou half of it, this is a token betwixt thee and me.

King. God a mercy: farewel. [Exit.

Prieſt. O my fine golden Slaves, here's for thee, Wench, i'faith. Now, Doll, we will revel in our Bever, this is a Tyth Pig of my Vicarage. God a mercy, Neighbour Shooters Hill, you ha paid your Tyth honeſtly. Well, I hear there is a Company of Rebels up againſt the King, got together in Ficket field near Holborn, and as it is thought, here in Kent, the King will be there to night in's own perſon: well, I'll to the Kings Camp, and it ſhall go hard, if there be any doings but I'll make ſome good boot among them. [Exit.

Enter King Henry, Suffolk, Huntington, and two with Lights.

King. My Lords of Suffolk and of Huntington,
Who ſcouts it now? or who ſtand Sentinels?
What men of worth? what Lords do walk the round?

Suf. May't pleaſe your Highneſs.

King. Peace, no more of that,
The King's aſleep, wake not his Majeſty,
With terms nor Titles; he's at reſt in Bed,
Kings do not uſe to watch themſelves, they ſleep,
And let Rebellion and Conſpiracy
Revel and havock in the Commonwealth.
Is London look'd unto?

Hun. It is, my Lord:
Your noble Uncle Exeter is there.
Your Brother Gloceſter, and my Lord of Warwick,
Who with the Mayor and the Aldermen
Do guard the Gates, and keep good rule within.
The Earl of Cambridge, and Sir Thomas Gray
Do walk the round, Lord Scroop and Butler ſcout,
So though it pleaſe your Majeſty to jeſt,
Were you in Bed, well might you take your reſt.

King. I thank ye Lords: but you do know of old,
That I have been a perfect Night-walker:
London, you ſay, is ſafely lookt unto,
Alas, poor Rebels, there your aid muſt fail,
And the Lord Cobham Sir John Oldcaſtle,
Quiet in Kent, Acton, you are deceiv'd:
Reckon again, you count without your Hoſt.
To morrow you ſhall give account to us,
Till when, my Friends, this long cold Winters night
How can we ſpend? King Harry is aſleep,
And all his Lords, their Garments tell us ſo:
All Friends at Foot-Ball, Fellows all in Field,
Harry, and Dick, and George, bring us a Drum,
Give us ſquare Dice, we'll keep this Court of Guard,
For all good Fellows Companies that come.
Where's that mad Prieſt ye told me was in Arms
To fight, as well as pray, if need required.

Suf. He's in the Camp, and if he knew of this,
I undertake he would not be long hence.

King. Trip Dick, trip George.

Hun. I muſt have the Dice: what do we play at?

Suf. Paſſage if ye pleaſe.

Hunt. Set round then: ſo, at all.

Har. George, you are out.
Give me the Dice, I paſs for twenty pound,
Here's to our lucky paſſage into France.

Hunt. Harry, you paſs indeed, for you ſweep all.

Suf. A ſign King Harry ſhall ſweep all in France.

Enter Prieſt.

Prieſt. Edge ye good Fellows, take a freſh Gameſter in.

Har. Maſter Parſon, we play nothing but gold?

Prieſt. And, fellow, I tell thee that the Prieſt hath gold, gold: what? ye are but Beggarly Souldiers to me, I think I have more gold than all you three.

Hunt. It may be ſo, but we believe it not.

Har. Set, Prieſt, ſet, I paſs for all that gold.

Prieſt. Ye paſs indeed.

Har. Prieſt, haſt any more?

Prieſt. More? what a queſtion's that?
I tell thee I have more than all you three,
At theſe ten Angels.

Har. I wonder how thou com'ſt by all this gold.

How

How many Benefices haſt thou, Prieſt?

Pri. Faith, but one, doſt wonder how I come by gold? I wonder rather how poor Soldiers ſhould have gold: for I'll tell thee, good fellow, we have every day Tythes, Off'rings, Chriſtnings, Weddings, Burials: and you poor ſnakes come ſeldome to a booty. I'll ſpeak a proud word, I have but one Parſonage, Wrotham, 'tis better than the Biſhoprick of Rocheſter: there's ne'r a Hill, Heath, nor Down in all Kent, but 'tis in my Pariſh, Barrham down, Cobham-down, Gads-hill, Wrotham hill, Black-heath, Cocks-heath, Birchen wood, all pay me tythe, gold quoth a? ye paſs not for that.

Suf. Harry, ye are out, now, Parſon, ſhake the Dice.

Pri. Set, ſet, I'll cover ye, at all: A plague on't I am out; the Devil, and Dice, and a Wench, who will truſt them?

Suf. Say'ſt thou ſo, Prieſt? ſet fair, at all for once.

Har. Out, ſir, pay all.

Pri. Sir, pay me Angel gold,
I'll none of your crack'd French Crowns nor Piſtolets,
Pay me fair Angel gold, as I pay you.

King. No crack'd French Crowns? I hope to ſee more crack'd French Crowns e'r long.

Pri. Thou mean'ſt of French-mens Crowns, when the King's in France.

Hun. Set round, at all.

Pri. Pay all: this is ſome luck.

King. Give me the Dice, 'tis I muſt ſhred the Prieſt: At all, Sir John.

Pri. The Devil and all is yours: at that. 'ſdeath, what caſting's this?

Suf. Well thrown, Harry, l'faith.

King. I'll caſt better yet.

Pri. Then I'll be hang'd. Sirrah, haſt thou not given thy ſoul to the Devil for caſting?

Har. I paſs for all.

Pri. Thou paſſeſt all that e'r I plaid withall:
Sirrah, doſt thou not cog, nor foiſt, nor ſlurr?

King. Set, Parſon, ſet, the Dice dye in my hand.
When, Parſon, when? what, can ye find no more?
Already dry? was't you bragg'd of your ſtore?

Pri. All's gone but that.

Hun. What? half a broken Angel.

Pri. Why, ſir? 'tis gold.

King. Yea, and I'll cover it.

Pri. The Devil give ye good on't, I am blind, you have blown me up.

King. Nay, tarry, Prieſt, you ſhall not leave us yet,
Do not theſe pieces fit each other well?

Pri. What if they do?

King. Thereby begins a tale:
There was a Thief, in face much like Sir John,
But 'twas not he. That Thief was all in green,
Met me laſt day on Black heath, near the Park,
With him a Woman. I was all alone
And weaponleſs, my boy had all my tools,
And was before providing me a Boat.
Short tale to make, Sir John, the Thief I mean,
Took a juſt hundreth Pound in gold from me.
I ſtorm'd at it, and ſwore to be reveng'd
If e'r we met; he like a luſty Thief,
Brake with his Teeth this Angel juſt in two,
To be a token at our meeting next;
Provided, I ſhould charge no Officer
To apprehend him, but at weapons point
Recover that, and what he had beſide.
Well met, Sir John, betake ye to your tools
By Torch-light, for, Maſter Parſon, you are he
That had my Gold.

Pri. Zounds I won't in play, in fair ſquare play, of the Keeper of Eltham-Park, and that I will maintain with this poor Whyniard: be you two honeſt men to ſtand and look upon's, and let's alone, and neither part.

King. Agreed, I charge ye do not budge a foot,
Sir John, have at ye.

Pri. Souldier, ware your ſconce.

As they proffer, enter Butler, and draws his Sword to part them.

But. Hold, villain, hold: my Lords, what d'ye mean,
To ſee a Traytor draw againſt the King.

Pri. The King? Gods will, I am in a proper pickle.

King. Butler, what news? why doſt thou trouble us?

But. Pleaſe your Majeſty, it's break of day,
And as I ſcouted near to Iſlington,
The gray-ey'd morning gave me glimmering,
Of armed Men coming down Hygate-hill,
Who by their courſe are coaſting hitherward.

King. Let us withdraw, my Lords, prepare our troops,
To charge the Rebels if there be ſuch cauſe:
For this lewd Prieſt, this deviliſh Hypocrite,
That is a Thief, a Gameſter, and what not,
Let him be hang'd up for example ſake.

Pri. Not ſo, my gracious Soveraign, I confeſs I am a frail man, fleſh and blood as other are; but ſet my imperfections aſide, ye have not a taller man, nor a truer Subject to the Crown and State, than Sir John of Wrotham is.

King. Will a true Subject rob his King?

Pri. Alas! 'twas ignorance and want, my gracious Liege.

King. 'Twas want of grace. Why, you ſhould be as ſalt
To ſeaſon others with good document,
Your lives as lamps to give the people light,
As Shepherds, not as Wolves to ſpoil the flock;
Go hang him, Butler.

But. Did'ſt thou not rob me?

Pri. I muſt confeſs I ſaw ſome of your gold, but, my dread Lord, I am in no humour for death: God will that ſinners live, do not you cauſe me to dye, once in their lives the beſt may go aſtray, and if the world ſay true, your ſelf (my Liege) have been a Thief.

King. I confeſs I have,
But I repent and have reclaim'd my ſelf.

Pri. So will I do if you will give me time.

King. Wilt thou? my Lords, will you be his ſureties?

Hun. That when he robs again he ſhall be hang'd.

Pri. I ask no more.

King. And we will grant thee that,
Live and repent, and prove an honeſt man,
Which when I hear, and ſafe return from France,
I'll give thee living. Till when, take thy Gold,
But ſpend it better than at Cards or Wine,
For better virtues fit that Coat of thine.

Pri. Vivat Rex, & currat Lex. My Liege, if ye have cauſe of Battel, ye ſhall ſee Sir John beſtir himſelf in your quarrel.

An Alarm. Enter King, Suffolk, Huntington, Sir John bringing forth Acton, Beverly, and Murly, Priſoners.

King. Bring in thoſe Traitors, whoſe aſpiring minds
Thought to have triumph'd in our overthrow:
But now ye ſee, baſe Villains, what ſucceſs
Attends ill actions wrongfully attempted.
Sir Roger Acton, thou retain'ſt the name
Of Knight, and ſhouldſt be more diſcreetly temper'd
Than join with peazants, Gentry is divine,
But thou haſt made it more than popular.

Act. Pardon, my Lord, my Conſcience urg'd me to it.

King. Thy Conſcience, then Conſcience is corrupt,
For in thy Conſcience thou art bound to us,
And in thy Conſcience thou ſhould'ſt love thy Country,
Elſe what's the difference 'twixt a Chriſtian,
And the uncivil manners of the Turk?

Bev. We meant no hurt unto your Majeſty,
But reformation of Religion.
King. Reform Religion? was it that you ſought?
I pray who gave you that authority?
Belike then we hold the Scepter up,
And ſit within the Throne but for a Cipher.
Time was, good Subjects would make known their grief,
And pray amendment, not enforce the ſame,
Unleſs their King were Tyrant, which I hope
You cannot juſtly ſay that Harry is,
What is that other?
Suf. A Malt-man, my Lord,
And dwelling in Dunſtable as he ſays.
King. Sirrah, what made you leave your Barley-broth,
To come in armour thus againſt your King?
Mur. Fie, paltry, paltry, to and fro, in and out upon occaſion, what a world is this? Knighthood (my Liege) 'twas Knighthood brought me hither, they told me I had wealth enough to make my Wife a Lady.
King. And ſo you brought thoſe hotſes which we ſaw
Trapt all in coſtly furniture, and meant
To wear theſe Spurrs when you were Knighted once.
Mur. In and out upon occaſion I did.
King. In and out upon occaſion, therefore you ſhall be hang'd, and in the ſtead of wearing theſe Spurrs upon your heels, about your neck they ſhall bewray your folly to the world.
Pri. In and out upon occaſion, that goes hard.
Mur. Fie, paltry, paltry, to and fro: good my Liege, a pardon, I am ſorry for my fault.
King. That comes too late: but tell me, went there none beſide Sir Roger Acton, upon whom
You did depend to be your Governour.
Mur. None, my Lord, but Sir John Oldcaſtle.

Enter Biſhop.

King. Bears he a part in this conſpiracy.
Act. We look'd, my Lord, that he would meet us here.
King. But did he promiſe you that he would come.
Act. Such Letters we received forth of Kent.
Biſh. Where is my Lord the King? health to your Grace.
Examining, my Lord, ſome of theſe Rebels,
It is a generall voice among them all,
That they had never come into this place,
But to have met their valiant General,
The good Lord Cobham, as they title him:
Whereby, my Lord, your Grace may now perceive,
His Treaſon is apparent, which before
He ſought to colour by his flattery.
King. Now by my Royalty I would have ſworn,
But for his Conſcience, which I bear withal,
There had not liv'd a more true hearted Subject.
Biſh. It is but counterfeit, my gracious Lord,
And therefore may it pleaſe your Majeſty,
To ſet your hand unto this Precept here,
By which we'll cauſe him forthwith to appear,
And anſwer this by order of the Law.
King. Not only that, but take Commiſſion
To ſearch, attach, impriſon, and condemn
This moſt notorious Traytor as you pleaſe.
Biſh. It ſhall be done, my Lord, without delay:
So now I hold, Lord Cobham, in my hand,
That which ſhall finiſh thy diſdained life.
King. I think the Iron Age begins but now,
Which learned Poets have ſo often taught,
Wherein there is no credit to be given
To either words or looks, or ſolemn oaths:
For if he were, how often hath he ſworn,
How gently tun'd the muſick of his tongue,
And with what aimable face beheld he me,
When all, God knows, was but hypocriſie.

Enter Cobham.

Cob. Long life and proſperous reign unto my Lord.
King. Ah, Villain, canſt thou wiſh proſperity,
Whoſe heart includeth nought but treachery?
I do arreſt thee here my ſelf, falſe Knight,
Of Treaſon capital againſt the ſtate.
Cob. Of Treaſon, mighty Prince? your Grace miſtakes,
I hope it is but in the way of mirth.
King. Thy neck ſhall feel it is in earneſt ſhortly.
Dar'ſt thou intrude into our preſence, knowing
How hainouſly thou haſt offended us?
But this is thy accuſtomed deceit.
Now thou perceiv'ſt thy purpoſe is in vain,
With ſome excuſe or other thou wilt come
To clear thy ſelf of this Rebellion.
Cob. Rebellion, good my Lord, I know of none.
King. If you deny it, here is evidence,
See you theſe men; you never counſelled,
Nor offered them aſſiſtance in their Wars?
Cob. Speak, ſirs, not one but all, I crave no favour,
Have ever I been converſant with you?
Or written Letters to incourage you?
Or kindled but the leaſt or ſmalleſt part
Of this your late unnatural Rebellion?
Speak, for I dare the uttermoſt you can.
Mur. In and out upon occaſion, I know you not.
King. No, didſt thou not ſay, that Sir John Oldcaſtle
Was one with whom you purpos'd to have met?
Mur. True, I did ſay ſo, but in what reſpect,
Becauſe I heard it was reported ſo.
King. Was there no other argument but that?
Act. I muſt confeſs we have no other ground
But only rumour to accuſe this Lord,
Which now I ſee was meerly fabulous.
King. The more pernitious you to taint him then,
VVhom you know was not faulty, yea or no.
Cob. Let this, my Lord, which I preſent your Grace
Speak for my loyalty, read theſe Articles,
And then give ſentence of my life or death.
King. Earl Cambridge, Scroop, and Gray corrupted
VVith bribes from Charles of France, either to win
My Crown from me, or ſecretly contrive
My death by Treaſon? Is't poſſible?
Cob. There is the platform, and their hands, my Lord,
Each ſeverally ſubſcribed to the ſame.
Cob. Oh never heard of baſe ingratitude!
Even thoſe I hug within my boſome moſt,
Are readieſt evermore to ſting my heart.
Pardon me, Cobham, I have done thee wrong,
Hereafter I will live to make amends,
Is then their time of meeting ſo near hand?
We'll meet with them but little for their eaſe,
If God permit. Go take theſe Rebels hence,
Let them have Martial Law: but as for thee,
Friend to thy King and Country, ſtill be free. [Exeunt.
Mur. Be it more or leſs, what a world is this?
VVould I had continued ſtill of the order of knaves,
And ne'r ſought Knight-hood, ſince it coſts
So dear: Sir Roger, I may thank you for all.
Act. Now 'tis too late to have it remedied,
I prithee, Murley, do not urge me with it.
Hun. VVill you away, and make no more to do?
Mur. Fie, paltry, paltry, to and fro, as occaſion ſerves,
If you be ſo haſty, take my place.
Hun. No, good ſir Knight, e'n tak't your ſelf.
Mur. I could be glad to give my betters place. [Exeunt.

Enter Biſhop, Lord VVarden, Cromer the Sheriff, Lady Cobham and Attendants.

Biſh. I tell ye, Lady, it's impoſſible
But you ſhould know where he conveys himſelf,

And

And you have hid him in ſome ſecret place.
La. My Lord, believe me, as I have a Soul,
I know not where my Lord my Husband is.
Biſh. Go to, go, ye are an Heretick,
And will be forc't by torture to confeſs,
If fair means will not ſerve to make you tell.
Lady. My Husband is a noble Gentleman,
And need not hide himſelf for any fact
That e're I heard of, therefore wrong him not.
Biſh. Your Husband is a dangerous Schiſmatick,
Traitor to God, the King, and Commonwealth,
And therefore, Mr. Cromer, Sheriff of Kent,
I charge you take her to your cuſtody,
And ſeize the goods of Sir John Oldcaſtle
To the Kings uſe: let her go in no more,
To fetch ſo much as her apparel out,
There is your warrant from his Majeſty.
L. War. Good my Lord Biſhop, pacifie your wrath
Againſt the Lady.
Biſh. Then let her confeſs
Where Oldcaſtle her Husband is conceal'd.
L. War. I dare engage mine honour and my life,
Poor Gentlewoman, ſhe is ignorant
And innocent of all his practices
If any Evil by him be practiſed.
Biſh. If, my Lord Warden? Nay then I charge you,
That all Cinque-ports whereof you are chief,
Be laid forthwith, that he eſcapes us not.
Shew him his Highneſs warrant, Mr. Sheriff.
L. War. I am ſorry for the Noble Gentleman.
Biſh. Peace, he comes here, now do your Office,

Enter Harpool and Oldcaſtle.

Cob. Harpool, what buſineſs have we here in hand?
What makes the Biſhop and the Sheriff here?
I fear my coming home is dangerous,
I would I had not made ſuch haſte to Cobham.
Har. Be of good cheer, my Lord, if they be foes, we'll ſcramble ſhrewdly with them: if they be Friends they are welcome.
Cro. Sir John Oldcaſtle Lord Cobham, in the Kings name,
I arreſt ye of high Treaſon.
Cob. Treaſon, Mr. Cromer?
Har. Treaſon, Mr. Sheriff, what Treaſon?
Cob. Harpool, I charge thee ſtir not, but be quiet.
Do ye arreſt me of Treaſon, Mr. Sheriff?
Biſh. Yea, of high Treaſon, Traitor, Heretick.
Cob. Defiance in his face that calls me ſo,
I am as true a Loyal Gentleman
Unto his Highneſs, as my proudeſt Enemy,
The King ſhall witneſs my late faithful ſervice,
For ſafety of his ſacred Majeſty.
Biſh. What thou art, the Kings hand ſhall teſtifie,
Shew him, Lord Warden.
Cob. Jeſu defend me,
Is't poſſible your cunning could ſo temper
The princely diſpoſition of his mind,
To ſign the damage of a Royal Subject?
Well, the beſt is, it bears an antedate,
Procured by my abſence and your malice.
But I, ſince that, have ſhew'd my ſelf as true,
As any Church-man that dare challenge me.
Let me be brought before his Majeſty,
If he acquit me not, then do your worſt.
Biſh. We are not bound to do kind offices,
For any Traitor, Schiſmatick, nor Heretick:
The Kings hand is our warrant for our work,
Who is departed on his way for France,
And at Southampton doth repoſe this Night.
Har. O that thou and I were within twenty miles of it, on Salisbury plain! I would loſe my head if thou brought'ſt thy Head hither again. [Aſide.
Cob. My Lord Warden o'th Cinque-ports, and Lord of Rocheſter, ye are joynt Commiſſioners, favour me ſo much on my expence, to bring me to the King.
Biſh. What, to Southampton?
Cob. Thither, my good Lord,
And if he do not clear me of all guilt,
And all ſuſpicion of conſpiracy,
Pawning his Princely warrant for my truth:
I ask no favour, but extreameſt torture.
Bring me, or ſend me to him, good my Lord,
Good my Lord Warden, Mr. Sheriff entreat.
[They both entreat for him.
Come hither, Lady, nay, ſweet wife, forbear
To heap one ſorrow on anothers neck:
'Tis grief enough falſely to be accus'd,
And not permitted to acquit my ſelf,
Do not thou with thy kind reſpective tears,
Torment thy Husbands heart that bleeds for thee:
But be of comfort, God hath help in ſtore
For thoſe that put aſſured truſt in him.
Dear Wife, if they commit me to the Tower,
Come up to London to your Siſters Houſe:
That being near me, you may comfort me.
One ſolace find I ſetled in my Soul,
That I am free from Treaſon's very thought,
Only my Conſcience for the Goſpels ſake,
Is cauſe of all the troubles I ſuſtain.
Lady. O, my dear Lord, what ſhall betide of us?
You to the Tower, and I turn'd out of Doors,
Our ſubſtance ſeiz'd unto his Highneſs uſe,
Even to the garments longing to our backs.
Har. Patience, good Madam, things at worſt will mend,
And if they do not, yet our lives may end.
Biſh. Urge it no more, for if an Angel ſpake,
I ſwear by ſweet S. Peter's bleſſed Keyes,
Firſt goes he to the Tower, then to the ſtake.
Crom. But by your leave, this warrant doth not ſtretch
To impriſon her.
Biſh. No, turn her out of doors,
Even as ſhe is, and lead him to the Tower,
With guard enough, for fear of reſcuing.
Lady. O God requite thee thou blood-thirſty man.
Cob. May it not be, my Lord of Rocheſter?
Wherein have I incurr'd your hate ſo far,
That my appeal unto the King's deny'd.
Biſh. No hate of mine, but power of holy Church,
Forbids all favour to falſe Hereticks.
Cob. Your private malice more than publick power,
Strikes moſt at me, but with my life it ends.
Har. aſide. O that I had the Biſhop in that fear
That once I had his Sumner by our ſelves.
Cro. My Lord, yet grant one ſuit unto us all,
That this ſame ancient ſervingman may wait
Upon my Lord his maſter in the Tower.
Biſh. This old iniquity, this Heretick?
That in contempt of our Church diſcipline,
Compel'd my Sumner to devour his Proceſs?
Old Ruffian paſt-grace, upſtart Schiſmatick,
Had not the King pray'd us to pardon ye,
Ye had fryed for't, ye grizeled Heretick.
Har. 'Sblood, my Lord Biſhop, ye wrong me, I am neither Heretick nor Puritan, but of the old Church, I'le ſwear, drink Ale, kiſs a wench, go to Maſs, eat Fiſh all Lent, and faſt Frydays with Cakes and Wine, Fruit and ſpicery, ſhrive me of my old Sins afore Eaſter, and begin new before Whitſuntide.
Cro. A merry mad conceited Knave, my Lord.
Har. That knave was ſimply put upon the Biſhop.
Biſh. Well, God forgive him, and I pardon him;
Let him attend his Maſter in the Tower,
For I in Charity wiſh his Soul no hurt.
Cob. God bleſs my Soul from ſuch cold Charity.
Biſh. To th'Tower with him, and when my leiſure ſerves,
I will examine him of Articles;
Look, my Lord Warden, as you have in charge

The Sheriff perform his Office.
War. I, my Lord.

Enter Sumner with Books.

Bish. What bring'st thou there? what books of heresie?
Sum. Yea, my Lord, here's not a Latine Book,
No not so much as our Ladies Psalter:
Here's the Bible, the Testament, the Psalms in meeter,
The Sick man's salve, the Treasure of Gladness,
All English, no not so much but the Almanack's English.
Bish. Away with them, to th' fire with them, Clun,
Now fie upon these upstart Hereticks.
All English, burn them, burn them quickly, Clun.
Har. But do not, Sumner, as you'll answer it, for I have there English Books, my Lord, that I'le not part withal for your Bishoprick, Bevis of Hampton, Owleglass, The Fryer and the Boy, Ellen of Rumming, Robin-hood, and other such godly Stories, which if you burn, by this Flesh I'le make ye drink their ashes in S. Marget's Ale.

[Exit.

Enter the Bishop of Rochester, with his men in Livery Coats.

1. Ser. Is it your honours pleasure we shall stay,
Or come back in the afternoon to fetch you.
Bish. Now have ye brought me here unto the Tower,
You may go back unto the Porter's lodge,
Where if I have occasion to employ you,
I'le send some Officer to call you to me.
Into the City go not, I command you,
Perhaps I may have present need to use you.
2. We will attend your honour here without.
3. Come, we may have a quart of Wine at the Rose at Barking, and come back an hour before he'll go.
1. We must hie us then.
3. Let's away. [Exeunt.
Bish. Ho, Mr. Lieutenant,
Lieu. Who calls there?
Bish. A Friend of yours.
Lieu. My Lord of Rochester? your honour's welcome.
Bish. Sir, here's my warrant from the Council,
For conference with Sir John Oldcastle,
Upon some matter of great consequence.
Lieu. Ho, Sir John.
Har. Who calls there?
Lieu. Harpool, tell Sir John, that my Lord of Rochester
Comes from the Council to confer with him.
I think you may as safe without suspicion
As any man in England as I hear,
For it was you most labour'd his commitment.
Bish. I did, Sir, and nothing repent it I assure you.

Enter Sir John Oldcastle.

Mr. Lieutenant, I pray you give us leave,
I must confer here with Sir John a little.
Lieu. With all my heart, my Lord.
Har. aside. My Lord, be rul'd by me, take this occasion while it is offered, and on my life your Lordship will escape.
Cob. No more I say, peace lest he should suspect it.
Bish. Sir John, I am come to you from the Lords of the Council, to know if you do recant your errours.
Cob. My Lord of Rochester, on good advice,
I see my error; but yet understand me,
I mean not error in the Faith I hold,
But error in submitting to your pleasure,
Therefore your Lordship without more to do,
Must be a means to help me to escape.
Bish. What means, thou Heretick?
Dar'st thou but lift thy hand against my calling?
Cob. No, not to hurt you for a thousand pound.
Har. Nothing but to borrow your upper garment a little, not a word more, peace for waking the Children; there, put on, dispatch, my Lord, the window that goes out into the Leads is sure enough: as for you, I'le bind you surely in the inner Room.
Cob. This is well begun, God send us happy speed,
Hard shift you see men make in time of need.

Enter Servingmen again.

1. I marvel that my Lord should stay so long.
2. He hath sent to seek us I dare lay my life.
3. We come in good time, see where he is coming.
Har. I beseech you, good my Lord of Rochester, be favourable to my Lord and Master.
Cob. The inner Rooms be very Hot and close,
I do not like this Air here in the Tower.
Har. His case is hard, my Lord: you shall safely get out of the Tower, but I will down upon them: in which time get you away. Hard under Islington wait you my coming, I will bring my Lady ready with Horses to get hence.
Cob. Fellow, go back again unto my Lord, and counsel him.
Har. Nay, my good Lord of Rochester, I'le bring you to S. Albons through the woods I warrant you.
Cob. Villain, away.
Har. Nay since I am past the Towers Liberty,
You part not so. [He draws.
Bish. Clubs, clubs, clubs.
1. Murther, murther, murther.
2. Down with him.
Har. Out you cowardly Rogues.

[Cobham escapes.

Enter Lieutenant, and his men.

Lieu. Who is so bold as to dare to draw a Sword
So near unto the entrance of the Tower.
1. This Ruffian, servant to Sir John Oldcastle, was like to have slain my Lord.
Lieu. Lay hold on him.
Har. Stand off if you love your puddings.

[Rochester calls within.

Help, help, help, Mr. Lieutenant, help.
Lieu. Who's that within? some Treason in the Tower, on my life, look in, who's that which calls?

Enter Rochester bound.

Lieu. Without your cloak, my Lord of Rochester?
Har. There, now it works; then let me speed,
For now's the fittest time to scape away. [Exit.
Lieu. Why do you look so gastly and affrighted?
Bish. Oldcastle that Traitor and his man,
When you had left me to confer with him,
Took, bound, and stript me as you see,
And left me lying in this inner Chamber,
And so departed, and I——
Lieu. And you! Nere say that the Lord Cobham's man
Did here set on you like to murther you.
1. And so he did.
Bish. It was upon his Master then he did,
That in the brawl the Traitor might escape.
Lieu. Where is this Harpool?
2. Here he was even now.
Lieu. Where, can you tell? They are both escap'd.
Since it so happens that he is escap'd,
I am glad you are a witness of the same:
It might have else been laid unto my charge,
That I had been consenting to the fact.
Bish. Come, search shall be made for him with expedition, the Haven's laid that he shall not escape, and hue and and cry continue through England, to find this damned, dangerous Heretick. [Exeunt.

Enter Cambridge, Scroop, and Gray, as in a Chamber, and set down at a Table, consulting about their Treason, King Harry and Suffolk listning at the door.

Cam. In mine opinion, Scroop hath well advis'd,
Poison will be the only apteſt mean,
And fitteſt for our purpoſe to diſpatch him.
Gray. But yet there may be doubt in their delivery,
Harry is wiſe, therefore, Earl of Cambridge,
I judge that way not ſo convenient.
Scr. What think ye then of this? I am his bedfellow,
And unſuſpected nightly ſleep with him.
What if I venture in thoſe ſilent hours,
When ſleep hath ſealed up all mortal Eyes,
To murther him in bed? how like ye that?
Cam. Herein conſiſts no ſafety for your ſelf,
And you diſclos'd, what ſhall become of us?
But this day (as ye know) he will aboard,
The wind's ſo fair, and ſet away for France,
If as he goes, or entring in the ſhip
It might be done, then were it excellent.
Gray. Why any of theſe, or if you will,
I'le cauſe a preſent ſitting of the Council,
Wherein I will pretend ſome matter of ſuch weight,
As needs muſt have his Royal Company,
And ſo diſpatch him in his Council Chamber.
Cam. Tuſh, yet I hear not any thing to purpoſe;
I wonder that Lord Cobham ſtayes to long,
His Counſel in this caſe would much avail us.
[The King ſteps in upon them with his Lords.
Scr. What ſhall we riſe thus, and determine nothing?
King. That were a ſhame indeed: no, ſit again,
And you ſhall have my Counſel in this caſe:
If you can find no way to kill the King,
Then you ſhall ſee how I can furniſh ye;
Scroop's way by poiſon was indifferent,
But yet being bed-fellow to the King,
And unſuſpected, ſleeping in his boſom,
In mine opinion that's the likelier way.
For ſuch falſe Friends are able to do much,
And ſilent Night is Treaſon's fitteſt Friend.
Now, Cambridge in his ſetting hence for France,
Or by the way, or as he goes aboard
To do the deed, that was indifferent too,
But ſomewhat doubtfull.
Marry Lord Gray came very near the point,
To have the King at Council, and there murder him,
As Ceſar was among his deareſt Friends.
Tell me, oh tell me, you bright honour's ſtains,
For which of all my kindneſſes to you,
Are ye become thus Traitors to your King?
And France muſt have the ſpoil of Harrie's life.
All. Oh pardon us, dread Lord.
King. How, pardon ye? that were a Sin indeed,
Drag them to Death, which juſtly they deſerve:
And France ſhall dearly buy this villany,
So ſoon as we ſet footing on her breaſt.
God have the praiſe for our deliverance,
And next our thanks, Lord Cobham, is to thee,
True perfect mirrour of Nobilitie. [Exit.

Enter the Hoſt, Lord Cobham, and Harpool.

Hoſt. Sir, y'are welcome to this houſe, to ſuch as is here with all my heart: but I fear your lodging will be the worſt. I have but two beds, and they are both in a chamber, and the Carrier and his Daughter lies in the one, and you and your Wife muſt lye in the other.
Cob. Faith, Sir, for my ſelf I do not greatly paſs,
My Wife is weary, and would be at reſt,
For we have travel'd very far to day,
We muſt be content with ſuch as you have.
Hoſt. But I cannot tell how to do with your man.
Har. What? haſt thou never an empty Room in thy Houſe for me?
Hoſt. Not a Bed in troth. There came a poor Iriſh-man, and I lodg'd him in the barn, where he has fair ſtraw, although he have nothing elſe.
Har. Well, mine Hoſt, I prithee help me to a pair of clean ſheets, and I'le go lodge with him.
Hoſt. By the Maſs that thou ſhalt, a good pair of hempen ſheets were nere layn in: come. [Exeunt.

Enter Conſtable, Mayor, and Watch.

May. What? have you ſearcht the Town?
Con. All the Town, Sir, we have not left a Houſe unſearcht that uſes to lodge.
May. Surely, my Lord of Rocheſter was then deceiv'd,
Or ill inform'd of Sir John Oldcaſtle;
Or if he came this way, he's paſt the Town,
He could not elſe have ſcap'd you in the ſearch.
Con. The privy watch hath been abroad all night,
And not a ſtranger lodgeth in the Town
But he is known; only a luſty Prieſt
We found in bed with a pretty wench,
That ſayes ſhe is his Wife, yonder at the Shears:
But we have charg'd the hoſt with his forth coming
To morrow morning.
May. What think you beſt to do?
Con. Faith, Mr. Mayor, here's a few ſtragling Houſes beyond the Bridge, and a little Inn where Carriers uſe to lodge, although I think ſurely he would nere lodge there: but we'll go ſearch, and the rather, becauſe there came notice to the Town the laſt Night of an Iriſh man, that had done a murther, whom we are to make ſearch for.
May. Come I pray you, and be circumſpect. [Exeunt.
Con. Firſt beſet the houſe, before you begin to ſearch.
Offi. Content, every man take a ſeveral place.
[A noiſe within.
Keep, keep, ſtrike him down there, down with him.

Enter Conſtable with the Iriſhman in Harpool's apparel.

Con. Come you villanous Heretick, tell us where your Maſter is.
Iriſh. Vat Meſter?
May. Vat Meſter, you conterfeit Rebel? This ſhall not ſerve your turn.
Iriſh. Be Sent Patrick I ha no Meſter.
Con. Where's the Lord Cobham, Sir John Oldcaſtle, that lately eſcaped out of the Tower?
Iriſh. Vat Lort Cobham?
May. You conterfeit, this ſhall not ſerve you, we'll torture you, we'll make you confeſs where that arch heretick is. Come bind him faſt.
Iriſh. Ahone, ahone, ahone, a Cree.
Con. Ahone you crafty Raſcal? [Exeunt.
[Lord Cobham comes out ſtealing in his gown.
Cob. Harpool, Harpool, I hear a marvellous noiſe about the Houſe, God warrant us, I fear we are purſued: what, Harpool?
Har. within. Who calls there?
Cob. 'Tis I, doſt thou not hear a noiſe about the Houſe?
Har. Yes marry do I, 'zounds I cannot find my hoſe? this Iriſh Raſcal that lodg'd with me all night, hath ſtolen my apparel, and has left me nothing but a lowſie mantle, and a pair of broags. Get up, get up, and if the Carrier and his wench be aſleep, change you with him as he hath done with me, and ſee if we can ſcape.

Noise heard about the House a pretty while, then enter the Constable meeting Harpoole in the Irishman's apparel.

Con. Stand close, here comes the Irishman that did the murther, by all tokens this is he.

May. And perceiving the House beset, would get away: stand, Sirrah.

Har. What art thou that bid'st me stand?

Con. I am the officer, and am come to search for an Irish man, such a villain as thy self, thou hast murther'd a man this last night by the high way.

Har. 'Sblood Constable art thou mad? am I an Irishman?

May. Sirrah, we'll find you an Irish-man before we part: Lay hold upon him.

Con. Make him fast, O thou bloody Rogue!

Enter Lord Cobham and his Lady, in the Carrier and Wenches apparel.

Cob. What will these Ostlers sleep all day?
Good morrow, good morrow, come: wench, come:
Saddle, Saddle, now afore God two fair dayes, ha?

Con. Who goes there?

May. O 'tis Lancashire Carrier, let them pass.

Cob. What, will no body ope the gates here?
Come, let's int'stable to look to our Capons.

[The Carrier calling.

Host, why Ostler?
Zwooks here's such abomination Company of Boyes:
A pox of this Pigsty at the House end,
It fills all the House full of fleas, Ostler, Ostler.

Ost. Who calls there? what would you have?

Club. Zwooks, do you rob your guests?
Do you lodge Rogues, and slaves, and scoundrels, ha?
They ha' Stole our clothes here: why Ostler?

Ost. A murren choak you, what a bawling you keep.

Host. How now? what would the Carrier have?
Look up there.

Ost. They say the man and the woman that lay by them, have Stolen their clothes.

Host. What, are the strange folks up yet that came in yester night?

Con. What mine Host, up so early?

Host. What Mr. Mayor, and Mr. Constable?

May. We are come to seek for some suspected persons, and such as here we found have apprehended.

Enter Carrier and Kate in Cobham and Ladies apparel.

Con. Who comes here?

Club. Who comes here? A plague found ome, you bawl quoth a, ods hat I'le forewear your house: you lodg'd a fellow and his wife by us, that ha' run away with our parrel, and left us such gew-gaws here, come Kate, come to me, thowse dizeard y'faith.

Mayor. Mine host, know you this man?

Host. Yes master Mayors, I'le give my word for him, why neighbour Club, how comes this gear about?

Kate. Now a foule on't, I cannot make this gew-gaw stand on my head.

Con. How came this man and woman thus attired?

Hostler. Here came a man and woman hither this last night, which I did take for substantial people, and lodg'd all in one Chamber by these folks: me thinks have been so bold to change apparel, and gone away this morning ere they rose.

Mayor. That was that Traitor Oldcastle that thus escapt us: make hue and cry after him, keep fast that traiterous Rebel his Servant there: farewel, mine Host.

Car. Come Kate Owdham, thou and Ise trimly dizard.

Kate. Faith neam Club, Ise wot nere what to do, Ise be so bouted and so shouted at: but by th' Mess Ise cry.

[Exit.

Enter Priest and Doll.

Priest. Come Doll, come, be merry, wench.
Farewel Kent, we are not for thee.
Be lusty my Lass, come for Lancashire,
We must nip the Boung for these Crowns.

Doll. Why is all the gold spent already, that you had the other day.

Priest. Gone, Doll, gone; flown, spent, vanished, the Devil, drink, and dice, has devoured all.

Doll. You might have left me in Kent till you had been better provided.

Priest. No, Doll, no, Kent's too hot, Doll, Kent's too hot: the weathercock of Wrotham will crow no longer, we have pluckt him, he has lost his Feathers, I have prun'd him bare, left him thrice, is moulted, is moulted, wench.

Doll. I might have gone to service again, old Mr. Harpool told me he would provide me a Mistris.

Priest. Peace, Doll, peace; come, mad wench, I'le make thee an honest Woman, we'll into Lancashire to our Friends, the troth is, I'le marry thee, we want but a little money, and money we will have I warrant thee: stay, who comes here? some Irish Villain me thinks that has slain a man, and now he is rifling on him, stand close, Doll, we'll see the end.

Enter the Irishman with his dead Master, and rifles him.

Irish. Alas poe Master, Sir Richard Lee, be S. Patrick, is rob and cut thy trote, for de shain, and dy mony, and dy gold Ring, be me truly is love de well, but now dow be kill de, be shitten Kanave.

Priest. Stand, Sirrah, what art thou?

Irish. Be S. Patrick Meester, is poor Irishman, is a leufter.

Priest. Sirrah, Sirrah, y'are a damn'd Rogue, you have kill'd a man here, and rifled him of all that he has: 'sblood you Rogue deliver, or I'le not leave you so much as a hair above your shoulders, you Whorson Iris Dog.

[Robs him.

Irish. We's me S. Patrick, Ise kill my Meester for shain and his ring, and now's be rob of all, me's undo.

Priest. Avant you Rascal, go Sirrah, be walking: come Doll, the Devil laughs when one Thief robs another: come wench, we'll to S. Albans, and revel in our bower, my brave girle.

Doll. O thou art old Sir John when all's done i'faith.

Enter the Host of the House with the Irishman.

Irish. Be me tro Master is poor Irisman, is want ludging, is have no mony, is starve and cold, good Master give her some meat, is famise and tye.

Hostler. Faith fellow I have no lodging, but what I keep for my Guests: as for meat, thou shalt have as much as there is, and if thou wilt lie in the barn, there's fair straw, and Room enough.

Irish. Is tank my Master hertily.

Hostler. Ho, Robin.

Robin. Who calls?

Hostler. Shew this poor Irishman to the barn, go Sirrah.

Enter Carrier and Kate.

Club. Who's within here? who looks to the Horses? Uds-hat, here's fine work, the Hens in the manger, and the Hogs in the litter, a bots found you all, here's a House well lookt to i'faith.

Kate.

Kate. Mas Goffe Club, Ise very cawd.
Club. Get in, Kate, get into the fire and warm thee. John Oſtler?
Hoſt. What, Gaffer Club, welcome to S. Albans, How do's all our friends in Lancaſhire?
Club. Well, God a mercy, John, how do's Tom? where is he?
Oſtl. Tom's gone from hence, he's at the three Horſe-leaves at ſtony-Stratford: how do's old Dick Dun?
Club. Uds hat, old Dun is moyr'd in a ſlough in Brick-hill lane: a plague fonnd it, yonders ſuch abomination weather as was never ſeen.
Oſtl. Uds hat Thief, have one half peck of Peaſe and Oats more for that, as I am John Oſtler, he has been ever as good a Jade as ever travelled.
Club. Faith well ſaid, old Jack, thou art the old Lad ſtill.
Oſtl. Come, Gaffer Club, unload, unload, and get to ſupper.

Enter Cobham and his Lady diſguiſed.

Cob. Come, Madam, happily eſcapt, here let us ſit,
This place is far remote from any path,
And here a while our weary limbs may reſt
To take refreſhing, free from the purſuit
Of envious Rochester.
Lady. But where, my Lord, ſhall we find reſt for our diſquiet minds?
There dwell untamed thoughts that hardly ſtoop
To ſuch abaſement of diſdained rags:
We were not wont to travel thus by night,
Eſpecially on foot.
Cob. No matter, love, extremities admit no better choice:
And were it not for thee, fay froward time
Impos'd a greater task, I would eſteem it
As lightly as the wind that blows upon us,
But in thy ſufferance I am doubly taskt,
Thou waſt not wont to have the earth thy ſtool,
Nor the moiſt dewy graſs thy pillow, nor
Thy chamber to be the wide Horizon.
Lady. How can it ſeem a trouble, having you
A partner with me, in the worſt I feel?
No, gentle Lord, your preſence would give eaſe
To death it ſelf, ſhould he now ſeize upon me:
[Hows's Bread and Cheeſe and a Bottle.
Behold what my foreſight hath undertane
For fear we faint, they are but homely Cates,
Yet ſawc'd with hunger, they may ſeem as ſweet
As greater dainties we were wont to taſte.
Cob. Praiſe be to him, whoſe plenty ſends both this
And all things elſe our mortal bodies need:
Nor ſcorn we this poor feeding, nor the ſtate
We now are in, for what is it on earth,
Nay under heaven, continues at a ſtay?
Ebbs not the Sea, when it hath overflown?
Follows not darkneſs, when the day is gone?
And ſee we not ſometimes the eye of heaven
Dim'd with ore-flying clouds? There's not that work
Of careful Nature, or of cunning Art,
(How ſtrong, how beauteous, or how rich it be)
But falls in time to ruine: here, gentle Madam,
In this one draught I waſh my ſorrow down. [Drinks.
Lady. And I encourag'd with your chearful ſpeech,
Will do the like.
Cob. Pray God poor Harpool come,
If he ſhould fall into the Biſhops hands,
Or not remember where we bad him meet us,
It were the thing of all things elſe, that now
Could breed revolt in this new peace of mind.
Lady. Fear not, my Lord, he's witty to deviſe,
And ſtrong to execute a preſent ſhift.
Cob. That power be ſtill his guide hath guided us.
My d rowſie eyes wax heavy; early riſing,
Together with the travel we have had,
Makes me that I could take a nap,
Were I perſwaded we might be ſecure.
Lady. Let that depend on me, whilſt you do ſleep.
I'll watch that no misfortune happen us.
Cob. I ſhall, dear wife, be too much trouble to thee.
Lady. Urge not that,
My duty binds me, and your love commands,
I would I had the skill with tuned voice
To draw on ſleep with ſome ſweet melody.
But imperfection and unaptneſs too
Are both repugnant: fear inſerts the one,
The other Nature hath denied me uſe.
But what talk I of means, to purchaſe that
Is freely happen'd? Sleep with gentle hand,
Hath ſhut his eye lids: O victorious labour,
How ſoon thy power can charm the bodies ſenſe?
And now thou likewiſe climb'ſt unto my brain,
Making my heavy temples ſtoop to thee,
Great God of heaven from danger keep us free.
[Fall aſleep.

Enter Sir Richard Lee and his Men.

Lee. A Murther cloſely done, and in my ground?
Search carefully, if any where it were,
This obſcure thicket is the likelieſt place.
Ser. Sir, I have found the body ſtiff with cold,
And mangled cruelly with many wounds.
Lee. Look if thou know'ſt him, turn his body up:
Alack, it is my ſon, my ſon and heir,
Whom two years ſince, I ſent to Ireland,
To practiſe there the diſcipline of war,
And coming home, for ſo he wrote to me,
Some ſavage heart, ſome bloody deviliſh hand,
Either in hate, or thirſting for his coin,
Hath here ſluc'd out his blood. Unhappy hour,
A curſed place, but moſt inconſtant Fate,
That had'ſt reſerv'd him from the bullets fire,
And ſuffered him to ſcape the wood-kerns fury.
Did'ſt here ordain the treaſure of his life,
Even here within the arms of tender peace,
To be conſum'd by treaſons waſtful hand?
And which is moſt afflicting to my ſoul,
That this his death and murther ſhould be wrought
Without the knowledge by whoſe means 'twas done.
2 Ser. Not ſo, Sir, I have found the authors of it,
See where they ſit, and in their bloody fiſts
The fatal inſtruments of death and ſin.
Lee. Juſt judgment of that power, whoſe gracious eye,
Loathing the ſight of ſuch a heinous fact,
Dazling their ſenſes with benumming ſleep,
Till their unhallowed treachery was known.
Awake ye monſters, murtherers awake,
Tremble for horror, bluſh you cannot chuſe,
Beholding this unhumane deed of yours.
Cob. What mean you, Sir, to trouble weary ſouls,
And interrupt us of our quiet ſleep?
Lee. O deviliſh! can you boaſt unto your ſelves
Of quiet ſleep, having within your hearts
The guilt of murder waking, that which cries
Deafs the loud thunder, and ſolicites heaven
With more than Mandrakes ſhreeks for your offence?
Lady. What murther? you upbraid us wrongfully.
Lee. Can you deny the fact? See you not here
The body of my ſon by you miſdone?
Look on his wounds, look on his purple hue:
Do we not find you where the deed was done?
Were not your knives faſt cloſed in your hands?
Is not this cloth an argument beſide,
Thus ſtain'd and ſpotted with his innocent blood?
Theſe ſpeaking characters, were there nothing elſe
To plead againſt ye, would convict you both.
To Hartford with them, where the Sizes now are kept,
Their lives ſhall anſwer for my ſons loſt life.

Cob.

Cob. As we are innocent, ſo may we ſpeed.
Lee. As I am wrong'd, ſo may the Law proceed.

Enter Rocheſter, Conſtable of S. Albans, with Prieſt, Doll, and the Iriſhman in Harpool's Apparel.

Biſh. What intricate confuſion have we here?
Not two hours ſince, we apprehended one
In habit Iriſh, but in ſpeech not ſo;
And now you bring another, that in ſpeech is Iriſh,
But in habit Engliſh: yea, and more than ſo,
The ſervant of that heretick Lord Cobham.
Iriſh. Fait me be no ſervant of de Lort Cobham,
Me be Mack Chane of Ulſter.
Biſh. Otherwiſe call'd Harpool of Kent, go to, Sir,
You cannot blind us with your broken Iriſh.
Prieſt. Truſt me, ſaid Biſhop, whether Iriſh or Engliſh.
Harpool or not Harpool, that I leave to the tryal:
But ſure I am, this man by face and ſpeech,
Is he that murdred young Sir Richard Lee:
I met him preſently upon the fact,
And that he ſlew his Maſter for that Gold,
Thoſe Jewels, and that Chain I took from him.
Biſh. Well, our affairs do call us back to London,
So that we cannot proſecute the cauſe
As we deſire to do, therefore we leave
The charge with you, to ſee they be convey'd
To Hartford Size: both this counterfeit,
And you, Sir John of Wrotham, and your Wench,
For you are culpable as well as they,
Though not for murther, yet for felony.
But ſince you are the means to bring to light
This graceleſs murther, ye ſhall bear with you
Our Letters to the Judges of the Bench,
To be your friends in what they lawful may.
Prieſt. I thank your Lordſhip.

Enter Gaoler, bringing forth Oldcaſtle.

Gaol. Bring forth the Priſoners, ſee the Court prepar'd,
The Juſtices are coming to the Bench:
So, let him ſtand, away and fetch the reſt. [Exeunt.
Cob. O give me patience to endure this ſcourge,
Thou that art fountain of that vertuous ſtream,
And though contempt of witneſs, and reproach
Hang on theſe iron gives, to preſs my life
As low as earth, yet ſtrengthen me with faith,
That I may mount in ſpirit above the clouds.

Enter Gaoler, bringing in Lady Cobham and Harpool.

Here comes my Lady, ſorrow 'tis for her.
Thy wound is grievous, elſe I ſcoff at thee.
What and poor Harpool! art thou i'th'bryars too?
Har. Ifaith, my Lord, I am in, get out how I can.
Lady. Say (gentle Lord) for now we are alone,
And may confer, ſhall we confeſs in brief,
Of whence, and what we are, and ſo prevent
The accuſation is commenc'd againſt us?
Cob. What will that help us? Being known, ſweet love,
We ſhall for hereſie be put to death,
For ſo they term the Religion we profeſs.
No, if we dye, let this our comfort be,
That of the guilt impos'd our ſouls are free,
Har. I, I, my Lord, Harpool is ſo reſolv'd,
I wreak of death the leſs in that I dye,
Not by the ſentence of that envious Prieſt.
Lady. Well, be it then according as heavens pleaſe.

Enter L. Judge, Juſtices, Mayor of S. Albans, Lord Powis and his Lady. old Sir Richard Lee: the Judge and Juſtices take their places.

Judg. Now, Mr. Mayor, what Gentleman is that
You bring with you before us to the Bench?
May. The Lord Powis, if it like your honour,
And this his Lady travelling toward Wales;
Who, for they lodg'd laſt night within my houſe,
And my Lord Biſhop did lay wait for ſuch,
Were very willing to come on with me,
Leſt for their ſakes, ſuſpicion we might wrong.
Judg. We cry your honour mercy, good my Lord,
Wilt pleaſe you take your place. Madam, your Ladiſhip
May here, or where you will repoſe your ſelf,
Until this buſineſs now in hand be paſt.
La. Pow. I will withdraw into ſome other room,
So that your Lordſhip and the reſt be pleas'd.
Judg. With all our hearts: attend the Lady there.
Pow. Wife, I have ey'd you pris'ners all this while,
And my conceit doth tell me, 'tis our friend
The Noble Cobham, and his virtuous Lady.
La. Pow. I think no leſs, are they ſuſpected for this (murther?
Pow. What it means
I cannot tell, but we ſhall know anon:
Mean time as you paſs by them, ask the queſtion,
But do it ſecretly you be not ſeen,
And make ſome ſign, that I may know your mind.
[As ſhe paſſes over the Stage by them.
La. Pow. My Lord Cobham? Madam?
Cob. No Cobham now, nor Madam, as you love us,
But John of Lancaſhire, and Joan his wife.
La. Pow. O tell, what is it that our love can do
To pleaſure you, for we are bound to you?
Cob. Nothing but this, that you conceal our names;
So, gentle Lady, paſs for being ſpied.
La. Pow. My heart I leave, to bear part of your grief.
[Exit.
Judg. Call the Priſoners to the Bar: Sir Richard Lee,
What evidence can you bring againſt theſe people,
To prove them guilty of the murther done?
Lee. This bloody Towel, and theſe naked Knives,
Beſide, we found them ſitting by the place,
Where the dead body lay within a buſh.
Judg. What anſwer you why Law ſhould not proceed
According to this evidence given in,
To tax ye with the penalty of death?
Cob. That we are free from murthers very thought,
And know not how the Gentleman was ſlain.
1 Juſt. How came this linen-cloth ſo bloody then?
L. Cob. My husband hot with travelling, my Lord,
His noſe guſht out a bleeding, that was it.
2 Juſt. But how came your ſharp-edg'd knives unſheath'd?
L. Cob. To cut ſuch ſimple victual as we had.
Judg. Say we admit this anſwer to thoſe Articles,
What made you in ſo private a dark nook,
So far remote from any common path,
As was the thick where the dead corps was thrown?
Cob. Journying, my Lord, from London, from the Term,
Down into Lancaſhire, where we do dwell;
And what with age, and travel being faint,
We gladly ſought a place where we might reſt,
Free from reſort of other paſſengers,
And ſo we ſtray'd into that ſecret corner.
Judg. Theſe are but ambages to drive off time,
And linger Juſtice from her purpos'd end.
But who are theſe?

Enter Conſtable with the Iriſhman, Prieſt, and Doll.

Conſt. Stay judgment, and releaſe thoſe innocents,
For here is he whoſe hand hath done the deed,
For which they ſtand indited at the Bar:
This ſavage Villain, this rude Iriſh Slave,
His tongue already hath confeſt the fact,
And here is witneſs to confirm as much.
Prieſt. Yes, my good Lord, no ſooner had he ſlain
His loving Maſter for the wealth he had,

But I upon the inſtant met with him:
And what he purchas'd with the loſs of bloud,
With ſtrokes I preſently bereav'd him of,
Some of the which is ſpent, the reſt remaining,
I willingly ſurrender to the hands
Of old Sir Richard Lee, as being his;
Beſide, my Lord Judge, I greet your honour
With Letters from my Lord of Rocheſter.
[Delivers them.

Lee. Is this the Wolf, whoſe thirſty throat did drink
My dear Son's bloud? art thou the Snake
He cheriſht, yet with envious piercing ſting
Aſſaild'ſt him mortally? Wer't not that the Law
Stands ready to revenge thy cruelty,
Traytor to God, thy Maſter, and to me,
Theſe hands ſhould be thy Executioner.

Jud. Patience, Sir Richard Lee, you ſhall have Juſtice.
The fact is odious, therefore take him hence,
And being hang'd until the wretch be dead,
His Body after ſhall be hang'd in Chains,
Near to the place where he did act the murther.

Iriſh. Prythee, Lord Shudge, let me have mine own Cloaths, my Strouces there, and let me be hang'd in a Wyth after my Country the Iriſh Faſhion. [Exit.

Jud. Go to, away with him. And now, Sir John,
Although by you this murther came to light:
Yet upright Law will not hold you excus'd,
For you did rob the Iriſh-man, by which
You ſtand attainted here of Felony:
Beſide, you have been lewd, and many years
Led a laſcivious, unbeſeeming life.

Prieſt. O but, my Lord, Sir John repents, and he will mend.

Jud. In hope thereof, together with the favour
My Lord of Rocheſter intreats for you,
We are content you ſhall be proved.

Prieſt. I thank your good Lordſhip.

Jud. Theſe falſly here accus'd, and brought
In peril wrongfully, we in like ſort do ſet at liberty.

Lee. And for amends,
Touching the wrong unwittingly I have done,
I give theſe few Crowns.

Jud. Your kindneſs merits praiſe, Sir Richard Lee,
So let us hence.
[Exeunt all but L. Powis and Cobham.

Pow. But Powis ſtill muſt ſtay,
There yet remains a part of that true love
He owes his noble Friend, unſatisfied
And unperform'd, which firſt of all doth bind me
To gratulate your Lordſhip's ſafe delivery:
And then intreat, that ſince unlookt for thus
We here are met, your honour would vouchſafe
To ride with me to Wales, where though my power,
(Though not to quittance thoſe great benefits
I have receiv'd of you) yet both my Houſe,
My Purſe, my Servants, and what elſe I have
Are all at your command. Deny me not,
I know the Biſhop's hate purſues ye ſo,
As there's no ſafety in abiding here.

Cob. 'Tis true my Lord, and God forgive him for it.

Pow. Then let us hence, you ſhall be ſtraight provided
Of luſty Geldings: and once entred Wales,
Well may the Biſhop hunt, but ſpight his Face,
He never more ſhall have the Game in Chace. [Exeunt.

The Scene London.

Actus Primus.

Enter the Lady Widow Plus, her two Daughters, Frank and Moll, her Husbands Brother an old Knight Sir Godfrey, with her Son and Heir Maſter Edmond, all in Mourning Apparel, Edmond in a Cypreſs Hat. The Widow wringing her hands, and burſting out into paſſion, as newly come from the Burial of her Husband.

Widow. OH, that ever I was born, that ever I was born!

Sir Godfrey. Nay good Siſter, dear Siſter, ſweet Siſter, be of good comfort, ſhew your ſelf a Woman, now or never.

Wid. Oh, I have loſt the deareſt man, I have buried the ſweeteſt Husband that ever lay by Woman.

Sir God. Nay give him his due, he was indeed an honeſt, virtuous, diſcreet wiſe man, — he was my Brother, as right, as right.

Wid. O, I ſhall never forget him, never forget him, he was a man ſo well given to a Woman — oh!

Sir God. Nay, but kind Siſter, I could weep as much as any Woman, but alas, our tears cannot call him again: me thinks you are well read, Siſter, and know that death is as common as Homo, a common name to all men; — a man ſhall be taken when he's making water, — nay, did not the learned Parſon Maſter Pigman tell us e'ne now, that all Fleſh is frail, we are born to die, Man has but a time: with ſuch like deep and profound perſwaſions, as he is a rare Fellow you know, and an excellent Reader: and for Example, (as there are examples abundance) did not Sir Humphrey Bubble die t'other day, there's a luſty Widow, why ſhe cri'd not above half an hour — for ſhame, for ſhame: then followed him old Maſter Fulſome the Uſurer, there's a wiſe VVidow, why ſhe cry'd ne're a whit at all.

Wid. O rank not me with thoſe wicked Women, I had a Husband out ſhin'd 'em all.

Sir God. I that he did, i'faith, he out-ſhin'd 'em all.

Wid. Doſt thou ſtand there and ſee us all weep, and not once ſhed a tear for thy Fathers Death? oh thou ungracious Son and Heir thou?

Edm. Troth, Mother, I ſhould not weep I'm ſure; I am paſt a Child I hope, to make all my old School-Fellows laugh at me; I ſhould be mockt, ſo I ſhould; pray let one of my Siſters weep for me, I'll laugh as much for her another time?

Widow.

Wid. O thou paſt-Grace thou, out of my ſight, thou graceleſs Imp, thou grieveſt me more than the death of thy Father: O thou ſtubborn only Son: hadſt thou ſuch an honeſt man to thy Father—— that would deceive all the World to get riches for thee, and canſt thou not afford a little ſalt water? He that ſo wiſely did quite overthrow the right Heir of thoſe Lands, which now you reſpect not: up every morning betwixt four and five, ſo duly at Weſtminſter-Hall every Term-time, with all his Cards and Writings, for thee, thou wicked Abſalon—— O dear Husband!

Edm. Weep, quotha? I proteſt I am glad he's Churched; for now he's gone, I ſhall ſpend in quiet.

Frank. Dear Mother, pray ceaſe, half your tears ſuffice,
'Tis time for you to take truce with your eyes,
Let me weep now.

Wid. O ſuch a dear Knight, ſuch a ſweet Husband have I loſt, have I loſt!—— if bleſſed be the Coarſe the rain rains upon, he had it, pouring down.

Sir God. Siſter, be of good chear. we are all mortal our ſelves, I come upon you freſhly, I ne're ſpeak without comfort, hear me what I ſhall ſay,—— my Brother has left you wealthy, y'are rich.

Wid. O!

Sir God. I ſay y'are rich: you are alſo fair.

Wid. O!

Sir God. Go to, y'are fair, you cannot ſmother it, beauty will come to light; nor are your years ſo far enter'd with you, but that you will be ſought after, and may very well anſwer another Husband; the World is full of fine Gallants, choice enow, Siſter,—— for what ſhould we do with all our Knights, I pray? but to marry rich Widows, wealthy Citizens Widows, luſty fair-brow'd Ladies; go to, be of good comfort, I ſay, leave ſhobbing and weeping,— yet my Brother was a kind-hearted man.— I would not have the Elf ſee me now,— come, pluck up a womans heart,—— here ſtand your Daughters, who be well eſtated, and at maturity will alſo be inquir'd after with good Husbands, ſo all theſe tears ſhall be ſoon dried up, and a better World than ever—— what, Woman? you muſt not weep ſtill? he's dead, he's buried— yet I cannot chuſe but weep for him.

Wid. Marry again! no, let me be buried quick then!
And that ſame part of Quire whereon I tread
To ſuch intent, O may it be my grave:
And that the Prieſt may turn his wedding-prayers,
Even with a breath, to Funeral duſt and aſhes;
O, out of a million of millions, I ſhould ne're find ſuch a Husband; he was unmatchable—unmatchable: nothing was ſo hot, nor too dear for me, I could not ſpeak of that one thing that I had not, beſide, I had keys of all, kept all, receiv'd all, had money in my purſe, ſpent what I would, went abroad when I would, came home when I would, and did all what I would: O—— my ſweet Husband; I ſhall never have the like.

Sir God. Siſter? ne're ſay ſo, he was an honeſt Brother of mine, and ſo, and you may light upon one as honeſt again, or one as honeſt again may light upon you, that's the properer phraſe indeed.

Wid. Never: O if you love me urge it not:
O may I be the by-word of the world,
The common talk at Table in the mouth
Of every Groom and Waiter, if e're more
I entertain the carnal ſuit of man.

Moll. I muſt kneel down for faſhion too.

Frank. And I, whom never man as yet hath ſeal'd,
E'ne in this depth of general ſorrow, vow
Never to marry, to ſuſtain ſuch loſs,
As a dear husband ſeems to be, once dead.

Moll. I lov'd my Father well too; but to ſay,
Nay vow, I would not marry for his death,
Sure I ſhould ſpeak falſe Latine, ſhould I not?
I'de as ſoon vow never to come in Bed:
Tut, women muſt live by th' quick, and not by th' dead.

Wid. Dear Copy of my Husband, O let me kiſs thee:
[Drawing out her Husbands Picture.
How like him is their Model; their brief Picture
Quickens my tears: my ſorrows are renew'd
At their freſh ſight.

Sir God. Siſter——

Wid. Away,
All honeſty with him is turn'd to clay,
O my ſweet Husband, O——

Frank. My dear Father? [Exeunt Mother & Daughters.

Moll. Here's a puling indeed! I think my Mother weeps for all the women that ever buried husbands: for if from time to time all the Widowers tears in England had been bottled up, I do not think all would have fill'd a three-half-penny Bottle: alas, a ſmall matter bucks a Handkerchief,—— and ſometimes the ſpittle ſtands too nigh Saint Thomas a Watrings: well, I can mourn in good ſober ſort as well as another; but where I ſpend one tear for a dead Father, I could give twenty kiſſes for a quick Husband.

[Exit Moll.

Sir God. Well, go thy ways, old Sir Godfrey, and thou may'ſt be proud on't, thou haſt a kind loving Siſter-in-law: how conſtant? how paſſionate? how full of April the poor Souls eyes are; well, I would my Brother knew on't, he ſhould then know what a kind wife he had left behind him: truth, and 'twere not for ſhame that the Neighbours at th'next Garden ſhould hear me betwixt joy and grief, I ſhould e'ne cry out-right.

[Exit Sir Godfrey.

Edm. So, a fair riddance, my Father's laid in duſt, his Coffin and he is like a whole Meat-Pye, and the worms will cut him up ſhortly: farewel, old Dad, farewel; I'le be curb'd in no more: I perceive a Son and Heir may quickly be made a Fool and he will be one, but I'le take another order; ——Now ſhe would have me weep for him forſooth, and why; becauſe he cozen'd the right Heir being a Fool, and beſtow'd thoſe Lands on me his eldeſt Son; and therefore I muſt weep for him, ha, ha: why all the World knows, as long as 'twas his pleaſure to get me, 'twas his duty to get for me: I know the Law in that point, no Atturney can gull me. Well, my Uncle is an old Aſs, and an admirable Coxcomb, I'll rule the Roaſt my ſelf, I'll be kept under no more, I know what I may do well enough by my Fathers Copy: the Law's in mine own hands now: nay, now I know my ſtrength, I'll be ſtrong enough for my Mother, I warrant you.

[Exit.

Enter George Py-boord a Scholar and a Citizen, and unto him an old Souldier, Peter Skirmiſh,

Pye. What's to be done now, old Lad of War, thou that wert wont to be as hot as a Turn-ſpit, as nimble as a Fencer, and as louſie as a School-maſter; now thou art put to ſilence like a Sectary,—— War ſits now like a Juſtice of Peace, and does nothing: where be your Muskets, Callivers and Hotſhots? in Long-lane, at pawn, at pawn? ——Now Keys are our only Guns, Key-guns, Key-guns, and Bawds the Gunners,—— who are your Sentinels in Peace, and ſtand ready charg'd to give warning; with hems, hums, and pocky-coughs; only your Chambers are licenſt to play upon you, and Drabs enow to give fire to 'em.

Skir. Well, I cannot tell, but I am ſure it goes wrong with me, for ſince the ceſſure of the Wars, I have ſpent above a hundred Crowns out of purſe: I have been a Soldier any time this forty years, and now I perceive an old Soldier, and an old Courtier have both one deſtiny, and in the end turn both into Hob-nails.

Pye. Pretty myſtery for a Beggar, for indeed a Hob nail is the true Emblem of a Beggar's Shoe-ſoal.

Skir. I will not ſay but that War is a blood-ſucker, and ſo; but in my conſcience, (as there is no Soldier but has a piece of one, though it be full of holes like a ſhot Ancient, cient, no matter, 'twill ſerve to ſwear by) in my conſcience, I think ſome kind of Peace has more hidden oppreſſions, and violent heady ſins, (though looking of a gentle nature) than a profeſt war.

Pye. Troth, and for mine own part, I am a poor Gentleman, and a Scholar, I have been matriculated in the Univerſity, wore out ſix Gowns there, ſeen ſome Fools, and ſome Scholars, ſome of the City, and ſome of the Country, kept order, went bare-headed over the Quadrangle, eat my Commons with a good ſtomach, and Battled with Diſcretion; at laſt, having done many ſlights and tricks to maintain my wit in uſe (as my brain would never endure me to be idle,) I was expell'd the Univerſity, only for ſtealing a Cheeſe out of Jeſus Colledge.

Skir. Is't poſſible?

Pye. O! there was one Welſhman (God forgive him) purſued it hard, and never left, till I turn'd my ſtaff toward London, where when I came, all my Friends were pit-hold, gone to Graves, (as indeed there was but a few left before) then was I turn'd to my wits, to ſhift in the World, to towre among Sons and Heirs, and Fools, and Gulls, and Ladies eldeſt Sons, to work upon nothing, to feed out of Flint, and ever ſince has my belly been much beholden to my brain: But now to return to you, old Skirmiſh, I ſay as you ſay, and for my part wiſh a Turbulency in the World, for I have nothing in the World, but my wits, and I think they are as mad as they will be: and to ſtrengthen your Argument the more, I ſay an honeſt War is better than a bawdy Peace: as touching my profeſſion; the multiplicity of Scholars, hatcht, and nouriſht in the idle Calms of Peace, makes 'em like Fiſhes, one devour another; and the Community of Learning has ſo plaid upon affections, and thereby almoſt Religion is come about to Phantaſie, and diſcredited by being too much ſpoken of—— in ſo many and mean mouths. I my ſelf being a Scholar and a Graduate, have no other comfort by my learning, but the affection of my words to know how Scholar-like to name what I want, and can call my ſelf a Beggar both in Greek and Latine, and therefore not to cog with Peace, I'll not be afraid to ſay, 'tis a great Breeder, but a bad Nouriſher: a great getter of Children, which muſt either be Thieves or Rich men, Knaves or Beggars.

Skir. Well, would I had been born a Knave then, when I was born a Beggar; for if the truth was known, I think I was begot when my Father had never a penny in his purſe.

Pye. Puh, faint not, old Skirmiſh, let this warrant thee, Facilis Deſcenſus Averni, 'tis an eaſie Journey to a Knave, thou may'ſt be a Knave when thou wilt; and Peace is a good Madam to all other profeſſions, and an arrant Drab to us, let us handle her accordingly, and by our wits thrive in deſpight of her; for the Law lives by quarrels, the Courtier by ſmooth good-morrows, and every profeſſion makes it ſelf greater by imperfections, why not we then by ſhifts, wiles, and forgeries? And ſeeing our brains are the only Patrimonies, let's ſpend with judgment, not like a deſperate Son and Heir, but like a ſober and diſcreet Templer,—— one that will never march beyond the bounds of his allowance, and for our thriving means, thus, I my ſelf will put on the Deceit of a Fortune-teller, a Fortune-teller.

Skirm. Very proper.

Pye. And you a Figure-caſter, or a Conjurer.

Skir. A Conjurer?

Pye. Let me alone, I'll inſtruct you, and teach you to deceive all eyes, but the Devils.

Skir. O I, for I would not deceive him, and I could chuſe, of all others.

Pye. Fear not, I warrant you; and ſo by theſe means we ſhall help one another to Patients, as the condition of the age affords creatures enow for cunning to work upon.

Skir. O wondrous, new Fools and freſh Aſſes.

Pye. O, fit, fit, excellent.

Skir. What in the name of Conjuring?

Pye-boord. My memory greets me happily with an admirable ſubject to graze upon. The Lady-Widow, who of late I ſaw weeping in her Garden, for the death of her Husband, ſure ſhe's but a watriſh Soul, and half on't by this time is dropt out of her eyes: device well manag'd may do good upon her: it ſtands firm, my firſt practice ſhall be there.

Skir. You have my voice, George.

Pye-boord. Sh'as a grey Gull to her Brother, a Fool to her only Son, and an Ape to her youngeſt Daughter;—— I over-heard 'em ſeverally, and from their words I'll drive my device; and thou, old Peter Skirmiſh, ſhalt be my ſecond in all ſlights.

Skir. Ne're doubt me, George Pye-boord,—— only you muſt teach me to conjure.

Enter Captain Idle pinion'd, and with a Guard of Officers paſſeth over the Stage.

Pye. Puh, I'll perfect thee, Peter:
How now! what's he?

Skir. O George! this ſight kills me,
'Tis my ſworn Brother, Captain Idle.

Pye. Captain Idle.

Skir. Apprehended for ſome fellonious act or other, he has ſtarted out, has made a Night on't, lackt ſilver; I can not but commend his reſolution, he would not pawn his Buff-Jerkin, I would either ſome of us were imploy'd, or might pitch our Tents at Uſurers doors, to kill the ſlaves as they peep out at the wicket.

Pye. Indeed thoſe are our ancient Enemies; they keep our money in their hands, and make us to be hang'd for robbing of 'em; but come let's follow after to the Priſon, and know the nature of his offence, and what we can ſtead him in, he ſhall be ſure of; and I'll uphold it ſtill, that a charitable Knave is better than a ſoothing Puritan. [Exeunt.

Enter at one door Corporal Oath, a vain-glorious Fellow, and at the other three of the Widow Puritans Serving-men, Nicholas Saint-Tantlings, Simon Saint Mary-Overies, and Frailty in black ſcurvy mourning Coats, and Books at their Girdles, as coming from Church. They meet.

Nich. What Corporal Oath? I am ſorry we have met with you next our hearts; you are the man that we are forbidden to keep company withal, we muſt not ſwear I can tell you, and you have the name for ſwearing.

Sim. I, Corporal Oath, I would you would do ſo much as forſake us, we cannot abide you, we muſt not be ſeen in your company.

Frail. There is none of us, I can tell you, but ſhall be ſoundly whipt for ſwearing.

Corp. Why how now? we three? Puritanical Scrapeſhooes, Fleſh a good Fridays; a hand.

All. Oh.

Corp. Why Nicholas Saint-Tantlings, Simon Saint Mary-Overies, has the De'il poſſeſt you, that you ſwear no better, you half-Chriſtened Katomites, you ungod-mother'd Varlets, do's the firſt leſſon teach you to be proud, and the ſecond to be Coxcombs; proud Coxcombs; not once to do duty to a man of Mark.

Frail. A man of Mark, quotha, I do not think he can ſhew a Beggars Noble.

Corp. A Corporal, a Commander, one of Spirit, that is able to blow you up all dry with your Books at your Girdles.

Simon. We are not taught to believe that, Sir, for we know the breath of man is weak.

[Corporal breathes on Frailty.

Frail. Foh, you lye, Nicholas; for here's one ſtrong enough;

enough; blow us up, quotha, he may well blow me above twelve-ſcore off on him: I warrant, if the wind ſtood right, a man might ſmell him from the top of Newgate, to the Leads of Ludgate.

Corp. Sirrah, thou hollow book of Wax-candle.

Nich. I, you may ſay what you will, ſo you ſwear not.

Corp. I ſwear by the———

Nich. Hold, hold, good Corporal Oath; for if you ſwear once, we ſhall fall down in a ſwoon preſently.

Corp. I muſt and will ſwear: you quivering Coxcombs, my Captain is impriſoned, and by Vulcan's Leather Cod-piece point———

Nich. O Simon, what an oath was there?

Frail. If he ſhould chance to break it, the poor man's Breeches would fall down about his heels, for Venus allows but one point to his hoſe.

Corp. With theſe, my Bully-Fleet, I will thump ope the Priſon doors, and brain the Keeper with the begging-Box, but I'll ſet my honeſt ſweet Captain Idle at liberty.

Nich. How, Captain Idle? my old Aunts Son, my dear Kinſman in Cappadochio.

Corp. I, thou Church-peeling, thou Holy-paring, Religious outſide thou; if thou had'ſt any grace in thee, thou would'ſt viſit him, relieve him, ſwear to get him out.

Nich. Aſſure you, Corporal, indeed-la, 'tis the firſt time I heard on't.

Corp. Why do't now then, Marmaſet; bring forth thy yearly wages, let not a Commander periſh?

Sim. But if he be one of the wicked, he ſhall periſh.

Nich. Well, Corporal, I'll e'en along with you, to viſit my Kinſman, if I can do him any good, I will,— but I have nothing for him, Simon Saint Mary-Overies and Frailty, pray make a Lye for me to the Knight my Maſter, old Sir Godfrey.

Corp. A Lye? may you lye then?

Frail. O I, we may lye, but we muſt not ſwear.

Sim. True, we may lie with our Neighbour's wife, but we muſt not ſwear we did ſo.

Corp. O, an excellent Tag of Religion.

Nich. O, Simon, I have thought upon a ſound excuſe, it will go currant, ſay that I am gon to a Faſt.

Sim. To a Faſt? very good.

Nich. I, to a Faſt, ſay, with Maſter Full-belly the Miniſter.

Sim. Maſter Full-belly? an honeſt man: he feeds the flock well, for he's an excellent Feeder.

[Exeunt Corporal and Nicholas.

Frail. O I, I have ſeen him eat a whole Pig, and afterwards fall to the Pettitoes. [Exeunt Simon and Frailty.

The Priſon, Marſhalſea.

Enter Captain Idle at one door, and an old Souldier at the other.

[George Pye-boord ſpeaking within.

Pye. Pray turn the Key.

Skir. Turn the Key, I pray.

Capt. Who ſhould thoſe be, I almoſt know their voices? O my Friends! [Entring.
Y'are welcome to a ſmelling Room here; you newly took leave of the Air, is't not a ſtrange ſavour?

Pye. As all Priſons have ſmells of ſundry Wretches;
Who, though departed, leave their ſcents behind 'em.
By Gold, Captain, I am ſincerely ſorry for thee.

Capt. By my troth, George, I thank thee; but, piſh— what muſt be, muſt be.

Skir. Captain, what do you lie in for? is't great? what's your offence?

Capt. Faith, my offence is ordinary,——common, a High-way, and I fear me my penalty will be ordinary and common too, a Halter.

Pye. Nay, propheſie not ſo ill, it ſhall go hard,
But I'll ſhift for thy life.

Capt. Whether I live or dye, thou'rt an honeſt George. I'll tell you— Silver flow'd not with me, as it had done, (for now the Tide runs to Bawds and Flatterers) I had a ſtart out, and by chance ſet upon a fat Steward, thinking his purſe had been as purſie as his body; and the ſlave had about him but the poor purchace of ten groats: notwithſtanding being deſcryed, purſued, and taken, I know the Law is ſo grim, in reſpect of many deſperate, unſetled Souldiers, that I fear me I ſhall dance after their pipe for't.

Skir. I am twice ſorry for you, Captain; firſt, that your purchace was ſo ſmall, and now that your danger is ſo great.

Capt. Puſh, the worſt is but death,— ha' you a pipe of Tobacco about you?

Skir. I think I have thereabouts about me.

[Captain blows a Pipe.

Capt. Here's a clean Gentleman too, to receive.

Pye. Well, I muſt caſt about ſome happy ſlight:
Work brain, that ever did'ſt thy Maſter right.

Corp. Keeper, let the key be turn'd.

[Corporal and Nicholas within.

Nich. I, I, pray, Maſter Keeper, give's a caſt of your Office.

Capt. How now? more Viſitants? ——what, Corporal Oath?

Pye. Skir. Corporal.

Corp. In priſon, honeſt Captain? this muſt not be.

Nich. How do you, Captain Kinſman?

Capt. Good Coxcomb, what makes that pure— ſtarcht Fool here?

Nich. You ſee, Kinſman, I am ſomewhat bold to call in, and ſee how you do; I heard you were ſafe enough, and I was very glad on't, that it was no worſe.

Capt. This is a double torture now,— this Fool by th' book doth vex me more than my impriſonment. What meant you, Corporal, to hook him hither?

Corp. Who, he? he ſhall relieve thee, and ſupply thee, I'll make him do't.

Capt. Fy, what vain breath you ſpend:
He ſupply? I'll ſooner expect mercy from an Uſurer when my Bond's forfeited, ſooner kindneſs from a Lawyer when my money's ſpent: nay, ſooner charity from the Devil, than good from a Puritan. I'll look for relief from him, when Lucifer is reſtor'd to his blood, and in Heaven again.

Nich. I warrant my Kinſman's talking of me, for my left ear burns moſt tyrannically.

Pye. Captain Idle? what's he there? he looks like a Monkey upward, and a Crane downward.

Capt. Pſhaw; a fooliſh Couſin of mine: I muſt thank God for him.

Pye. Why, the better ſubject to work a ſcape upon; thou ſhalt e'en change cloaths with him, and leave him here, and ſo——

Capt. Puſh, I publiſht him e'en now to my Corporal, he will be damn'd e're he do me ſo much good; why, I know a more proper, a more handſom device than that, if the ſlave would be ſociable,—— now Goodman Fleerface?

Nich. O, my Couſin begins to ſpeak to me now, I ſhall be acquainted with him again, I hope.

Skir. Look! what ridiculous Raptures take hold of his wrinkles.

Pye. Then what ſay you to this device, a happy one Captain?

Capt. Speak low, George; Priſon Rats have wider ears than thoſe in Malt-lofts.

Nich. Couſin, if it lay in my power, as they ſay,—— to——do——

Capt. 'Twould do me an exceeding pleaſure indeed, that; ne're talk furder on't, the Fool will be hang'd e're he do't.

Corp. Pox, I'll thump 'im to't.

Pye. Why, do but try the Fopster, and break it to him bluntly.

Cap. And so my disgrace will dwell in his Jaws, and the Slave slaver out our purpose to his Master, for would I were but as sure on't, as I am sure he will deny to do't.

Nic. I would be heartily glad, Cousin, if any of my Friendships, as they say, might——stand, ha—

Pye. Why, you see he offers his Friendship Foolishly to you already.

Cap. I, that's the Hell on't, I would he would offer it wisely.

Nic. Verily, and indeed la, Cousin——

Cap. I have took note of thy fleers a good while, if thou art minded to do me good? as thou gap'st upon me comfortably, and giv'st me Charitable faces; which indeed is but a fashion in you all that are Puritans, wilt soon at night steal me thy Master's Chain?

Nic. Oh, I shall sowne!

Pye. Corporal, he starts already!

Cap. I know it to be worth three hundred Crowns, and with the half of that, I can buy my life at a Brokers, at second hand, which now lies in pawn to the Law, if this thou refuse to do, being easie and nothing dangerous, in that thou art held in good Opinion of thy Master; why 'tis a palpable Argument thou hold'st my life at no price, and these thy broken and unjoynted offers, are but only created in thy lip, now Born, and now buried, foolish breath only: what, wouldt do't? shall I look for happiness in thy answer?

Nich. Steal my Master's Chain, quoth he? no, it shall nere be said, that Nicholas Saint Tantlings committed Bird-lime!

Cap. Nay, I told you as much, did I not? though he be a Puritan, yet he will be a true man.

Nic. Why Cousin, you know 'tis written, Thou shalt not steal.

Cap. Why, and Fool, Thou shalt love thy Neighbour, and help him in extremities.

Nic. Mass I think it be indeed; in what Chapter's that, Cousin?

Cap. Why in the first of Charity, the second verse.

Nic. The first of Charity, quoth a, that's a good jest, there's no such Chapter in my Book!

Cap. No, I know 'twas torn out of thy Book, and that makes so little in thy heart.

Pye. Come, let me tell you, y'are too unkind a Kinsman i'faith; the Captain loving you so dearly, I, like the Pomwater of his Eye, and you to be so uncomfortable, fie, fie.

Nic. Pray do not wish me to be hang'd, any thing else that I can do; had it been to rob, I would ha' don't, but I must not Steal, that's the word, the literal, Thou shalt not Steal; and would you wish me to Steal then?

Pye. No Faith, that were too much, to speak truth; why wilt thou Nim it from him?

Nic. That I will.

Pye. Why enough, Bully; he will be content with that, or he shall ha' none; let me alone with him now, Captain, I ha' dealt with your Kinsman in a corner; a good—kind-natur'd fellow, methinks: go to, you shall not have all your own asking, you shall bate somewhat on't, he is not contented absolutely, as you would say, to Steal the Chain from him, but to do you a pleasure, he will nim it from him.

Nic. I, that I will, Cousin,

Cap. Well, seeing he will do no more, as far as I see, I must be contented with that.

Cor. Here's no notable gullery?

Pye. Nay, I'le come nearer to you, Gentleman, because we'll have only but a help and a mirth on't, the Knight shall not lose his Chain neither, but be only laid out of the way some one or two dayes.

Nic. I, that would be good indeed, Kinsman.

Pye. For I have a farder reach, to profit us better, by the missing on't only, than if we had it out-right, as my discourse shall make it known to you;—when thou hast the Chain, do but convey it out at a back-door into the Garden, and there hang it close in the Rosemary Bank, but for a small season; and by that harmless device, I know how to wind Captain Idle out of Prison, the Knight thy Master shall get his pardon, and release him, and he satisfie thy Master with his own Chain, and wondrous thanks on both hands.

Nic. That were rare indeed la,
Pray let me know how.

Pye. Nay, 'tis very necessary thou should'st know, because thou must be employ'd as an Actor?

Nic. An Actor? O no, that's a Player? and our Parson rails against Players mightily, I can tell you, because they brought him drunk upo'th' Stage once,—as he will be horribly drunk.

Cor. Mass I cannot blame him then,
Poor Church-spout.

Pye. Why as an Intermedler then?

Nic. I, that, that.

Pye. Give me audience then; when the old Knight thy Master has rag'd his fill for the loss of the Chain, tell him thou hast a Kinsman in Prison, of such exquisite Art, that the Devil himself is French Lackey to him, and runs bare headed by his Horse——belly (when he has one:) whom he will cause, with most Irish dexterity, to fetch his Chain, though 'twere hid under a Mine of Sea-coal, and ne're make Spade or Pick-axe his instruments; tell him but this, with farther instructions thou shalt receive from me, and thou shewest thy self a Kinsman indeed.

Cor. A dainty Bully,

Skir. An honest—Book-keeper.

Cap. And my three times thrice honey-Cousin.

Nic. Nay, grace of God I'll rob him on't suddenly, and hang it in the Rosemary bank, but I bear that mind, Cousin, I would not Steal any thing, methinks, for mine own Father.

Skir. He bears a good mind in that, Captain.

Pye. Why, well said,
He begins to be an honest Fellow, faith.

Cor. In truth he does.

Nic. You see, Cousin, I am willing to do you any kindness, alwayes saving my self harmless.

[Exit Nicholas.

Captain. Why I thank thee, fare thee well, I shall requite it.

Cor. 'Twill be good for thee, Captain, that thou hast such an egregious Ass to thy Cousin.

Cap. I, is not that a fine fool, Corporal?
But, George, thou talk'st of Art and Conjuring,
How shall that be?

Pye. Puh, be't not in your care,
Leave that to me and my directions;
Well, Captain, doubt not thy delivery now,
E'en with the vantage, man, to gain by Prison,
As my thoughts prompt me: Hold on brain and plot,
I aim at many cunning far events,
All which I doubt not to hit at length,
I'll to the Widow with a quaint assault,
Captain, be merry.

Cap. Who I? Kerry merry Buffe-Jerkin.

Pye. Oh, I am happy in more slights, and one will knit strong in another—Corporal Oath.

Cor. Hoh, Bully!

Pye, And thou, old Peter Skirmish, I have a necessary task for you both.

Skir. Lay't upon George Pye-board.

Cor. What e're it be, we'll manage it.

Pye. I would have you two maintain a quarrel before the Lady Widows door, and draw your Swords i'th' edge of the Evening: Clash a little, clash, clash.

Corp. Puh!

Let

Let us alone to make our blades ring noon,
Though it be after ſupper.

Pye. I know you can;
And out of that falſe Fire, I doubt not but to raiſe ſtrange belief——and, Captain, to countenance my device the better, and grace my words to the Widow, I have a good plain Sattin Sute, that I had of a young Reveller t'other night, for words paſs not regarded now a-days, unleſs they come from a good ſuit of Cloaths, which the Fates and my wits had beſtowed upon me. Well, Captain Idle, if I did not highly love thee, I would n'r be ſeen within twelve ſcore of a Priſon, for I proteſt at this inſtant, I walk in great danger of ſmall debts; I owe money to ſeveral Hoſteſſes, and you know ſuch Jills will quickly be upon a Mans Jack.

Capt. True, George.

Pye. Fare thee well, Captain. Come Corporal and Ancient, thou ſhalt hear more news next time we greet thee.

Corp. More news? I, by yon Bear at Bridge-Foot in heaven ſhalt thou. [Exeunt.

Capt. Enough; my friends, farewel,
This Priſon ſhews as if Ghoſts did part in Hell.

Enter Moll youngeſt Daughter to the Widow, alone.

Moll. Not marry? forſwear marriage? why all women know 'tis as honourable a thing as to lie with a man; and I to ſpight my Siſters vow the more, have entertain'd a Suitor already, a fine Gallant Knight of the laſt Feather, he ſays he will Coach me too, and well appoint me, allow me money to Dice withal, and many ſuch pleaſing proteſtations he ſticks upon my lips: indeed his ſhort-winded Father i'th' Country is wondrous wealthy, a moſt abominable Farmer, and therefore he may dote in time: troth I'll venture upon him; women are not without ways enough to help themſelves: if he prove wiſe and good as his word, why I ſhall love him, and uſe him kindly; and if he prove an Aſs, why in a quarter of an hours warning I can transform him into an Oxe;—there comes in my relief again.

Enter Frailty.

Frail. O, Miſtreſs Moll, Miſtreſs Moll.

Moll. How now? what's the news?

Frail. The Knight your Suitor, Sir John Penny-Dub.

Moll. Sir John Penny-Dub? where? where?

Frail. He's walking in the Gallery.

Moll. Has my Mother ſeen him yet?

Frail. O no, ſhe's-- ſpitting in the Kitchin.

Moll. Direct him hither ſoftly, good Frailty,
I'll meet him half way.

Frail. That's juſt like running a Tilt; but I hope he'll break nothing this time.

Enter Sir John Penny-Dub.

Moll. 'Tis happineſs my Mother ſaw him not;
O welcome, good Sir John.

Penny-Dub. I thank you faith,—Nay you muſt ſtand me till I kiſs you: 'tis the faſhion every where i'faith, and I came from Court e'now.

Moll. Nay, the Fates forefend that I ſhould anger the faſhion?

Penny. Then not forgetting the ſweet of new ceremonies, I firſt fall back, then recovering my ſelf, make my honour to your lip thus: and then accoſt it.

Moll. Truſt me, very pretty and moving, y'are worthy on't, ſir.
O my Mother, my Mother, now ſhe's here,

Kiſſing. Enter Widow and Sir Godfrey.

We'll ſteal into the Gallery. [Exeunt.

Sir God. Nay, Siſter, let reaſon rule you, do not play the fool, ſtand not in your own light, you have wealthy offers, large tendrings, do not withſtand your good fortune: who comes a wooing to you I pray? no ſmall fool, a rich Knight o'th' City, Sir Oliver Muck-hill, no ſmall foo I can tell you: and furthermore, as I heard late by your Maid-ſervants (as your Maid-ſervants will ſay to me any thing, I thank 'em) both your Daughters are not without Suitors, I, and worthy ones too; one a brisk Courtier, Sir Andrew Tipſtaffe, ſuiter a far off to your eldeſt Daughter, and the third a huge wealthy Farmers Son, a fine young Country Knight, they call him Sir John Penny-Dub, a good name marry, he may have it coyn'd when he lacks money: what bleſſings are theſe, Siſter?

Wid. Tempt me not, Satan.

Sir God. Satan? do I look like Satan? I hope the Devil's not ſo old as I, I trow.

Wid. You wound my ſenſes, Brother, when you name
A ſuiter to me,-- oh I cannot abide it,
I take in poyſon when I hear one nam'd.

Enter Simon.

How now, Simon? where's my ſon Edmond?

Sim. Verily, Madam, he is at vain Exerciſe, dripping in the Tennis-Court.

Wid. At Tennis-Court? oh, now his Father's gone, I ſhall have no rule with him; oh wicked Edmond, I might well compare this with the Prophecy in the Chronicle, though far inferiour, as Harry of Monmouth won all, and Harry of Windſor loſt all; ſo Edmond of Briſtow that was the Father, got all, and Edmond of London that's his ſon now, will ſpend all.

Sir God. Peace, ſiſter, we'll have him reform'd, there's hope on him yet, though it be but a little.

Enter Frailty.

Frail. Forſooth, Madam; there are two or three Archers at door would very gladly ſpeak with your Ladiſhip.

Wid. Archers?

Sir God. Your Husband's Fletcher I warrant.

Wid. Oh,
Let them come near, they bring home things of his,
Troth I ſhould ha' forgot 'em, how now?
Villain, which be thoſe Archers?

Enter the Suiters, Sir Andrew Tipſtaffe, Sir Oliver Muck-hill, and Penny Dub.

Frail. Why, do you not ſee 'em before you? are not theſe Archers, what do you call 'em Shooters? Shooters and Archers are all one, I hope.

Wid. Out ignorant Slave.

Muck. Nay, pray be patient Lady,
We come in way of honourable love.

Tipſt. Penny. We do.

Muck. To you.

Tipſt. Penny. And to your Daughters.

Wid. O why will you offer me this, Gentlemen? indeed I will not look upon you; when the tears are ſcarce out of mine Eyes, not yet waſht off from my cheeks, and my dear Husbands body ſcarce ſo cold as the Coffin, what reaſon have you to offer it? I am not like ſome of your Widows that will bury one in the Evening, and be ſure to another ere Morning; pray away, pray take your anſwers, good Knights, and you be ſweet Knights, I have vow'd never to marry;—and ſo have my Daughters too!

Penny. I, two of you have, but the third's a good wench!

Muck. Lady, a ſhrewd anſwer marry; the beſt is, 'tis but the firſt, and he's a blunt wooer, that will leave for one ſharp anſwer.

Tipſt. Where be your Daughters, Lady, I hope they'll give us better encouragements?

Widow. Indeed they'll anſwer you ſo, take't a my word they'll give you the very ſame anſwer Verbatim, truly la.

Penny. Mum: Moll's a good wench ſtill, I know what ſhe'll do?

Muck. Well, Lady, for this time we'll take our leaves hoping for better comfort.

Widow. O never, never: and I live theſe thouſand years; and you be good Knights, do not hope; 'twill be all Vain, Vain,——look you put off all yours ſuits, and you come to me again.

Frail. Put off all their ſuits, quotha? I, that's the beſt wooing of a Widow indeed, when a man's Nonſuted, that is, when he's a bed with her.

[Going out Muckhil and Sir Godfrey.

Muck. Sir Godfrey, here's twenty Angels more, work hard for me; there's life in't yet. [Exit Muckhil.

Sir Godf. Fear not Sir Oliver Muckhil, I'le ſtick cloſe for you, leave all with me.

Enter George Pye-boord the Scholar.

Pye. By your leave, Lady Widow.

Wid. What another ſuiter now?

Pye. A ſuiter, no, I proteſt: Lady, if you'd give me your ſelf, I'de not be troubled with you.

Wid. Say you ſo, Sir, then you're the better welcome, Sir.

Pye. Nay, Heaven bleſs me from a Widow, unleſs I were ſure to bury her ſpeedily!

Wid. Good bluntneſs: well, your buſineſs, Sir?

Pye. Very needful; if you were in private once.

Wid. Needful? Brother, pray leave us: and you, Sir.

Frail. I ſhould laugh now, if this blunt fellow ſhould put 'em all beſide the ſtirrop, and vault into the Saddle himſelf, I have ſeen as mad a trick. [Exit Frailty.

Enter Daughters.

Wid. Now, Sir?——here's none but we——Daughters forbear.

Pye. O no, pray let'em ſtay, for what I have to ſpeak importeth equally to them as you?

Wid. Then you may ſtay.

Pye. I pray beſtow on me a ſerious ear,
For what I ſpeak is full of weight and fear.

Widow. Fear?

Pye. I, if't paſs unregarded, and uneffected,
Elſe peace and joy:——I pray Attention.
Widow, I have been a meer ſtranger for theſe parts that you live in, nor did I ever know the Husband of you, and Father of them, but I truly know by certain ſpiritual Intelligence, that he is in Purgatory.

Wid. Purgatory? tuh; that word deſerves to be ſpit upon; I wonder that a man of ſober tongue, as you ſeem to be, ſhould have the folly to believe there's ſuch a place.

Pye. Well, Lady, in cold blood I ſpeak it, I aſſure you that there is a Purgatory, in which place I know your Husband to reside, and wherein he is like to remain, till the diſſolution of the world, till the laſt general Bon-fire: when all the Earth ſhall melt into nothing, and the Seas ſcald their finny labourers: ſo long is his abidance, unleſs you alter the property of your purpoſe, together with each of your Daughters theirs, that is, the purpoſe of ſingle life in your ſelf and your eldeſt Daughter, and the ſpeedy determination of marriage in your youngeſt.

Moll. How knows he that? what, has ſome Devil told him?

Wid. Strange he ſhould know our thoughts:——
VVhy but Daughter, have you purpos'd ſpeedy Marriage?

Pye. You ſee ſhe tells you I, ſhe ſayes nothing.
Nay, give me credit as you pleaſe, I am a ſtranger to you, and yet you ſee I know your determinations, which muſt come to me metaphyſically, and by a ſuper-natural intelligence.

Wid. This puts amazement on me.

Frank. Know our ſecrets?

Moll. I'de thought to ſteal a marriage, would his tongue
Had dropt out when he blab'd it.

Wid. But, Sir, my Husband was too honeſt a dealing man, to be now in any Purgatories——

Pye. O do not load your Conſcience with untruths,
'Tis but meer folly now to gild'em ore:
That has paſt but for Copper; Praiſes here,
Cannot unbind him there: confeſs but truth,
I know he got his wealth with a hard gripe:
Oh hardly, hardly.

Wid. This is moſt ſtrange of all, how knows he that?

Pye. He would eat fools and ignorant heirs clean up;
And had his drink from many a poor mans brow,
Even as their labour brew'd it.
He would ſcrape riches to him moſt unjuſtly;
The very dirt between his nails was ill got,
And not his own,——oh
I groan to ſpeak on't, the thought makes me ſhudder!——
ſhudder!

Wid. It quakes me too, now I think on't——Sir, I am much griev'd, that you a ſtranger, ſhould ſo deeply wrong my dead Husband!

Pye-boord. Oh?

Wid. A man that would keep Church ſo duly; riſe early before his ſervants, and e'en for Religious haſt, go ungarter'd, unbutton'd, nay Sir Reverence untruſt, to Morning Prayer?

Pye. Oh uff.

Wid. Dine quickly upon high-days, and when I had great gueſts, would e'en ſhame me, and riſe from the Table, to get a good ſeat at an after-noon Sermon.

Pye. There's the Devil, there's the devil, true, he thought it Sanctity enough, if he had kill'd a man, ſo't'ad been done in a Pue, or undone his Neighbour, ſo't'ad been near enough to th' Preacher. Oh!——a Sermon's a fine ſhort Cloak of an hour long, and will hide the upper part of a diſſembler.—Church, I, he ſeem'd all Church, and his conſcience was as hard as the Pulpit.

Wid. I can no more endure this.

Pye. Nor I, VVidow,
Endure to flatter.

Wid. Is this all your buſineſs with me?

Pye. No, Lady, 'tis but the induction to't,
You may believe my ſtrains, I ſtrike all true.
And if your conſcience would leap up to your tongue, your ſelf would affirm it, and that you ſhall perceive I know of things to come, as well as I do of what is preſent; a Brother of your Husband's ſhall ſhortly have a loſs.

Wid. A loſs? marry Heaven forefend, Sir Godfry, my Brother!

Pye. Nay, keep in your wonders, 'till I have told you the Fortunes of you all; which are more fearful, if not happily prevented,——for your part and your Daughters, if there be not once this day ſome blood-ſhed before your door, whereof the humane creature dyes, of you two the elder ſhall run mad.

Mother and Frank. Oh!

Moll. That's not I yet.

Pye. And with moſt impudent proſtitution, ſhow your naked Bodies to the view of all beholders.

Wid. Our naked Bodies? fie for ſhame.

Pye. Attend me, and your younger Daughter be ſtrucken dumb.

Moll.

Moll. Dumb? out, alas; 'tis the worſt pain of all for a Woman, I'de rather be mad, or run naked, or any thing: dumb?

Pye. Give ear: e're the evening fall upon Hill, Bog, and Meadow, this my ſpeech ſhall have paſt probation, and then ſhall I be believed accordingly.

Wid. If this be true, we are all ſham'd, all undone.

Moll. Dumb? I'll ſpeak as much as ever I can poſſible before evening.

Pye. But if it ſo come to paſs (as for your fair ſakes I wiſh it may) that this preſage of your ſtrange Fortunes be prevented by that accident of death and blood-ſhedding, which I before told you of; take heed upon your lives, that two of you which have vow'd never to marry, ſeek out Husbands with all preſent ſpeed, and you the third, that have ſuch a deſire to outſtrip Chaſtity, look you med dle not with a Husband.

Moll. A double Torment.

Pye. The breach of this keeps your Father in Purgatory, and the puniſhments that ſhall follow you in this World, would with horrour kill the ear ſhould hear 'em related.

Wid. Marry? why I vow'd never to marry.

Frank. And ſo did I.

Moll. And I vow'd never to be ſuch an Aſs, but to marry: what a croſs Fortune's this?

Pye. Ladies, though I be a Fortune-teller, I cannot better Fortunes, you have 'em from me as they are revealed to me: I would they were to your tempers, and fellows with your bloods, that's all the bitterneſs I would you.

Wid. O! 'tis a juſt vengeance, for my Husband's hard purchaces.

Pye. I wiſh you to bethink your ſelves, and leave 'em.

Wid. I'll to Sir Godfrey my Brother, and acquaint him with theſe fearful preſages.

Frank. For, Mother, they portend loſſes to him.

Wid. O I, they do, they do;
If any happy iſſue crown thy words,
I will reward thy cunning.

Pye. 'Tis enough, Lady,
I wiſh no higher. [Exit.

Moll. Dumb? and not marry? worſe,
Neither to ſpeak, nor kiſs, a double curſe. [Exit.

Pye. So, all this comes well about yet, I play the Fortune-teller, as well as if I had had a Witch to my Grannam: for by good happineſs, being in my Hoſteſſes Garden, which neighbours the Orchard of the Widow, I laid the hole of mine ear to a hole in the Wall, and heard 'em make theſe Vows, and ſpeak thoſe words, upon which I wrought theſe advantages; and to encourage my forgery the more, I may now perceive in 'em a natural ſimplicity which will eaſily ſwallow an abuſe, if any covering be over it: and to confirm my former preſage to the Widow, I have advis'd old Peter Skirmiſh the Souldier, to hurt Corporal Oath upon the Leg, and in that hurry I'll ruſh amongſt 'em, and inſtead of giving the Corporal ſome Cordial to comfort him, I'll pour into his mouth a Potion of a ſleepy Nature, and make him ſeem as dead; for the which the old Souldier being apprehended, and ready to be born to Execution, I'll ſtep in, and take upon me the Cure of the dead man, upon pain of dying the condemned's death: the Corporal will wake at his minute, when the ſleepy force hath wrought it ſelf, and ſo ſhall I get my ſelf into a moſt admired opinion, and under the pretext of that cunning, beguile as I ſee occaſion: and if that fooliſh Nicholas Saint Tantlings keep true time with the Chain, my Plot will be ſound, the Captain delivered, and my Wits applauded amongſt Scholars and Souldiers for ever. [Exit Pye-boord.

Enter Nicholas Saint Tantlings, with the Chain.

Nich. O, I have found an excellent advantage to take away the Chain, my Maſter put it off e'en now, to ſay on a new Doublet, and I ſneakt it away by little and little, moſt Puritanically! we ſhall have good ſport anon when he has miſt it, about my Couſin the Conjurer; the world ſhall ſee I'm an honeſt man of my word, for now I'm going to hang it betweeu Heaven and Earth among the Roſemary-branches. [Exit. Nich.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Simon Saint Mary-Overies, and Frailty.

Frail. Sirrah, Simon Saint Mary-Overies, my Miſtreſs ſends away all her Suiters, and puts fleas in their ears.

Sim. Fraity, ſhe does like an honeſt, chaſt, and virtuous woman; for Widows ought not to wallow in the puddle of Iniquity.

Frail. Yet, Simon, many Widows will do't, whatſoe're comes on't.

Sim. True, Frailty, their filthy fleſh deſires a Conjunction Copulative; what ſtrangers are within, Frailty?

Frail. There's none, Simon; but Maſter Pilfer the Taylor: he's above with Sir Godfrey, praiſing of a Doublet: and I muſt trudge anon to fetch Maſter Suds the Barber.

Sim. Maſter Suds a good man, he waſhes the ſins of the Beard clean.

Skir. How now, creatures? what's a Clock?

Enter old Skirmiſh the Souldier.

Frail. Why, do you take us to be Jack at th' Clock-houſe?

Skir. I ſay again to you, what's a Clock?

Sim. Truly la, we go by the Clock of our Conſcience, all worldly Clocks we know go falſe, and are ſet by drunken Sextons.

Skir. Then what's a Clock in your Conſcience?——O, I muſt break off, here comes the Corporal——hum, hum: ——what's a Clock?

Enter Corporal.

Corp. A Clock? why paſt ſeventeen.

Frail. Paſt ſeventeen? nay, h'as met with his match now, Corporal Oath will fit him.

Skir. Thou doſt not bawk or baffle me, doſt thou? I am a Souldier——paſt ſeventeen.

Corp. I, thou art not angry with the figures, art thou? I will prove it unto thee, 12. and 1. is thirteen, I hope, 2 fourteen, 3. fifteen, 4. ſixteen, and 5. ſeventeen, then paſt ſeventeen, I will take the Dials part in a juſt cauſe.

Skir. I ſay 'tis but paſt five then.

Corp. I'll ſwear 'tis paſt ſeventeen then: doſt thou not know numbers? canſt thou not caſt?

Skir. Caſt? doſt thou ſpeak of my caſting ith' ſtreet? [Draw.

Corp. I, and in the Market place.

Sim. Clubs, Clubs, Clubs. [Simon runs in.

Frail. I, I knew by their ſhuffling, Clubs would be Trump: maſs here's the Knave, and he can do any good upon 'em: Clubs, Clubs, Clubs.

Enter Pye-boord.

Capt. O Villain, thou haſt open'd a vein in my Leg.

Pye. How now? for ſhame, for ſhame, put up, put up.

Capt. By yon blue Welkin, 'twas out of my part, George, to be hurt on the Leg.

Enter Officers.

Pye. Oh peace now — I have a Cordial here to comfort thee.

Offi. Down with 'em, down with 'em, lay hands upon the Villain.

Skir. Lay hands on me?

Pye. I'll not be ſeen among 'em now.

Cap. I'm hurt, and had more need have Surgeons,
Lay hands upon me then, rough Officers.

Offi. Go, carry him to be dreſt then:
This mutinous Souldier ſhall along with me to Priſon.

Skir. To Priſon? where's George?

Offi. Away with him, [Exeunt with Skir.

Pye. So,
All lights as I would wiſh, the amaz'd Widow,
Will plant me ſtrongly now in her belief,
And wonder at the virtue of my words:
For the event turns theſe preſages from 'em,
Of being mad and dumb, and begets joy
Mingled with admiration: theſe empty Creatures,
Souldier and Corporal, were but ordain'd
As inſtruments for me to work upon.
Now to my Patient, here's his Potion. [Exit Pye-boord.

Enter the Widow with her two Daughters.

Wid. O wondrous happineſs, beyond our thoughts!
O lucky fair event! I think our Fortunes
Were bleſt e're in our Cradles: we are quitted
Of all thoſe ſhameful violent preſages
By this raſh bleeding chance: go, Frailty, run, and know
Whether he be yet living, or yet dead,
That here before my Door receiv'd his hurt.

Frail. Madam, he was carried to the ſuperiour, but if he had no money when he came there, I warrant he's dead by this time. [Exit Frailty.

Frank. Sure that man is a rare Fortune-teller, never lookt upon our hands, nor upon any mark about us, a wondrous Fellow ſurely.

Moll. I am glad I have the uſe of my tongue yet, though of nothing elſe, I ſhall find the way to marry too, I hope ſhortly.

Wid. O where's my Brother Sir Godfrey, I would he were here, that I might relate to him how prophetically the cunning Gentleman ſpoke in all things.

Enter Sir Godfrey in a rage.

Sir God. O my Chain, my Chain, I have loſt my Chain, where be theſe Villains, Varlets?

Wid. Oh, h'as loſt his Chain.

Sir God. My Chain, my Chain.

Wid. Brother, be patient, hear me ſpeak, you know I told you that a Cunning-man told me, that you ſhould have a loſs, and he has propheſied ſo true.

Sir God. Out, he's a Villain to prophecy of the loſs of my Chain, 'twas worth above three hundred Crowns, beſides 'twas my Fathers, my Fathers Fathers, my Grandfathers huge Grandfathers: I had as lieve ha loſt my Neck, as the Chain that hung about it; O my Chain, my Chain.

Wid. Oh, Brother, who can be againſt a misfortune, 'tis happy 'twas no more.

Sir God. No more! O goodly godly Siſter, would you had me loſt more? my beſt Gown too, with the Cloth of Gold-Lace? my Holyday Gaſcoins, and my Jerkin ſet with Pearl? no more!

Wid. Oh, Brother, you can read —

Sir God. But I cannot read where my Chain is: what ſtrangers have been here? you let in ſtrangers, Thieves and Catch poles: how comes it gone? there was none above with me but my Taylor, and my Taylor will not ſteal I hope?

Moll. No, he's afraid of a Chain.

Enter Frailty.

Wid. How now, Sirrah? the news?

Frail. O, Miſtreſs, he may well be call'd a Corporal now, for his Corps are as dead as a cold Capons?

Wid. More happineſs.

Sir God. Sirrah, what's this to my Chain? where's my Chain, Knave?

Frail. Your Chain, Sir?

Sir God. My Chain is loſt, Villain.

Frail. I would he were hang'd in Chains that has it then for me: Alas, Sir, I ſaw none of your Chain ſince you were hung with it your ſelf.

Sir God. Out Varlet? it had full three thouſand Links, I have oft told it over at my Prayers:
Over and over full three thouſand Links.

Frail. Had it ſo, Sir, ſure it cannot be loſt then; I'll put you in that comfort.

Sir God. Why? why?

Frail. Why if your Chain had ſo many Links, it cannot chuſe but come to light.

Enter Nicholas.

Sir God. Deluſion. Now, long Nicholas, where is my Chain?

Nich. Why about your Neck, is't not, Sir?

Sir God. About my neck, Varlet? my Chain is loſt, 'Tis ſtoln away, I'm robb'd.

Wid. Nay, Brother, ſhow your ſelf a man.

Nich. If it be loſt or ſtole, if he would be patient, Miſtreſs, I could bring him to a Cunning Kinſman of mine that would fetch it again with a Seſarara.

Sir God. Canſt thou? I will be patient, ſay, where dwells he?

Nich. Marry he dwells now, Sir, where he would not dwell and he could chooſe, in the Marſhalſea, Sir; but he's an excellent Fellow if he were out: h'as travell'd all the World o're, he, and been in the ſeven and twenty Provinces: why he would make it be fetcht, Sir, if it were rid a thouſand mile out of Town.

Sir God. An admirable Fellow, what lies he for.

Nich. Why he did but rob a Steward of ten Groats tother night, as any man would ha done, and there he lies for't.

Sir God. I'll make his peace,
A trifle, I'll get his pardon,
Beſides a bountiful reward, I'll about it,
But fee the Clerks, the Juſtice will do much;
I will about it ſtraight, good Siſter pardon me,
All will be well I hope, and turn to good,
The name of Conjurer has laid my blood. [Exeunt.

Enter Puttock and Ravenſhaw two Serjeants, with a Yeoman Dogſon, to arreſt the Scholar George Pye-boord.

Put. His Hoſteſs where he lies will truſt him no longer, ſhe hath feed me to arreſt him; if you will accompany me, becauſe I know not of what nature the Scholar is, whether deſperate or ſwift, you ſhall ſhare with me, Serjeant Ravenſhaw, I have the good Angel to arreſt him.

Rav. Troth I'll take part with thee then, Serjeant, not for the ſake of the money ſo much, as for the hate I bear to a Scholar: why, Serjeant, 'tis natural in us you know to hate Scholars: natural beſides, they will publiſh our imperfections, Knaveries, and Conveyances upon Scaffolds and Stages.

Put. I, and ſpightfully too; troth I have wondred how the the ſlaves could ſee into our Breaſts ſo much, when our Doublets are button'd with Pewter.

Rav. I, and ſo cloſe without yielding: oh, they'r parlous Fellows, they will ſearch more with their wits, than a Conſtable with all his Officers.

Put. Whiſt, whiſt, whiſt, Yeoman Dogſon, Yeoman Dogſon.

Dog. Ha? what ſayes Serjeant?

Put. Is he in the Pothecaries Shop ſtill,

Dog. I, I.

Put. Have an Eye, have an Eye.

Rav. The beſt is, Serjeant, if he be a true Scholar he wears no Weapon I think.

Put. No no, he wears no Weapon.

Rav. Maſs, I am right glad of that: 'thas put me in better heart: nay if I clutch him once, let me alone to drag him if he be ſtiff necked; I have been one of the ſix my ſelf, that has dragg'd as tall men of their hands, when their Weapons have bin gone, as ever baſtinado'd a Serjeant —— I have done I can tell you.

Dog. Serjeant Puttock, Serjeant Puttock,

Put. Hoh.

Dog. He's coming out ſingle.

Put. Peace, peace, be not too greedy, let him play a little, let him play a little, we'll jerk him up of a ſudden, I ha ſiſht in my time.

Rav. I, and caught many a Fool, Serjeant.

Enter Pye-boord.

Pye. I parted now from Nicholas: the Chain's couch't,
And the old Knight has ſpent his rage upon't,
The Widow holds me in great admiration
For cunning Art: 'mongſt joyes I'm e'ne loſt,
For my device can no way now be croſt,
And now I muſt to Priſon to the Captain, and there ——

Put. I arreſt you, Sir.

Pye. Oh —— I ſpoke truer than I was aware, I muſt to Priſon indeed.

Put. They ſay you're a Scholar, nay Sir —— Yeoman Dogſon, have care to his Arms —— you'll rail again Serjeants, and ſtage 'em: you tickle their Vices.

Pye. Nay, uſe me like a Gentleman, I'm little leſs.

Put. You a Gentleman? that's a good jeſt i'faith; can a Scholar be a Gentleman, —— when a Gentleman will not be a Scholar; —— look upon your wealthy Citizens Sons, whether they be Scholars or no, that are Gentlemen by their Fathers Trades: a Scholar a Gentleman!

Pye. Nay, let Fortune drive all her ſtings into me, ſhe cannot hurt that in me, a Gentleman, Accident inſeparabile to my blood.

Rav. A rablement, nay you ſhall have a bloody rablement upon you I warrant you.

Put. Go, Yeoman Dogſon, before, and enter the Action i'th' Counter.

Pye. Pray do not handle me cruelly, I'll go [Ex. Dog. Whither you pleaſe to have me.

Put. Oh, he's tame, let him looſe Serjeant.

Pye. Pray at whoſe Suit is this?

Put. Why, at your Hoſteſſes Suit where you lie, Miſtreſs Cunniburrow, for Bed and Board, the ſumm four pound five ſhillings and five pence.

Pye. I know the ſumm too true, yet I preſum'd
Upon a farther day; well, 'tis my ſtars:
And I muſt bear it now, though never harder.
I ſwear now, my device is croſt indeed.
Captain muſt lie by't: this is Deceits ſeed.

Put. Come, come away.

Pye. Pray give me ſo much time as to knit my Garter, and I'll away with you.

Put. Well, we muſt be paid for this waiting upon you, this is no pains to attend thus. [Making to ty his Garter.

Pye. I am now wretched and miſerable, I ſhall ne're recover of this Diſeaſe: hot Iron gnaw their Fiſts: they have ſtruck a Fever into my ſhoulder, which I ſhall ne're ſhake out again I fear me, till with a true Habeas Corpus the Sexton remove me, oh if I take Priſon once, I ſhall be preſt to death with Actions, but not ſo happy as ſpeedily; perhaps I may be forty year a preſſing till I be a thin old man, that looking through the Grates, men may look through me; all my means is confounded, what ſhall I do? has my wit ſerved me ſo long, and now give me the ſlip (like a train'd ſervant) when I have moſt need of 'em: no device to keep my poor Carcaſe from theſe Puttocks? —— yes, happineſs, have I a Paper about me now? yes too, I'll try it, it may hit, Extremity is Touch-ſtone unto wit, I, I.

Put. 'Sfoot how many yards are in thy Garters, that thou art ſo long a tying on them? come away, Sir.

Pye. Troth Serjeant I proteſt, you could never ha took me at a worſe time, for now at this inſtant, I have no lawful Picture about me.

Put. 'Slid how ſhall we come by our Fees then.

Rav. We muſt have Fees, Sirrah.

Pye. I could have wiſht i'faith, that you had took me half an hour hence for your own ſake, for I proteſt if you had not croſt me, I was going in great joy to receive five pound of a Gentleman, for the Device of a Mask here, drawn in this paper, but now, come, I muſt be contented, 'tis but ſo much loſt, and anſwerable to the reſt of my Fortunes?

Put. Why how far hence dwells that Gentleman?

Rav. I, well ſaid Serjeant, 'tis good to caſt about for money.

Put. Speak, if it be not far ——

Pye. We are but a little paſt it, the next ſtreet behind us.

Put. 'Slid we have waited upon you grievouſly already, if you will ſay you'll be liberal when you ha't, give us double Fees, and ſpend upon's, why we'll ſhow you that kindneſs, and go along with you to the Gentleman.

Rav. I, well ſaid ſtill, Serjeant, urge that.

Pye. Troth if it will ſuffice, it ſhall all be among you, for my part I'll not pocket a penny, my Hoſteſs ſhall have her four pound five ſhillings, and bate me the five pence, and the other fifteen ſhillings I'll ſpend upon you.

Rav. Why now thou art a good Scholar.

Put. An excellent Scholar i'faith; has proceeded very well alate; come, we'll along with you.

[Exeunt with him, paſſing on, they knock at the door with a knocker within ſide.

Ser. Who knocks, who's at Door? we had need of a Porter.

Pye. A few Friends here. —— pray is the Gentleman your Maſter within?

Ser. Yes, is your buſineſs to him?

Pye. I, he knows it, when he ſees me:
I pray you, have you forgot me.

Ser. I by my troth, Sir, pray come near, I'll in and tell him of you, pleaſe you to walk here in the Gallery till he comes.

Pye. We will attend his worſhip, —— worſhip I think, for ſo much the poſts at his door ſhould ſignify, and the fair coming in, and the Wicket, elſe I neither knew him nor his Worſhip, but 'tis happineſs he is within Doors, what ſo ere he be, if he be not too much a formal Citizen, he may do me good: Serjeant and Yeoman, how do you like this Houſe, is't not moſt wholſomely plotted?

Rav. Troth Priſoner, an exceeding fine Houſe.

Pye. Yet I wonder how he ſhould forget me, for he ne're knew me: No matter, what is forgot in you, will be remembred in your Maſter.
A pretty comfortable room this methinks:
You have no ſuch rooms in Priſon now?

Put. Oh Dog-holes to't.

Pye. Dog holes indeed —— I can tell you I have great hope hope to have my Chamber here ſhortly, nay, and Dyet too, for he's the moſt free-hearted'ſt Gentleman where he takes: you would little think it? and what a fine Gallery were here for me to walk and ſtudy, and make Verſes.

Put. O it ſtands pleaſantly for a Scholar.

Enter Gentleman.

Pye. Look what Maps, and Pictures, and Devices, and things, neatly, delicately? Maſs here he comes, he ſhould be a Gentleman, I like his Beard well;—All happineſs to your worſhip.

Gent You'r kindly welcome, ſir.

Put. A ſimple ſalutation.

Rav. Maſs it ſeems the Gentleman makes great account of him.

Gent. I have the thing here for you, ſir.

Pye. I beſeech you, conceal me, ſir, I'm undone elſe,—I have the Mask here for you, ſir, Look you ſir,—I beſeech your VVorſhip, firſt pardon my rudeneſs, for my extreams makes me bolder than I would be; I am a poor Gentleman, and a Scholar, and now moſt unfortunately faln into the hands of unmerciful Officers, arreſted for Debt, which though ſmall, I am not able to compaſs, by reaſon I'm deſtitute of Lands, Money, and Friends, ſo that if I fall into the hungry ſwallow of the Priſon, I am like utterly to periſh, and with fees and extortions be pinch'd clean to the bone:—Now, if ever pity had intereſt in the blood of a Gentleman, I beſeech you vouchſafe but to favour that means of my eſcape, which I have already thought upon.

Gent. Go forward.

Put. I warrant he likes it rarely.

Pye. In the plunge of my extremities, being giddy, and doubtful what to do; at laſt it was put in my labouring thoughts, to make a happy uſe of this paper, and to blear their unlettered eyes, I told them there was a Device for a Mask drawn in't, and that (but for their interception) I was going to a Gentleman to receive my reward for't: they greedy at this word, and hoping to make purchace of me, offered their attendance, to go along with me, my hap was to make bold with your door, ſir, which my thoughts ſhew'd me the moſt faireſt and comfortableſt entrance, and I hope I have happened right upon underſtanding, and pity: may it pleaſe your good worſhip then, but to uphold my Device, which is to let one of your men put me out at a back door, and I ſhall be bound to your werſhip for ever.

Gent. By my troth an excellent Device.

Put. An excellent Device he ſays; he likes it wonderfully.

Gent. A my faith, I never heard a better.

Raven. Hark, he ſwears he never heard a better, Serjeant.

Put. O there's no talk on't, he's an excellent Scholar, and eſpecially for a Mask.

Gent. Give me your Paper, your Device; I was never better pleas'd in all my life: good wit, brave wit, finely wrought, come in, ſir, and receive your money, ſir.

Pye. I'll follow your good worſhip,——
You heard how he lik'd it now?

Put. Puh, we know he could not chuſe but like it: go thy ways, thou art a fine witty fellow i'faith, thou ſhalt diſcourſe it to us at the Tavern anon, wilt thou?

Pye. I, I, that I will,—look, Serjeants, here are Maps, and pretty toys, be doing in the mean time, I ſhall quickly have told out the money, you know.

Put. Go, go, little villain, fetch thy chink, I begin to love thee, I'll be drunk to night in thy company.

Pye. This Gentleman I may well call a part
Of my ſalvation, in theſe earthly evils,
For he has ſav'd me from three hungry Devils.

[Exit George.

Put. Sirrah Serjeant, theſe Maps are pretty painted things, but I could ne'r fancy them yet, methinks they'r too buſie, and full of Circles and Conjurations; they ſay all the World's in one of them, but I could ne'r find the Counter in the Poultry.

Rav. I think ſo: how could you find it? for you know it ſtands behind the Houſes.

Dog. Maſs that's true, then we muſt look o'th' backſide for't: 'ſfoot here's nothing, all's bare.

Rav. I warrant thee that ſtands for the Counter, for you know there's a company of bare fellows there.

Put. Faith like enough, Serjeant, I never mark'd ſo much before. Sirrah Serjeant, and Yeoman, I ſhould love theſe Maps out a cry now, if we could ſee men peep out of door in 'em, oh we might have 'em in a morning to our Break-faſt ſo finely, and ne'r knock our heels to the ground a whole day for 'em.

Rav. I marry ſir, I'd buy one my ſelf.
But this talk is by the way, where ſhall's ſup to night:
Five pound receiv'd, let's talk of that.
I have a trick worth all, you two ſhall bear him to'th' Tavern, whilſt I go cloſe with his Hoſteſs, and work out of her, I know ſhe would be glad of the ſumm, to finger money; becauſe ſhe knows 'tis but a deſperate debt, and full of hazard: what will you ſay if I bring it to paſs, that the Hoſteſs ſhall be contented with one half for all, and we to ſhare t'other fifty Shillings, Bullies.

Put. Why I would call thee King of Serjeants, and thou ſhould'ſt be Chronicled in the Counter-Book for ever.

Rav. Well, put it to me, we'll make a night on't i'faith.

Dog. 'ſfoot, I think he receives more money, he ſtays ſo long.

Put. He tarrys long indeed, may be, I can tell you, upon the good liking on't the Gentleman may prove more bountiful.

Rav. That would be rare, we'll ſearch him.

Put. Nay be ſure of it, we'll ſearch him, and make him light enough.

Enter the Gentleman.

Rav. Oh here comes the Gentleman, by your leave, Sir.

Gen. God you god den ſirs,—would you ſpeak with me?

Put. No, not with your worſhip, ſir; only we are bold to ſtay for a friend of ours, that went in with your worſhip.

Gen. Who? not the Scholar?

Put. Yes, e'n he, an it pleaſe your worſhip.

Gen. Did he make you ſtay for him? he did you wrong then: why, I can aſſure you he's gone above an hour ago.

Rav. How, ſir?

Gen. I paid him his money, and my man told me he went out at back-door.

Put. Back-door?

Gen. Why, what's the matter?

Put. He was our Priſoner, ſir, we did arreſt him.

Gen. What he was not? you the Sheriff's Officers—you were to blame then,
Why did not you make known to me as much;
I could have kept him for you, I proteſt,
He receiv'd all of me in Britain Gold,
Of the laſt coyning.

Rav. Vengeance dog him with't.

Put. 'ſfoot has he gull'd us ſo?

Dog. Where ſhall we ſup now, Serjeants?

Put. Sup, Simon, now, eat Porridge for a Month.
Well, we cannot impute it to any lack of good will in your Worſhip,—you did but as another would have done, 'twas our hard fortunes to miſs the purchace, but if e'r we clutch him again, the Counter ſhall charm him.

Rav.

Ra. The Hole ſhall rot him.
Dog. Amen. [Exeunt.
Gent. So,
Vex out your Lungs without doors, I am proud,
It was my hap to help him, it fell fit,
He went not empty neither for his wit:
Alas, poor wretch, I could not blame his brain,
To labour his delivery, to be free,
From their unpitying fangs,—I'me glad it ſtood
VVithin my power to do a Scholar good. [Exit.

Enter in the Priſon, meeting George and Captain, George coming in muffled.

Cap. How now, who's that? what are you?
Pye. The ſame that I ſhould be, Captain.
Cap. George Pye-boord, honeſt George? why cam'ſt thou in half fac'd, muffled ſo?
Pye. Oh Captain, I thought we ſhould nere ha' laught agen, never ſpent frolick hour agen.
Cap. VVhy? why?
Pye. I coming to prepare thee, and with news
As happy as thy quick delivery,
VVas trac'd out by the ſcent, arreſted, Captain.
Cap. Arreſted, George?
Pye. Arreſted; gueſs, gueſs, how may Dogs do you think I'de upon me?
Cap. Dogs? I ſay, I know not.
Pye. Almoſt as many as George Stone the Bear:
Three at once, three at once.
Cap. How did'ſt thou ſhake 'em off then?
Pye. The time is buſie, and calls upon our wits, let it ſuffice,
Here I ſtand ſafe, and ſcap't by Miracle:
Some other hour ſhall tell thee, when we'll ſteep
Our Eyes in laughter: Captain, my device
Leans to thy happineſs, for ere the day
Be ſpent toth' Girdle, thou ſhalt be free:
The Corporal's in's firſt ſleep, the Chain is miſt,
Thy Kinſman has expreſt thee, and the old Knight
With Paſſey-hams now labours thy releaſe.
What reſts, is all in thee, to Conjure, Captain.
Cap. Conjure? 'ſfoot, George, you know, the Devil a conjuring I can conjure.
Pye. The Devil of conjuring? nay by my fay, I'de not have thee do ſo much, Captain, as the Devil a conjuring: look here, I ha brought thee a Circle ready chiractered and all.
Cap. 'ſfoot, George, art in thy right wits, doſt know what thou ſayſt? why doſt talk to a Captain a conjuring? didſt thou ever hear of a Captain conjure in thy life? doſt call't a Circle? 'tis too wide a thing, me thinks; had it been a leſſer Circle, then I knew what to have done.
Pye. Why every Fool knows that, Captain: nay then I'le not cog with you, Captain, if you'll ſtay and hang the next Seſſions you may.
Cap. No, by my Faith, George, come, come, let's to conjuring.
Pye. But if you look to be releaſed, as my wits have took pain to work it, and all means wrought to farther it, beſides to put Crowns in your purſe, to make you a man of better hopes, and whereas before you were a Captain of poor Souldier, to make you now a Commander of rich Fools, (which is truly the only beſt purchace peace can allow you) ſafer than High-wayes, Heath, or Cony-groves, and yet a far better booty, for your greateſt thieves are never hang'd, never hang'd; for why? they're wiſe, and cheat within doors; and we geld Fools of more money in one Night, than your falſe tail'd Gelding will purchaſe in a twelve-months running, which confirms the old Beldams ſaying, He's wiſeſt, that keeps himſelf warmeſt, that is, he that robs by a good Fire.
Cap. Well opened i'faith, George, thou haſt pull'd that ſaying out of the huſk.
Pye. Captain Idle, 'Tis no time now to delude or delay, the old Knight will be here ſuddenly, I'le perfect you, direct you, tell you the trick on't: 'tis nothing.
Cap. 'ſfoot, George, I know not what to ſay to't, conjure? I ſhall be hang'd ere I conjure.
Pye. Nay, tell not me of that, Captain, you'll ne're conjure after you're hang'd, I warrant you; look you, Sir, a parlous matter, ſure, firſt to ſpread your Circle upon the ground, then with a little conjuring ceremony, as I'le have an Hackney-mans wand ſilver'd o're a purpoſe for you, then arriving in the Circle, with a huge word, and a great trample, as for inſtance: have you never ſeen a ſtalking, ſtamping Player, that will raiſe a tempeſt with his tongue, and Thunder with his heels?
Cap. O yes, yes, yes; often, often.
Pye. Why be like ſuch a one? for any thing will blear the old Knights Eyes: for you muſt note, that He'll ne're dare to venture into the Room, only perhaps peep fearfully though the Key-hole, to ſee how the Play goes forward.
Cap. Well, I may go about it when I will, but mark the end on't, I ſhall but ſhame my ſelf i'faith, George, ſpeak big words, and ſtamp and ſtare, and he look in at Key-hole, why the very thought of that would make me laugh out right, and ſpoil all: nay I'le tell thee, George, when I apprehend a thing once, I am of ſuch a laxative laughter, that if the Devil himſelf ſtood by, I ſhould laugh in his face.
Pye. Puh, that's but the babe of a man, and may eaſily be huſht, as to think upon ſome diſaſter, ſome ſad misfortune, as the Death of thy Father ith' Country.
Cap. 'ſfoot, that would be the more to drive me into ſuch an ecſtaſie, that I ſhould ne're lin laughing elſe.
Pye. Why then think upon going to hanging.
Cap. Mas that's well remembered, now I'le do well, I warrant thee, ne're fear me now: but how ſhall I do, George, for boyſterous words, and horrible names?
Pye. Puh, any fuſtian invocations, Captain, will ſerve as well as the beſt, ſo you rant them out well, or you may go to a Pothecaries ſhop, and take all the words from the Boxes.
Cap. Troth, and you ſay true, George, there's ſtrange words enow to raiſe a hundred Quack-ſalvers, though they be ne're ſo poor when they begin? but here lies the fear on't, how if in this falſe conjuration, a true Devil ſhould pop up indeed.
Pye. A true Devil, Captain? why there was ne're ſuch a one, 'may 'Faith be that has this place, is as falſe a Knave as our laſt Church warden.
Captain. Then he's falſe enough a Conſcience i'faith, George.

The Cry at Marſhalſea.

Cry priſoners. Good Gentlemen over the way, ſend your relief:
Good Gentlemen over the way,——Good, Sir Godfrey?
Pye. He's come, he's come.
Nich. Maſter, that's my Kinſman yonder in the Buff-Jerkin—— Kinſman, that's my Maſter yonder i'th' Taffaty Hat——pray ſalute him intirely.

They ſalute: and Pye-boord ſalutes Maſter Edmond.

Sir God. Now my Friend.
Pye. May I partake your name, Sir?
Edm. My name is Maſter Edmond.
Pye. Maſter Edmond,——are you not a Welſh-man, Sir?
Edm. A Welſh man? why?
Pye. Becauſe Maſter is your Chriſten name, and Edmond your Sir name.
Edm. O no: I have more names at home, Maſter

Edmond

Edmond Plus is my full name at length.

Pye. O cry you mercy, Sir? [Whiſpering.

Cap. I underſtand that you are my Kinſmans good Maſter, and in regard of that, the beſt of my skill is at your ſervice: but had you fortun'd a meer ſtranger, and made no means to me by acquaintance, I ſhould have utterly denied to have been the man; both by reaſon of the Act of Parliament againſt Conjurers and Witches, as alſo, becauſe I would not have my Art vulgar, trite, and common.

Sir God. I much commend your care there, good Captain Conjurer, and that I will be ſure to have it private enough, you ſhall do't in my Siſters houſe,— mine own houſe I may call it, for both our charges therein are proportion'd,

Capt. Very good, Sir,—what may I call your loſs, Sir?

Sir God. O you may call't a great loſs, a grievous loſs, Sir, as goodly a Chain of Gold, though I ſay it, that wore it: how ſay'ſt thou, Nicholas?

Nich. O 'twas as delicious a Chain of Gold, Kinſman, you know——

Sir God. You know, did you know't, Captain?

Capt. Truſt a Fool with ſecrets? —Sir, he may ſay I know: his meaning is, becauſe my Art is ſuch, that by it I may gather a knowledge of all things——

Sir God. I, very true.

Capt. A pox of all Fools—— the excuſe ſtuck upon my tongue like Ship-pitch upon a Mariners Gown, not to come off in haſte—ber-lady, Knight, to loſe ſuch a fair Chain of Gold, were a foul loſs: Well, I can put you in this good comfort on't, if it be between heaven and earth, Knight, I'll ha't for you.

Sir God. A wonderful Conjurer,— O I, 'tis between heaven and earth, I warrant you, it cannot go out of the Realm,—— I know 'tis ſomewhere about the earth.

Capt. I, nigher the earth than thou wot'ſt on.

Sir God. For firſt, my Chain was rich, and no rich thing ſhall enter into Heaven, you know.

Nich. And as for the Devil, Maſter, he has no need on't, for you know he has a great Chain of his own.

Sir God. Thou ſay'eſt true, Nicholas, but he has put off that now, that lies by him.

Capt. Faith, Knight, in few words, I preſume ſo much upon the power of my Art, that I could warrant your Chain agen.

Sir God. O dainty Captain!

Capt. Marry, it will coſt me much ſweat, I were better go to ſixteen Hot-houſes.

Sir God. I, good man, I warrant thee.

Capt. Beſide great vexation of Kidney and Liver.

Nich. O, 'twill tickle you hereabouts, Couſin, becauſe you have not been us'd to't.

Sir God. No? have you not been us'd to't, Captain?

Capt. Plague of all Fools ſtill; —indeed, Knight, I have not us'd it a good while, and therefore 'twill ſtrain me ſo much the more, you know.

Sir God. O it will, it will.

Capt. What plunges he puts me to? Were not this Knight a Fool, I had bin twice ſpoil'd now; that Captain's worſe than accurſt that has an Aſs to his Kinſman, 'ſfoot, I fear he will drivel't out before I come to't.— Now, Sir, —to come to the point indeed,—you ſee I ſtick here in the jaw of the Marſhalſea, and cannot do't.

Sir God. Tut, tut, I know thy meaning, thou would'ſt ſay thou'rt a priſoner, I tell thee th'art none.

Capt. How, none? why is not this the Marſhalſea?

Sir God. Woult hear me ſpeak? I heard of thy rare Conjuring:
My Chain was loſt, I ſweat for thy releaſe,
As thou ſhalt do the like at home for me:
Keeper.

Enter Keeper.

Keep. Sir.

Sir God. Speak, is not this man free?

Keep. Yes, at his pleaſure, Sir, the Fees diſcharg'd.

Sir God. Go, go, I'll diſcharge them, I.

Keep. I thank your Worſhip. [Exit Keeper.

Capt. Now, truſt me, y'are a dear Knight; kindneſs unexpected! O there's nothing to a free Gentleman,— I will conjure for you, Sir, 'till Froth come through my Buff-Jerkin.

Sir God. Nay, then thou ſhalt not paſs with ſo little a bounty, for at the firſt ſight of my Chain agen,— forty five Angels ſhall appear unto thee.

Capt. 'Twill be a glorious ſhow, i'faith, Knight, a very fine ſhow; but are all theſe of your own houſe? are you ſure of that, Sir?

Sir God. I, I, no, no; what's he yonder talking with my wild Nephew, pray heaven he give him good counſel.

Capt. Who, he? he's a rare friend of mine, an admirable Fellow, Knight, the fineſt Fortune teller.

Sir God. O! 'tis he indeed, that came to my Lady Siſter, and foretold the loſs of my Chain; I am not angry with him now, for I ſee 'twas my Fortune to loſe it: By your leave, Mr. Fortune-teller, I had a glimpſe of you at home, at my Siſters the Widows, there you propheſied of the loſs of a Chain: —ſimply, though I ſtand here, I was he that loſt it.

Pye. Was it you, Sir?

Edm. A my troth, Nuncle, he's the rareſt Fellow, has told me my Fortune ſo right; I find it ſo right to my nature.

Sir God. What is't? God ſend it a good one.

Edm. O, 'tis a paſſing good one, Nuncle: for he ſays I ſhall prove ſuch an excellent Gameſter in my time, that I ſhall ſpend all faſter than my Father got it.

Sir God. There's a Fortune indeed.

Edm. Nay, it hits my humor ſo pat.

Sir God. I, that will be the end on't: will the Curſe of the Beggar prevail ſo much, that the Son ſhall conſume that fooliſhly, which the Father got craftily; I, I, I; 'twill, 'twill, 'twill.

Pye. Stay, ſtay, ſtay. [Pye boord with an Almanack, and the Captain.

Capt. Turn over, George.

Pye. June, July; here, July, that's the month, Sunday thirteen, yeſterday fourteen, to day fifteen.

Capt. Look quickly for the fifteen day,— if within the compaſs of theſe two days there would be ſome boiſterous ſtorm or other, it would be the beſt, I'de defer him off till then; ſome Tempeſt, and it be thy will.

Pye. Here's the fifteen day,——Hot and fair.

Capt. Puh, would t'ad been, Hot and foul.

Pye. The ſixteen day, that's to morrow; The morning for the moſt part, fair and pleaſant.

Capt. No luck.

Pye. But about high-noon, Lightning and Thunder.

Capt. Lightning and Thunder? admirable! beſt of all! I'll conjure to morrow juſt at high-noon, George.

Pye. Happen but true to morrow, Almanack, and I'll give thee leave to lye all the year after.

Capt. Sir, I muſt crave your patience, to beſtow this day upon me, that I may furniſh my ſelf ſtrongly,——I ſent a Spirit into Lancaſhire t'other day, to fetch back a Knave-Drover, and I look for his return this evening— to morrow morning, my friend here and I will come and breakfaſt with you.

Sir God. O, you ſhall be moſt welcome.

Capt. And about noon, without fail, I purpoſe to conjure.

Sir God. Mid-noon will be a fit time for you.

Edm. Conjuring? do you mean to conjure at our houſe to morrow, Sir?

Capt. Marry do I, Sir? 'tis my intent, young Gentleman.

Edm. By my troth, I'll love you while I live for't: O rare! Nicholas, we ſhall have Conjuring to morrow.

Nich. Puh I, I could ha told you of that.

Capt.

Cap. Law, he could ha told him of that, Fool, Coxcomb, could ye?

Edm. Do you hear me, Sir, I deſire more acquaintance on you, you ſhall earn ſome money of me, now I know you can Conjure; but can you fetch any that is loſt?

Cap. Oh, any thing that's loſt.

Edm. Why look you, Sir, I tell't you as a Friend and a Conjurer; I ſhould marry a Pothecaries Daughter, and 'twas told me, ſhe loſt her Maiden-head at Stony-Stratford: now if you'll do but ſo much as Conjure for't, and make all whole agen —

Cap. That I will, Sir.

Edm. By my troth I thank you, la.

Cap. A little merry with your Siſters Son, Sir.

Sir God. Oh, a ſimple young man, very ſimple, come Captain, and you, Sir; we'll e'en part with a Gallon of Wine till to morrow Break-faſt.

Tip. Cap. Troth, agreed, Sir.

Nich. Kinſman — Scholar.

Pye. Why now thou art a good Knave, worth a hundred Browniſts.

Nich. Am I indeed, la: I thank you heartily, la.

[Exeunt.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Moll, and Sir John Penny-Dub.

Pen. BUT I hope you will not ſerve a Knight ſo, Gentlewoman, will you? to caſheer him, and caſt him off at your pleaſure; what do you think I was dubb'd for nothing, no by my Faith, Ladies Daughter.

Moll. Pray Sir John Penny-Dub, let it be defer'd awhile, I have a heart to marry as you can have; but as the Fortune-teller told me.

Pen. Pax o' th' Fortune-teller, would Derrick had been his fortune ſeven year ago, to croſs my love thus: did he know what caſe I was in? why this is able to make a man drown himſelf in's Father's Fiſh-Pond.

Moll. And then he told me moreover, Sir John, that the breach of it kept my Father in Purgatory.

Penny. In Purgatory? why let him purge out his heart there, what have we to do with that? there's Phyſicians enow there to caſt his Water, is that any matter to us? how can he hinder our love? why let him be hang'd now he's dead? — Well, have I rid poſt day and night, to bring you merry news of my Fathers Death, and now —

Moll. Thy Fathers Death? is the old Farmer dead?

Penny. As dead as his Barn-Door, Moll.

Moll. And you'll keep your word with me now, Sir John, that I ſhall have my Coach and my Coach-man?

Penny. I faith.

Moll. And two white Horſes with black Feathers to draw it?

Penny. Too.

Moll. A guarded Lackey to run befor't, and py'd Liveries to come traſhing after't.

Penny. Thou ſhalt, Moll.

Moll. And to let me have money in my Purſe to go whither I will.

Penny. All this.

Moll. Then come, whatſoe're come's on't, we'll be made ſure together before the Maids o' th' Kitchin. [Ex.

Enter Widow with her eldeſt Daughter, Frank and Frailty.

Wid. How now? where's my Brother Sir Godfrey? went he forth this Morning?

Frail. O no Madam, he's above at Breakfaſt, with Sir reverence a Conjurer.

Wid. A Conjurer? what manner of Fellow is he?

Frail. Oh, a wondrous rare Fellow, Miſtreſs, very ſtrongly made upward, for he goes in a Buff-Jerkin: he ſayes he will fetch Sir Godfrey's Chain agen, if it hang between Heaven and Earth.

Wid. What! he will not? then he's an exlent Fellow I Warrant: how happy were that Woman to be bleſt with ſuch a Husband, a man cunning? how do's he look, Frailty? very ſwartly I warrant, with black Beard, ſcorcht Cheeks, and ſmoaky Eye-brows.

Frail. Foh — he's neither ſmoak-dryed, nor ſcoreht, nor black, nor nothing, I tell you, Madam, he looks as fair to ſee to as one of us; I do think, but if you ſaw him once, you'de take him to be a Chriſtian.

Frank. So fair, and yet ſo cunning, that's to be wondred at, Mother.

Enter Sir Oliver Muck-hill, and Sir Andrew Tipſtaffe.

Muck. Bleſs you, ſweet Lady.

Tip. And you, fair Miſtreſs. [Exit Frailty.

Wid. Coades, what do you mean, Gentlemen? Fie, did I not give you your anſwers?

Muck. Sweet Lady?

Wid. Well, I will not ſtick with you for a kiſs: Daughter, kiſs the Gentleman for once.

Frank. Yes forſooth.

Tip. I'm proud of ſuch a favour.

Wid. Truly la, Sir Oliver, y'are much too blame to come agen when you know my mind ſo well deliver'd — as a Widow could deliver a thing.

Muck. But I exſpect a farther comfort, Lady.

Wid. Why la you now, did I not deſire you to put off your Suit quite and clean when you came to me again? how ſay you? did I not?

Muck. But the ſincere love which my heart bears to you —

Wid. Go to, I'll cut you off; and Sir Oliver to put you in comfort, afar off, my fortune is read me, I muſt marry again.

Muck. O bleſt Fortune!

Wid. But not as long as I can chooſe; nay, I'll hold out well.

Enter Frailty.

Frail. O Madam, Madam.

Wid. How now? what's the haſt? [In her Bar.

Tip. Faith, Miſtreſs Frances, I'll maintain you gallantly, I'll bring you to Court, wean you among the fair Society of Ladies poor Kinſwomen of mine in Cloth of Silver, beſide you ſhall have your Monkey, your Parrot, your Muſkat, and your Piſs, Piſs, Piſs.

Frank. It will do very well.

Wid. What, do's he mean to Conjure here then? how ſhall I do to be rid of theſe Knights; — pleaſe you, Gentlemen, to walk a while i' th' Garden, to gather a Pink, or a Gilly-flower.

Both. With all our hearts, Lady, and count us favour'd. [Exeunt.

Sir God within. Step in, Nicholas, look, is the Coaſt clear?

Nich. Oh, as clear as a Carter's Eye, Sir.

Sir God. Then enter Captain Conjurer: — now — how like you our Room, Sir?

Enter Sir Godfrey, Captain, Pye-boord, Edmond, Nicholas.

Cap. O wonderful convenient.

Edm. I can tell you, Captain, ſimply though it lies here, 'tis the faireſt Room in my Mothers Houſe, as dainty a Room to Conjure in, me thinks, — why you may bid, bid, I cannot tell how many Devils welcome in't; my Father has had twenty in't at once!

Pye. What Devils?

Edm. Devils, no Deputies, and the wealthieſt men he could get.

Sir God. Nay put by your chats now, fall to your buſineſs roundly, the Feſcue of the Dial is upon the Chriscroſs of Noon: but oh, hear me, Captain, a qualm comes o're my Stomach.

Capt. Why, what's the matter, Sir?

Sir God. Oh, how if the Devil ſhould prove a knave, and tear the hangings.

Capt. Fuh, I warrant you, Sir Godfrey.

Edm. I, Nuncle, or ſpit fire upo'th' ſealing.

Sir Godf. Very true too, for 'tis but thin plaiſtered, and 'twill quickly take hold a' the laths: and if he chance to ſpit downward too, he will burn all the boards.

Capt. My life for yours, Sir Godfrey.

Sir Godf. My Siſter is very curious and dainty ore this Room, I can tell you, and therefore if he muſt needs ſpit, I pray deſire him to ſpit i'th' Chimney.

Pye. Why, aſſure you, Sir Godfrey, he ſhall not be brought up with ſo little manners, to ſpit and ſpawl a'th' floor.

Sir Godf. Why I thank you, good Captain, pray have a care I, —fall to your Circle, we'll not trouble you I warrant you, come, we'll into the next Room, and becauſe we'll be ſure to keep him out there, we'll bar up the Door with ſome of the Godlies Zealous works.

Edm. That will be a fine device, Nuncle; and becauſe the ground ſhall be as holy as the Door, I'le tear two or three Roſaries in pieces, and ſtrew the pieces about the Chamber: Oh! the Devil already. [Runs in. Thunders.

Pye. 'ſfoot, Captain, ſpeak ſomewhat for ſhame: it lightens and Thunders before thou wilt begin, why when?

Capt. Pray peace, George, —— thou'lt make me laugh anon, and ſpoil all.

Pye. Oh, now it begins agen; now, now, now! Captain.

Capt. Rhumbos-ragdayon, pur, pur, colucundrion, Hois-Plois.

Sir Godfrey through the Key hole, within.

Sir Godf. Oh admirable Conjurer! has fetcht Thunder already.

Pye. Hark hark, agen Captain.

Capt Benjamino, gaſpois-kay-goſgothoteron-umbrois.

Sir Godf. Oh, I would the Devil would come away quickly, he has no conſcience to put a man to ſuch pain.

Pye. Agen.

Capt. Flowſte-kak opumpos-dragone-leloomenos-hodge podge.

Pye. Well ſaid, Captain.

Sir Godf. So long a coming? O would I had nere begun't now, for I fear me theſe roaring Tempeſts will deſtroy all the Fruits of the Earth, and tread upon my corn—oh, i' th' Country.

Capt. Gog de gog, hobgoblin, huncks, hounſlow, hockley te coome park.

Wid. O Brother, Brother, what a Tempeſt's i'th' Garden, ſure there's ſome Conjuratiou abroad.

Sir Godf. 'Tis at home, Siſter.

Pye. By and by I'le ſtep in, Captain.

Capt. Nunck-Nunck, Rip-Gaſcoines, Ips, Drip-Dropite.

Sir Godf. He drips and drops, poor man: alas, alas.

Pye. Now, I come.

Capt. O Sulphure Sootface.

Pye. Arch-Conjurer, what would'ſt thou with me?

Sir Godf. O, the Devil, Siſter, i' th' dining-Chamber: ſing, Siſter, I warrant you that will keep him out; quickly, quickly, quickly. [goes in.

Pye. So, ſo, ſo; I'le releaſe thee: enough Captain, enough: allow us ſome time to laugh a little, they're ſhuddering and ſhaking by this time, as if an Earthquake were in their kidneys.

Capt. Sirrah George, how was't, how was't? did I do't well enough?

Pye. Woult believe me, Captain, better than any Conjurer, for here was no harm in this; and yet their horrible expectation ſatisfied well, you were much beholding to Thunder and Lightning at this time, it grac'd you well, I can tell you.

Capt. I muſt needs ſay ſo, George: Sirrah if we could ha' convey'd hither cleanly a cracker, or a fire-wheel, t'ad been admirable.

Pye. Blurt, blurt, there's nothing remains to put thee to pain now, Captain.

Capt. Pain? I proteſt, George, my heels are ſorer than a Whiſon Morris-dancer's.

Pye. All's paſt now, —— only to reveal that the Chain's i'th' Garden, where, thou know'ſt, it has lain theſe two dayes.

Capt. But I fear, that Fox Nicholas has reveal'd it already.

Pye. Fear not, Captain, you muſt put it to th' venture now: Nay 'tis time, call upon 'em, take pity on'em, for I believe ſome of 'em are in a pitiful caſe by this time

Capt. Sir Godfrey, Nicholas, Kinſman, — 'ſfoot they're faſt at it ſtill: George, Sir Godfrey?

Sir Godf. Oh, is that the Devil's voice? how comes he to know my name?

Capt. Fear not, Sir Godfrey, all's quieted.

Sir Godf. What, is he laid?

Capt. Laid: and has newly dropt.
Your Chain i'th' Garden.

Sir Godf. I'th' Garden! in our Garden?

Capt. Your Garden.

Sir Godf. O ſweet Conjurer! whereabouts there?

Capt. Look well about a bank of Roſemary.

Sir Godf. Siſter, the Roſemary-bank, come, come: there's my Chain, he ſayes.

Wid. Oh happineſs! run, run. [Suppoſeth to go.

Edm. Captain Conjurer? [Edm. at key hole.

Capt. Who? Maſter Edmund?

Edm. I, Maſter Edmund; may I come in ſafely without danger, think you?

Capt. Puh, long ago, it is all as 'twas at firſt:
Fear nothing, pray come near, —— how now, man?

Edm. Oh! this Room's mightily hot i'faith: 'slid, my ſhirt ſticks to my Belly already: what a ſteam the Rogue has left behind him? Foh, this Room muſt be air'd, Gentlemen, it ſmells horribly of Brimſtone, —— let's open the windows.

Pye. Faith, Maſter Edmond, 'tis but your conceit.

Edm. I would you could make me believe that, i'faith, why do you think I cannot ſmell his ſavour, from another: yet I take it kindly from you, becauſe you would not put me in a fear, i'faith: a my troth I ſhall love you for this the longeſt day of my life.

Capt. Puh, 'tis nothing, Sir, love me when you ſee more.

Edm. Maſs, now remember, I'le look whether he has ſindged the hangings, or no.

Pye. Captain, to entertain a little ſport till they come: make him believe, you'll charm him inviſible, he's apt to admire any thing, you ſee, let me alone to give force to't.

Capt. Go, retire to yonder end then.

Edm. I proteſt you are a rare fellow, are you not?

Cap. O Maſter Edmond, you know but the leaſt part of me yet; why now at this inſtant I could flouriſh my wand thrice ore your head, and charm you inviſible.

Edm. What you could not? make me walk inviſible man? I ſhould laugh at that i'faith; troth I'le requite your kindneſs, an you'll do't, good Captain Conjurer.

Capt. Nay, I ſhould hardly deny you ſuch a ſmall kindneſs, Maſter Edmond Plus, why, look you, Sir, 'tis no more but this, and thus agen, and now y'are inviſible.

Edm. Am I Faith? who would think it?

Capt. You ſee the Fortune-teller yonder at farther end o'th' Chamber, go toward him, do what you will with him, he ſhall ne'r find you.

Edm

Edm. Say you ſo, I'll try that i'faith—— [Juſtles him.

Pye. Hoe now Captain? who's that juſtled me?

Capt. Juſtled you? I ſaw no body.

Edm. Ha, ha, ha,——ſay 'twas a Spirit.

Capt. Shall I?——may be ſome Spirit that haunt the circle.

Pye. O my noſe, agen, pray conjure then, Captain. [Pulls him by the Noſe.

Edm. Troth this is exlent, I may do any knavery now and never be ſeen,—and now I remember me, Sir Godfrey my Uncle abus'd me t'other day, and told tales of me to my Mother——Troth now I'me inviſible, I'll hit him a ſound whirrit a'th'ear, when he comes out a'th'garden,—I may be reveng'd on him now finely.

Enter Sir Godfrey, Widow, Frank, Nicholas with the Chain.

Sir God. I have my Chain again, my Chain's found again. [Edmond ſtrikes him.
O ſweet Captain, O admirable Conjurer.
O, what mean you by that, Nephew?

Edm. Nephew? I hope you do not know me, Uncle?

Wid. Why did you ſtrike your Uncle, Son?

Edm. Why, Captain, am I not inviſible?

Capt. A good jeſt, George,—not now you are not, Sir, Why did not you ſee me, when I did uncharm you?

Edm. Not I, by my troth, Captain:
Then pray you pardon me, Uncle,
I thought I'de been inviſible when I ſtruck you.

Sir God. So, you would do't? go,—y'are a fooliſh boy,
And were I not o'recome with greater joy,
I'de make you taſte correction.

Edm. Correction, puſh——no, neither you nor my Mother, ſhall think to whip me as you have done.

Sir God. Captain, my joy is ſuch, I know not how to thank you, let me embrace you, O my ſweet Chain, gladneſs e'en makes me giddy, rare man: 'twas juſt i'th'Roſemary bank, as if one ſhould ha laid it there,—O cunning, cunning!

Wid. Well, ſeeing my Fortune tells me I muſt marry; let me marry a man of wit, a man of parts, here's a worthy Captain, and 'tis a fine Title truly la to be a Captain's Wife, a Captain's Wife, it goes very finely, beſide all the world knows that a worthy Captain is a fit Companion to any Lord, then why not a ſweet Bed-fellow for any Lady,——I'll have it ſo———

Enter Frailty.

Frail. O Miſtreſs, Gentlemen, there's the braveſt ſight coming along this way.

Wid. What brave ſight?

Frail. O, one going to burying, and another going to hanging.

Wid. A rueful ſight.

Pye. 'ſfoot, Captain, I'll pawn my life the Corporal's coffin'd, and old Shirmiſh the Souldier going to execution, and 'tis now about the time of his waking; hold out a little longer, ſleepy potion, and we ſhall have exlent admiration; for I'll take upon me the cure of him.

Enter the Coffin of the Corporal, the Souldier bound, and led by Officers, the Sheriff there.

Frail. O here they come, here they come!

Pye. Now muſt I cloſe ſecretly with the Souldier, prevent his impatience, or elſe all's diſcovered.

Wid. O lamentable ſeeing, theſe were thoſe Brothers, that fought and bled before our door.

Sir God. What they were not, Siſter?

Skir. George, look to't, I'll peach at Tiburn elſe.

Pye. Mum——Gentles all, vouchſafe me audience, and you eſpecially, Maſter Sheriff:
Yon man is bound to execution,
Becauſe he wounded this that now lies coffin'd.

Sher. True, true, he ſhall have the Law,—and I know the Law.

Pye. But under favour, Maſter Sheriff, if this man had been cured and ſafe again, he ſhould have been releas'd then?

Sher. Why, make you queſtion of that, Sir?

Pye. Then I releaſe him freely, and will take upon me the death that he ſhould die, if within a little ſeaſon, I do not cure him to his proper health again.

Sher. How, Sir? recover a dead man?
That were moſt ſtrange of all. [Frank comes to him.

Frank. Sweet Sir, I love you dearly, and could wiſh my beſt part yours,——O do not undertake ſuch an impoſſible venture.

Pye. Love you me? then for your ſweet ſake I'll do't:
Let me entreat the Corps to be ſet down.

Sher. Bearers, ſet down the Coffin,——this is wonderful, and worthy Stow's Chronicle.

Pye. I pray beſtow the freedom of the air upon our wholſome Art,——Maſs his cheeks begin to receive natural warmth: nay, good Corporal, wake betime, or I ſhall have a longer ſleep than you,——'ſfoot, if he ſhould prove dead indeed now, he were fully reveng'd upon me for making a property on him, yet I had rather run upon the Ropes, than have the Rope like a Tetter run upon me, O—he ſtirs—he ſtirs agen——look, Gentlemen, he recovers, he ſtarts, he riſes.

Sher. Oh, oh, defend us——out, alas.

Pye. Nay, pray be ſtill; you'll make him more giddy elſe,——he knows no body yet.

Corp. Zowns: where am I? cover'd with ſnow? I marvel?

Pye. Nay, I knew he would ſwear the firſt thing he did, as ſoon as he came to life again.

Corp. 'ſfoot, Hoſteſs—ſome hot porridge,—oh, ho, lay on a dozen of Faggots in the Moon Parlour, there.

Pye. Lady, you muſt needs take a little pity of him i'faith, and ſend him into your Kitchin fire.

Wid. O, with all my heart, Sir Nicholas and Frailty, help to bear him in.

Nich. Bear him in, quotha, pray call in the Maids, I ſhall ne're have the heart to do't, indeed la.

Frail. Nor I neither, I cannot abide to handle a Ghoſt, of all men.

Corp. 'Sloud, let me ſee, where was I drunk laſt night? hah———

Wid. O, ſhall I bid you once agen take him away?

Frail. Why, we're as fearful as you, I warrant you——oh———

Wid. Away, Villains, bid the Maids make him a Cawdle preſently to ſettle his brain—or a Poſſet of Sack, quickly, quickly. [Exeunt, puſhing in the Corps.

Sher. Sir, whatſoe're you are, I do more than admire you.

Wid. O I, if you knew all, Maſter Sheriff, as you ſhall do, you would ſay then, that here were two of the rareſt men within the Walls of Chriſtendom.

Sher. Two of 'em, O wonderful: Officers, I diſcharge you, ſet him free, all's in tune.

Sir God. I, and a Banquet ready by this time, Maſter Sheriff, to which I moſt cheerfully invite you, and your late Priſoner there: ſee you this goodly Chain, Sir, mum, no more words, 'twas loſt and is found again; come, my inеſtimable Bullies, we'll talk of your noble Acts in ſparkling Charnico, and inſtead of a Jeſter, we'll ha the Ghoſt i'th' white ſheet ſit at upper end oth' Table.

Sher. Exlent, merry man, i'faith. [Exit.

Frank. Well, ſeeing I am enjoyn'd to love and marry,
My fooliſh vow thus I caſheer to air
Which firſt begot it,——now, Love, play thy part;
The Scholar reads his lecture in my heart.

Actus Quintus.

Enter in haſte Maſter Edmond and Frailty.

Edm. THis is the Marriage-morning for my Mother and my Siſter.

Frail. O me, Maſter Edmond, we ſhall have rare doings.

Edm. Nay go, Frailty, run to the Sexton, you know my Mother will be married at Saint Antlings, hie thee, 'tis paſt five, bid them open the Church door, my Siſter is almoſt ready.

Frail. What already, Maſter Edmond?

Edm. Nay, go hie thee, firſt run to the Sexton, and run to the Clerk, and then run to Maſter Pigman the Parſon, and then run to the Milliner, and then run home agen.

Frail. Here's run, run, run———

Edm. But hark, Frailty.

Frail. What, more yet?

Edm. Have the Maids remembred to ſtrew the way to the Church.

Frail. Foh, an hour ago I help'd 'em my ſelf.

Edm. Away, away, away, away then.

Frail. Away, away, away, away then [Exit Frailty.

Edm. I ſhall have a ſimple Father-in-law, a brave Captain, able to beat all our ſtreet: Captain Idle, now my Lady Mother will be fitted for a delicate name, my Lady Idle, my Lady Idle, the fineſt name that can be for a Woman, and then the Scholar, Maſter Pye-boord for my Siſter Frances, that will be Miſtreſs Frances Pye-boord, Miſtreſs Frances Pye-boord, they'll keep a good Table, I warrant you: Now all the Knights noſes are put out of joynt, they may go to a Bone-ſetters now.

Enter Captain and Pye-boord.

Hark, hark; O who comes here with two Torches before 'em, my ſweet Captain, and my fine Scholar? O how bravely they are ſhot up in one night, they look like fine Britains now me thinks, here's a gallant change i'faith; 'ſlid, they have hir'd men and all by the Clock.

Capt. Maſter Edmond, kind, honeſt, dainty Maſter Edmond.

Edm. Foh, ſweet Captain Father-in-law, a rare perfume i'faith.

Pye. What, are the Brides ſtirring? may we ſteal upon 'em, think'ſt thou, Maſter Edmond?

Edm. Faw, they'r e'ne upon readineſs, I can aſſure you; for they were at their Torch e'ne now, by the ſame token I tumbled down the ſtairs.

Pye. Alas, poor Maſter Edmond.

Enter Muſicians.

Capt. O, the Muſicians! I prethee, Maſter Edmond, call 'em in, and liquor 'em a little.

Edm. That I will, ſweet Captain Father-in-law, and make each of them as drunk as a common Fidler.

Enter Sir John Penny-Dub and Moll above lacing of her Cloaths.

Pen. Whewh, Miſtreſs Moll, Miſtreſs Moll.

Moll. Who's there?

Pen. 'Tis I.

Moll. Who, Sir John Penny-Dub? O you're an early Cock i'faith, who would have thought you to be ſo rare a ſtirrer?

Pen. Prethee, Moll, let me come up.

Moll. No by my faith, Sir John, I'll keep you down, for you Knights are very dangerous, if once you get above.

Pen. I'll not ſtay i'faith.

Moll. I'faith you ſhall ſtay: for, Sir John, you muſt note the nature of the Climates: your Northern Wench in her own Country may well hold out till ſhe be fifteen, but if ſhe touch the South once, and come up to London, here the Chimes go preſently after twelve.

Pen. O th'art a mad Wench, Moll, but I prethee make haſte, for the Prieſt is gone before.

Moll. Do you follow him, I'll not be long after.

[Exeunt.

Enter Sir Oliver Muck-hill, Sir Andrew Tipſtaff, and old Skirmiſh talking.

Muck. O monſtrous unheard of Forgery!

Tip. Knight, I never heard of ſuch villany in our own Country, in my life.

Muck. Why, 'tis impoſſible, dare you maintain your words?

Skir. Dare we? e'ne to their wezen pipes: we know all their plots, they cannot ſquander with us, they have knaviſhly abus'd us, made only properties on's to advance their ſelves upon our ſhoulders, but they ſhall rue their abuſes, this morning they are to be married.

Muck. 'Tis too true, yet if the Widow be not too much beſotted on ſlights and forgeries, the revelation of their villanies will make 'em loathſom, and to that end, be it in private to you, I ſent late laſt night to an honourable perſonage, to whom I am much indebted in kindneſs, as he is to me, and therefore preſume upon the payment of his tongue, and that he will lay out good words for me, and to ſpeak truth, for ſuch needful occaſions, I only preſerve him in bond, and ſometimes he may do me more good here in the City by a free word of his mouth, than if he had paid one half in hand, and took Doomſday for t'other.

Tip. In troth, Sir, without ſoothing be it ſpoken, you have publiſht much judgment in theſe few words.

Muck. For you know, what ſuch a man utters will be thought effectual, and to weighty purpoſe, and therefore into his mouth we'll put the approved Theme of their forgeries.

Skir. And I'll maintain it, Knight, if ſhe'll be true.

Enter a Servant.

Muck. How now, Fellow.

Serv. May it pleaſe you, Sir, my Lord is newly lighted from his Coach.

Muck. Is my Lord come already? his Honour's early:
You ſee he loves me well; up before heaven,
Truſt me, I have found him night-capt at eleven:
There's good hope yet: come, I'll relate all to him.

[Exeunt.

Enter the two Bridegrooms, Captain and Scholar after them, Sir Godfrey and Edmond, Widow changed in Apparel, Miſtreſs Frances led between two Knights, Sir John Penny-Dub and Moll: there meets them a Nobleman, Sir Oliver Muck-hill, and Sir Andrew Tipſtaff.

Nob. By your leave, Lady.

Wid. My Lord, your honour is moſt chaſtly welcome.

Nob. Madam, though I came now from Court, I come not to flatter you: upon whom can I juſtly caſt this blot, but upon your own forehead, that know not Ink from Milk, ſuch is the blind beſotting in the ſtate of an unheaded woman that's a Widow. For it is the property of all you that are Widows (a handful excepted) to hate thoſe that honeſtly and carefully love you, to the maintenance of credit, ſtate, and poſterity, and ſtrongly to doat on thoſe, that only love you to undo you: and regard

regard you leaſt, are beſt regarded; who hate you moſt, are beſt beloved. And if there be but one man amongſt ten thouſand millions of men, that is accurſt, diſaſtrous, and evilly Planeted; whom Fortune beats moſt, whom God hates moſt, and all Societies eſteem leaſt, that man is ſure to be a Husband — Such is the peeviſh Moon that rules your bloods. An impudent Fellow beſt woes you, a flattering Lip beſt wins you, or in mirth, who talks roughlieſt, is moſt ſweeteſt; nor can you diſtinguiſh truth from forgeries, miſts from ſimplicity: witneſs thoſe two deceitful Monſters, that you have entertain'd for Bridegrooms.

Wid. Deceitful——

Pye. All will out.

Cap. 'Sfoot, who has blab'd, George? that fooliſh Nicholas.

Nob. For, what they have beſotted your eaſie bloud withal, were nought but Forgeries, the Fortune-telling for Husbands, and the Conjuring for the Chain; Sir Godfrey heard the falſhood of all: nothing but meer Knavery, deceit and cozenage.

Wid. O wonderful! indeed I wondred that my Huſband with all his Craft, could not keep himſelf out of Purgatory.

Sir God. And I more wonder, that my Chain ſhould be gone, and my Taylor had none of it.

Moll. And I wondred moſt of all, that I ſhould be tyed from Marriage, having ſuch a mind to't: come Sir John Penny-Dub, fair weather on our ſide, the Moon has chang'd ſince Yeſternight.

Pye. The ſting of every evil is within me.

Nob. And that you may perceive I feign not with you, behold their Fellow actor in thoſe Forgeries, who full of Spleen and Envy at their ſo ſudden advancements, reveal'd all their Plot in anger.

Pye. Baſe Souldier, to reveal us.

Wid. I'ſt poſſible we ſhould be blinded ſo, and our Eyes open?

Nob. Widow, will you now believe that falſe, which too ſoon you believed true?

Wid. O, to my ſhame, I do.

Sir God. But under favour, my Lord, my Chain was truly loſt, and ſtrangely found again.

Nob. Reſolve him of that, Souldier.

Skir. In few words, Knight, then thou wert the Arch-Gull of all.

Sir God. How, Sir?

Skir. Nay I'll prove it: for the Chain was but hid in the Roſemary-bank all this while, and thou gotſt him out of Priſon to Conjure for it, who did it admirably fuſtianly, for indeed what needed any others, when he knew where it was?

Sir God. O Villany of Villains! but how came my Chain there?

Skir. Where's Truly la, Indeed la? he that will not Swear, but Lye; he that will not Steal, but Rob: pure Nicholas Saint Antlings.

Sir God. O Villain! one of our Society,
Deem'd always holy, pure, religious:
A Puritan, a Thief? when was't ever heard?
Soon we'll kill a man, than Steal, thou know'ſt.
Out Slave, I'll rend my Lyon from thy back —
With mine own hands.

Nich. Dear Maſter, oh.

Nob. Nay Knight, dwell in patience.
And now, Widow, being ſo near the Church, 'twere great pitty, nay uncharity, to ſend you home again without a Husband: draw near, you of true Worſhip, ſtate and credit: that ſhould not ſtand ſo far off from a Widow, and ſuffer forged ſhapes to come between you: Not that in theſe I blemiſh the true Title of a Captain, or blot the fair margent of a Scholar: for I honour worthy and deſerving parts in the one, and cheriſh fruitful Virtues in the other. Come Lady, and you Virgin, beſtow your Eyes and your pureſt affections, upon men of eſtimation, both in Court and City, that have long woed you, and both with their hearts and wealth, ſincerely love you.

Sir God. Good Siſter, do: ſweet little Frank, theſe are men of reputation, you ſhall be welcom at Court: a great credit for a Citizen, ſweet Siſter.

Nob. Come, her ſilence do's conſent to't.

Wid. I know not with what Face.

Nob. Pah, pah, with your own Face, they deſire no other.

Wid. Pardon me, worthy Sirs, I and my Daughter have wrong'd your loves.

Muck. 'Tis eaſily pardon'd, Lady,
If you vouchſafe it now.

Wid. With all my Soul.

Frank. And I, with all my heart.

Moll. And I, Sir John with Soul, Heart, Lights and all.

Sir God. They are all mine, Moll.

Nob. Now Lady:
What holieſt Spirit, but will applaud your choice,
And gladly furniſh you with hand and voice;
A happy change, which makes e'en Heaven rejoice.
Come, enter in your Joyes, you ſhall not want,
For, Fathers, now I doubt it not, believe me,
But that you ſhall have hands enough to give me.

[Exeunt omnes.

A Yorkſhire TRAGEDY,

Not ſo New, as Lamentable and True.

Enter Oliver and Raph, two Serving-men.

Oliv. SIrrah Raph, my young Miſtreſs is in ſuch a pitiful paſſionate humour for the long abſence of her Love.

Raph. Why, can you blame her? why, Apples hanging longer on the Tree than when they are ripe, makes ſo many fallings, viz. Mad VVenches, becauſe they are not gathered in time, are fain to drop of themſelves, and then 'tis common you know for every Man to take them up.

Oliv. Maſs thou ſayeſt true, 'tis common indeed, but ſirrah, is neither our young Maſter returned, nor our fellow Sam come from London?

Roph. Neither of either, as the Puritan Bawd ſays. 'Slid I hear Sam, Sam's come, here tarry, come i'faith, now my Noſe itches for News.

Oliv. And ſo doth mine Elbow.

[Sam calls within. Where are you there?

Sam. Boy, look you walk my Horſe with diſcretion, I have rid him ſimply, I warrant his skin ſticks to his back with very heat, if he ſhould catch cold and get the cough of the lungs, I were well ſerved, were I not? What Raph and Oliver?

Amb. Honeſt fellow Sam, welcome i'faith. what tricks haſt thou brought from London?

[Furniſh'd with things from London.

Sam. You ſee I am hang'd after the trueſt faſhion, three Hats, and two Glaſſes bobbing upon them, two rebato wyers upon my breaſt, a Cap-caſe by my ſide, a bruſh at my back, an Almanack in my pocket, and three Ballads in my codpiece; nay, I am the true picture of a common ſerving-man.

Oliv. I'll ſwear thou art, thou may'ſt ſet up when thou wilt, there's many a one begins with leſs I can tell thee, that proves a rich man e'r he dyes, but what's the News from London, Sam?

Raph. I that's well ſed, what is the News from London, ſirrah? My young Miſtreſs keeps ſuch a puling for her Love.

Sam. Why the more fool ſhe, I, the more ninny-hammer ſhe.

Oliv. Why, Sam, why?

Sam. Why, he is married to another long ago.

Amb. Faith ye jeſt.

Sam. Why, did you not know that till now? Why, he's married, beats his Wife, and has two or three Children by her: for you muſt note, that any Woman bears the more when ſhe is beaten.

Raph. I that's true, for ſhe bears the blows.

Oliv. Sirrah Sam, I would not for two years wages my young Miſtreſs knew ſo much, ſhe'd run upon the left hand of her wit, and ne'r be her own Woman again.

Sam. And I think ſhe was bleſt in her Cradle, that he never came in her bed; why, he has conſumed all, pawn'd his Lands, and made his Univerſity Brother ſtand in wax for him; There's a fine phraſe for a Scrivener, puh, he owes more than his skin is worth.

Oliv. Is't poſſible?

Sam. Nay, I'll tell you moreover, he calls his VVife Whore, as familiarly as one would call Moll and Doll, and Children Baſtards, as naturally as can be, but what have we here? I thought 'twas ſomething pull'd down my Breeches: I quite forgot my two poting ſticks, theſe came from London, now any thing is good here that comes from London.

Oliv. I, far fetcht you know.

Sam. But ſpeak in your Conſcience i'faith, have not we as good poting ſticks i'th' Country as need to be put i'th' fire, the mind of a thing is all, and as thou ſaid'ſt even now, far fetch'd are the beſt things for Ladies.

Oliv. I, and for waiting-gentlewomen too.

Sam. But Raph, is our Beer ſowre this Thunder?

Raph. No, no, it holds countenance yet.

Sam. Why then follow me, I'll teach you the fineſt humour to be drunk in, I learn'd it at London laſt week.

Amb. Faith let's hear it, let's hear it.

Sam. The braveſt humour, 'twould do a man good to be drunk in it, they call it knighting in London, when they drink upon their knees.

Amb. Faith that's excellent.

Sam. Come follow me, I'll give you all the degrees of it in order. [Exeunt.

Enter Wife.

Wife. What will become of us? all will away.
My Husband never ceaſes in expence,
Both to conſume his Credit and his Houſe.
And 'tis ſet down by Heavens juſt decree,
That Riots Child muſt needs be Beggery.
Are theſe the Vertues that his Youth did promiſe?
Dice and voluptuous Meetings, midnight Revels,
Taking his Bed with ſurfeits; Ill beſeeming
The ancient honour of his Houſe and Name:
And this not all, but that which kills me moſt,
When he recounts his loſſes and falſe fortunes,
The weakneſs of his ſtate ſo much dejected,
Not as a man repentant, but half mad,
His fortunes cannot anſwer his expence:
He ſits and ſullenly locks up his arms,
Forgetting Heaven, looks downward, which makes
Him appear ſo dreadful, that he frights my heart:
Walks heavily, as if his ſoul were earth;
Not penitent for thoſe his ſins are paſt,

But vext, his money cannot make them laſt:
A fearful melancholy, ungodly ſorrow.
Oh yonder he comes, now in deſpight of ills
I'll ſpeak to him, and I will hear him ſpeak,
And do my beſt to drive it from his heart.

Enter Husband.

Huſ. Pox of the laſt throw, it made
Five hundred Angels vaniſh from my ſight:
I'm damn'd, I'm damn'd, the Angels have forſook me;
Nay 'tis certainly true: for he that has no coyn,
Is damn'd in this world; he's gone, he's gone.
Wife. Dear Husband.
Huſ. Oh! moſt puniſhment of all, I have a Wife.
Wife. I do entreat you, as you love your Soul,
Tell me the cauſe of this your diſcontent.
Huſ. A vengeance ſtrip thee naked, thou art cauſe,
Effect, quality, property, thou, thou, thou. [Exit.
Wife. Bad turn'd to worſe?
Both beggery of the Soul as of the Body,
And ſo much unlike himſelf at firſt,
As if ſome vexed ſpirit had got his form upon him.

Enter Husband again.

He comes again,
He ſays I am the cauſe, I never yet
Spoke leſs than words of duty and of love.
Huſ. If marriage be honourable, then Cuckolds are honourable, for they cannot be made without marriage. Fool, what meant I to marry to get Beggars? Now muſt my eldeſt Son be a Knave or nothing, he cannot live but upo'th' fool, for he will have no Land to maintain him: that mortgage ſits like a ſnaffle upon mine Inheritance, and makes me chaw upon Iron. My ſecond Son muſt be a promoter, and my third a Thief, or an under-putter, a Slave Pander. Oh beggery, beggery, to what baſe uſes doth it put a man. I think the Devil ſcorns to be a Bawd:
He bears himſelf more proudly,
Has more care on his credit.
Baſe, ſlaviſh, abject, filthy poverty.
Wife. Good Sir, by all our vows I do beſeech you,
Shew me the true cauſe of your diſcontent.
Huſ. Money, money, money, and thou muſt ſupply me.
Wife. Alas, I am the leaſt cauſe of your diſcontent.
Yet what is mine, either in Rings or Jewels,
Uſe to your own deſire; but I beſeech you,
As you are a Gentleman by many bloods,
Though I my ſelf be out of your reſpect,
Think on the ſtate of theſe three lovely Boys
You have been Father to.
Huſ. Puh, Baſtards, Baſtards, Baſtards, begot in tricks, begot in tricks.
Wife. Heaven knows how thoſe words wrong me,
But I'll endure theſe griefs among a thouſand more:
Oh call to mind your Lands already mortgag'd,
Your ſelf wound into debts, your hopeful Brother
At the Univerſity into bonds for you,
Like to be ſeiz'd upon. And——
Huſ. Ha' done, thou Harlot,
Whom though for faſhion I married,
I never could abide. Think'ſt thou thy words
Shall kill my pleaſure? fall off to thy friends,
Thou and thy Baſtards beg, I will not bate
A whit in humour: Midnight ſtill I love you,
And revel in your company: curb'd in?
Shall it be ſaid in all ſocieties,
That I broke cuſtom? that I flag'd in money?
No, thoſe thy Jewels I will play as freely,
As when my ſtate was fulleſt.
Wife. Be it ſo.
Huſ. Nay I proteſt, and take that for an earneſt,
He ſpurns her.
I will for ever hold thee in contempt,
And never touch the Sheets that cover thee,
But be divorc'd in Bed, till thou conſent,
Thy dowry ſhall be ſold to give new life
Unto thoſe pleaſures which I moſt affect.
Wife. Sir, do but turn a gentle eye on me,
And what the Law ſhall give me leave to do,
You ſhall command.
Huſ. Look it be done, ſhall I want duſt,
And like a Slave wear nothing in my pockets,
[Holds his Hands in his Pockets.
But my hands to fill them up with nails?
Oh much againſt my blood, let it be done,
I was never made to be a looker on:
A Bawd to Dice; I'll ſhake the Drabs my ſelf,
And make them yield; I ſay, look it be done.
Wife. I take my leave, it ſhall. [Exit.
Huſ. Speedily, ſpeedily, I hate the very hour I choſe a Wife, a trouble, trouble, three Children like three evils hang upon me, fie, fie, fie, ſtrumpet and baſtards, ſtrumpet and baſtards.

Enter three Gentlemen, hearing him.

1 Gent. Still do theſe loathſome thoughts jar on your Tongue?
Your ſelf to ſtain the honour of your Wife,
Nobly deſcended; thoſe whom Men call mad,
Endangers others, but he's more than mad
That wounds himſelf, whoſe own words
Do proclaim it is not fit, I pray forſake it.
2 Gent. Good Sir, let modeſty reprove you.
3 Gent. Let honeſt kindneſs ſway ſo much with you.
Huſ. God den, I thank you, Sir, how do you? adieu, I am glad to ſee you, farewel Inſtructions, Admonitions.
[Exeunt Gent.

Enter a Servant.

How now, ſirrah? what would you?
Ser. Only to certifie you, ſir, that my Miſtreſs was met by the way, by them who were ſent for her up to London by her honourable Uncle, your Worſhips late Guardian.
Huſ. So, Sir, then ſhe is gone, and ſo may you be,
But let her look the thing be done ſhe wots of,
Or Hell will ſtand more pleaſant than her Houſe at home.
[Exit Servant.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gent. Well or ill met, I care not.
Huſ. No, nor I.
Gent. I am come with confidence to chide you.
Huſ. Who me? chide me? do't finely then, let it not move me, for if thou chid'ſt me angry, I ſhall ſtrike.
Gent. Strike thine own follies, for it is they
Deſerve to be well beaten; we are now in private,
There's none but thou and I, thou art fond and peeviſh,
An unclean Rioter, thy Lands and Credit
Lie now both ſick of a conſumption,
I am ſorry for thee; that Man ſpends with ſhame,
That with his Riches doth conſume his Name,
And ſuch art thou.
Huſ. Peace.
Gent. No, thou ſhalt hear me further.
Thy Fathers and fore-fathers worthy Honours,
Which were our Country Monuments, our Grace,
Follies in thee begin now to deface.
The ſpring time of thy youth did fairly promiſe
Such a moſt fruitful ſummer to thy Friends,
It ſcarce can enter into mens beliefs,
Such dearths ſhould hang on thee, we that ſee it,
Are ſorry to believe it: in thy change,

This voice into all places will be hurl'd:
Thou and the Devil has deceiv'd the World.
Huſ. I'll not endure thee.
Gent. But of all the worſt,
Thy virtuous Wife, right honourably allied,
Thou haſt proclaim'd a ſtrumpet,
Huſ. Nay then I know thee,
Thou art her Champion thou, her private friend,
The party you wot on.
Gent. Oh ignoble thought,
I am paſt my patient blood, ſhall I ſtand idle
And ſee my reputation touch'd to death?
Huſ. This has gal'd you, has it?
Gent. No monſter, I prove
My thoughts did only tend to virtuous love.
Huſ. Love of her virtues? there it goes.
Gent. Baſe ſpirit, to lay thy hate upon
The fruitful honour of thine own bed.
[They fight, and the Husband is hurt.
Huſ. Oh.
Gent. Wilt thou yield it yet?
Huſ. Sir, Sir, I have not done with you.
Gent. I hope, nor ne'r ſhall do. [Fight again.
Huſ. Have you got tricks? are you in cunning with me?
Gent. No, plain and right.
He needs no cunning that for truth doth fight.
[Husband falls down.
Huſ. Hard fortune, am I level'd with the ground?
Gent. Now, Sir, you lye at mercy.
Huſ. I, you Slave.
Gent. Alas, that hate ſhould bring us to our Grave,
You ſee, my Sword's not thirſty for your life,
I am ſorrier for your wound, than your ſelf;
Y'are of a virtuous Houſe, ſhew virtuous deeds,
'Tis not your honour, 'tis your folly bleeds:
Much good has been expected in your life,
Cancel not all Mens hopes, you have a Wife,
Kind and obedient, heap not wrongful ſhame
On her and your poſterity: let only ſin be ſore,
And by this fall, riſe never to fall more.
And ſo I leave you. [Exit.
Huſ. Has the Dog left me then,
After his tooth has left me? Oh, my heart
Would fain leap after him, revenge I ſay,
I'm mad to be reveng'd, my ſtrumpet Wife,
It is thy quarrel that rips thus my fleſh,
And makes my breaſt ſpit blood, but thou ſhalt bleed:
Vanquiſh'd? got down? unable e'en to ſpeak?
Surely 'tis want of money makes Men weak,
I, 'twas that o'rthrew me, I'd ne'r been down elſe. [Exit.

Enter Wife in a riding ſute, with a Serving-man.

Ser. Faith, Miſtreſs, if it may not be preſumption
In me to tell you ſo, for his excuſe
You had ſmall reaſon, knowing his abuſe.
Wife. I grant I had, but alas,
Why ſhould our faults at home be ſpread abroad?
'Tis grief enough within doors; at firſt ſight
Mine Uncle could run o'r his prodigal life
As perfectly, as if his ſerious eye
Had numbred all his follies:
Knew of his mortgag'd lands, his friends in bonds,
Himſelf withered with debt; and in that minute
Had I added his uſage and unkindneſs,
'Twould have confounded every thought of good:
Where now, fathering his riots on his youth,
Which time and tame experience will ſhake off,
Gueſſing his kindneſs to me (as I ſmooth'd him
With all the skill I had) though his deſerts
Are in form uglier than an unſhap'd Bear.
He's ready to prefer him to ſome Office
And place at Court: a good and ſure relief
To all his ſtooping fortunes, 'twill be a means, I hope,
To make new league between us, and redeem
His Virtues with his Lands.
Ser. I ſhould think ſo: Miſtreſs, if he ſhould not now be kind to you, and love you, and cheriſh you up, I ſhould think the Devil himſelf kept open houſe in him.
Wife. I doubt not but he will now, prithee leave me, I think I hear him coming.
Ser. I am gone. [Exit.
Wife. By this good means I ſhall preſerve my Lands,
And free my Husband out of Uſurers hands;
Now there is no need of ſale, my Uncle's kind,
I hope, if ought, this will content his mind.
Here comes my Husband.

Enter Husband.

Huſ. Now, are you come? where's the money? let's ſee the money, is the rubbiſh ſold? thoſe wiſe-akers your Lands, why then, the money, where is it? pour it down, down with it, down with it: I ſay pour't on the ground, let's ſee it, let's ſee it.
Wife. Good Sir, keep but in patience, and I hope
My words ſhall like you well, I bring you better
Comfort than the ſale of my Dowry,
Huſ. Ha, what's that?
Wife. Pray do not fright me, Sir, but vouchſafe me hearing. My Uncle, glad of your kindneſs to me and mild uſeage (for ſo I made it to him) hath in pity of your declining fortunes, provided a place for you at Court, of worth and credit; which ſo much overjoyed me——
Huſ. Out on thee, filth, over and over-joyed,
When I'm in torment. [ſpurns her.
Thou politick whore, ſubtiller than nine Devils, was this thy journey to Nunck, to ſet down the hiſtory of me, my ſtate and fortunes:
Shall I, that dedicated my ſelf to pleaſure, be now confin'd in ſervice to crouch, and ſtand like an old man i'th' hams, my Hat off? I that could never abide to uncover my head i'th' Church: baſe ſlut, this fruit bears thy complaints.
Wife. Oh, heaven knows,
That my complaints were praiſes, and beſt words
Of you, and your eſtate; only my friends
Knew of your mortgag'd Lands, and were poſſeſt
Of every accident before I came.
If you ſuſpect it but a plot in me,
To keep my dowry, or for mine own good,
Or my poor Childrens (though it ſuits a mother
To ſhew a natural care in their reliefs)
Yet I'll forget my ſelf to calm your blood,
Conſume it, as your pleaſure counſels you,
And all I wiſh, e'n clemency affords,
Give me but pleaſant looks, and modeſt words.
Huſ. Money, whore, money, or I'll-- [Draws his Dagger.

Enter a Servant haſtily.

What the Devil? how now? thy haſty News?
Ser. May it pleaſe you, Sir.
Huſ. What, may I not look upon my Dagger?
Speak, Villain, or I will execute the point on thee: quick, ſhort.
Ser. Why, Sir, a Gentleman from the Univerſity ſtays below to ſpeak with you.
Huſ. From the Univerſity? ſo, Univerſity,
That long word runs through me. [Exit.
Wife. Was ever Wife ſo wretchedly beſet?
Had not this News ſtep'd in between, the point
Had offered violence unto my breaſt.
That which ſome Women call great miſery,
Would ſhew but little here, would ſcarce be ſeen
Among my miſeries: I may compare
For wretched Fortunes, with all Wives that are,
Nothing will pleaſe him, until all be nothing.

He

He calls it ſlavery to be preferr'd,
A place of credit, a baſe ſervitude.
What ſhall become of me, and my poor Children?
Two here, and one at Nurſe, my pretty beggars,
I ſee how ruine with a palſie hand
Begins to ſhake the ancient ſeat to duſt:
The heavy weight of ſorrow draws my lids
Over my darkiſh eyes: I can ſcarce ſee;
Thus grief will laſt, it wakes and ſleeps with me.

Enter the Husband with the Maſter of the Colledge.

Huſ. Pleaſe you draw near, Sir, y'are exceeding welcome.

Maſt. That's my doubt, I fear I come not to be welcome.

Huſ. Yes, howſoever.

Maſt. 'Tis not my faſhion, Sir, to dwell in long circumſtance, but to be plain and effectual; therefore to the purpoſe.
The cauſe of my ſetting forth was pitious and lamentable; that hopeful young Gentleman your Brother, whoſe virtues we all love dearly, through your default and unnatural negligence, lies in bond executed for your debt, a Priſoner, all his ſtudies amazed, his hope ſtruck dead, and the pride of his youth muffled in theſe dark clouds of oppreſſion.

Huſ. Hum, hum, hum.

Maſt. O you have kill'd the towardeſt hope of all our Univerſity, wherefore without repentance and amends, expect ponderous and ſudden judgments to fall grievouſly upon you; your Brother, a man who profited in his divine imployments, and might have made ten thouſand ſouls fit for heaven, now by your careleſs courſes caſt into priſon, which you muſt anſwer for, and aſſure your ſpirit it will come home at length.

Huſ. O God, oh.

Maſt. Wiſe men think ill of you, others ſpeak ill of you, no man loves you, nay, even thoſe whom honeſty condemns, condemn you: and take this from the virtuous affection I bear your Brother, never look for proſperous hour, good thoughts, quiet ſleep, contented walks, nor any thing that makes man perfect, till you redeem him: what is your anſwer? how will you beſtow him? upon deſperate miſery, or better hopes? I ſuffer till I hear your anſwer.

Huſ. Sir, you have much wrought with me, I feel you in my ſoul, you are your Arts maſter.
I never had ſenſe till now; your ſyllables have cleft me, both for your words and pains I thank you: I cannot but acknowledge grievous wrongs done to my Brother, mighty, mighty, mighty, mighty wrongs,
Within there.

Enter a Servingman.

Huſ. Fill me a bowl of Wine. Alas, poor Brother,
Bruiſed with an execution for my ſake.

Maſt. A bruiſe indeed makes many a mortal ſore,
Till the Grave cure them. [Enter with Wine.

Huſ. Sir, I begin to you, y'ave chid your welcome.

Maſt. I could have wiſht it better for your ſake,
I pledge you, Sir, to the kind man in priſon.

Huſ. Let it be ſo.
Now, Sir, if you pleaſe, to ſpend but a few minutes in walking about my grounds below, my man ſhall here attend you: I doubt not but by that time to be furniſht of a ſufficient anſwer, and therein my Brother fully ſatisfied.

Maſt. Good Sir, in that the Angels would be pleaſed, and the World's murmurs calm'd, and I ſhould ſay, I ſet forth then upon a lucky day. [Exit.

Huſ. O thou confuſed man, thy pleaſant ſins have undone thee, thy damnation has begger'd thee, that heaven ſhould ſay we muſt not ſin, and yet made women: gives our ſenſes way to find pleaſure, which being found, confounds us, why ſhould we know thoſe things ſo much miſuſe us? O would virtue had been forbidden, we ſhould then have proved all virtuous, for 'tis our blood to love what we are forbidden, what man would have been forbidden, what man would have been fool to a beaſt, and zany to a ſwine, to ſhew tricks in the mire, what is there in three Dice, to make a man draw thrice three thouſand acres into the compaſs of a little round table, and with the Gentlemans palſie in the hand ſhake out his poſterity, thieves, or beggars; 'tis done, I have don't i'faith: terrible, horrible miſery,——how well was I left, very well, very well.
My Lands ſhewed like a Full-Moon about me, but now the Moon's in the laſt Quarter, waining, waining, and I am mad to think that Moon was mine; mine and my Fathers, and my Fore-fathers Generations, Generations, down goes the Houſe of us, down, down it ſinks: Now is the name a Beggar, begs in me that name which hundreds of years has made this Shire famous; in me and my poſterity runs out.
In my Seed five are made miſerable beſides my ſelf, my Riot is now my Brothers Jaylor, my Wifes ſighing, my three Boyes penury, and mine own confuſion.
[He tears his Hair.
Why ſit my Hairs upon my curſed Head?
Will not this Poiſon ſcatter them? oh my Brother's
In Execution among Devils that ſtretch him:
And make him give; and I in want,
Not able for to live, nor to redeem him.
Divines and dying men may talk of Hell,
But in my heart her ſeveral torments dwell,
Slavery and miſery. Who in this caſe
Would not take up money upon his Soul?
Pawn his Salvation, live at intereſt:
I, that did ever in abundance dwell,
For me to want, exceeds the throes of Hell.

Enter his little Son, with a Top and Scourge.

Son. What ail you, Father, are you not well, I cannot ſcourge my Top as long as you ſtand ſo: you take up all the room with your wide Legs, puh, you cannot make me afraid with this, I fear no Vizards, nor bugbears.

He takes up the Child by the Skirts of his long Coat in one hand, and draws his Dagger with the other.

Huſ. Up Sir, for here thou haſt no inheritance left.

Son. Oh what will you do, Father, I am your white Boy. [Strikes him.

Huſ. Thou ſhalt be my red Boy, take that.

Son. Oh you hurt me Father.

Huſ. My eldeſt Beggar, thou ſhalt not live to ask an Uſurer bread, to cry at a great mans Gate, or follow, Good your Honour, by a Coach, no, nor your Brother: 'tis Charity to brain you.

Son. How ſhall I learn now my Head's broke?

Huſ. Bleed, bleed, rather than beg, beg. [ſtabs him.
Be not thy names diſgrace:
Spurn thou thy Fortunes firſt, if they be baſe:
Come view thy ſecond Brother: Fates,
My Childrens bloud ſhall ſpin into your Faces,
You ſhall ſee,
How confidently we ſcorn beggery. [Exit with his Son.

Enter a Maid with a Child in her Arms, the Mother by her aſleep.

Maid. Sleep, ſweet Babe, ſorrow makes thy Mother ſleep,
It boads ſmall good when heavineſs falls ſo deep,
Huſh, pretty Boy, thy hopes might have been better,
'Tis loſt at Dice, what ancient honour won,

Hard

Hard when the Father plays away the Son:
Nothing but miſery ſerves in this Houſe,
Ruine and deſolation; oh.

Enter Husband with the Boy bleeding.

Huſ. Whore, give me that Boy.
[He ſtrives with her for the Child.
Maid. Oh help, help, out alas, murder, murder.
Huſ. Are you goſſiping, prating ſturdy queen,
I'll break your clamour with your Neck,
Down ſtairs; tumble, tumble, head long.
[He throws her down.
So, the ſureſt way to charm a Womans Tongue,
Is break her Neck, a Politician did it.
Son. Mother, Mother, I am kill'd, Mother.
[His Wife awakes, and catcheth up the youngeſt.
Wife. Ha, who's that cry'd? O me my Children,
both, both; bloudy, bloudy.
Huſ. Strumpet, let go the Boy, let go the Beggar.
Wife. Oh my ſweet Husband.
Huſ. Filth, Harlot.
Wife. Oh, what will you do, dear Husband?
Huſ. Give me the Baſtard.
Wife. Your own ſweet Boy.
Huſ. There are too many Beggars.
Wife. Good my Husband.
Huſ. Do'ſt thou prevent me ſtill?
Wife. Oh God!
[Stabs at the Child in her arms, and gets it from her.
Huſ. Have at his Heart.
Wife. Oh my dear Boy.
Huſ. Brat, thou ſhalt not live to ſhame thy Houſe.
Wife. Oh Heaven. [She is hurt and ſinks down.
Huſ. And periſh, now be gone,
There's Whores enow, and want would make thee one.

Enter a luſty Servant.

Ser. Oh Sir, what deeds are theſe?
Huſ. Baſe ſlave, my Vaſſall,
Com'ſt thou between my fury to queſtion me?
Ser. Were you the Devil, I would hold you, Sir.
Huſ. Hold me? preſumption, I'll undo thee for it.
Ser. 'Sbloud, you have undone us all, Sir.
Huſ. Tug at thy Maſter?
Ser. Tug at a Monſter.
Huſ. Have I no power? ſhall my Slave Fetter me?
Ser. Nay then the Devil wraſtles, I am thrown.
[Husband overcomes him.
Huſ. Oh Villain, now I'll tug thee, now I'll tear thee,
Set quick Spurs to my Vaſſall, bruiſe him, trample him;
So, I think thou wilt not follow me in haſte.
My Horſe ſtands ready ſadled, away, away,
Now to my Brat at Nurſe, my ſucking Beggar;
Fates, I'll not leave you one to trample on.
[The Maſter meets him.
Maſter. How is't with you Sir, me-thinks you look of a diſtracted colour.
Huſ. Who, I Sir? 'tis but your fancy,
Pleaſe you walk in, Sir, and I'll ſoon reſolve you,
I want one ſmall part to make up the ſumm,
And then my Brother ſhall reſt ſatisfied.
Maſter. I ſhall be glad to ſee it, Sir, I'll attend you.
[Exeunt.
Ser. Oh, I am ſcarce able to heave up my ſelf,
He has ſo bruis'd me with his devilliſh weight,
And torn my fleſh with his bloud-haſty Spur,
A man before of eaſie conſtitution,
Till now Hells power ſupplied, to his Souls wrong,
Oh how damnation can make weak men ſtrong.

Enter Maſter and two Servants.

Ser. Oh the moſt pittious deed, Sir, ſince you came.
Maſter. A deadly greeting; hath he ſumm'd up theſe
To ſatisfie his Brother? here's another,
And by the bleeding Infants, the dead Mother.
Wife. Oh, oh.
Maſter. Surgeons, Surgeons, ſhe recovers life,
One of his men all faint and bloudied.
1 Ser. Follow, our murderous Maſter has took
Horſe to kill his Child at nurſe, oh follow quickly.
Maſter. I am the readieſt, it ſhall be my charge
To raiſe the Town upon him.
[Exit Maſter and Servants.
1 Ser. Good Sir follow him.
Wife. Oh my Children.
1 Ser. How is it my moſt afflicted Miſtreſs?
Wife. Why do I now recover? why half live?
To ſee my Children bleed before mine Eyes,
A ſight, able to kill a Mothers Breaſt without
An Executioner; what, art thou mangled too?
1 Ser. I thinking to prevent what his quick miſchiefs
Had ſo ſoon acted, came and ruſht upon him,
We ſtrugled, but a fouler ſtrength than his
Ore-threw me with his Arms, then he did bruiſe me,
And rent my fleſh, and rob'd me of my Hair,
Like a man mad in Execution,
Made me unfit to riſe and follow him.
Wife. What is it hath beguil'd him of all grace?
And ſtole away humanity from his Breaſt,
To ſlay his Children, purpoſed to kill his Wife,
And ſpoil his Servants.

Enter two Servants.

Both. Pleaſe you leave this accurſed place,
A Surgeon waits within.
Wife. Willing to leave it;
'Tis guilty of ſweet bloud, innocent bloud,
Murder hath took this Chamber with full hands,
And will not out as long as the Houſe ſtands. [Exeunt.

Enter Husband, as being thrown of his Horſe, and falls.

Huſ. Oh ſtumbling Jade, the Spavin overtake thee,
The fifty Diſeaſes ſtop thee:
Oh, I am ſorely bruis'd, Plague founder thee,
Thou run'ſt at eaſe and pleaſure, heart of chance,
To throw me now, within a flight o' th' Town,
In ſuch plain even ground,
'Sfoot, a man may Dice upon it, and throw away the Meadows, ah filthy Beaſt.
Cry within. Follow, follow, follow.
Huſ. Ha? I hear ſounds of men, like Hue and Cry;
Up, up, and ſtruggle to my Horſe, make on,
Diſpatch that little Beggar, and all's done.
Cry within. Here, this way, this way.
Huſ. At my back? oh,
What fate have I, my Limbs deny me to go,
My will is bated, Beggery claims a part,
Oh I could here reach to the Infants heart.

Enter Maſter of the Colledge, three Gentlemen, and others with Halberds.

All. Here, here, yonder, yonder.
Maſter. Unnatural, flinty, more than barbarous,
The Scythians in their marble-hearted fates,
Could not have acted more remorſeleſs deeds
In their relentleſs natures, than theſe of thine:
Was this the anſwer I long waited on,
The ſatisfaction for thy Priſoned Brother?

Huſ.

Huſ. He can have no more of us than our skins,
And ſome of them want but fleaing.
1 Gent. Great ſins have made him impudent.
Maſt. H'as ſhed ſo much blood, that he cannot bluſh.
2 Gent. Away with him, bear him to the Juſtices,
A Gentleman of Worſhip dwells at hand,
There ſhall his deeds be blazed.
Huſ. Why all the better,
My glory 'tis to have my action known,
I grieve for nothing, but I miſt of one.
Maſt. There's little of a father in that grief:
Bear him away. [Exeunt.

Enter a Knight, with two or three Gentlemen.

Knight. Endangered ſo his Wife, murdered his Children?
1 Gent. So the cry goes.
Knight. I am ſorry I e're knew him.
That ever he took life and natural being
From ſuch an honoured ſtock, and fair deſcent,
Till this black minute without ſtain or blemiſh.
1 Gent. Here come the men.

Enter the Maſter of the Colledge, and the reſt with the Priſoner.

Knight. The Serpent of his houſe: I'me ſorry for this time, that I am in place of Juſtice.
Maſt. Pleaſe you, Sir.
Knight. Do not repeat it twice, I know too much,
Would it had ne're been thought on.
Sir, I bleed for you.
1 Gent. Your father's ſorrows are alive in me:
What made you ſhew ſuch monſtrous cruelty?
Huſ. In a word, Sir,
I have conſum'd all, plaid away long acre,
And I thought it the charitableſt deed I could do
To cozen Beggery, and knock my houſe o'th'head.
Knight. I do not think, but in To morrow's judgment,
The terrour will ſit cloſer to your ſoul,
When the dread thought of Death remembers you;
To further which, take this ſad voice from me,
Never was act plaid more unnaturally.
Huſ. I thank you, Sir.
Knight. Go lead him to the Jayl.
Where Juſtice claims all, there muſt pity fail.
Huſ. Come, come, away with me.
[Exit Priſoner.
Maſt. Sir, you deſerve the worſhip of your place,
Would all did ſo, in you the Law is grace.
Knight. It is my wiſh it ſhould be ſo;
Ruinous man, the defolation of his houſe,
The blot upon his Predeceſſor's honour'd name:
That man is neareſt ſhame, that is paſt ſhame. [Exit.

Enter Husband with the Officers, the Maſter and Gentlemen, as going by his Houſe.

Huſ. I am right againſt my houſe, ſeat of my Anceſtors; I hear my Wife's alive, but much endangered; let me intreat to ſpeak with her before the priſon gripe me.

Enter his Wife brought in a Chair.

Gent. See, here ſhe comes of her ſelf.
Wife. O my ſweet husband, my dear diſtreſſed husband, now in the hands of unrelenting Laws, my greateſt ſorrow, my extremeſt bleeding; now my ſoul bleeds.
Huſ. How now? kind to me? did not I wound thee, leave thee for dead?
Wife. Tut, far greater wounds did my breaſt feel,
Unkindneſs ſtrikes a deeper wound than ſteel,
You have been ſtill unkind to me.
Huſ. Faith, and ſo I think I have;
I did my murders roughly out of hand,
Deſperate and ſudden, but thou haſt devis'd
A fine way now to kill me, thou haſt given my eyes
Seven wounds apiece; now glides the Devil from Me, departs at every joint, heaves up my nails.
O catch him new torments, that were ne're invented:
Bind him one thouſand more, you bleſſed Angels,
In that bottomleſs pit, let him not riſe
To make men act unnatural Tragedies,
To ſpread into a Father, and in fury,
Make him his Childrens Executioners,
Murder his Wife, his Servants, and who not?
For that man's dark, where Heaven is quite forgot.
Wife. O my repentant husband!
Huſ. My dear ſoul, whom I too much have wrong'd
For death I die, and for this I have long'd.
Wife. Thou ſhould'ſt not (be aſſured) for theſe faults
Die, if the Law could forgive as ſoon as I.
[Children laid out.
Huſ. What ſight is yonder?
Wife. O our two bleeding Boys
Laid forth upon the threſhold. (crack.
Huſ. Here's weight enough to make a heart-ſtring
O were it lawful that your pretty ſouls
Might look from Heaven into your Father's eyes,
Then ſhould you ſee the penitent glaſſes melt,
And both your murders ſhoot upon my cheeks.
But you are playing in the Angels laps,
And will not look on me,
Who void of grace, kill'd you in beggery.
O that I might my wiſhes now attain,
I ſhould then wiſh you living were again;
Though I did beg with you, which thing I fear'd,
O 'twas the enemy my eyes ſo blear'd.
O would you could pray Heaven me to forgive,
That will unto my end repentant live.
Wife. It makes me e'en forget all other ſorrows,
And leave part with this.
Officer. Come, will you go?
Huſ. I'll kiſs the blood I ſpilt, and then I'll go,
My ſoul is bloodied, well may my lips be ſo.
Farewel, dear Wife, now thou and I muſt part,
I of thy wrongs, repent me with my heart.
Wife. O ſtay, thou ſhalt not go.
Huſ. That's but in vain, you ſee it muſt be ſo.
Farewel ye bloody aſhes of my Boys,
My puniſhments are their eternal joys.
Let every Father look well into his deeds,
And then their Heirs may proſper, while mine bleeds.
[Exit Husband with Officers.
Wife. More wretched am I now in this diſtreſs,
Than former ſorrows made me.
Maſt. O kind Wife, be comforted,
One joy is yet unmurdered,
You have a Boy at nurſe, your joy's in him.
Wife. Dearer than all is my poor husband's life:
Heaven give my body ſtrength, which is yet faint
With much expence of blood, and I will kneel,
Sue for his life, number up all my friends
To plead for pardon for my dear husband's life.
Maſt. Was it in man to wound ſo kind a creature?
I'll ever praiſe a woman for thy ſake.
I muſt return with grief, my anſwer's ſet,
I ſhall bring news weighs heavier than the debt.
Two Brothers; the one in bond lies overthrown,
This on a deadlier execution.
[Exeunt omnes.

THE

THE TRAGEDY OF LOCRINE, THE ELDEST SON OF KING BRUTUS.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Atey with Thunder and Lightning, all in black, with a burning Torch in one hand, and a bloudy Sword in the other hand; and presently let there come forth a Lyon running after a Bear, or any other Beast, then come forth an Archer, who must kill the Lyon in a dumb show, and then depart. Remain Atey.

Atey.

In pœnam sectatur & Umbra.

A Mighty Lyon, Ruler of the Woods,
Of wondrous strength and great proportion,
With hideous noise scaring the trembling Trees,
With yelling clamours shaking all the Earth,
Traverst the Groves, and chac't the wandring Beasts:
Long did he range among the shady Trees,
And drave the silly Beasts before his Face;
When suddenly from out a thorny Bush
A dreadful Archer with his Bow ybent,
Wounded the Lyon with a dismal shaft,
So he him strook, that it drew forth the bloud,
And fill'd his furious heart with fretting ire;
But all in vain he threatneth Teeth and Paws,
And sparkleth fire from forth his flaming Eyes,
For the sharp shaft gave him a mortal wound:
So valiant Brute, the terrour of the World,
Whose only looks did scare his Enemies,
The Archer Death brought to his latest end.
Oh what may long abide above this ground,
In state of bliss and healthful happiness! [Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Brutus carried in a Chair, Locrine, Camber, Albanact, Corineus, Guendelin, Assaracus, Debon, Thrasimachus.

Brutus. Most loyal Lords, and faithful Followers,
That have with me, unworthy General,
Passed the greedy Gulf of th' Ocean,
Leaving the Confines of fair Italy,
Behold, your Brutus draweth nigh his end,
And I must leave you, though against my will;
My sinews shrunk, my numbered senses fail,
A chilling cold possesseth all my Bones,
Black ugly Death with visage pale and wan,
Presents himself before my dazled Eyes,
And with his Dart prepared is to strike:
These Arms, my Lords, these never daunted Arms,
That oft have quell'd the courage of my Foes,
And eke dismay'd my Neighbour's arrogance,
Now yield to Death, o'relaid with crooked Age,
Devoid of strength and of their proper force;
Even as the lusty Cedar worn with years,
That far abroad her dainty odour throws,
'Mongst all the Daughters of proud Lebanon,
This heart, my Lords, this ne're appalled heart,
That was a terror to the bordring Lands,
A doleful scourge unto my neighbour Kings,

Now

Now by the weapons of unpartial Death,
Is clove asunder and bereft of life;
As when the sacred oak with Thunderbolts,
Sent from the fiery circuit of the Heavens,
Sliding along the airs celestial vaults,
Is rent and cloven to the very roots.
In vain therefore I struggle with this foe,
Then welcome Death, since God will have it so.
Assar. Alas my Lord, we sorrow at your case,
And grieve to see your person vexed thus;
But whatsoe're the fates determin'd have,
It lieth not in us to disannul,
And he that would annihilate his mind,
Soaring with Icarus too near the Sun,
May catch a fall with young Bellerophon.
For when the fatal Sisters have decreed
To separate us from this earthly mould,
No mortal force can countermand their minds:
Then, worthy Lord, since there's no way but one,
Cease your laments, and leave your grievous moan.
Corin. Your Highness knows how many victories,
How many Trophies I erected have
Triumphantly in every place we came;
The Grecian Monarch, warlike Pandrassus,
And all the crew of the Mollossians:
Goffarius the arm-strong King of Gauls,
Have felt the force of our victorious Arms,
And to their cost beheld our Chivalrie,
Where e're Ancora handmaid of the Sun,
Where e're the Sun-bright gardiant of the day,
Where e're the joyful day with cheerful Light,
Where e're the Light illuminates the World,
The Trojans glory flies with golden wings,
Wings that do soar beyond fell envious flight,
The fame of Brutus and his followers
Pierceth the skies, and with the skies the throne
Of mighty Jove, Commander of the world,
Then, worthy Brutus, leave these sad laments,
Comfort your self with this your great renown,
And fear not Death, though he seem terrible.
Brutus. Nay, Corineius, you mistake my mind,
In construing wrong the cause of my complaints,
I fear'd not t' yield my self to fatal Death,
God knows it was the least of all my thoughts,
A greater care torments my very Bones,
And makes me tremble at the thought of it,
And in your Lordings doth the substance lie.
Thrasi. Most noble Lord, if ought your Loyal Peers
Accomplish may, to ease your lingring grief,
I in the name of all protest to you,
That we will boldly enterprise the same,
Were it to enter to black Tartarus,
Where triple Cerberus with his venomous throat,
Scareth the Ghosts with high resounding noise,
We'll either rent the bowels of the Earth,
Searching the entrails of the bruitish Earth,
Or with his Ixions overdaring soon,
Be bound in Chains of ever-during Steel.
Bru. Then harken to your Soveraign's latest words,
In which I will unto you all unfold,
Our Royal mind and resolute intent.
When golden Hebe, Daughter to great Jove,
Cover'd my manly Cheeks with youthful Down,
Th'unhappy slaughter of my luckless Sir,
Drove me and old Assarachus mine Eame,
As exiles from the bounds of Italy,
So that perforce we were constrain'd to fly
To Grecians Monarch, noble Pandrassus,
There I alone did undertake your cause,
There I restor'd your antique liberty,
Though Grecia frown'd, and all Mollossia storm'd,
Though brave Antigonus, with martial band,
In pitched field encountred me and mine,
Though Pandrassus and his contributaries,
With all the rout of their confederates,
Sought to deface our glorious memory,
And wipe the name of Trojans from the Earth:
Him did I captivate with this mine Arm,
And by compulsion forc't him to agree
To certain Articles, which there we did propound,
From Grecia through the boisterous Hellespont,
We came into the Fields of Lestrigon,
Whereat our Brother Corineius was;
Which when we passed the Cicilian gulf,
And so transfretting the Illician Sea,
Arrived on the coasts of Aquitain;
Where with an Army of his barbarous Gaules
Goffarius and his Brother Gathelus
Encountring with our host, sustain'd the foil,
And for your sakes my Turnus there I lost:
Turnus that slew six hundred men at Arms,
All in an hour, with his sharp Battle Axe,
From thence upon the stronds of Albion
To Corus Haven happily we came,
And quell'd the Giants, come of Albion's race,
With Gogmagog, Son to Samothens,
The cursed Captain of that damned crew,
And in that Isle at length I placed you.
Now let me see, if my laborious toyles,
If all my care, if all my grievous wounds,
If all my diligence were well employ'd.
Corin. When first I followed thee and thine (brave King)
I hazarded my life and dearest Blood,
To purchase favour at your Princely hands,
And for the same in dangerous attempts
In sundry conflicts, and in divers broyls,
I shew'd the courage of my manly mind:
For this I combated with Gathelus,
The Brother to Goffarius of Gaule:
For this I fought with furious Gogmagog,
A savage Captain of a savage crew:
And for these deeds brave Cornwall I receiv'd,
A grateful gift given by a gracious King;
And for this gift, this life and dearest Blood,
Will Corineius spend for Brutus good.
Deb. And what my Friend, brave Prince, hath vow'd to you,
The same will Debon do unto his end.
Bru. Then, Loyal Peers, since you are all agreed,
And resolute to follow Brutus hosts,
Favour, my Sons, favour those Orphans, Lords,
And shield them from the dangers of their foes.
Locrine, the Column of my Family,
And only Pillar of my weakned age:
Locrine, draw near, draw near unto thy Sire,
And take thy latest blessings at his hands;
And for thou art the eldest of my Sons,
Be thou a Captain to thy Brethren,
And imitate thy aged Fathers steps,
Which will conduct thee to true honours gate:
For if thou follow sacred virtues lore,
Thou shalt be crowned with a Laurel branch,
And wear a wreathe of sempiternal fame,
Sorted amongst the glorious happy ones.
Locrin. If Locrine do not follow your advice,
And bear himself in all things like a Prince
That seeks to amplifie the great renown,
Left unto him for an inheritance
By those that were his Ancestours,
Let me be flung into the Ocean,
And swallowed in the bowels of the Earth.
Or let the ruddy lightning of great Jove,
Descend upon this my devolted head.
[Brutus taking Guendeline by the hand.
Brutus. But for I see you all to be in doubt,
Who shall be matched with our Royal Son,
Locrine, receive this present at my hand:

A gift

A gift more rich than are the wealthy Mines
Found in the Bowels of America.
Thou ſhalt be ſpouſed to fair Guendeline:
Love her, and take her, for ſhe is thine own,
If ſo thy Uncle and her ſelf do pleaſe.
Corin. and herein how your Highneſs honours me,
It cannot now be in my ſpeech expreſt:
For careful Parents glory not ſo much
At their honour and promotion,
As for to ſee the iſſue of their Blood
Seated in honour and proſperity.
Guend. And far be it from my pure Maiden thoughts,
To contradict her aged Fathers will.
Therefore ſince he to whom I muſt obey,
Hath given me now unto your Royal ſelf,
I will not ſtand aloof from off the lure,
Like crafty Dames that moſt of all deny
That, which they moſt deſire to poſſeſs.
[Brutus turning to Locrine,
[Locrine kneeling.
Then now my Son thy part is on the ſtage,
For thou muſt bear the perſon of a King.
[Puts the Crown on his head.
Locrine ſtand up, and wear the regal Crown,
And think upon the ſtate of Majeſty,
That thou with honour well maiſt wear the Crown,
And if thou tendreſt theſe my lateſt words,
As thou requir'ſt my Soul to be at reſt,
As thou deſireſt thine own ſecurity,
Cheriſh and love thy new betrothed wife.
Locrine. No longer let me well enjoy the Crown,
Than I do peerleſs Guendeline.
Brut. Camber.
Cam. My Lord.
Brut. The glory of mine age,
And darling of thy Mother Junoger,
Take thou the South for thy Dominion,
From thee there ſhall proceed a Royal race,
That ſhall maintain the honour of this land,
That ſway the regal ſcepter with their hands.
[Turning to Alabanact.
And Alabanact thy Fathers only joy,
Youngeſt in years, but not the young'ſt in mind,
A perfect pattern of all chivalrie,
Take thou the North for thy Dominion,
A country full of hills and ragged rocks,
Repleniſhed with fierce untamed beaſts,
As correſpondent to thy martial thoughts.
Live long my Sons with endleſs happineſs,
And bear firm concordance among your ſelves,
Obey the counſels of theſe Fathers grave,
That you may better bear out violence,
But ſuddenly through weakneſs of my age,
And the defect of youthful puiſſance,
My Maladie increaſeth more and more,
And cruel Death haſteneth his quickned pace,
To diſpoſſeſs me of my earthly ſhape,
Mine Eyes wax dim, o're-caſt with clouds of age.
The pangs of Death compaſs my crazed bones,
Thus to you all my bleſſings I bequeath,
And with my bleſſings, this my fleeting Soul.
My glaſs is run, and all my miſeries
Do end with life: Death cloſeth up mine Eyes,
My Soul in haſt flies to the Elyſian fields. [He dieth.
Loc. Accurſed ſtars, damn'd and accurſed ſtars,
To abbreviate my noble Father's life,
Hard-hearted gods, and too envious fates,
Thus to cut off my Father's fatal thred,
Brutus that was a glory to us all,
Brutus that was a terror to his foes,
Alas too ſoon by Demagorgon's knife,
The martial Brutus is bereft of life.
No ſad complaints may move juſt Lacus.
Corin. No dreadful threats can fear judge Rhodomanth.
Wert thou as ſtrong as mighty Hercules,
That tam'd the huge monſters of the world,
Plaid'ſt thou as ſweet, on the ſweet ſounding Lute,
As did the ſpouſe of fair Euridice,
That did enchant the waters with his noiſe,
And made the Stones, birds, beaſts, to lead a dance,
Conſtrain'd the hilly trees to follow him,
Thou could'ſt not move the judge of Crebus,
Nor move compaſſion in grim Pluto's heart,
For fatal Mors expecteth all the world,
And every man muſt tread the way of Death,
Brave Tantalus, the valiant Pelops ſire,
Gueſt to the gods, ſuffered untimely Death,
And old Fleithonus Husband to the morn,
And eke grim Minos whom juſt Jupiter
Deign'd to admit unto his ſacrifice,
The thundring trumpets of blood-thirſty Mars.
The fearful rage of fell Tiſiphoen.
The boiſtrous waves of humid Ocean,
Are inſtruments and tools of diſmal Death.
Then noble couſin ceaſe to mourn his chance,
Whoſe age and years were ſigns that he ſhould die.
It reſteth now that we inter his bones,
That was a terror to his Enemies.
Take up his coarſe, and Princes hold him dead,
Who while he liv'd, upheld the Trojan State.
Sound Drums and Trumpets, march to Trinovant,
There to provide our chieftains Funeral. [Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Strumbo above in a gown, with Ink and Paper in his hand, ſaying,

Strum. Either the four Elements, the ſeven Planets and all the particular Stars of the Pole Antaſtick, are adverſitive againſt me, or elſe I was begotten and born in the wain of the Moon, when every thing, as Lactantius in his fourth Book of Conſultations doth ſay, goeth arſward. I Maſters, I, you may laugh, but I muſt weep; you may joy, but I muſt ſorrow; ſhedding ſalt tears from the watry Fountains of my moiſt dainty fair Eyes, along my comely and ſmooth cheeks, in as great plenty as the water runneth from the bucking-tubs, or red wine out of the Hogs-heads: for truſt me, Gentlemen and my very good Friends, and ſo forth: the little god, nay the deſperate god Cuprit, with one of his vengible birds bolts, hath ſhot me unto the heel: ſo not only, but alſo, oh fine phraſe, I burn, I burn, and I burn a, in love, in love, and in love a, ah Strumbo, what haſt thou ſeen, not Dina with the Aſs Tom? Yea with theſe Eyes thou haſt ſeen her, and therefore pull them out: for they will work thy bail. Ah Strumbo, haſt thou heard the voice of the Nightingale, but a voice ſweeter than hers, yea with theſe ears haſt thou heard them, and therefore cut them off, for they have caus'd thy ſorrow. Nay Strumbo, kill thy ſelf, drown thy ſelf, hang thy ſelf, ſtarve thy ſelf. Oh but then I ſhall leave my ſweet heart. Oh my heart! Now pate for thy Maſter, I will dite an aliquant love-piſtle to her, and then ſhe hearing the grand verboſity of my Scripture, will love my preſently.
[Let him write a little, and then read.
My pen is naught, Gentlemen, lend me a knife, I think the more haſte the worſt ſpeed.
[Then write again, and after read.
So it is, Miſtris Dorothie, and the ſole eſſence of my Soul, that the little ſparkles of affection kindled in me towards your ſweet ſelf, hath now increaſed to a great flame, and will e're it be long conſume my poor heart, except you with the pleaſant water of your ſecret Fountain, quench the furious heat of the ſame. Alas, I am a Gentleman of good fame, and name, majeſtical, in apparel comely, in gate portly. Let not therefore your gentle heart be ſo hard, as to deſpiſe a proper tall young man of a handſome life, life, and by despising him, not only but also to kill him Thus expecting time and tide, I bid you farewel. Your Servant, Signior Strumbo.

Oh wit, O pate, O memory, O hand, O Ink, O Paper. Well, now I will send it away. Trompart, Trompart, what a Villain is this? Why Sirrah, come when your Master calls you. Trompart.

[Trompart entring saith

Anon, Sir.

Strumbo. Thou knowest, my pretty Boy, what a good Master I have been to thee ever since I took thee into my service.

Trom. I, Sir.

Strum. And how I have cherished thee always, as if thou hadst been the fruit of my Loyns, Flesh of my Flesh, and Bone of my Bone.

Trom. I, Sir.

Strum. Then shew thy self herein a trusty servant, and carry this Letter to Mistress Dorothy, and tell her.

[Speaking in his Ear.

[Exit Trompart.

Strum. Nay, Masters, you shall see a Marriage by and by. But here she comes. Now must I frame my amorous passions.

Enter Dorothy and Trompart.

Doro. Signior Strumbo, well met, I received your Letters by your man here, who told me a pittiful story of your anguish, and so understanding your passions were so great, I came hither speedily.

Strum. Oh, my sweet and Pigsney, the fecundity of my ingeny is not so great, that may declare unto you the sorrowful sobs, and broken sleeps that I suffered for your sake; and therefore I desire you to receive me into your familiarity.

For your Love doth lie,
As near and as nigh,
Unto my heart within,
As mine Eye to my Nose,
My Leg unto my Hose,
And my Flesh unto my Skin.

Dor. Truly, Mr. Strumbo, you speak too learnedly for me to understand the drift of your mind, and therefore tell your tale in plain terms, and leave off your dark Riddles.

Strum. Alas, Mistress Dorothy, this is my luck, that when I most would, I cannot be understood: so that my great learning is an inconvenience unto me. But to speak in plain terms, I love you, Mistress Dorothy, if you like to accept me into your familiarity.

Dor. If this be all, I am content.

[Turning to the people.

Strum. Say'st thou so, sweet Wench, let me lick thy Toes. Farewel, Mistress. If any of you be in love, provide ye a Cap Case full of new coin'd words, and then shall you soon have the succado de labres, and something else.

[Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Locrine, Guendeline, Camber, Albanact, Corineius, Assarachus, Debon, Thrasimachus.

Locrine. Uncle and Princes of brave Britany,
Since that our noble Father is Entomb'd,
As best beseem'd so brave a Prince as he,
If so you please, this day my Love and I,
Within the Temple of Concordia,
Will solemnize our Royal Marriage.

Thra. Right noble Lord, your subjects every one,
Must needs obey your Highness at command,
Especially in such a cause as this,
That much concerns your Highness great content.

Locr. Then frolick, Lordings, to fair Concords Walls,
Where we will pass the day in Knightly sports,
The night in Dancing and in figured Masks,
And offer to God Risus all our sports.

[Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Ate as before, after a little Lightning and Thundring, let there come forth this show: Perseus and Andromeda, hand in hand, and Cepheus also with Swords and Targets. Then let there come out of another Door Phineus, all black in Armour, with Æthiopians after him, driving in Perseus, and having taken away Andromeda, let them depart. Ate remaining, saying,

Regit omnia numen.

WHen Perseus married fair Andromeda,
The only Daughter of King Cepheus,
He thought he had establisht well his Crown,
And that his Kingdom should for aye endure.
But lo proud Phineus with a Band of men,
Contriv'd of Sun burnt Æthiopians,
By force of Arms the Bride he took from him,
And turn'd their joy into a flood of tears.
So fares it with young Locrine and his Love,
He thinks this marriage tendeth to his weal,
But this foul day, this foul accursed day,
Is the beginning of his miseries.
Behold where Humber and his Scythians
Approacheth nigh with all his Warlike Train,
I need not I, the sequel shall declare,
What tragick chances fell out in this War.

[Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Humber, Hubba, Estrilo, Segar, and their Souldiers.

Hum. At length the Snail doth climb the highest tops,
Ascending up the stately Castle Walls,
At length the Water with continual drops,
Doth penetrate the hardest marble stone,
At length we are arrived in Albion,
Nor could the barbarous Dacian, Soveraign,
Nor yet the Ruler of brave Belgia,
Stay us from cutting over to this Isle;
Whereas I hear a Troop of Phrygians
Under the Conduct of Posthumius Son,
Have pitch'd up Lordly Pavillions,
And hope to prosper in this lovely Isle:
But I will frustrate all their Foolish hope,
And teach them that the Scythian Emperour
Leads Fortune tied in a Chain of Gold;
Constraining her to yield unto his will,
And grace him with their Regal Diadem:
Which I will have, maugre their treble Hosts,
And all the power their petty Kings can make.

Hubba. If she that rules fair Rhamnis golden Gate,
Grant us the honour of the Victory,
As hitherto she always favour'd us,
Right noble Father, we will rule the Land,
Enthronis'd in Seats of Topaz stones,
That Locrine and his Brethren all may know,

None must be King but Humber and his Son.
Hum. Courage my Son, Fortune shall favour us,
And yield to us the Coronet of Bayes,
That decketh none but noble Conquerours:
But what saith Elstrid to these Regions?
How liketh she the temperature thereof?
Are they not pleasant in her gracious Eyes?
Elstr. The Plains, my Lord, garnisht with Flora's wealth,
And overspread with party-coloured Flowers,
Do yield sweet contentation to my mind,
The airy Hills enclos'd with shady Groves,
The Groves replenisht with sweet chirping Birds,
The Birds resounding Heavenly Melody,
Are equal to the Groves of Thessaly,
Where Phœbus with these learned Ladies nine,
Delight themselves with musick Harmony,
And from the moisture of the Mountain tops,
The silent springs dance down with murmuring streams,
And water all the ground with crystal Waves,
The gentle blasts of Eurus modest Wind,
Moving the pittering leaves of Silvane's Woods,
Do equal it with Tempe's Paradise,
And thus comforted all to one effect,
Do make me think these are the happy Isles,
Most fortunate if Humber may them win.
Hubba. Madam, where resolution leads the way,
And courage follows with emboldened pace,
Fortune can never use her Tyranny;
For valiantness is like unto a Rock
That standeth on the Waves of Ocean,
Which though the Billows beat on every side,
And Boreas fell with his tempestuous storms,
Bloweth upon it with a hideous clamour,
Yet it remaineth still unmoveable.
Hum. Kingly resolv'd, thou glory of thy sire:
But worthy Segar, what uncouth novelties
Bring'st thou unto our Royal Majesty?
Seg. My Lord, the youngest of all Brutus Sons,
Stout Albanact, with millions of men,
Approacheth nigh, and meaneth e're the Morn,
To try your force by dint of fatal Sword.
Hum. Tut, let him come with millions of Hosts,
He shall find entertainment good enough,
Yea fit for those that are our Enemies:
For we'll receive them at the Lances points,
And massacre their Bodies with our Blades:
Yea though they were in number infinite,
More than the mighty Babylonian Queen,
Semiramis the ruler of the West,
Brought 'gainst the Emperour of the Scythians,
Yet would we not start back one foot from them:
That they might know we are invincible.
Hub. Now by great Jove the supream King of Heaven,
And the immortal gods that live therein,
When as the Morning shews his chearful Face,
And Lucifer mounted upon his Steed,
Brings in the Chariot of the golden Sun,
I'll meet young Albanact in the open field,
And crack my Launce upon his Burganet,
To try the valour of his Boyish strength:
There will I shew such ruthful spectacles
And cause so great effusion of bloud,
That all his Boyes shall wonder at my strength:
As when the Warlike Queen of Amazon,
Penthesilea armed with her Launce,
Girt with a Corslet of bright shining steel,
Coopt up the faint-heart Grecians in the Camp.
Hum. Spoke like a warlike Knight, my noble Son,
Nay, like a Prince that seeks his Father's Joy.
Therefore to Morrow ere fair Titan shine,
And bashful Eos Messenger of light,
Expels the liquid sleep from out mens Eyes,
Thou shalt conduct the right Wing of the Host,
The left Wing shall be under Segar's charge,
The Rearward shall be under me my self;
And lovely Elstrid fair and gracious,
If Fortune favour me in mine attempts,
Thou shalt be Queen of lovely Albion.
Fortune shall favour me in mine attempts,
And make thee Queen of lovely Albion.
Come let us in and muster up our Train,
And furnish up our lusty Souldiers,
That they may be a Bulwark to our state,
And bring our wished joyes to perfect end.

[Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Strumbo, Dorothy, Trompart, Cobling Shooes, and singing.

Trom. We Coblers lead a merry life:
All. Dan, dan, dan, dan.
Strum. Void of all envy and strife:
All. Dan diddle dan.
Dor. Our ease is great, our labour small:
All. Dan, dan, dan, dan.
Strum. And yet our gains be much withal:
All. Dan diddle dan.
Dor. With this art so fine and fair:
All. Dan, dan, dan, dan.
Trom. No occupation may compare:
All. Dan diddle dan.
Strum. For merry pastime and joyful glee:
Dan, dan, dan, dan.
Dor. Most happy men we Coblers be:
Dan diddle dan.
Trom. The Can stands full of nappy Ale,
Dan, dan, dan, dan.
Strum. In our Shop still withouten fail:
Dan diddle dan.
Dor. This is our meat, this is our food:
Dan, dan, dan, dan.
Trom. This brings us to a merry mood:
Dan diddle dan.
Strum. This makes us work for Company:
Dan, dan, dan, dan.
Dor. To pull the Tankards cheerfully:
Dan diddle dan.
Trom. Drink to thy Husband Dorothy,
Dan, dan, dan, dan.
Dor. Why then my Strumbo there's to thee:
Dan diddle dan.
Strum. Drink thou the rest Trompart amain:
Dan, dan, dan, dan.
Dor. When that is gone, we'll fill't again:
Dan diddle dan.

Cap. The poorest state is farthest from annoy,
How merrily he sitteth on his stool:
But when he sees that needs he must be prest,
He'll turn his note and sing another tune,
Ho, by your leave Master Cobler.
Strum. You are welcome, Gentleman, what will you any old Shooes or Buskins, or will you have your Shooes clouted, I will do them as well as any Cobler in Cathnes whatsoever?

[Captain shewing him Press-money.

O Master Cobler, you are far deceived in me, for don you see this? I come not to buy any Shooes, but to buy your self; come, Sir, you must be a Souldier in the King's Cause.
Strum. Why, but hear you, Sir, has your King any Commission to take any man against his will. I promise you, I can scant believe it, or did he give you Commission?
Cap. O Sir, ye need not care for that, I need no Commission:

miſſion: hold here, I command you in the name of our King Albanact, to appear to morrow in the Town-Houſe of Cathnes.

Strum. King Nactabell, I cry God mercy, what have we to do with him, or he with us? but you Sir Maſter Capontail, draw your Paſtboard, or elſe I promiſe you, I'll give you a Canvaſado with a Baſtinado over your ſhoulders, and teach you to come hither with your implements.

Cap. I pray thee good Fellow be content, I do the Kings Command.

Strum. Put me out of your Book then.

Cap. I may not.

[Strumbo ſnatching up a ſtaff.

No will, come, Sir, will your ſtomach ſerve you, by gogs blew hood and halidom, I will have a bout with you. [Fight both.

Enter Thraſimachus.

Thra. How now, what noiſe, what ſudden clamor's this? How now, my Captain and the Cobler ſo hard at it? Sirs what is your quarrel?

Cap. Nothing, Sir, but that he will not take Preſs-money.

Thra. Here, good Fellow, take it at my command, Unleſs you mean to be ſtretch'd.

Strum. Truly, Maſter Gentleman, I lack no money, if you pleaſe I will reſign it to one of theſe poor Fellows.

Thra. No ſuch matter,
Look you be at the common Houſe to morrow.

[Exit. Thraſimachus and the Captain.

Strum. O Wife I have ſpun a fair thread, if I had been quiet, I had not been preſt, and therefore well may I wayment; But come Sirrah, ſhut up, for we muſt to the Wars. [Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Albanact, Debon, Thraſimachus, and the Lords.

Alb. Brave Cavaliers, Princes of Albany,
Whoſe trenchant Blades with our deceaſed Sire,
Paſſing the Frontiers of brave Grecia,
Were bathed in our Enemies lukewarm bloud,
Now is the time to manifeſt your wills,
Your haughty minds and reſolutions,
Now opportunity is offered
To try your courage and your earneſt zeal,
Which you always proteſt to Albanact,
For at this time, yea at this preſent time,
Stout Fugitives come from the Scythians bounds
Have peſtred every place with mutinies:
But truſt me, Lordings, I will never ceaſe
To perſecute the Raſcal Runnagates,
Till all the Rivers ſtained with their bloud,
Shall fully ſhew their fatal overthrow.

Deb. So ſhall your Highneſs merit great renown,
And imitate your aged Father's ſteps.

Alb. But tell me, Couſin, cam'ſt thou through the plains?
And ſaw'ſt thou there the faint heart Fugitives
Muſtring their weather beaten Souldiers,
What order keep they in their marſhalling?

Thra. After we paſt the Groves of Caledone,
We did behold the ſtragling Scythians Camp,
Repleat with men, ſtor'd with munition;
There might we ſee the valiant minded Knights
Fetching Carriers along the ſpacious plains,
Humber and Hubba arm'd in azure blue,
Mounted upon their Courſers white as Snow,
Went to behold the pleaſant flowring fields;
Hector and Troilus, Priamus, lovely Sons,
Chaſing the Grecians over Simoeis,
Were not to be compared to theſe two Knights.

Alba. Well haſt thou painted out in Eloquence
The Portraiture of Humber and his Son;
As fortunate as was Polycrates,
Yet ſhould they not eſcape our conquering Swords,
Or boaſt of ought but of our Clemency.

Enter Strumbo and Trompart crying often;

Wild-fire and pitch, wild-fire and pitch, &c.

Thra. What Sirs, what mean you by theſe clamors made,
Thoſe outcries raiſed in our ſtately Court?

Strum. Wild-fire and pitch, wild fire and pitch.

Thra. Villains I ſay, tell us the cauſe hereof?

Strum. Wild-fire and pitch, wild-fire and pitch.

Thra. Tell me you Villains, why you make this noiſe,
Or with my Lance, I will prick your Bowels out.

All. Where are your Houſes, where's your dwelling place?

Strum. Place, Ha, ha, ha, laugh a month and a day at him; place! I cry God mercy, why do you think that ſuch poor honeſt men as we be, hold our Habitacles in Kings Palaces: Ha, ha, ha. But becauſe you ſeem to be an abominable Chieftain, I will tell you your ſtate.

From the top to the toe,
From the head to the ſhoe;
From the beginning to the ending.
From the building to the burning.

This honeſt Fellow and I had our manſion Cottage in the Suburbs of this City, hard by the Temple of Mercury. And by the common Souldiers of the Shittens, the Scythians, what do you call them? with all the Suburbs, were burnt to the ground, and the aſhes are left there for the Country Wives to waſh Bucks withal. And that which grieves me moſt, my loving Wife, O cruel ſtriſe; the wicked Flames did roaſt.

And therefore Captain Cruſt,
We will continually cry,
Except you ſeek a remedy,
Our Houſes to re-edify,
Which now are burnt to duſt.

Both cry. Wild-fire and Pitch, Wild-fire and Pitch.

Alba. VVell, we muſt remedy theſe outrages,
And throw revenge upon their hateful Heads,
And you good Fellows for your Houſes burnt,
VVe will remunerate your ſtore of Gold,
And build your Houſes by our Palace Gate.

Strumbo. Gate! O petty Treaſon to my Perſon, no where elſe but by your backſide; Gate! oh how I am vexed in my Coller: Gate! I cry God mercy, do you hear, Maſter King? If you mean to gratifie ſuch poor men, as we be, you muſt build our Houſes by the Tavern.

Alba. It ſhall be done, Sir.

Strum. Near the Tavern, I, by Lady, Sir, it was ſpoken like a good Fellow. Do you hear, Sir? when our Houſe is builded, if you do chance to paſs or re-paſs that way, we will beſtow a Quart of the beſt VVine upon you? [Exit.

Alb. It grieves me, Lordings, that my Subjects goods
Should thus be ſpoiled by the Scythians,
VVho as you ſee with lightfoot Forragers,
Depopulate the places where they come,
But curſed Humber thou ſhalt rue the day
That ere thou cam'ſt unto Cathneſia.

[Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Humber, Hubba, Segar, Truſſier, and their Souldiers.

Hum. Hubba, go take a Coronet of our Horſe,
As many Lanciers, and light-armed Knights,
As may ſuffice for ſuch an enterpriſe,
And place them in the Grove of Chalcedon,
With theſe, when as the skirmiſh doth encreaſe,
Retire thou from the ſhelters of the wood,
And ſet upon the weakned Trojans backs,
For policy joyned with Chivalry,
Can never be put back from Victory.

[Exeunt.

Enter Albanact, Clowns with him.

Alb. Thou baſe born Hunn, how durſt thou be ſo bold,
As once to menace warlike Albanact?
The great Commander of theſe Regions,
But thou ſhalt buy thy raſhneſs with thy Death,
And rue too late thy over-bold attempts,
For with this Sword, this Inſtrument of Death,
That hath been drenched in my Foe-mens Blood,
I'le ſeparate thy Body from thy Head,
And ſet that Coward Blood of thine abroach.

Strum. Nay with this ſtaff great Strumbo's Inſtrument,
I'le crack thy Cockscomb, paltry Scythian.

Hum. Nor wreak I of thy threats thou princox Boy,
Nor do I fear thy fooliſh inſolency,
And but thou better uſe thy bragging blade,
Than thou doſt rule thy overflowing Tongue,
Superbious Britain, thou ſhalt know too ſoon
The force of Humber and his Scythians.

[Let them fight.

[Humber and his Souldiers run in.

Strum. O horrible, terrible.

Scena Sexta.

Sound the Alarm. Enter Humber and his Souldiers.

Hum. How bravely this young Britain, Albanact,
Darteth abroad the Thunderbolts of war,
Beating down millions with his furious mood:
And in his glory triumphs over all,
Moving the maſſie ſquadrants of the ground;
Heap Hills on Hills, to ſcale the ſtarry skie:
As when Briareus armed with an hundred hands,
Flung forth an hundred mountains at great Jove.
And when the monſtrous gyant Monichus
Hurl'd mount Olympus at great Mars his targe,
And ſhot huge Cedars at Minerva's ſhield.
How doth he overlook with haughty front
My fleeting hoſt, and lifts his lofty face
Againſt us all that now do fear his force,
Like as we ſee the wrathful Sea from far,
In a great mountain heapt with hideous noiſe,
With thouſand billows beat againſt the Ships,
And toſs them in the Waves like Tennis Balls.

[Sound the Alarm.

Hum. A me, I fear my Hubba is ſurpris'd.

Sound again. Enter Albanact.

Alba. Follow me, Souldiers, follow Albanact;
Purſue the Scythians flying through the field:
Let none of them eſcape with Victory:
That they may know the Britains force is more
Than all the power of the trembling Hunns.

Thra. Forward, brave Souldiers, forward, keep the chaſe,
He that takes Captive Humber or his Son,
Shall be rewarded with a Crown of gold.

Sound Alarm, then let them fight, Humber give back, Hubba Enters at their backs, and kills Debon, let Strumbo fall down, Albanact run in, and afterwards enter wounded.

Alba. Injurious Fortune, haſt thou croſt me thus?
Thus in the Morning of my Victories,
Thus in the prime of my felicity
To cut me off by ſuch hard overthrow.
Hadſt thou no time thy rancour to declare,
But in the ſpring of all my dignities?
Hadſt thou no place to ſpit thy venome out,
But on the perſon of young Albanact?
I that e're while did ſcare mine Enemies,
And drove them almoſt to a ſhameful flight:
I that e're while full Lyon-like did fare
Amongſt the dangers of the thick throng'd pikes,
Muſt now depart moſt lamentably ſlain
By Humber's Treacheries and Fortunes ſpights:
Curſt by their charms, damn'd be her curſed charms
That doth delude the wayward hearts of men,
Of men that truſt unto her fickle wheel,
Which never leaveth turning upſide down.
O gods, O heavens, allot me but the place
Where I may find her hateful manſion,
I'le paſs the Alps to watry Meroe,
Where fiery Phœbus in his chariot,
The wheels whereof are deckt with Emeralds,
Caſt ſuch a heat, yea ſuch a ſcorching heat,
And ſpoileth Flora of her chequered graſs,
I'le overturn the mountain Caucaſus,
Where fell Chimæra in her triple ſhape,
Rolleth hot Flames from out her monſtrous panch,
Scaring the beaſts with iſſue of her gorge,
I'le paſs the frozen Zone where Icy flakes
Stopping the paſſage of the fleeting Ships
Do lie, like mountains in the congeal'd Sea,
Where if I find that hateful Houſe of Hers,
I'le pull the fickle wheel from out her hands,
And tie her ſelf in everlaſting bands:
But all in vain I breathe theſe threatnings,
The day is loſt, the Hunns are conquerors,
Debon is ſlain, my men are done to Death,
The currents ſwift ſwim violently with Blood,
And laſt, O that this laſt Night ſo long laſt,
My ſelf with wounds paſt all recovery,
Muſt leave my Crown for Humber to poſſeſs.

Strum. Lord have Mercy upon us, Maſters, I think this is a Holy-day, every man lies ſleeping in the fields, but God knows full ſore againſt their wills.

Thra. Fly, noble Albanact, and ſave thy ſelf,
The Scythians follow with great celerity,
And there's no way but fight, or ſpeedy Death,
Flie, noble Albanact, and ſave thy ſelf.

[Sound the Alarm.

Alba. Nay let them flie that fear to die the Death,
That tremble at the name of fatal Mors,
Ne're ſhall proud Humber boaſt or brag himſelf,
That he hath put young Albanact to flight:
And leſt he ſhould triumph at my decay,
This Sword ſhall reave his Maſter of his life,
That oft hath ſav'd his Maſters doubtful life:
But oh my Brethren if you care for me,
Revenge my Death upon his Traiterous Head.

Et vos queis domus eſt nigrantis regia ditis,
Qui regitis rigido ſtygios moderamine lucos:
Nox cæci regina poli furialis Erinnys,

Diique

Diique deæque omnes Albanum tollite regem,
Tollite flumineis undis rigidaque palude
Nunc me fata vocant, hoc condam pectore ferrum.

[Thruſt himſelf through.

Enter Trumpart.

O what hath he done? his noſe bleeds: but I ſmell a Fox,
Look where my Maſter lies, Maſter, Maſter.
Strum. Let me alone, I tell thee, for I am dead.
Trump. Yet one, good, good, Maſter.
Strum. I will not ſpeak, for I am dead, I tell thee.
Trump. And is my Maſter dead?
O ſticks and ſtones, brickbats and bones,
and is my Maſter dead?
O you Cockatrices, and you Bablatrices,
that in the Woods dwell:
You briers and brambles, you Cook-ſhops and ſhambles,
come howl and yell.
With howling and ſcreeking, with wailing and weeping,
come you to lament.
O Colliers of Croyden, and Ruſticks of Royden,
and Fiſhers of Kent.
For Strumbo the Cobler, the fine merry Cobler
of Cathnes Town:
At this ſame ſtoure, at this very hour
lies dead on the ground.
O Maſter, thieves, thieves, thieves.
Strum. Where be they? cox me tunny, bobekin, let me be riſing, be gone, we ſhall be robb'd by and by.

Scena Octava.

Enter Humber, Hubba, Segar, Thraſſier, Eſtrild, and the Souldiers.

Hum. Thus from the dreadful ſhocks of furious Mars's
Thundring Alarms, and Rhamnuſia's Drum
We are retired with joyful Victory,
The ſlaughter'd Trojans ſqueltring in their blood,
Infect the air with their carcaſſes,
And are a prey for every ravenous bird.
Eſtrild. So periſh they that are our enemies.
So periſh they that love not Humber's weal.
And mighty Jove, Commander of the World,
Protect my love from all falſe treacheries.
Hum. Thanks, lovely Eſtrild, ſolace to my ſoul,
But, valiant Hubba, for thy Chivalry
Declar'd againſt the men of Albany,
Loe here a flowring Garland wreath'd of Bay,
As a reward for this thy forward mind.
[Set it on his head.
Hub. This unexpected honour, noble Sire,
Will prick my courage unto braver deeds,
And cauſe me to attempt ſuch hard exploits,
That all the world ſhall ſound of Hubba's name.
Hum. And now, brave Souldiers, for this good ſucceſs,
Carouſe whole cups of Amazonian Wine,
Sweeter than Nectar or Ambroſia,
And caſt away the clods of curſed care,
With Goblets crown'd with Semeleius gifts,
Now let us march to Abis ſilver ſtreams,
That clearly glide along the Champane fields,
And moiſt the graſſie meads with humid drops.
Sound Drums and Trumpets, ſound up cheerfully,
Sith we return with joy and victory.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Ate as before. The dumb ſhow. A Crocodile ſitting on a rivers bank, and a little Snake ſtinging it. Then let both of them fall into the water.

Ate. Celera in authorem cadunt.
SHigh on a bank by Nilus boiſterous ſtreams,
Fearfully ſat th'Egyptian Crocodile,
Dreadfully grinding in her ſharp long teeth,
The broken bowels of a ſilly fiſh,
His back was arm'd againſt the dint of ſpear,
With ſhields of braſs that ſhin'd like burniſht gold,
And as he ſtretched forth his cruel paws,
A ſubtil Adder creeping cloſely near,
Thruſting his forked ſting into his claws,
Privily ſhed his poiſon through his bones,
Which made him ſwell that there his bowels burſt,
That did ſo much in his own greatneſs truſt.
So Humber having conquered Albanact,
Doth yield his glory unto Locrine's ſword.
Mark what enſues, and you may eaſily ſee,
That all our life is but a Tragedy. [Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Locrine, Guendeline, Corineius, Aſſaracus, Thraſimachus, Camber.

Locrine. And is this true, is Albanactus ſlain?
Hath curſed Humber with his ſtragling Hoſt,
With that his Army made of Mungrel Currs,
Brought our redoubted Brother to his end?
O that I had the Thracian Orpheus harp,
For to awake out of the infernal ſhade
Thoſe ugly Devils of black Erebus,
That might torment the damned Traitor's ſoul:
O that I had Amphion's inſtrument
To quicken with his vital notes and tunes
The flinty joints of every ſtony rock,
By which the Scythians might be puniſhed;
For, by the lightning of almighty Jove,
The Hunn ſhall die, had he ten thouſand lives:
And would to God he had ten thouſand lives,
That I might with the arm-ſtrong Hercules
Crop off ſo vile an Hydra's hiſſing heads.
But ſay me, Couſin, for I long to hear,
How Albanact came by untimely death?
Thraſi. After the traiterous Hoſt of Scythians
Entred the field with Martial equipage,
Young Albanact, impatient of delay,
Led forth his Army 'gainſt the ſtragling mates,
Whoſe multitude did daunt our Souldiers minds,
Yet nothing could diſmay the froward Prince;
But with a courage moſt heroical,
Like to a lion 'mongſt a flock of lambs,
Made havock of the faint-heart fugitives,
Hewing a paſſage through them with his ſword;
Yea we had almoſt given them the repulſe,
When ſuddenly from out the ſilent wood
Hubba with twenty thouſand Souldiers,
Cowardly came upon our weakned backs,
And murthered all with fatal maſſacre;
Amongſt the which old Debon, Martial Knight,
With many wounds was brought unto the death:
And Albanact oppreſt with multitude,
Whilſt valiantly he feld his enemies,
Yielded his life and honour to the duſt,
He being dead, the Souldiers fled amain,

And I alone eſcaped them by flight,
To bring you Tidings of theſe accidents.
Locr. Not aged Priam King of ſtately Troy,
Grand Emperour of barbarous Aſia,
When he beheld his noble minded Sons
Slain traiterouſly by all the Mirmidons,
Lamented more than I for Albanact.
Guen. Not Hecuba the Queen of Ilium,
When ſhe beheld the town of Pergamus,
Her palace burnt, with all-devouring flames,
Her fifty Sons and Daughters freſh of hue,
Murthered by the wicked Pyrrhus bloody Sword,
Shed ſuch ſad tears as I for Albanact.
Cam. The grief of Niobe fair Athens Queen,
For her ſeven Sons magnanimous in field,
For her ſeven Daughters fairer than the faireſt,
Is not to be compar'd with my laments.
Cor. In vain you ſorrow for the ſlaughtered Prince,
In vain you ſorrow for his overthrow;
He loves not moſt that doth lament the moſt,
But he that ſeeks to venge the injury.
Think you to quell the Enemies warlike train,
With childiſh ſobs and womaniſh laments?
Unſheath your Swords, unſheath your conquering Sword?
And ſeek revenge, the comfort for this ſore:
In Cornwall where I hold my Regiment,
Even juſt ten thouſand valiant men at Arms
Hath Corineius ready at command;
All theſe and more, if need ſhall more require,
Hath Corineius ready at command.
Cam. And in the fields of martial Cambria,
Cloſe by the boiſtrous Iſca's Silver ſtreams,
Where light foot Fairies skip from bank to bank,
Full twenty thouſand brave couragious Knights
Well exercis'd in feats of Chivalrie;
In manly manner moſt invincible,
Young Camber hath with gold and victual;
All theſe and more, if need ſhall more require,
I offer up to venge my Brothers Death.
Loy. Thanks, loving Uncle, and good Brother too,
For this revenge; for this ſweet word Revenge
Muſt eaſe and ceaſe my wrongful injuries;
And by the Sword of bloody Mars I ſwear,
Ne're ſhall ſweet quiet enter this my front,
'Till I be venged on his traiterous Head
That ſlew my noble Brother Albanact.
Sound Drums and Trumpets, muſter up the camp,
For we will ſtraight march to Albania.

[Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Humber, Eſtrild, Hubba, Truſſier, and the Souldiers.

Hum. Thus are we come, victorious Conquerour:
Unto the flowing currents Silver ſtreams,
Which, in memorial of our victory,
Shall be agnominated by our name,
And talked of by our poſterity:
For ſure I hope before the golden Sun
Poſteth his Horſes to fair Thetis plains,
To ſee the waters turned into blood,
And change his blewiſh hue to rueful red,
By reaſon of the fatal maſſacre,
Which ſhall be made upon the virent plains.

Enter the Ghoſt of Albanact.

See how the Traitor doth preſage his harm,
See how he glories at his own decay,
See how he triumphs at his proper loſs.
O Fortune vile, unſtable, fickle, frail!
Hum. Methinks I ſee both Armies in the field,
The broken lances climb the Cryſtal skies,
Some headleſs lie, ſome breathleſs on the ground,
And every place is ſtrew'd with carcaſſes,
Behold the graſs hath loſt his pleaſant green,
The ſweeteſt ſight that ever might be ſeen.
Ghoſt. I, Traiterous Humber, thou ſhalt find it ſo,
Yea to thy coſt thou ſhalt the ſame behold,
With anguiſh, ſorrow, and with ſad laments;
The graſſie plains, that now do pleaſe thine Eyes,
Shall e're the night be coloured all with blood;
The ſhadie groves that now incloſe thy camp,
And yield ſweet ſavour to thy damned corps,
Shall e're the night be figured all with blood;
The profound ſtream that paſſeth by thy Tents,
And with his moiſture ſerveth all thy Camp,
Shall e're the Night converted be to Blood,
Yea with the Blood of thoſe thy ſtragling Boys:
For now revenge ſhall eaſe my lingring grief,
And now revenge ſhall glut my longing Soul.
Hub. Let come what will, I mean to bear it out,
And either live with glorious victorie,
Or die with fame renown'd for chivalrie:
He is not worthy of the honey comb,
That ſhuns the hives becauſe the bees have ſtings;
That likes me beſt that is not got with eaſe,
Which thouſand dangers do accompany;
For nothing can diſmay our Regal mind;
Which aims at nothing but a golden Crown,
The only upſhot of mine enterpriſes.
Were they inchanted in grim Pluto's Court,
And kept for treaſure 'mongſt his helliſh crew,
I would either quell the triple Cerberus
And all the Army of his hateful hags,
Or roll the Stone with wretched Syſiphus.
Hum. Right martial by thy thoughts, my noble Son,
And all thy words ſavour of Chivalrie,
But, warlike Segar, what ſtrange accidents
Make you to leave the warding of the Camp?
Segar. To armes, my Lord, to honourable arms;
Take helm and targe in hand, the Britains come
With greater multitude than erſt the Greeks
Brought to the ports of Phrygian Tenedos.
Hum. But what ſaith Segar to theſe accidents?
What Counſel gives he in extremities?
Segar. Why this, my Lord, experience teacheth us,
That Reſolution is a ſole help at need.
And this, my Lord, our honour teacheth us,
That we be bold in every enterpriſe;
Then ſince there is no way but fight or die,
Be reſolute, my Lord, for Victory.
Hum. And reſolute, Segar, I mean to be,
Perhaps ſome bliſful Star will favour us,
And comfort bring to our perplexed State:
Come let us in and fortifie our Camp,
So to withſtand their ſtrong invaſion.

[Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Strumbo, Trumpart, Oliver, and his Son William following them.

Strum. Nay neighbour Oliver, if you be ſo whot, come prepare your ſelf, your ſhall find two as ſtout fellows of us, as any in all the North.
Oliver. No by my dorth Neighbour Strumbo, Ich zee dat you are a man of ſmall zideration, dat will zeek to injure your old vreends, one of your vamiliar gueſts, and derefore zeeing your pinion is to deal withouten reazon,

Ich

Ich and my zonne William will take dat courſe, dat ſhall be fardeſt vrom reaſon; how zay you, will you have my Daughter or no?

Strumbo. A very hard queſtion, Neighbour, but I will ſolve it as I may: what reaſon have you to demand it of me?

Will. Marry Sir, what reaſon had you when my Siſter was in the barn to tumble her upon the Hay, and to fiſh her Belly.

Strum. Maſs thou ſay'ſt true; well, but would you have me marry her therefore? No, I ſcorn her, and you, and you: I, I ſcorn you all.

Oliv. You will not have her then?

Strum. No, as I am a true Gentleman.

Will. Then will we School you, e're you and we part hence.

Enter Margerie, and ſnatches the ſtaff out of her Brothers hand as he is fighting.

Strum. I, you come in pudding time, or elſe I had dreſt them.

Mar. You Maſter ſawce-box, Lobcock, Cocks-comb, you ſlopſawce, lickfingers, will you not hear?

Strum. Who ſpeak you to, me?

Mar. I Sir, to you, John lackhoneſty, little-wit, is it you that will have none of me?

Strum. No by my troth, Miſtreſs nicebice, how fine you can nick-name me; I think you were brought up in the Univerſity of Bridewell, you have your Rhetorick ſo ready at your Tongues end, as if you were never well warned when you were young.

Mar. Why then goodman cods-head, if you will have none of me, farewel.

Strum. If you be ſo plain, Miſtreſs driggle-draggle, fare you well.

Mar. Nay, Maſter Strumbo, e're you go from hence we muſt have more words, you will have none of me?

[They both Fight.

Strum. Oh my head, my head, leave, leave, leave, I will, I will, I will.

Mar. Upon that condition I let thee alone.

Oliv. How now Maſter Strumbo, hath my Daughter taught you a new leſſon?

Strum. I but hear you, goodman Oliver, it will not be for my eaſe to have my head broken every day, therefore remedy this, and we ſhall agree.

Oliv. Well, Zon, well, for you are my Zon now, all ſhall be remedied; Daughter be friends with him.

[Shake hands.

Strum. You are a ſweet Nut, the Devil crack you. Maſters, I think it be my luck, my firſt wife was a loving quiet wench, but this I think would weary the Devil. I would ſhe might be burnt as my other VVife was; if not, I muſt run to the Halter for help. O Codpiece, thou haſt undone thy Maſter, this it is to be medling with warm plackets.

[Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Locrine, Camber, Corineius, Thraſimachus, Aſſarachus.

Locri. Now am I guarded with an hoſt of men,
VVhoſe haughty courage is invincible;
Now am I hemm'd with troups of Souldiers,
Such as might force Bellona to retire,
And make her tremble at their puiſſance;
Now ſit I like the mighty god of war,
VVhen armed with his Coat of Adamant,
Mounted his Chariot drawn with mighty Bulls,
He drove the Argives over Xanthus ſtreams.
Now, curſed Humber, doth thy end draw nigh,
Down goes the glory of his victories,
And all his fame, and all his high renown,
Shall in a moment yield to Locrine's Sword:
Thy bragging banners croſt with argent ſtreams,
The ornaments of thy pavillions,
Shall all be captivated with this hand,
And thou thy ſelf at Albanactus Tomb
Shalt offered be, in ſatisfaction
Of all the wrongs thou didſt him when he liv'd.
But canſt thou tell me, brave Thraſimachus,
How far we are diſtant from Humber's Camp?

Thra. My Lord, within your foul accurſed Grove
That bears the tokens of our overthrow,
This Humber hath intrencht his damned Camp.
March on, my Lord, becauſe I long to ſee
The treacherous Scythians ſqueltring in their gore.

Locri. Sweet Fortune, favour Locrine with a ſmile,
That I may venge my noble Brothers Death,
And in the midſt of ſtately Troinovant,
I'le build a Temple to thy deitie
Of perfect Marble, and of Jacinth Stones,
That it ſhall paſs the high Pyramids,
VVhich with their top ſurmount the firmament.

Cam. The arm ſtrong off-ſpring of the doubted Knight,
Stout Hercules Alcmenas, mighty Son,
That tam'd the monſters of the three-fold world,
And rid the oppreſſed from the tyrants yokes,
Did never ſhew ſuch valiantneſs in fight,
As I will now for noble Albanact.

Cori. Full fourſcore years hath Corineius liv'd,
Sometimes in war, ſometime in quiet peace,
And yet I feel my ſelf to be as ſtrong
As erſt I was in Summer of mine age,
Able to toſs this great unweildy Club,
VVhich hath been painted with my foe-mens brains;
And with this Club I'le break the ſtrong array
Of Humber and his ſtragling Souldiers,
Or loſe my life amongſt the thickeſt preſs,
And die with Honour in my lateſt dayes:
Yet e're I die they all ſhall underſtand,
VVhat force lies in ſtout Corineius hand.

Thra. And if Thraſimachus detract the fight,
Either for weakneſs or for cowardiſe,
Let him not boaſt that Brutus was his Eame,
Or that brave Corineius was his Sire.

Locri. Then courage, Souldiers, firſt for your ſafety,
Next for your peace, laſt for your Victory.

[Exeunt.

Sound the Alarm. Enter Hubba and Segar at one Door, and Corineus at the other.

Cori. Art thou that Humber, Prince of Fugitives,
That by thy Treaſon ſlew'ſt young Albanact?

Hub. I am his Son that ſlew young Albanact,
And if thou take not heed, proud Phrygian,
I'le ſend thy Soul unto the Stygian lake,
There to complain of Humber's injuries.

Corin. You triumph, Sir, before the Victory,
For Corineius is not ſo ſoon ſlain.
But, curſed Scythians, you ſhall rue the day,
That e're you came into Albania.
So periſh they that envy Britains wealth,
So let them die with endleſs infamy,
And he that ſeeks his Soveraigns overthrow,
VVould this my Club might aggravate his woe.

[Strikes them both down with his Club.

Enter

Enter Humber.

Hum. Where may I find ſome deſart Wilderneſs,
Where I may breathe out curſes as I would,
And ſcare the earth with my condemning voice,
Where every echoes repercuſſion
May help me to bewail mine overthrow,
And aid me in my ſorrowful laments?
Where may I find ſome hollow uncouth rock,
Where I may damn, condemn, and ban my fill?
The heavens, the hell, the earth, the air, the fire,
And utter curſes to the concave sky,
Which may infect the aiery Regions,
And light upon the Britain Locrine's head.
You ugly ſpirits that in Cocitus mourn,
And gnaſh your teeth with dolorous laments,
Your fearful dogs that in black Lethe howl,
And ſcare the Ghoſts with your wide open throats,
You ugly Ghoſts that flying from theſe dogs,
Do plunge your ſelves in Puryflegiton,
Come all of you, and with your ſhrieking notes
Accompany the Britains conquering Hoaſt.
Come fierce Erinnys, horrible with Snakes,
Come ugly Furies, armed with your Whips,
You threefold judges of black Tartarus,
And all the army of your helliſh Fiends,
With new found torments rack proud Locrine's Bones.
O Gods and Stars, damn'd be the Gods and Stars,
That did not drown me in fair Thetis plains.
Curſt be the Sea that with outragious Waves,
With ſurging Billows did not rive my Ships
Againſt the Rocks of high Cerannia,
Or ſwallowed me into her watry Gulf.
Would God he had arriv'd upon the Shore
Where Polyphemus and the Cyclops dwell,
Or where the bloody Anthropophagie
With greedy jaws devours the wandring Wights.

Enter the Ghoſt of Albanact.

But why comes Albanact's bloody Ghoſt,
To bring a corſive to our miſeries!
Is't not enough to ſuffer ſhameful flight,
But we muſt be tormented now with Ghoſts?
With apparitions fearful to behold?
Ghoſt. Revenge, revenge for blood.
Hum. So nought will ſatisfie your wandring Ghoſt,
But dire revenge, nothing but Humber's fall,
Becauſe he conquered you in Albany.
Now by my Soul, Humber would be condemn'd
To Tantals Hunger, or Ixion's Wheel,
Or to the vulture of Prometheus,
Rather than that this murther were undone.
When as I dye I'll drag thy curſed Ghoſt
Through all the Rivers of foul Erebus,
Through burning ſulphur of the Limbo-lake,
To allay the burning fury of that heat,
That rageth in mine everlaſting Soul.

[Exeunt.

Alba. Ghoſt. Vindicta, vindicta.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Ate as before. Then Omphale Daughter to the King of Lydia, having a Club in her hand, and a Lyons ſkin on her back, Hercules following with a diſtaffe. Then let Omphale turn about, and taking of her Pantofle, ſtrike Hercules on the Head, then let them depart, Ate remaining, ſaying;

Quem non Argolici mandata ſevera Tyranni,
Non potuit Juno vincere, vicit amor.

Stout Hercules the mirrour of the World,
Son to Alcmena and great Jupiter,
After ſo many Conqueſts won in Field,
After ſo many Monſters quell'd by force,
Yielded his valiant heart to Omphale,
A fearful Woman void of manly ſtrength,
She took the Club, and wore the Lyons skin.
He took the Wheel, and maidenly gan ſpin.
So Martial Locrine cheer'd with victory,
Falleth in love with Humber's Concubine,
And ſo forgetteth peerleſs Guendeline.
His Uncle Corineius ſtorms at this,
And forceth Locrine for his grace to ſue,
Lo here the ſumm, the proceſs doth enſue.

[Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Locrine, Camber, Corineius, Aſſarachus, Thraſimachus, and the Souldiers.

Thus from the fury of Bellona's broils,
With ſound of Drum and Trumpets melody,
The Britain King returns triumphantly,
The Scythians ſlain with great occiſion,
Do equalize the graſs in multitude,
And with their blood have ſtain'd the ſtreaming brooks,
Offering their Bodies and their deareſt Blood
As ſacrifice to Albanactus Ghoſt,
Now curſed Humber haſt thou paid thy due,
For thy deceits and crafty treacheries,
For all thy guiles, and damned ſtratagems,
With loſs of life, and everduring ſhame.
Where are thy Horſes trap'd with burniſh'd gold,
Thy trampling Courſers rul'd with foaming bits?
Where are thy ſoldiers ſtrong and numberleſs?
Thy valiant Captains, and thy noble Peers;
Even as the Country Clowns with ſharpeſt Scythes,
Do mow the withered graſs from off the earth,
Or as the Plough man with his piercing ſhare
Renteth the bowels of the fertile Fields,
And rippeth up the roots with Razors keen.
So Locrine with his mighty curtle-axe,
Hath cropped off the heads of all thy Hunns,
So Locrine's Peers have daunted all thy Peers,
And drove thine Hoaſt unto confuſion,
That thou may'ſt ſuffer penance for thy fault,
And die for murdering valiant Albanact.
Cori. And thus, yea thus, ſhall all the reſt be ſerv'd,
That ſeek to enter Albion 'gainſt our wills.
If the brave Nation of the Troglodites,
If all the coal-black Æthiopians,
If all the forces of the Amazons,
If all the Hoaſts of the Barbarian Lands,
Should dare to enter this our little VVorld,
Soon ſhould they rue their overbold attempts,
That after us our Progeny may ſay,
There lyes the Beaſts that ſought to uſurp our Land.

Loc.

Loc. I, they are beasts that seek to usurp our Land,
And like to brutish beasts they shall be serv'd.
For mighty Jove, the supreme King of Heaven,
That guides the concourse of the Meteors,
And rules the motion of the azure Sky,
Fights always for the Britains safety.
But stay, methinks I hear some shrieking noise,
That draweth near to our Pavillion.

Enter the Souldiers leading in Estrild.

Estr. What Prince soe're adorn'd with golden Crown,
Doth sway the Regal Scepter in his hand:
And thinks no chance can ever throw him down,
Or that his state shall everlasting stand,
Let him behold poor Estrild in this plight,
The perfect platform of a troubled wight.
Once was I guarded with mavortial bands,
Compact with Princes of the noble Blood,
Now am I faln into my foe-mens hands,
And with my death must pacifie their mood.
O life the harbour of calamities,
O death the haven of all miseries,
I could compare my sorrows to thy woe,
Thou wretched Queen of wretched Pergamus,
But that thou viewd'st thy enemies overthrow,
Nigh to the rock of high Caphareus.
Thou saw'st their death, and then departed'st thence.
I must abide the Victors insolence.
The Gods that pitied thy continual grief,
Transform'd thy Corps, and with thy Corps thy care,
Poor Estrild lives despairing of relief,
For friends in trouble are but few and rare.
What, said I, few? I, few or none at all,
For cruel death made havock of them all.
Thrice happy they whose fortune was so good,
To end their lives, and with their lives their woes,
Thrice hapless I, whom Fortune so withstood,
That cruelly she gave me to my foes.
O Souldiers, is there any misery
To be compar'd to Fortunes treachery.

Loc. Camber, this same should be the Scythian Queen.

Camb. So may we judge by her lamenting words.

Loc. So fair a Dame mine eyes did never see,
With flouds of woes she seems o'rewhelm'd to be.

Camb. O Locrine, hath she not a cause for to be sad?

[Locrine at one side of the Stage.

Loc. If she have cause to weep for Humber's death,
And shed salt tears for her overthrow:
Locrine may well bewail his proper grief,
Locrine may move his own peculiar woe,
He being conquer'd, died a speedy death,
And felt not long his lamentable smart,
I being a Conquerour, live a lingring life,
And feel the force of Cupid's sudden stroke.
I gave him cause to die a speedy death.
He left me cause to wish a speedy death.
O that sweet face painted with Nature's dye,
Those roseal cheeks mixt with a snowy white,
That decent neck surpassing Ivory,
Those comely breasts which Venus well might spite,
Are like to snares which wily fowlers wrought,
Wherein my yielding heart is prisoner caught.
The golden tresses of her dainty hair,
Which shine like Rubies glittering with the Sun,
Have so entrapt poor Locrine's love-sick heart,
That from the same no way it can be won.
How true is that which oft I heard declar'd,
One dram of joy must have a pound of care.

Estr. Hard is their fall, who from a golden Crown
Are cast into a Sea of wretchedness.

Loc. Hard is their thrall, who by Cupid's frown
Are wrapt in waves of endless carefulness.

Estr. O Kingdom, object to all miseries.

Loc. O Love, the extream'st of all extremities.

[Let him go into his Chair.

Sold. My Lord, in ransacking the Scythian Tents,
I found this Lady, and to manifest
That earnest zeal I bear unto your Grace,
I here present her to your Majesty.

Another Sold. He lies, my Lord, I found the Lady first,
And here present her to your Majesty.

1 Sold. Presumptuous Villain, wilt thou take my prize?

2 Sold. Nay rather thou depriv'st me of my right.

3 Sold. Resign thy Title (cative) unto me,
Or with my Sword I'll pierce thy Cowards loins.

2 Sold. Soft words, good Sir, 'tis not enough to speak:
A barking Dog doth seldom strangers bite.

Loc. Unreverent Villains, strive you in our sight?
Take them hence, Jaylor, to the Dungeon,
There let them lie and try their quarrel out.
But thou, fair Princess, be no whit dismay'd,
But rather joy that Locrine favours thee.

Estr. How can he favour me that slew my Spouse?

Loc. The chance of war (my love) took him from thee.

Estr. But Locrine was the causer of his death.

Loc. He was an Enemy to Locrine's State,
And slew my noble Brother Albanact.

Estr. But he was link'd to me in Marriage-bond,
And would you have me love his slaughterer?

Loc. Better to live, than not to live at all.

Estr. Better to die renowned for chastity,
Than to live with shame and endless infamy.
What would the common sort report of me,
If I forget my love, and cleave to thee?

Loc. Kings need not fear the vulgar sentences.

Estr. [illegible] Ladies must regard their honest name.

Loc. [illegible] a shame to live in Marriage bonds?

Estr. No, but to be a Strumpet to a King.

Loc. If thou wilt yield to Locrine's burning love,
Thou shalt be Queen of fair Albania.

Estr. But Guendeline will undermine my State.

Loc. Upon mine Honour, thou shalt have no harm.

Estr. Then lo, brave Locrine, Estrild yields to thee,
And by the Gods, whom thou dost invocate,
By the dread Ghost of thy deceased Sire,
By thy right hand, and by thy burning love,
Take pity on poor Estrild's wretched thrall.

Cori. Hath Locrine then forgot his Guendeline,
That thus he courts the Scythians Paramour?
What, are the words of Brute so soon forgot?
Are my deserts so quickly out of mind?
Have I been faithful to thy Sire now dead?
Have I protected thee from Humber's hand,
And do'st thou quit me with ungratitude?
Is this the guerdon for my grievous wounds?
Is this the honour for my labours past?
Now by my Sword, Locrine, I swear to thee,
This injury of thine shall be repaid.

Loc. Uncle, scorn you your Royal Soveraign,
As if we stood for cyphers in the Court?
Upbraid you me with those your benefits?
Why, it was a Subject's duty so to do.
What you have done for our deceased Sire
We know, and all know, you have your reward.

Cori. Avant, proud Princox, brav'st thou me withal,
Assure thy self, though thou be Emperour,
Thou ne're shalt carry this unpunished.

Camb. Pardon my Brother, noble Corineus,
Pardon this once, and it shall be amended.

Assar. Cousin, remember Brutus latest words,
How he desired you to cherish them:
Let not this fault so much incense your mind,
Which is not yet passed all remedy.

Cori.

Cori. Then Locrine, lo I reconcile my ſelf,
But as thou lov'ſt thy life, ſo love thy VVife:
But if thou violate thoſe promiſes,
Blood and revenge ſhall light upon thy head.
Come, let us back to ſtately Troynovant,
VVhere all theſe matters ſhall be ſetled.

[Locrine to himſelf.

Millions of Devils wait upon thy Soul.
Legions of Spirits vex thy impious Ghoſt:
Ten thouſand Torments rack thy curſed Bones.
Let every thing that hath the uſe of breath,
Be inſtruments and workers of thy Death.

[Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Humber alone, his hair hanging over his ſhoulders, his arms all bloody, and a dart in one hand.

Hum. VVhat Baſilisk hath hatched in this place,
Where every thing conſumed is to nought?
What fearful Fury haunts theſe curſed groves,
Where not a root is left for Humber's meat?
Hath fell Alecto with envenomed blaſts,
Breathed forth poiſon in theſe tender plains?
Hath triple Cerberus with contagious foam,
Sow'd Aconitum 'mongſt theſe wither'd herbs?
Hath dreadful Fames with her charming rods
Brought barrenneſs on every fruitful tree?
What not a root, no fruit, no beaſt, no bird,
To nouriſh Humber in this wilderneſs?
What would you more, you Fiends of Erebus?
My very intrails burn for want of drink,
My bowels cry, Humber give us ſome meat,
But wretched Humber can give you no meat,
Theſe foul accurſed groves afford no meat:
This fruitleſs ſoil; this ground brings forth no meat.
The gods, hard-hearted gods, yield me no meat.
Then how can Humber give you any meat?

Enter Strumbo with a pitch-fork, and a Scotch-cap.

Str. How do you, Maſters, how do you? how have you ſcaped hanging this long time? i'faith I have ſcap'd many a ſcouring this year, but I thank God I have paſt them all with a good couragio, couragio, and my Wife and I are in great love and charity now, I thank my manhood and my ſtrength; for I will tell you, Maſters, upon a certain day at night I came home, to ſay the very truth, with my ſtomach full of Wine, and ran up into the Chamber, where my Wife ſoberly ſate rocking my little Baby, leaning her back againſt the Bed, ſinging lullaby. Now when ſhe ſaw me come with my noſe foremoſt, thinking that I had been drunk, as I was indeed, ſnatch'd up a fagot-ſtick in her hand, and came furiouſly marching towards me with a big face, as though ſhe would have eaten me at a bit; thundering out theſe words unto me. Thou drunken knave, where haſt thou been ſo long? I ſhall teach thee how to benight me another time: and ſo ſhe began to play knaves trumps. Now, although I trembled, fearing ſhe would ſet her ten Commandments in my face, ran within her, and taking her luſtily by the middle, I carried her valiantly to the Bed, and flinging her upon it, flung my ſelf upon her, and there I delighted her ſo with the ſport I made, that ever after ſhe would call me ſweet Husband, and ſo baniſh'd brawling for ever: and to ſee the good will of the Wench, ſhe bought with her Portion a yard of Land, and by that I am now become one of the richeſt Men in our Pariſh. VVell, Maſters, what's a Clock? it is now break-faſt time, you ſhall ſee what Meat I have here for my break-faſt.

[He ſits down and pulls out his Victuals.

Hum. Was ever Land ſo fruitleſs as this Land?
Was ever Grove ſo graceleſs as this Grove?
Was ever Soil ſo barren as this Soil?
Oh no: the Land where hungry Fames dwelt,
May no ways equalize this curſed Land;
No, even the climate of the torrid zone
Brings forth more Fruit than this accurſed Grove.
Ne'r came ſweet Ceres, ne'r came Venus here;
Triptolemus the god of Husbandmen,
Ne'r ſow'd his Seed in this foul Wilderneſs.
The hunger-bitten Dogs of Acheron,
Chac'd from the nine-fold Puriphlegiton,
Have ſet their footſteps in this damned ground.
The iron hearted Furies arm'd with Snakes,
Scattered huge Hydra's over all the plains,
Which have conſum'd the Graſs, the Herbs, the Trees,
Which have drunk up the flowing water ſprings.

Strumbo hearing his voice ſtarts up, and puts his meat in his pocket, ſeeking to hide himſelf.

Hum. Thou great commander of the ſtarry Sky,
That guid'ſt the life of every mortal wight,
From the incloſures of the fleeting Clouds
Rain down ſome Food, or elſe I faint and dye.
Pour down ſome drink, or elſe I faint and dye.
O Jupiter, haſt thou ſent Mercury
In clowiſh ſhape to miniſter ſome Food?
Some Meat, ſome Meat, ſome Meat.

Strum. O alas Sir, ye are deceived, I am not Mercury, I am Strumbo.

Hum. Give me ſome Meat, Villain, give me ſome Meat,
Or 'gainſt this Rock, I'll daſh thy curſed Brains,
And rend thy bowels with my bloody hands.
Give me ſome Meat, Villain, give me ſome Meat.

Strum. By the faith of my Body, good fellow, I had rather give a whole Oxe, than that thou ſhould'ſt ſerve me in that ſort. Daſh out my brains! O horrible, terrible. I think I have a quarry of Stones in my pocket.

He makes as though he would give him ſome, and as he putteth out his hand, enters the Ghoſt of Albanact, and ſtrikes him on the hand, and ſo Strumbo runs out, Humber following him.

[Exeunt.

Alba. Ghoſt. Lo here the gift of fell Ambition,
Of Uſurpation and of Treachery.
Lo here the harms that wait upon all thoſe
That do intrude themſelves in others Lands,
Which are not under their Dominion.

[Exit.

Scena Quarta

Enter Locrine alone.

Loc. Seven Years hath aged Corineius liv'd
To Locrine's grief, and fair Eſtrilda's woe,
And ſeven Years more he hopeth yet to live;
Oh ſupreme Jove, annihilate this thought.
Should he enjoy the airs fruition?
Should he enjoy the benefit of life?
Should he contemplate the radiant ſun,
That makes my life equal to dreadful death?
Venus convey this Monſter from the earth,
That diſobeyeth thus thy ſacred heſts.
Cupid convey this Monſter to dark Hell,
That diſannuls thy Mothers ſugared Laws.
Mars with thy Target all beſet with flames,
With murthering blade bereave him of his life,
That hindreth Locrine in his ſweeteſt joys.
And yet for all his diligent aſpect,

His

His wrathful eyes piercing like Linces eyes,
Well have I overmatcht his subtilty.
Nigh Deucolitum by the pleasant Lee,
Where brackish Thamis slides with silver streams,
Making a breach into the grassie downs,
A curious arch of costly marble fraught,
Hath Locrine framed underneath the ground,
The walls whereof, garnisht with Diamonds,
With Ophirs, Rubies, glistering Emeralds,
And interlac't with Sun-bright Carbuncles,
Lightens the room with artificial day,
And from the Lee with water-flowing pipes
The moisture is deriv'd into this arch,
Where I have plac'd fair Estrild secretly;
Thither eftsoons accompanied with my Page,
I covertly visit my hearts desire,
Without suspicion of the meanest eye,
For love aboundeth still with policy:
And thither still means Locrine to repair,
Till Atropos cut off mine Uncle's life. [Exit.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Humber alone, saying;

Hum. O vita misero longa, felici brevis!
Eben malorum fames extremum malum.

Long have I lived in this desart cave,
With eating haws and miserable roots,
Devouring leaves and beastly excrements.
Caves were my beds, and stones my pillow-beres,
Fear was my sleep, and horrour was my dream;
For still me thought at every boisterous blast,
Now Locrine comes, now Humber thou must die;
So that for fear and hunger, Humber's mind
Can never rest, but always trembling stands.
O what Danubius now may quench my thirst?
What Euphrates, what light-foot Euripus
May now allay the fury of that heat,
Which raging in my entrails eats me up?
You ghastly Devils of the ninefold Styx,
You damned Ghosts of joyless Acheron,
You mournful souls, vext in Abyssus vaults,
You coal-black Devils of Avernus pond,
Come with your flesh-hooks, rend my famisht arms,
These arms that have sustain'd their masters life;
Come with your razours rip my bowels up,
With your sharp fire-forks crack my starved bones.
Use me as you will, so Humber may not live.
Accursed Gods that rule the starry Poles,
Accursed Jove King of the accursed Gods,
Cast down your lightning on poor Humber's head,
That I may leave this deathful like life of mine:
What hear you not, and shall not Humber die?
Nay I will die, though all the Gods say nay.
And gentle Aby take my troubled corps,
Take it and keep it from all mortal Eyes,
That none may say when I have lost my breath,
The very Flouds conspir'd 'gainst Humber's death.
[Flings himself into the River.

Enter the Ghost of Albanact.

En eadem sequitur, cades in eade quiesco.
Humber is dead, joy Heavens, leap Earth, dance Trees;
Now may'st thou reach thy Apples Tantalus,
And with 'em feed thy hunger-bitten Limbs:
Now Sysiphus leave the tumbling of thy Rock,
And rest thy restless Bones upon the same:
Unbind Ixion, cruel Rhadamanth,
And lay proud Humber on the whirling Wheel.
Back will I post to Hell mouth Tanarus,
And pass Cocytus, to the Elysian Fields,
And tell my Father Brutus of these news.
[Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Ate as before. Jason leading Creon's Daughter. Medea following, hath a Garland in her hand, and putting it on Creon's Daughters Head, setteth it on fire, and then killing Jason and her, departeth.

Ate. NON tam Trinacris exæstuat Ætna cavernis,
Læsæ furtivo quam cor mulieris amore.

Medea seeing Jason leave her love,
And choose the Daughter of the Theban King,
Went to her devillish charms to work revenge;
And raising up the triple Hecate,
With all the rout of the condemned fiends,
Framed a Garland by her magick skill,
With which she wrought Jason and Creon's ill.
So Guendeline seeing her self misus'd,
And Humber's Paramour possess her place,
Flies to the Dukedom of Cornubia,
And with her Brother stout Thrasimachus,
Gathering a power of Cornish Souldiers,
Gives Battel to her Husband and his Host,
Nigh to the River of great Mertia:
The chances of this dismal Massacre,
That which ensueth shortly will unfold.
[Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Locrine, Camber, Assaracus, and Thrasimachus.

Assa. But tell me, Cousin, dyed my Brother so?
Now who is left to hapless Albin,
That as a Pillar might uphold our state,
That might strike terrour to our daring Foes?
Now who is left to hapless Britany,
That might defend her from the barbarous hands
Of those that still desire her ruinous fall,
And seek to work her downfal and decay.
Cam. I Uncle, Death is our common Enemy,
And none but Death can match our matchless power,
Witness the fall of Albionius Crew,
Witness the fall of Humber and his Hunns,
And this foul Death hath now increas'd our woe,
By taking Corineus from this life,
And in his room leaving us Worlds of care.
Thra. But none may more bewail his mournful Hearse,
Than I that am the issue of his Loins,
Now foul befal that cursed Humber's throat,
That was the causer of his lingring wound.
Loc. Tears cannot raise him from the dead again,
But where's my Lady Mistress Guendoline?
Thra. In Cornwall, Locrine, is my Sister now,
Providing for my Father's Funeral.
Loc. And let her there provide her mourning Weeds,
And mourn for ever her own Widow-hood:
Ne're shall she come within our Palace Gate,
To countercheck brave Locrine in his love.
Go, Boy, to Deucolitum, down the Lee,
Unto the Arch where lovely Estrild lies,
Bring her and Sabren straight unto the Court,

She

She ſhall be Queen in Guendelines room.
Let others wail for Corineus death,
I mean not ſo to macerate my mind,
For him that barr'd me from my hearts deſire.
Thra. Hath Locrine then forſook his Guendeline?
Is Corineus death ſo ſoon forgot?
If there be Gods in Heaven, as ſure there be;
If there be Fiends in Hell, as needs there muſt,
They will revenge this thy notorious wrong,
And pour their plagues upon thy curſed head.
Loc. What, prat'ſt thou, Peaſant, to thy Soveraign?
Or art thou ſtrucken in ſome ecſtaſie?
Do'ſt thou not tremble at our Royal looks?
Do'ſt thou not quake when mighty Locrine frowns?
Thou beardleſs Boy, were't not that Locrine ſcorns
To vex his mind with ſuch a heartleſs Child,
With the ſharp point of this my battel-axe,
I'de ſend thy ſoul to Puryphlegiton.
Thra. Though I be young and of a tender age,
Yet will I cope with Locrine when he dares.
My noble Father with his conquering Sword,
Slew the two Giants Kings of Aquitain.
Thraſimachus is not ſo degenerate,
That he ſhould fear and tremble at the looks,
Or taunting words of a Venerean Squire.
Loc. Menaceſt thou thy Royal Soveraign?
Uncivil, not beſeeming ſuch as you.
Injurious Traitor (for he is no leſs
That at defiance ſtandeth with his King)
Leave theſe thy taunts, leave theſe thy bragging words,
Unleſs thou mean'ſt to leave thy wretched life.
Thra. If Princes ſtain their glorious Dignity
With ugly ſpots of monſtrous infamy,
They leeſe their former eſtimation,
And throw themſelves into a Hell of hate.
Loc. Wilt thou abuſe my gentle patience,
As thou though did'ſt our high diſpleaſure ſcorn?
Proud Boy, that thou may'ſt know thy Prince is mov'd,
Yea, greatly mov'd at this thy ſwelling pride,
We baniſh thee for ever from our Court.
Thra. Then, loſel Locrine, look unto thy ſelf,
Thraſimachus will revenge this injury. [Exit.
Loc. Farewel, proud Boy, and learn to uſe thy tongue.
Aſſa. Alas, my Lord, you ſhould have call'd to mind
The lateſt words that Brutus ſpake to you,
How he deſir'd you, by the obedience
That children ought to bear their Sire,
To love and favour Lady Guendeline:
Conſider this, that if the injury
Do move her mind, as certainly it will,
War and diſſention follows ſpeedily.
What though her power be not ſo great as yours,
Have you not ſeen a mighty Elephant
Slain by the biting of a ſilly Mouſe?
Even ſo the chance of War inconſtant is.
Loc. Peace, Uncle, peace, and ceaſe to talk hereof;
For he that ſeeks by whiſpering this or that,
To trouble Locrine in his ſweeteſt life,
Let him perſwade himſelf to die the death.

Enter the Page, with Eſtrild and Sabren.

Eſtr. O ſay me, Page, tell me, where is the King?
Wherefore doth he ſend for me to the Court?
Is it to die? is it to end my life?
Say me, ſweet Boy, tell me and do not feign.
Page. No, truſt me, Madam, if you will credit the little honeſty that is yet left me, there is no ſuch danger as you fear, but prepare your ſelf, yonder's the King.
Eſtr. Then, Eſtrild, lift thy dazled ſpirits up,
And bleſs that bleſſed time, that day, that hour,
That warlike Locrine firſt did favour thee.
Peace to the King of Britany, my Love,
Peace to all thoſe that love and favour him.
[Locrine taking her up.
Doth Eſtrild fall with ſuch ſubmiſſion
Before her ſervant King of Albion?
Ariſe, fair Lady, leave this lowly chear,
Lift up thoſe looks that cheriſh Locrine's heart,
That I may freely view that roſeal face,
Which ſo intangled hath my love-ſick breaſt.
Now to the Court, where we will court it out,
And paſs the night and day in Venus ſports.
Frolick, brave Peers, be joyful with your King. [Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Guendeline, Thraſimachus, Madan, and Souldiers.

Guen. You gentle winds that with your modeſt blaſts,
Paſs through the circuit of the heavenly vault,
Enter the clouds unto the Throne of Jove,
And bear my prayers to his all-hearing ears,
For Locrine hath forſaken Guendeline,
And learnt to love proud Humber's Concubine.
You happy Sprites that in the concave Sky
With pleaſant joy, enjoy your ſweeteſt Love,
Shed forth thoſe tears with me, which then you ſhed,
When firſt you woo'd your Ladies to your wills:
Thoſe tears are fitteſt for my woful caſe,
Since Locrine ſhuns my nothing pleaſant face.
Bluſh Heavens, bluſh Sun, and hide thy ſhining beams,
Shadow thy radiant locks in gloomy clouds,
Deny thy cheerful light unto the world,
Where nothing reigns but falſhood and deceit.
What, ſaid I, falſhood? I, that filthy crime,
For Locrine hath forſaken Guendeline.
Behold the Heavens do wail for Guendeline:
The ſhining Sun doth bluſh for Guendeline:
The liquid Air doth weep for Guendeline:
The very Ground doth groan for Guendeline.
I, they are milder than the Britain King,
For he rejecteth luckleſs Guendeline.
Thra. Siſter, complaints are bootleſs in this cauſe,
This open wrong muſt have an open plague:
This plague muſt be repaid with grievous war,
This war muſt finiſh with Locrinus death,
His death will ſoon extinguiſh our complaints.
Guen. O no, his death will more augment my woes,
He was my Husband, brave Thraſimachus,
More dear to me than the apple of mine eye,
Nor can I find in heart to work his ſcathe.
Thra. Madam, if not your proper injuries,
Nor my exile, can move you to revenge:
Think on our Father Corineus words,
His words to us ſtand always for a Law.
Should Locrine live that caus'd my Fathers death?
Should Locrine live that now divorceth you?
The heavens, the earth, the air, the fire reclaims;
And then why ſhould all we deny the ſame?
Guen. Then henceforth farewel womaniſh complaints,
All childiſh pity henceforth then farewel:
But curſed Locrine, look unto thy ſelf,
For Nemeſis the Miſtreſs of Revenge,
Sits arm'd at all points on our diſmal blades,
And curſed Eſtrild that inflam'd his heart,
Shall, if I live, die a reproachful death.
Madan. Mother, though Nature makes me to lament
My luckleſs Father's froward lechery;
Yet for he wrongs my Lady Mother, thus,
I, if I could, my ſelf would work his death.
Thra. See, madam, ſee, the deſire of revenge
Is in the children of a tender age.
Forward, brave Souldiers, into Mercia,
Where we ſhall brave the Coward to his face.
[Exeunt.

Scena

Scena Quarta.

Enter Locrine, Eſtrild, Habren, Aſſarachus, and the Souldiers.

Locr. Tell me, Aſſarachus, are the Corniſh Chuffs
In ſuch great number come to Mertia,
And have they pitched there their Hoſt,
So cloſe unto our Royal Manſion?
Aſſa. They are, my Lord, and mean incontinent
To bid defiance to your Majeſty.
Locr. It makes me laugh, to think that Guendeline
Should have the heart to come in arms againſt me.
Eſtr. Alas, my Lord, the Horſe will run amain
When as the Spur doth gall him to the Bone;
Jealouſie, Locrine, hath a wicked ſting.
Locr. Sayſt thou ſo, Eſtrild, Beauties Paragon?
Well, we will try her choler to the proof,
And make her know, Locrine can brook no braves.
March on, Aſſarachus, thou muſt lead the way,
And bring us to their proud Pavillion.
[Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter the Ghoſt of Corineius, with thunder and lightning.

Ghoſt. Behold, the Circuit of the azure Sky
Throws forth ſad throbs, and grievous ſuſpirs,
Prejudicating Locrine's overthrow:
The Fire caſteth forth ſharp darts of flames,
The great Foundation of the triple World
Trembleth and quaketh with a mighty noiſe,
Preſaging bloudy Maſſacres at hand.
The wandring Birds that flutter in the dark,
When helliſh night in cloudy Chariot ſeated,
Caſteth her miſts on ſhady Tellus Face,
With ſable Mantles covering all the Earth,
Now flies abroad amid the chearful day,
Foretelling ſome unwonted miſery.
The ſnarling Curs of darkned Tartarus,
Sent from Avernus Ponds by Radamanth,
With howling ditties peſter every Wood;
The watry Ladies and the lightfoot Fawns,
And all the rabble of the woody Nymphs,
All trembling hide themſelves in ſhady Groves,
And ſhrowd themſelves in hideous hollow Pits.
The boyſterous Boreas thundreth forth revenge:
The ſtony Rocks cry out on ſharp revenge:
The thorny Buſh pronounceth dire revenge.
[Sound the alarm.
Now Corineius ſtay and ſee revenge,
And feed thy Soul with Locrine's overthrow,
Behold they come, the Trumpets call them forth:
The roaring Drums ſummon the Souldiers.
Lo where their Army gliſtereth on the Plains.
Throw forth thy lightning, mighty Jupiter,
And pour thy Plagues on curſed Locrine's Head.
[Stand aſide.

Enter Locrine, Eſtrild, Aſſarachus, Habren and their Souldiers at one Door, Thraſimachus, Guendeline, Madan and their Followers at another.

Loc. What is the Tyger ſtarted from his Cave?
Is Guendeline come from Cornubia,
That thus ſhe braveth Locrine to the Teeth?
And haſt thou found thine Armour, pretty Boy,
Accompanied with theſe [illegible]ragling mates?
Believe me but this Enterprize was bold,
And well deſerveth commendation.
Guen. I Locrine, Traiterous Locrine, we are come,
With full pretence to ſeek thine overthrow:
What have I done that thou ſhould'ſt ſcorn me thus?
What have I ſaid that thou ſhould'ſt me reject?
Have I been diſobedient to thy words?
Have I bewray'd thy arcane ſecrecy?
Have I diſhonoured thy Marriage Bed
With filthy Crimes, or with laſcivious Luſts?
Nay it is thou that haſt diſhonoured it,
Thy filthy mind orecome with filthy Luſts,
Yieldeth unto affections filthy Darts.
Unkind, thou wrong'ſt thy firſt and trueſt fear,
Unkind, thou wrong'ſt thy beſt and deareſt Friend;
Unkind, thou ſcorn'ſt all skilful Brutus Laws,
Forgetting Father, Uncle, and thy ſelf.
Eſtr. Believe me, Locrine, but the Girl is wiſe,
And well would ſeem to make a Veſtal Nun,
How finely frames ſhe her oration.
Thr. Locrine, we came not here to fight with words,
VVords that can never win the victory,
But for you are ſo merry in your frumps,
Unſheath your ſwords, and try it out by force,
That we may ſee who hath the better hand.
Locr. Think'ſt thou to dare me, bold Thraſimachus?
Think'ſt thou to fear me with thy taunting braves,
Or do we ſeem too weak to cope with thee?
Soon ſhall I ſhew thee my fine cutting Blade,
And with my Sword, the Meſſenger of Death,
Seal thee an acquittance for thy bold attempts.
[Exeunt.

Sound the Alarum. Enter Locrine, Aſſarachus, and a Souldier at one Door, Guendeline, Thraſimachus, at another, Locrine and his Followers driven back.

Then let Locrine and Eſtrild enter again in amaze.

Locr. O fair Eſtrilda, we have loſt the Field,
Thraſimachus hath won the Victory,
And we are left to be a laughing ſtock,
Scoft at by thoſe that are our Enemies,
Ten thouſand Souldiers arm'd with Sword and Shield,
Prevail againſt an hundred thouſand men,
Thraſimachus inceſt with fuming ire,
Rageth amongſt the faint-heart Souldiers,
Like to grim Mars, when covered with his targe
He fought with Diomedis in the field,
Cloſe by the Banks of ſilver Simois, [Sound the Alarum.
O lovely Eſtrild now the Chaſe begins,
Ne're ſhall we ſee the ſtately Troyniovant
Mounted with Courſers garniſht all with Pearls,
Ne're ſhall we view the fair Concordia,
Unleſs as Captives we be thither brought.
Shall Locrine then be taken Priſoner,
By ſuch a youngling as Thraſimachus?
Shall Guendeline captivate my love?
Ne're ſhall mine Eyes behold that diſmal hour,
Ne're will I view that ruthful ſpectacle,
For with my Sword, this ſharp Curtle-Axe,
I'll cut in ſunder my accurſed heart.
But O you judges of the ninefold Styx,
Which with inceſſant torments rack the Ghoſts
Within the bottomleſs Abyſſus Pits,
You gods, Commanders of the Heavenly Spheers,
Whoſe will and laws irrevocable ſtand,
Forgive, forgive, this foul accurſed ſin,
Forget O gods, this foul condemned fault:
And now my Sword that in ſo many fights [kiſs his Sword.
Haſt ſav'd the Life of Brutus and his Son,
End now his Life that wiſheth ſtill for Death,
Work now his Death that wiſheth ſtill for Death,
Work now his Death that hateth ſtill his Life.
Farewel, fair Eſtrild, Beauties Paragon,

Fram'd in the Front of forlorn miſeries,
Ne're ſhall mine Eyes behold thy Sun-ſhine Eyes,
But when we meet in the Elyſian Fields,
Thither I go before with haſtened pace.
Farewel, vain World, and thy inticing ſnares.
Farewel, foul ſin, and thy inticing pleaſures.
And welcom Death, the end of mortal ſmart,
Welcom to Locrine's over burthened heart.
[Thruſts himſelf through with his Sword.

Eſtr. Break heart with ſobs and grievous ſuſpirs,
Stream forth you tears from forth my watry Eyes,
Help me to mourn for Warlike Locrine's Death,
Pour down your tears you watry Regions,
For mighty Locrine is bereft of life.
O fickle Fortune, O unſtable World,
What elſe are all things, that this Globe contains,
But a confuſed Chaos of miſhaps?
VVherein as in a Glaſs we plainly ſee,
That all our Life is but a Tragedy.
Since mighty Kings are ſubject to miſhap,
I, mighty Kings are ſubject to miſhap,
Since martial Locrine is bereft of life,
Shall Eſtrild live then after Locrine's Death?
Shall love of life bar her from Locrine's Sword?
O no, this Sword that hath bereft his life,
Shall now deprive me of my fleeting Soul:
Strengthen theſe hands O mighty Jupiter,
That I may end my woful miſerie,
Locrine I come, Locrine I follow thee.
[Kills her ſelf.

Sound the Alarm. Enter Sabren.

Sab. VVhat doleful ſight, what ruthful ſpectacle
Hath Fortune offered to my happleſs heart?
My Father ſlain with ſuch a fatal Sword,
My Mother murthred by a mortal wound?
VVhat Thracian Dog, what Barbarous Mirmidon,
VVould not relent at ſuch a ruthful caſe?
VVhat fierce Achilles, what hard ſtony flint,
VVould not bemoan this mournful Tragedie?
Locrine, the map of magnanimitie,
Lies ſlaughtered in his ſoul accurſed cave,
Eſtrild, the perfect pattern of renown,
Natures ſole wonder, in whoſe beauteous breaſts,
All heavenly grace and vertue was inſhrind,
Both maſſacred are dead within this cave,
And with them dies fair Pallas and ſweet love.
Here lies a Sword, and Sabren hath a heart,
This bleſſed Sword ſhall cut my curſed heart,
And bring my Soul unto my parents ghoſts,
That they that live and view our Tragedy,
May mourn our caſe with mournful plaudites.
[Let her offer to kill her ſelf.
Ay me, my virgins hands are too too weak,
To penetrate the bullwark of my Breaſt,
My fingers us'd to tune the amorous Lute,
Are not of force to hold this ſteely glain,
So I am left to wail my patents Death,
Not able for to work my proper Death.
Ah Locrine, honour'd for thy noblenes.
Ah Eſtrild, famous for thy conſtancie.
Ill may they fare that wrought your mortal ends.

Enter Guendeline, Thraſimachus, Madam, and the Souldiers.

Guen. Search Souldiers, Search, find Locrine and his Love,
Find the proud ſtrumpet, Humber's Concubine,
That I may change thoſe her ſo pleaſing looks,
To pale and ignominious aſpect.
Find me the iſſue of their curſed Love,
Find me young Sabren, Locrine's only joy,
That I may glut my mind with lukewarm Blood,
Swiftly diſtilling from the Baſtards breſt,
My Fathers ghoſt ſtill haunts me for Revenge,
Crying, Revenge my over-haſtened Death,
My Brother's exile, and mine own divorce,
Baniſh remorſe clean from my brazen Heart,
All Mercy from mine adamantive breaſts.
Thra. Nor doth thy Husband, lovely Guendeline,
That wonted was to guide our ſtarleſs ſteps,
Enjoy this Light; ſee where he murdred lies:
By luckleſs lot and froward frowning fate,
And by him lies his lovely paramour
Fair Eſtrild goared with a diſmal Sword,
And as it ſeems, both murdred by themſelves,
Claſping each other in their feebled arms,
VVith loving zeal, as if for Company
Their uncontented Corps were yet content
To paſs foul Styx in Charon's ferry-boat.
Guen. And hath proud Eſtrild then prevented me,
Hath ſhe eſcaped Guendelina's wrath,
Violently by cutting off her life?
VVould God ſhe had the monſtrous Hydra's lives,
That every hour ſhe might have died a Death
VVorſe than the ſwing of old Ixion's wheel,
And every hour revive to die again,
As Titius bound to houſleſs Caucaſon,
Doth feed the ſubſtance of his own miſhap,
And every day for want of Food doth die,
And every night doth live again to die.
But ſtay, methinks, I hear ſome fainting Voice,
Mournfully weeping for their luckleſs Death.
Sa. You mountain Nymphs which in theſe deſarts reign,
Ceaſe off your haſty chaſe of Savage Beaſts,
Prepare to ſee a heart oppreſt with care,
Addreſs your Ears to hear a mournful ſtile,
No humane ſtrength, no work can work my weal,
Care in my heart ſo Tyrant like doth deal.
You Dryades and lightfoot Satyri,
You gracious Fairies which at Even tide,
Your Cloſets leave with Heavenly Beauty ſtor'd,
And on your ſhoulders ſpread your golden Locks,
You ſavage Bears in Caves and darkned Dens,
Come wail with me the martial Locrine's Death.
Come mourn with me, for beauteous Eſtrild's Death.
Ah loving Parents little do you know,
VVhat ſorrow Sabren ſuffers for your thrall.
Guen. But may this be, and is it poſſible,
Lives Sabren yet to expiate my wrath?
Fortune I thank thee for this courteſie,
And let me never ſee one proſperous hour,
If Sabren die not a reproachful death.
Sa. Hard-hearted death, that when the wretched call,
Art fartheſt off, and ſeldom hear'ſt at all,
But in the mid'ſt of Fortunes good ſucceſs,
Uncalled comes, and ſheers our life in twain:
VVhen will that hour, that bleſſed hour draw nigh,
VVhen poor diſtreſſed Sabren may be gone.
Sweet Atropos cut off my fatal thread.
VVhat art thou Death, ſhall not poor Sabren die?
[Guendeline taking her by the Chin, ſhall ſay thus:
Guen. Yes Damſel, yes, Sabren ſhall ſurely die,
Though all the VVorld ſhould ſeek to ſave her Life,
And not a common Death ſhall Sabren die,
But after ſtrange and grievous puniſhments,
Shortly inflicted upon thy Baſtards Head,
Thou ſhalt be caſt into the curſed ſtreams,
And feed the Fiſhes with thy tender fleſh.
Sab. And think'ſt thou then, thou cruel Homicide,
That theſe thy deeds ſhall be unpuniſhed?
No Traytor, no, the gods will venge theſe wrongs,
The Fiends of Hell will mark theſe injuries.
Never ſhall theſe bloud-ſuc[illegible] maſty Curs
Bring wretched Sabren to her lateſt home.

For

For I my ſelf in ſpite of thee and thine,
Mean to abridge my former deſtinies,
And that which Locrine's Sword could not perform,
This preſent ſtream ſhall preſent bring to paſs.
[She drowneth her ſelf.

Guen. One miſchief follows anothers neck,
VVho would have thought ſo young a Maid as ſhe,
VVith ſuch a Courage would have fought her Death.
And for becauſe this River was the place
VVhere little Sabren reſolutely died,
Sabren for ever ſhall this ſame be call'd.
And as for Locrine our deceaſed Spouſe,
Becauſe he was the Son of mighty Brute,
To whom we owe our Country, lives and goods,
He ſhall be buried in a ſtately Tomb,
Cloſe by his aged Father Brutus Bones,
VVith ſuch great Pomp and great Solemnity,
As well beſeems ſo brave a Prince as he.
Let Eſtrild be without the ſhallow Vaults,
VVithout the honour due unto the dead,
Becauſe ſhe was the Author of this VVar.
Retire brave followers unto Troynovant,
VVhere we will celebrate theſe Exequies,
And place young Locrine in his Father's Tomb.
[Exeunt omnes.

Ate. Lo here the end of lawleſs Treachery,
Of Uſurpation and ambitious Pride,
And they that for their private amours dare
Turmoil our Land, and ſet their broils abroach,
Let them be warned by theſe premiſſes,
And as a VVoman was the only cauſe
That civil diſcord was then ſtirred up,
So let us pray for that renowned Maid,
That eight and thirty years the Scepter ſway'd
In quiet Peace and ſweet felicity,
And every wight that ſeeks her graces ſmart,
VVould that this Sword were pierced in his heart. [Exit.

FINIS.
